The #1 Mistake People Make When They Need Healing

The biggest mistake you can make when seeking healing is to ASK GOD TO HEAL YOU.

And that is precisely what almost everyone does.

You may have noticed that most prayers for healing seem to go unanswered. And the reason is that people are ASKING GOD TO HEAL THEM!

Then people pray for others and ASK GOD TO HEAL THEM, which is equally mistaken.

God has already done something about your healing. He sent Jesus to bear your punishment, including sickness, in your place (Isaiah 53). Jesus paid the price for you to be healed. Now it is not a case of asking God to do something new in heaven to cause you to be healed; it is a case of receiving what He has already provided.

Legally, God has already given you everything that you will ever need (Ephesians 1:3, 2 Peter 1:3-4), including healing. You don't have to talk God into healing you; He is actually trying to talk you into receiving what His Son provided for you so that you can enjoy His healing in practice.

Now your part is to "believe that you receive when you pray" (Mark 11:24). Receiving something implies that God is offering it already, which He is. You don't have to ask Him to make this offer; it's already out there waiting for you to take Him up on it.

When you need healing, you receive it from God when you pray. You don't ask God to do something about your illness. That wouldn't agree with Scripture, which says that He already HAS done something about it. He has already made healing available to you.

I wrote this book to help you receive the healing that Jesus paid for you to have. May you find freedom from all illness and pain as you read and become trained in the Word to minister that same freedom to others. This news is way too good to keep to ourselves!

The Baseball Diamond of Healing

Receiving healing can be likened to running around a baseball diamond. You have to get to first base, then second base, then third base, then home. You don't score until you get home. You don't score half a run for reaching second base or a quarter of a run for reaching first base. Many Christians, when it comes to healing, are still stranded on the base paths, wondering why the score in their body is not changing. This message will help you locate where you are right now and help you get the rest of the way around so that you can receive the healing that Jesus Christ paid for you to have.

FIRST BASE

In this illustration, first base is the realization that GOD IS ABLE TO HEAL YOU.

I'll assume that you're starting at home plate, which would be "total cluelessness" concerning God and divine healing, and I'll take you to first base.

A book that was popular some years back tried to popularize the notion that God really ISN'T able to heal you now. In the picture it painted, God was saying, "I would if I could, but I can't, so I won't." The author knew that God loves us, and he assumed that because He loves us, He would do something about our sicknesses if He could. Therefore, the only reason He would not do anything would be that He actually can't.

I suppose that if I were God, I would rather have someone doubt my ability than doubt my love, but the Bible does not support the idea that God is unable to do anything about your condition. Quite the contrary!

Consider the following:

Luke 1:37:

For with God nothing shall be impossible.

Matthew 19:26:

But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible.

Mark 10:27:

And Jesus looking upon them saith, With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible.

Jeremiah 32:17:

Ah Lord GOD! behold, thou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched out arm, and there is nothing too hard for thee:

Jeremiah 32:27:

Behold, I am the LORD, the God of all flesh: is there any thing too hard for me?

Genesis 17:1:

And when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the LORD appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect.

Genesis 18:14:

Is any thing too hard for the LORD? At the time appointed I will return unto thee, according to the time of life, and Sarah shall have a son.

Genesis 28:3:

And God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be a multitude of people;

Genesis 35:11:

And God said unto him, I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins;

Revelation 19:6:

And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.

God is almighty, so there is no sickness or injury too hard for Him to heal. God designed and created your body in the first place – don't you think He's capable of fixing it? Can't the God who created billions of galaxies, each with billions of stars, relieve your illness? Of course He can!

Furthermore, upon the return of Jesus, God will instantly change your entire body from being mortal to being immortal. In the blink of an eye, every Christian on the planet will be instantly healed of every physical problem, and even that won't put any kind of power drain on God Almighty. Nor will the fact that He will instantly create immortal bodies for all the people whose bodies have already died and decomposed!

So surely He has the power to heal any physical problem you happen to have. The fact that Jesus healed all sicknesses and all diseases among the people should also be proof enough that God is able to do this. We see in the Bible that Jesus healed “all manner of sickness and all manner of disease”, “all sick people”, (Matthew 4:23-4) “all” (Matthew 12:15), “a great multitude” (Matthew 14:14), “all that were diseased” (Matthew 14:35-6), “as many as touched Him” (Matthew 14:35-36, Mark 6:54-56), “great multitudes” (Matthew 15:30-31, Matthew 19:2), “many” (Mark 3:10-12), “any sick with various diseases” (Luke 4:40-41), “a great number” (Luke 6:17-19), and “all who were oppressed by the devil” (Acts 10:38).

Not only is Jesus ABLE to heal everything, He DID HEAL EVERYTHING when He walked the earth. Now Hebrews 13:8 tells us that He is the same yesterday, today and forever. What He could do around 30 AD, He can certainly do today! This same Jesus is the same Miracle-Worker and Healer today that He always has been. Modern theological garbage has blinded many to that fact, but it’s still true whether people believe it or not!

We see from Jesus’ teaching that it is not a question of whether God is ABLE to do something – it’s a question of whether or not people can believe.

Matthew 17:20:

And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you.

Matthew 21:21-22:

Jesus answered and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, If ye have faith, and doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig tree, but also if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; it shall be done.

And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.

Luke 17:6:

And the Lord said, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye might say unto this sycamine tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you.

Mark 11:22-24:

And Jesus answering saith unto them, Have faith in God.

For verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith.

Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them.

Mark 9:23:

Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.

The IF here is not on God's side of things. There is no doubt about His ability to heal. The question is whether we can believe.

I'm telling you this to put some hope into you. Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, and someone who's hopeless needs to get some hope! Hope isn't a substitute for faith, but it will take you in the right direction. But before we can believe, we have to go past just knowing that God is able to heal everything.

SECOND BASE

In this illustration, second base is the realization that GOD IS WILLING TO HEAL YOU.

I would say that the majority of Christians have already reached first base, but many have not gone any farther, so they are doing without the healing that they know God is ABLE to perform. They may even shout, "God is able!" But you don't receive healing from the Lord just by knowing that He is able. He was able before you ever got sick and He's been able all the time you've had whatever it is, but obviously, that alone is not enough. Otherwise you'd already be healed!

If you know that Jesus COULD heal you if He were WILLING, you are in good company with a certain leper who approached Jesus in the gospels, saying, "If you are willing, you can make me clean." Jesus, who is the same yesterday, today, and forever (Hebrews 13:8), told him, "I am willing. Be clean." And the man was healed of leprosy, an incurable condition. (You can read about this in Matthew 8:2-4, Mark 1:40-45 and Luke 5:12-15.) Today it would be like someone with AIDS telling Jesus, "If you want to, you can heal me of AIDS!" And His answer would be just the same today – He IS willing to heal you of AIDS or anything else you have.

Jesus' answer to the leper was, "I will." He never told anyone, "I won't." Because Jesus is the same today as He was then (Hebrews 13:8), His answer to anyone with that question today must also be the same: "I will."

Notice that Jesus didn't have to pray first to find out whether it was God's will to heal the man. He didn't have to! He knew the Scriptures! God said in Psalm 103:3 that God "forgives all your sins and heals all your diseases." God said in Exodus 15:26, "I am the Lord your Healer." That isn't a promise, it's a statement about His very nature! He is a Healer and always has been. Jesus knew the Word enough to know that God wants to heal ALL, not just SOME. So there was nothing to pray about.

We know from Romans 2:11, Ephesians 6:9, and Colossians 3:25 that God does not play favorites. He treats everyone the same. In fact, we sin if we play favorites (James 2:1-9, 1 Timothy 5:21).

Therefore, we know that God cannot be willing to heal one person and not be equally willing to heal another, including you. However, God is fair to insist that you meet the same conditions as everyone else.

Healing is simply the physical benefit of salvation. God is willing to save everyone, with no exceptions. He is “not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance” (2 Peter 3:9). God is both able and willing to save every person on earth.

Some today would have you believe that God WAS “The Lord Your Healer” but that He has changed and gotten out of the healing business, making Him “The Lord Who ISN’T Your Healer.” But God says that He “changes not” (Malachi 3:6). If He WAS “The Lord your Healer” (which can be rendered, “The Lord Who Heals You” or “The Lord Your Physician”, depending on the translation), He still must BE “The Lord Your Healer” today. Otherwise, He changed! If we aren’t seeing miracles today, WE are the ones who changed, not God!

If God IS your Healer, it MUST be His will to heal YOU. Otherwise, He isn’t your healer, and He says He is! I will gladly take God’s word on the matter over anyone else’s word.

What is God’s desire for your body? It is clear in 3 John 2. You’d have to have some seriously bad seminary training to misinterpret this clear statement: “Beloved, I pray that you may prosper in all things and be in health, just as your soul prospers.”

It MUST be the will of God to heal EVERYONE because in James 5:14-16, the sick are instructed to call for the elders of the church to pray the prayer of faith over them with the promise that the Lord WILL raise up the sick person. (This is probably one of the most disobeyed Scriptures in the Bible!) If God’s will were unknown, or if He could make exceptions in His sovereignty, it would be impossible for the elders to pray in faith. You can only pray in faith when you KNOW that you will receive your answer. If there is any “if” or “maybe” about the matter, it isn’t faith.

Several opposing players will try to block the base path to stop you from getting to second base. These all traffic in URG – Unscriptural Religious Garbage. If you believe their arguments instead of believing the Bible, you won’t get your healing because you will lose your certainty of God’s will in the matter. You cannot believe and receive something if you’re not SURE that God wants you to have it.

I would say this – if you really think it’s God’s will for you to stay sick, you have no business going to the doctor or the hospital or taking any kind of medicine to get out of “God’s will.” But you’ve probably done these things, right? Deep down you know that sickness is a curse, not a blessing, and you want to get rid of it. Your body itself will do all it can to get rid of sickness– God designed it that way.

Refutations of over 400 flawed arguments against divine healing may be found in the Objections Overruled! section of this book. The following pages touch some of the highlights. This book goes into much more depth about the arguments below.

Some of the people who make the arguments you're about to hear love the Lord every bit as much as you and I do. The fact that they believe religious garbage over the Bible does not make them bad people; they're just passing along the ignorance that they were indoctrinated with. If they knew the truth, most of them would be happy to preach it too.

The most often quoted objection to healing is that Paul had a sickness that God would not heal, referred to as his thorn in the flesh. Supposedly God wanted Paul to be weak so that he could be strong and He refused to heal Paul so that he would stay humble despite his many revelations. The next awful logical conclusion would be that God may be giving YOU a thorn in the flesh in the form of sickness, so it may not be His will to heal you. Therefore, you cannot pray with any certainty, and because faith is being CERTAIN of what you don't see, by definition you cannot pray in faith. Therefore you receive nothing.

But Paul tells you explicitly what his thorn was. You don't have to guess. Paul says it was "a messenger of Satan to buffet me" (2 Corinthians 12:7). You should know that the Greek word translated messenger is the same word translated angel or messenger all over the New Testament. It refers to a sentient being. The word is used over 180 times in the Greek New Testament, and not once could it possibly refer to a sickness or anything other than a sentient being. Also, the word buffet means to strike with repeated blows, talking about something done to you from the outside. No one would ever use that word to describe a sickness that attacks from the inside. Have you told anyone that your sickness is really buffeting you? Of course not.

It seemed that almost everywhere Paul went, someone wanted to beat him up (buffet him) for his preaching. I believe that Satan sent this messenger to stir people up to do just that. But that is quite different from making Paul sick.

In Galatia, after being stoned and left for dead at Lystra, Paul said that he preached through, or because of, physical infirmity at the first (Galatians 4:13). But it was only at the first, because God obviously restored Paul's health. He did so every time Paul got beaten up. Far from being a testimony that God wanted him sick, he was a walking testimony of God's will to heal over and over.

Another “favorite” is saying that you might be another Job. Supposedly, God would not heal Job, so He may want you to suffer for a while to teach you patience or some other virtue. Let me tell you plainly that there is no such thing as another Job in the New Testament, nor can there be. Job did not live under the New Covenant. Under the New Covenant, you have authority over the devil and his works. Job did not have that. He could not command Satan to leave him alone because he didn’t have the legal right to do that under his covenant! In fact, as far as we can tell, Job didn’t know anything about the Law of Moses and its promises either because he lived before they were given! Job didn’t even seem to be aware that there was a devil, so he blamed everything that happened to him on God – just as many Christians do today! Of course, God let him know that there was an evil being out there, and God did heal Job despite Job’s ignorance, his ranting and raving, and his rather non-comforting friends. The book of Job explicitly says that Satan made Job sick (Job 2:7) and that God healed Job (Job 42:10). That should tell you who the Sickener is and who the Healer is. The argument that “God allowed Satan to do that” holds no water for the Church because we have authority over Satan. We are no longer part of Satan’s kingdom and what he has (sickness) does not belong to us. What God has (health and healing) does belong to us.

Then we hear about Timothy’s frequent stomach ailments. Paul advises him not to drink the water. That’s still good advice today if you travel to many places. I had some “stomach ailments” after drinking the water in a certain country. Thank God, the fact that they were multiple occurrences for me and Timothy indicates that neither of us stayed sick. But the practical advice is not to get sick in the first place! Paul also told Timothy that bodily exercise profits a little. There’s nothing wrong with having some common sense and taking care of yourself! That can affect your life span, too. If you can avoid doing things that tend to make you sick in the first place, you don’t need to get healed! If there’s anything involving God’s will in Paul’s advice to Timothy, it’s that God wanted Timothy to be well. Otherwise, why give him advice to help him stay well?

Then there is Trophimus, whom Paul left in Miletum sick (2 Timothy 4:20). This has nothing to do with the will of God in the matter. God’s will is not stated in the verse – Paul merely states a fact, just as he did in verse 10 of the same chapter when he says that Demas forsook him, having loved this present world. Was it God’s will for Demas to do that? No! It happened anyway, and Paul records the fact. The fact that it happened and was recorded did not prove it was God’s will! So the fact that he left Trophimus sick somewhere 10 verses later does not prove anything either, any more than the facts that Judas betrayed Jesus and Peter denied Jesus three times mean that those events were God’s will.

Another worn-out argument is that if you never got sick, you’d never die, so you have to get sick eventually. Sickness does NOT have to be the way you leave the earth, and Christians suffer unnecessarily when they get old thinking that maybe this is how God will take them home. Sickness is not God taking them home at all, and you’ll never hear me say that at a funeral. God received them, but He did not take them. There’s a difference! There is no time limit on God’s healing promises – as long as you are alive on the earth, you are entitled to be well. When you decide that you want to leave the earth after a long and satisfying life, ask God to receive you and He will. Let Him “take your breath away” so your body “returns to its dust” (Psalm 104:29, talking about living things in general).

The idea that you can have some say over when you go to be with the Lord may be new to you, because most people think that God has a set date for you, and so when that comes up, you're gone no matter what. That just isn't true! If it were, the many statements in Proverbs about certain things that will make your life longer and certain things that will make your life shorter are meaningless! How long you live is more up to you than it is up to God! Paul, writing to the Philippians, said that he did not know which HE should CHOOSE, to live on and labor more, or to depart and be with Christ:

Philippians 1:22-23:

But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labour: yet what I shall choose I wot [know] not.
For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better:

Man thinks, "The way God set up this world, when you get old, you get senile, you fall and you can't get up, and you drool away your days in Depends in a nursing home." God says, "They shall still bring forth fruit in old age; they shall be fat and flourishing" (Psalm 92:14). I like God's plan a lot better!

Another piece of URG is that God wants to build character in you through sickness. Hah! As you'll admit if you're honest, sick people as a whole tend to be crabbier, meaner and shorter-tempered than well people because of their physical discomfort. Sickness does not seem to breed character in many people! Nor should it, because the Holy Spirit, not sickness, was given to you so you could bear fruit. God wants to build you up through His Word and His Spirit, not through some stupid sickness that Satan wants you to have.

Along these lines is the "blessing in disguise" argument that God "blessed" you with sickness so that you could spend more time with Him and in His Word while in your sickbed. That's pathetic! God doesn't disguise His blessings as curses; the reason why sickness looks like a curse is that it IS a curse! There's nothing good about it. Claiming that God sent you a broken neck (when really you broke it yourself!) to draw you to Himself shows only that you don't understand His character. God says that it is His goodness (not sickness) that draws men to repentance (Romans 2:4). Yes, some people may start serving God after they "hit bottom" who otherwise would have kept on sinning, but don't make God a party to things He doesn't do. Someone else might have gone through a divorce, bankruptcy and a prison sentence for killing someone while driving drunk, and finally been so desperate that he got saved. Should he thank God for "sending" him the divorce, the bankruptcy and the drunken homicide so that he would be drawn to God? NO!

Besides, if you really believe that sickness is a character-building blessing, you should start praying for a double portion of it, and ask God to bless everyone in your family with the "blessing in disguise" of sickness! You know better deep down!

Then there's the idea that miracles were done away with after the last apostle died or after the New Testament was completed. The first makes no sense at all because there are still apostles today, and the second has no grounds in Scripture, though some try to use 1 Corinthians 13:10 to "prove" that when the "perfect" (which they think means the completion of the New Testament) has come, gifts of the Spirit, including healings and miracles, will be done away with. But it is obvious that what Paul calls the "perfect" in that chapter is not the completion of the New Testament. If the perfect has come, you see face to face, not through a mirror dimly, as Paul said. Can you honestly say that you see face to face today? Can you say that you know "perfectly" instead of "in part"? I didn't think so. In that case, the "perfect" in 1 Corinthians 13:8-12 has not come, and this is proof that all the gifts of the Spirit, including healings and miracles, ARE for today!

Then there's the argument that Jesus only healed to prove that He was God. He didn't do miracles in Nazareth, so I guess He wasn't God there if you believe that argument. And He didn't do any miracles for the first 30 years of His life, so I guess He wasn't God then either according to this argument! See how much trouble this line of thought can lead to? It is nowhere stated that Jesus healed the sick to prove that He was God, but it IS stated that He was moved with compassion. Because He is the same yesterday, today and forever (Hebrews 13:8), don't you think He has the same compassion now, seated at God's right hand, that He did walking the earth?

Then you'll get someone who says, "Aunt Glarda was the finest Christian who ever lived. If anyone was a faith person, Aunt Glarda was. She said she was believing God for her healing – and SHE DIED. So that proves God doesn't heal everyone!" Which at face value is true – God does NOT heal everyone. There are lots of sick people around. God does not save everyone from hell, either – a lot of people go there. But that doesn't make it His WILL for that to happen! God never fails to offer healing to everyone, but some fail to receive it, just as God offers the new birth to all, but some fail to receive it and go to hell anyway.

But the idea here is that you should exalt someone's experience over the teachings of Jesus and over God's Word. The Pharisees were known for their traditions that actually contradicted the Bible. Many of the traditions of religious men cited here do the same thing. Any time you exalt experience over Scripture, you are headed for trouble. Rather than trying to change Scripture to match our experiences, we should all be reading Scripture and building ourselves up so that our experiences match Scripture!

Anyway, you can refer to the Objections Overruled! section of this book for more on these and other arguments that will try to block your way to second base. Don't be fooled! God is not only ABLE to heal you; He WANTS to heal you!

THIRD BASE

In this illustration, third base is the realization that GOD HAS ALREADY DONE SOMETHING ABOUT YOUR HEALING. Jesus has paid the legal price for it.

It is crucial to know that God is ABLE to heal you and that He is WILLING to heal you, but you have no guarantee of receiving healing until you know that He has already done something about it! Otherwise, you will find yourself with most of the church world, begging and pleading with God to DO WHAT HE ALREADY DID!

There was a lot of fuss when a movie about Christ's suffering displayed the scene where He was flogged in such graphic detail, the movie got an R rating for gore. But I hope that this scene at least made people wonder why that happened. Why didn't He just die on the cross for our sins? How often do people think of the whipping post? How many people sing songs about the whipping post? What was the purpose of the flogging? Isaiah prophesied that "by His stripes we are healed" (Isaiah 53:5). Peter, looking back on the same event, tells Christians that by His stripes we were healed (1 Peter 2:24). The stripes were laid on His back to inflict pain on Him so that we could legally be redeemed from physical pain. This occurred not at the cross, but at the whipping post. It was all part of Christ's great sacrifice for our sins.

Some have said that Peter was talking about spiritual healing, but that is impossible because you were not spiritually healed when you were born again! You received a new spirit; your old spirit was not healed, it was replaced with a righteous new spirit. Besides, the Greek word used in 1 Peter 2:24 to describe this comes from the same word from which we get physician, and it is used many other times in the New Testament to describe physical healing.

Things get even more interesting when you get out a concordance or use an online reference tool and look up the words in Isaiah 53:4: "Surely He has borne our griefs and carried our sorrows." These words are not just talking about emotional griefs and sorrows! The Hebrew word used for griefs is translated sickness elsewhere in the Old Testament, and the word used for sorrows is translated pains. The literal rendering of this verse is, "Surely He has borne our sicknesses and carried our pains." If you don't believe it, you can do one of three things. First, you can get look up these words in a concordance yourself and verify what I told you. Second, you can look in the margin if you have a study Bible; any good study Bible will have footnotes indicating that the words used here are literally "sicknesses" and "pains." Third, you can just open your Bible to Matthew 8:17 where Matthew quotes Isaiah: "Himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses." Obviously the Holy Spirit thinks that Isaiah was talking about physical problems, because the fulfillment of this is in the context that He "healed all that were sick."

It is also interesting to note that Isaiah's prophecy that "the chastisement (punishment) for our peace was upon Him" (Isaiah 53:5) uses the Hebrew word shalom, which includes the ideas of health, prosperity and peace. It is more than just a peaceful easy feeling or the absence of war.

Just as Jesus was “wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities” (Isaiah 53:5), He surely bore our sicknesses and our pains. Just as He bore (carried away as a substitute) the sin of many (Isaiah 53:12), He bore (carried away as a substitute) our sicknesses. You’re included in there! Isaiah isn’t talking about “their” sins or “their” sicknesses – He is talking about “our” sins and “our” sicknesses. You can’t read Isaiah 53 correctly and leave yourself out of it!

It is sad that this side of Christ’s suffering is preached so little; most ministers have majored on the sin-bearing part but have neglected to mention that He also bore our sicknesses as well.

The apostle Paul, in Galatians 3:10-13, discusses the “curse of the Law.” The Law itself was not a curse, of course; Paul himself said that the Law was holy and just and good (Romans 7:12). But the Law contained a curse for disobedience. The fullest statement of this curse, but not the only one, may be found in Deuteronomy 28:15-68. God told Israel that awful things – curses – would come upon them if they failed to keep the whole Law of Moses. Among these were many named sicknesses, both physical and mental. And in case you’re wondering about AIDS, West Nile and other “modern” illnesses, verse 61 said that every sickness and every plague not mentioned was also part of the curse! That would include any sickness that’s trespassing in your body right now.

So we see right away that God calls sickness a curse, not a blessing in disguise. He also calls it captivity (Job 42:10 in the King James and other literal translations; there’s a footnote to that effect in the NKJV), bondage from Satan (Luke 13:16), and oppression by the devil (Acts 10:38).

But the most important thing to know is that Christ has (past tense!) redeemed us from the curse of the Law. Anyone reading the curse in the Law can see that all sickness is included in that curse, as we saw in Deuteronomy 28:61. Therefore, because the sickness in your body is part of the curse for disobedience, and Christ has redeemed you from that curse, Christ redeemed you from having to bear that sickness in your body. How did He redeem you? By being cursed Himself. He was made sick in your place to redeem you from having to be sick. He took the disease part of the curse in His own body to spare you from having to bear it in your body.

Because the atonement that provided salvation from hell is the same atonement that provided healing for your body, it is insane to think that God is willing to extend one benefit of salvation to everyone while withholding another benefit for some mysterious reason.

The fact that some people will spend eternity in hell has nothing to do with God’s choice in the matter. Likewise, the fact that some people never get healed has nothing to do with God’s choice in the matter. It is just as ridiculous to say that a person was not healed because God wouldn’t heal him as it is to say that a person was not saved because God wouldn’t save him.

It is crucial that you see that Christ has redeemed you from the curse of the Law. It’s something He already did, not something He will do or something you even need to ask Him to do. It makes no sense to ask Him to do what He already did!

So not only is God ABLE to heal you, not only does He WANT to heal you, but He also made a LEGAL provision by the substitution of Jesus Christ for your healing. He purchased it for you. It belongs to you as a Christian. However, even knowing all of this still leaves you on third base with no score. There's one more leg to go.

HOME PLATE

In this illustration, home plate is BELIEVING THAT YOU RECEIVE YOUR HEALING WHEN YOU PRAY. God is able to heal you, wants to heal you, and has made provision for your healing, but it does not just fall on you automatically because you are a Christian. You must receive it by faith.

However, there is a base path from third base to home plate. If you run outside the base path, the umpire will call you out and you will not get a run after all. Many Christians who are trying to run from third base to home plate are running outside God's base path. The base path is to FORGIVE ANYONE WHO HAS WRONGED YOU before you pray to receive your healing. That is how Jesus taught it. Failure to follow His instructions has kept many people from being healed who otherwise could have received healing a long time ago. If you do not forgive others, you are not on the base path, and you will be called out without getting to the point where you can receive your healing. Here is how Jesus said to receive what you want from God in Mark 11:24-26:

"Therefore, I say to you, whatever things you ask when you pray, believe that you receive them, and you will have them. And whenever you stand praying, if you have anything against anyone, forgive him, that your Father in heaven may also forgive you your trespasses. But if you do not forgive, neither will your Father in heaven forgive your trespasses."

(By the way, a New Testament believer doesn't have to worry about going to hell unforgiven because he had a grudge against someone; this is dealt with elsewhere in this book in the thought-provoking section What 1 John 1:9 Really Means.)

This whole passage goes together. Sometimes we quote only verse 24 to make a point, but the whole instructions include the next verse. If you disobey verses 25, you can hardly expect God to honor verse 24! First forgive others, then pray to receive your healing. If you've just plain made up your mind not to forgive someone else, you might as well just tune out right here because nothing else I say will help you. You won't receive healing God's way. Is it worth it?

You don't have to feel like forgiving because forgiveness, like any other aspect of walking in love, is a decision, not an emotion. If you'll make the right decision, the emotions will follow. If you wait for the emotions, you'll never make the decision. Make the CHOICE to forgive now! No one can do it for you, and if you don't do it, all the praying in the world will not help you get well.

On the other hand, don't assume that you are in "secret sin" or "secret unforgiveness". If you can't think of anyone you're refusing to forgive, you're fine.

The key word here in the passage I quoted is receive. Jesus did not tell you to beg God for your healing, to pester and badger Him for your healing, or to keep asking Him over and over for it. Some people have misapplied the parable of the unjust judge and thought that they need to keep "bombarding Heaven's gates" with prayer until God answers. Then they think if they just get enough other people praying, God will finally do something. I have good news for you – heaven's gates aren't shut and they don't need to be bombarded! God's ears are always open to the prayer of the righteous. He hears you the first time, and He actually commands you not to use vain repetitions like the heathen who think they will be heard because they talk so much! The lady who went to the unjust judge wanted justice from an adversary, not healing. For things like that, for example, the fall of a repressive regime that tortures Christians, we do need to keep praying. But praying for healing the way you'd pray for a nation is like playing golf by baseball rules. They're both sports, just as these are both kinds of prayer, but different rules apply. If you play golf by baseball rules, you'll try to slug the ball over the wall – and get a two-stroke penalty for going out of bounds! What works in baseball doesn't work in golf. What works when praying about social justice does not work when praying to receive healing. Jesus told you to receive things for yourself in this passage. Believe that you receive when you pray.

Receiving implies an offer. You can't receive something that isn't already offered to you; you'd have to ask for it. Asking for something isn't the same as receiving something. If I went to the store and bought you a tub of ice cream and showed up with it at your door ready to hand it to you, you would not ask me to go get you some ice cream when you saw me at the door with it, would you? No, you would just receive my present to you, and maybe thank me for being so nice that you didn't even have to ask for it; I got it for you when you never asked for it! Likewise, Jesus paid for your healing long before you could ever think to ask for it, and He now offers it to you. You don't need to ask Him to do it; you need to receive what He already offers you.

I like to play in chess tournaments, and I've even won some. (I was even the Massachusetts state co-champion at speed chess a long time ago.) But the people running the tournament will penalize you if you make 2 moves in a row. You have to wait your turn; after your opponent moves, then you can move again. Most Christians are staring at their chessboards waiting for God to move, but God already moved, and He's waiting for them to move! So nothing happens as both sides wait for each other to do something!

God made His move when Jesus was punished for your sins – He bore your sicknesses and carried your pains. God really has done all that He will ever do about healing you as far as providing healing goes! Now it's your move. You need to receive what God has already provided – your healing.

Receiving does not mean that you try to "psych yourself" into thinking you're well or that you do any kind of mind-over-matter thing. Your spirit man (the real you) receives from God. What you receive will then work out in your natural body. It isn't a mind game, it's a faith transaction.

What basis do you have for faith? The fact that God is already offering healing to you, as we have proved from the Bible. Faith is being sure of what you don't see (Hebrews 11:1). Faith isn't being sure of something that doesn't EXIST; it's being sure of something you don't SEE. There's a difference! It's not that your healing doesn't exist – it does. If you could see into the spirit realm where God lives, you would see it, too. It exists but you just can't see it yet with your natural eyes. But when you receive it by faith, even though you don't see anything happening with your eyes, it will be yours.

Don't quit on this if you don't see an instant, complete manifestation. I once had an inoperable growth in my left eye. The doctors couldn't operate because if they tried to kill the growth, they would kill the optic nerve that was close to it. I was losing my sight and there was no hope in the natural for me. The doctor said that I would just have to "accept" having blurrier vision for the rest of my life. But I got some Christian friends to agree with me in prayer one night, and I decided to receive my healing when I prayed, as Jesus said to do. So guess what happened over the next week and a half to two weeks? MY EYE GOT WORSE! If I went by "sight", I'd have been sorry that I even prayed! But instead, I kept on saying, "I received my healing that night when hands were laid on me, and I won't give it up! I AM healed and God's Word agrees with me!" That might sound silly, but one night in my bedroom, there seemed to be a big flash of light coming from the inside of me. It's hard to describe it in English. But I know that afterward, the lump vanished without a trace, I went back and checked out 20/20 with that eye, and I've had no recurrences of the problem. I'm glad I received my healing when I prayed and that I didn't let go when "sight" said that things were worse instead of better.

I suffered from allergies growing up into adulthood. They were so bad I would go through Kleenex left and right at my job. After I received Jesus and found out what His instructions were, I decided one night to receive my healing from those allergies when I prayed. The next morning at work was probably the worst I can remember. If I went by what I saw, I would have concluded that my prayers hurt rather than helped! But I was determined not to let go of what I received by faith when I prayed. Sometime around lunchtime, the sneezing and congestion stopped – and I've never had those allergies since then!

I had a kidney stone back when I was 30. I didn't know what it was, but I sure knew I was in agony and I couldn't sleep! I believed I received my healing in my dining room when I prayed, and then I headed for the emergency room! God is not against doctors and hospitals. If it weren't for them, I would have died without knowing Jesus when I was in elementary school because of a life-threatening illness! However, even though I was in the emergency room, my trust was still in God. That might seem like a contradiction to you, but it isn't. You can believe you receive healing for a headache and then take some aspirin. Aspirin will relieve symptoms but it won't cure the root problem. That is the case with many medical treatments, and it was the case with the kidney stone. They drugged me up so that I could get some sleep and they stuck an IV in me.

Anyway, they took X-rays and they ended up telling me I might be in pain for weeks and there wasn't much they could do. So I told them that I wanted to go home, figuring that it would be cheaper to hurt at home if it came to that! After all, if they couldn't do anything, why sit in a hospital? I went home, and two nights after I went to the emergency room, I felt like suddenly the ceiling disappeared and a warm flood just came over me. It's hard to describe. I immediately went to sleep and when I woke up, all pain was gone. The only way I knew the stone was gone was when I heard a clunk. There was no pain as it left.

Why did the healing manifest then rather than sooner? I don't know, but I do know that if you believe you receive something when you pray and don't quit on it, what you received will be yours in the natural realm.

The mistake many Christians make is that they think they have to pray again the next day if they don't see a change. Why would you do that? It makes no sense! If you really received healing from God when you prayed, there is no need to pray again because it's yours – you received it no matter what it looks like. So the logical thing to do would be to thank God for what you have already received from that point on – not to ask for it again! Asking for it again would only indicate that you prayed in unbelief the first time. If you did that, I guess you should ask again, and ask in faith this time! But don't fall into the trap of thinking that you need to keep praying about it once you've received your healing. The only kind of "praying" you should be doing after you believe that you receive is THANKING GOD FOR WHAT YOU ALREADY RECEIVED WHEN YOU PRAYED!

There is no official canned prayer to receive healing, any more than there is a canned prayer to receive Jesus in the first place. But a prayer like this will do the job if you pray it in faith:

"Father, I thank you that Jesus took my sickness in my place and I don't have to have it anymore. I receive the healing He provided now in the name of Jesus. Thank You that I am healed by His stripes and that I have that healing now."

There's no need to pray fancy prayers full of Thee's and Thou's that run on and on. God understands modern English and He answers faith, not length!

So we have seen what you need to know and do to be healed.

First, realize that God is able to heal you.

Second, realize that God wants to heal you.

Third, realize that God already did something about your healing by laying your sicknesses on Jesus.

Fourth, forgive anyone you have anything against, then believe you receive the healing that God already offers you when you pray.

If you will do these things, you can receive healing for any condition that you have right now!

Healing is an Offer, Not a Promise

Healing is an Offer, Not a Promise

You do not receive healing by “standing on the promises.” You receive healing by acting on the facts.

God has not promised you healing; He has granted you healing.

Healing is not something that God promises you; it is something that God offers you.

Failure to understand the distinction is a common and major hindrance to receiving healing.

There is an important difference between an offer and a promise. It comes down to this: If healing were a chess game, whose move would it be? If God has promised you healing, it is now up to God to do something to make good on His promise. It is therefore His move. If God offers you healing, He has already provided it and it is now up to you to receive it. God has moved and it is therefore your move. The latter case is what the New Testament teaches. If you are waiting for God to move, you will wait and wait with no results, wondering why God isn't answering your prayer for Him to do something about your condition.

If you think you are going to “hold God to His promise to heal you in 1 Peter 2:24,” you need to reread 1 Peter 2:24. There is no promise in that verse. What exactly has He promised to do for you? Nothing. Instead, He tells you what He already did for you when Christ bore the physical punishment for your sins in your place so that your body could be healed. There is no hint of any future action on God's part. There is only a report of His past action.

I ordered some golf balls online and a truck showed up in my driveway. I went out and received the order. Once that truck was out there, I did not have to bug the retailer to send me my golf balls. All I had to do was receive the shipment that was in front of me. The shipment had already been sent and that package already belonged to me. I just had to take it. It is the same way with healing. God has already sent it; it is now up to you to receive what He has already sent. You don't have to wait for Him to send it and you certainly don't have to keep bugging Him to send it.

If the package had not been sent, I could not have received it. If healing has not already been sent, you cannot receive it. You must be convinced from God's Word that healing HAS been sent to you before you can receive it. In other words, you must believe that it is legally yours to take. If you do not believe that yet, renew your mind with God's Word until you do; this book is designed to help you do that. If you are not SURE that you can receive it, you cannot pray in faith.

If you still see healing as a promise instead of an offer, you can “wait on God” for the rest of your life to do something to heal you. But the truth is that God is waiting on you to receive His gift that Jesus paid for you to have. There is nothing to wait for. The price has been paid and God is offering you your paid-for healing right now. Will you receive it?

Healing = 100% Grace + 0% Merit

You can only receive healing when you realize that it is based 100% on God's grace and 0% on your personal merit. You do not deserve to be healed based on your track record any more than you deserve to avoid hell based on your track record.

Too often, someone will say, "If ANYONE deserves healing around here, I do! I've served in the Youth Department for twenty years and I've even done extra shifts to fill in for people who made lame excuses not to show up for their weeks to be on duty. I've been tithing longer than some congregation members have been alive!" Their words prove that they don't know how to receive healing on a 100% grace basis – they think they've been earning their healings. Such people will go without their healings while people who just got saved get theirs. At least the new believers are keenly aware that anything God gives them is all because of what Jesus did without any regard to their own merits.

If you're such hot stuff that God should heal you based on your merits, Jesus took that horrible whipping for nothing. If you could deserve healing by being so good, why would Jesus have to purchase healing for you by being whipped in your place? You could just be good and get your healing without Jesus.

While you're at it, does your great track record qualify you for heaven? If so, you don't need Jesus, and His blood was shed in vain for you. Why should Jesus have paid your ransom from hell if your life was good enough to avoid hell?

At this point, you'd probably say, "Stop! I know that we've all sinned and that Jesus is the only way to heaven. I don't claim to deserve to go to heaven." Well, start realizing that we've all sinned and that Jesus is the only way to HEALING, too!

You can't get saved unless you receive the GIFT of righteousness by receiving Jesus. Being saved is based 100% on God's grace and 0% on your personal merits. Now you need to realize that you receive healing on the same basis – 100% God's grace and 0% your personal merits. Once you see that, you can stop getting in the way of your own healing and receive it as the free gift from Jesus that it is!

Grace + Faith = Miracles

I've heard the idea that God's grace through Jesus is all we need. As nice and respectful to Jesus as that sounds, it simply isn't true. Some people take this theme to its logical extreme and conclude, "Because it's all grace and all Jesus, ALL are saved!" But NOT all are saved, as Jesus made very clear in Matthew 7:14. God provides the grace, but it is by faith that we have access into this grace (Romans 5:2). Being saved by grace is not the complete picture – we are saved by grace through faith (Ephesians 2:8). This same combination of grace and faith is how miracles happen. Paul pointed out through a rhetorical question that God did miracles among the Galatians by the hearing of faith (Galatians 3:5). A fruitful walk with God depends on a combination of His grace AND our faith exercised in His grace.

I've even heard this "It's all grace" idea applied to money, in which case the preacher teaches that because you're already blessed with all spiritual blessings in the heavenly places in Christ, you don't have to tithe and give in the New Covenant to walk in godly prosperity. This silliness can be blown away with the single Scripture that he who sows sparingly will also reap sparingly (2 Corinthians 9:6). Paul did not teach, "He who sows sparingly will reap bountifully because he is already blessed, because it's all grace and it's all Jesus!" (As for me, I have been VERY happy and blessed for decades doing what Jacob did, saying "...of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee" (Genesis 28:22) and I highly recommend that you do the same. 90% God's way is so much bigger than 100% your way!)

If it were all grace and all Jesus, EVERYONE would be healed, and prosperous too, for that matter – just as everyone in heaven is healed and prosperous. Now everyone legally is healed and prosperous because of what Jesus did, just as everyone is legally saved because of what Jesus did, but only those who appropriate faith get to actually walk in any of these blessings.

Of course, if it weren't for grace, there would be nothing for faith to receive! So the equation is Grace + Faith = Miracles. Thank God for His grace, but you need to mix YOUR FAITH with GOD'S GRACE if you want to enjoy His blessings.

When it comes to the PROVIDING end of your miracle, it IS all grace and it IS all Jesus. But the RECEIVING end of the miracle depends on whether YOU take hold of what grace provided.

Rather than trying to talk God into doing some miracle you need, you need to believe that every need you will ever have has already been laid up for you according to God's riches in glory because of what Jesus did (Philippians 4:19). Now what you have to do is believe that you receive it when you pray (Mark 11:24). Then it will manifest itself in the natural realm. You believe that God's grace has already provided it and you receive it by faith. It's not complicated, so don't make it hard!

YOU Can Be Healed

YOU can be healed! YOU can be one of the “whosoever’s” who believes the Word of God and receives healing from the Lord in your body. You are not an exception. There is no special reason why you cannot be healed. God is not using your sickness for some purpose. He does not want you to be sick. You do not have Paul’s thorn in the flesh and you are not another Job. Your body and your spirit were both purchased by the blood of Jesus (1 Corinthians 6:20). You have a legal right to healing because Jesus bore your sicknesses and pains for you (Isaiah 53:4, Matthew 8:17). This book will help you to see these truths so that you can receive the healing that God is already offering to you right now.

Let’s look at how Jesus determined who should get healed in the New Testament. Here are some verses from passages where Jesus healed the ill during His earthly ministry: He healed all types of sickness among the people and healed all the sick people present (Matthew 4:23-24), healed all that were sick (Matthew 8:16-17), healed every sickness and every disease among the people (Matthew 9:35), healed them all (Matthew 12:15), and healed their sick (Matthew 14:14). All that were diseased were brought to Him and all that touched His clothes were made perfectly whole (Matthew 14:35-36, Mark 6:54-56). He healed great multitudes (Matthew 19:2). He healed as many as were sick (Mark 3:10-12). He laid hands on every one of them and healed them (Luke 4:40-41). He healed them all (Luke 6:17-19). He healed them that had need of healing (Luke 9:11). He healed all who were oppressed by the devil (Acts 10:38). That is how Jesus determined who should be healed – whoever came to Him to receive healing!

How did the apostles determine who should be healed? Peter ministered healing to all the sick who were brought to him on the streets of Jerusalem (Acts 5:12-16). Paul got every sick person on the island of Melita healed (Acts 28:8-9). Jesus gave His disciples power to heal all manner of sickness and disease (Matthew 10:1).

How should you determine who should be healed? John expressed God’s wish that you be in health (3 John 2). James said that any sick should have the prayer of faith prayed over him for his healing (James 5:14-16). Paul said that Christ redeemed you from the law’s curse for not keeping all of God’s commands (Galatians 3:10-14) and that your body was purchased in the same sacrifice that bought your spirit (1 Corinthians 6:19-20). Peter said that you were healed by Jesus’ stripes when He bore your sins in His body on the cross (1 Peter 2:24). Jesus said that believers would lay hands on the sick and they would get well (Mark 16:18).

So, who can be healed? YOU can be healed! Jesus did not make exceptions and tell people they had to keep their sickness for a reason. Peter and Paul did not make exceptions and tell people they had to glorify God in their sickness. The Bible pattern is simple. You cannot be an exception. Stop letting the devil lie to you and tell you that there is some reason you can’t get healed. You CAN get healed!

The guarantee that healing is for all is found in Isaiah's statement that Jesus surely bore our sicknesses and suffered our pains (Isaiah 53:4). He did not just bear some of our sicknesses – He bore all of them, including the ones in your body right now. He did not just bear some people's sicknesses – He bore everyone's sicknesses, including yours. His great atonement was for everyone, including you, so you can partake of the benefits along with anyone else.

Receiving healing is not complicated. You don't need to read the entirety of this book to be healed. You don't need some special revelation that I have that no one else does. I am just telling you what Jesus already did for you. I'm trying to get you to see that healing is yours and has been yours all along, and you can receive it NOW.

You are not an exception. God does not want you sick. YOU can be healed! Read the other discussions and sections of this book and you will discover for yourself that YOU can receive the healing that Jesus purchased for you at Calvary.

Jesus the Healer Has Never Changed

Hebrews 13:8:

Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever.

Malachi 3:6:

For I am the LORD, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed.

James 1:17:

Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.

God and Jesus have never changed. Their will throughout history is Their will today. If it was God's will to heal the sick in Bible days, it is equally God's will to heal the sick today. If He was the Lord your Physician, He still is the Lord your Physician. If Jesus healed the sick during His earthly ministry, He still heals the sick today. Otherwise, He would not be the same Jesus.

No reasonable person can dispute that Jesus healed the sick in great numbers. The Scriptures that talk about this are too numerous to list here. You can refer to the New Testament Scriptures about Healing. They will settle any question that Jesus healed the sick.

"Yes," you may say, "but Jesus is no longer on the earth as He was back then. We cannot go to Him for healing today." No, you can't see Him in person, but you may go to His Body, the Church. Jesus refers to believers as His Body. He is the Head and we are the Body. We are His representatives on the earth, authorized in His name to continue the works that He did on the earth.

Jesus made it clear that believers would continue the same works that He did (in His name) in John 14:12-14. This has always been His plan, even though it is never carried out in the majority of modern-day Christian congregations because of unbelief or lack of instruction and knowledge on the subject.

Jesus still heals the sick through believers. He is still teaching us today. This is clear from Acts 1:1-2: "The former treatise have I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and to teach, until the day in which he was taken up, after that he through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen." Luke's gospel tells us about many healings and miracles in Jesus' ministry as well as some of His teaching. However, Luke writes at the beginning of Acts that this is what Jesus began to do and teach before He was taken up. The clear implication is that Jesus is continuing to do mighty works and teach today after He has been taken up. Jesus is still at work.

In Acts 3:1-16, Peter told the lame man, “In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.” Here Peter did a work that Jesus did, as Jesus said His followers would do. Peter boldly declared to the Jewish leaders, “His name through faith in his name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all” (Acts 3:16) and “By the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole” (See Acts 4:7-10). Peter made it clear that Jesus was doing the healing when they used His name.

In Acts 9:32-35, Peter told Aeneas, “Jesus Christ maketh thee whole: arise, and make thy bed.” Peter made it clear that it was Jesus Christ doing the healing.

In Romans 15:18-19 Paul makes it clear that Christ Himself wrought the mighty signs and wonders by him. Jesus is not only still alive today, but He is actively involved on the earth through His Body.

The same Spirit who anointed Jesus to heal the sick (Acts 10:38) is the same Spirit who dwells in believers. Just as Jesus was anointed by the Holy Spirit, we can be baptized with that same Holy Spirit and do the same works Jesus did. Surely the Holy Spirit has not decreased in power since then, and He is the one who quickens your mortal (subject to death) body (Romans 8:11).

So even though you cannot go to Jesus in the flesh, you can go to a member of His Body in the flesh, and that member is authorized to minister healing to you just as if Jesus were doing it Himself. The member ministers in the name of Jesus, and Jesus Himself does it. (See John 14:12-14.)

Not only can you get your healing through someone else’s ministry, you can also receive it yourself from God directly by believing in what Jesus did for you. This is the same way that you received forgiveness of sins when you were born again. This is the best way to receive your healing, but also the one that takes the most faith. Jesus was made sick in your place at Calvary, and you can be healed simply by believing in His substitution for you. Just as no one has to be there to pray for your salvation once you know how to be saved, no one has to be there to pray for your healing once you know that you can receive it for yourself.

Because Jesus is the same today, He desires to heal the sick just as much today. He has no less compassion on you than He had on the sick people during His earthly ministry. He has not changed since either His earthly ministry or the Book of Acts. If we are not seeing miracles today as we should, it is because we have changed, not because He has changed.

Isaiah's Prophecy of Redemption

Isaiah 53

This is probably the best passage in the Bible to use to demonstrate that God has provided healing for us in Christ's atonement. Interestingly, it's in the Old Testament and it was written hundreds of years before Jesus fulfilled it.

This is surely one of the most-quoted chapters in the Bible. It foretold Jesus' works. One of those works is healing. Unfortunately, this has been somewhat muddled with some unfortunate word choices by the translators. (All statements made regarding the Hebrew are fully documented in this book.)

Verse 3 calls Jesus, "A man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief." The words used here would correctly have been translated "A man of pains, and acquainted with sickness," or something similar. Likewise, in verse 4, "Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows" should read "Surely he hath borne our sicknesses, and carried our pains." For absolute, unshakable, definitive proof of this, see the reply to the objection, Jesus Bore Our Sorrows and Griefs, Not Our Sicknesses and Pains.... If you don't feel like reading that, just read Matthew 8:16-17 and see what the Holy Spirit thought He meant in Isaiah 53! The verses are plainly connected with healing. You can argue with my translation, but you can't argue with God's translation!

Clearly, Jesus bore our sicknesses at Calvary because verse 4 says that He bore our sicknesses and pains, YET we considered Him smitten of God and afflicted. This is all one sentence. The only time Jesus was "smitten" and "afflicted" was when He was punished for our sins. Therefore, His bearing of our sicknesses and our diseases MUST have been at that time. Because the subject of the entire chapter is Christ's atonement for us, His bearing of our sicknesses and pains must have been part of that atonement.

Once you see this, the rest of the chapter becomes clearer. In verse 5, we read that Jesus was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities, and that with His stripes we are healed. Jesus' body was torn up so that our bodies would not have to be torn up. He was our Substitute.

How do we know that He bore sickness as our Substitute? Isaiah said that surely He bore our sicknesses and our pains. He was not bearing His own; He was bearing ours. He was never sick until He was "made sick" for our sins. ("Made sick" is the literal translation of "put to grief" in verse 10.) He was made sick with our sicknesses. He was "smitten of God" and "afflicted" as punishment for our sins, not His own. Isaiah said that we are healed. We must refer to the same people referred to by us and ours in this chapter. The people who are healed are the people whose sins were borne. In other words, YOU are healed. What good would it do for Jesus to bear your sicknesses if God would still require you to bear them? That would be senseless and unfair. Every part of the punishment Jesus endured was what we rightfully deserved for our sins. He took that punishment to relieve us from having to bear it ourselves. Surely, He did not leave any part of the punishment for us to bear ourselves.

Another ironclad proof that Isaiah referred to substitution and not something in Capernaum one evening is Isaiah's use of the Hebrew words translated borne and carried in Isaiah 53:4.

The word for borne is the Hebrew word nasa, the same word Isaiah uses when he says that Jesus "bare the sin of many" in Isaiah 53:12 – part of the same chapter. When Jesus bore our sin, it was as our Substitute. Consistency requires us to understand that He bore our sicknesses as our Substitute as well.

The word for carried is the Hebrews word cabal, the same word Isaiah uses when he says for he shall bear their iniquities in Isaiah 53:11 – part of the same chapter. When Jesus carried our iniquities, it was as our Substitute. Consistency requires us to understand that He carried our pains as our Substitute as well.

To say that Jesus did not bear sickness and pain as our Substitute would be tantamount to claiming that He did not bare sin and iniquity as our substitute either! I don't think any serious Christian wants to go down that road! Either the words mean a substitutionary suffering or they don't – you can't have it both ways.

The bearing of sickness was required by Deuteronomy 28:15-68, Leviticus 26:14-39, and other passages that explain the "curse" for not keeping God's law. Although Jesus kept the Law Himself, He had to be punished by being cursed for our sins Himself. Galatians 3:13 (see Galatians 3:10-14) says that He was made a curse for us to redeem us from the curse. He had to explicitly bear the sickness part of the curse as part of the punishment for our sins. (There were other parts of the curse that it would have been impossible for Him to bear literally, such as the threatened curse involving people's wives and children, crop failures, and so on. That is why He "became a curse" and was "cursed" so that God would impute that cursedness as payment for our redemption from the entire curse of the Law, including the parts that it would have been impossible for Him to bear in a literal sense.) Part of this curse was sickness – every sickness and disease that there is (Deuteronomy 28:61), and God required Him to bear that part of the curse literally. The parts that He COULD bear, He DID; the rest was covered by the fact that He was "cursed" in general on the cross.

This is why you cannot possibly be an exception to God's will to heal ALL. He carried OUR sicknesses and OUR pains, and this includes YOUR sicknesses and YOUR pains. Despite modern theology to the contrary, God could not justly ask you to bear a punishment that Jesus Christ already bore in your place. That would be like condemning two criminals for a crime committed by only one. Jesus already served the sentence. No human court ever asks anyone to serve a sentence for a crime when someone else has already fully served that sentence. The courts may have their problems, but they are not as warped as modern theology yet.

Notice the blessed fact that our healing was not a one-time thing, but an ongoing thing to last through our lifetimes, based on a one-time act by Jesus Christ. Read the tenses carefully: "Surely he hath borne [past tense] our sicknesses and carried [past tense] our pains: yet we did esteem [past tense] him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted. But he was wounded [past tense] for our transgressions, he was bruised [past tense] for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was [past tense] upon him; and with His stripes we are [present tense] healed."

This is important to notice, because eventually you will meet someone who objects that Matthew 8:16-17 refers only to Jesus' earthly ministry and not to His atonement. But the true fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy, which clearly paints healing as being part of Christ's atonement for sin, must involve healing for all. In fact, the reason Matthew says that the healings were that Isaiah's prophecy "might be fulfilled" is that Christ's healing of the sick in His earthly ministry was done on the basis of His future atonement. Aside from the fact that there is no other adequate explanation of what Matthew meant, you can find further proof of this in the reply to Objection: Isaiah 53:4 \(Matthew 8:17\) Was Fulfilled in Jesus' Earth Ministry and Cannot Be Claimed as a Promise by Christians Today.

Isaiah said clearly that the Messiah would be made sick in our place to bring healing to us. Jesus Christ was made sick with your sicknesses so that you would not have to bear them.

Healing and Atonement](#)

Everything's Yours, Including Healing

Everything you will ever need in your life has already been provided for you in Christ. That includes healing. This is one of the most important truths you will ever learn as a Christian. You don't need to try to get God to give you what He has already given you! It would be no smarter than praying for me that I will be male. I am already male, so that prayer would be useless. So is any prayer asking God to heal you, bless you, provide for you, and so on. This is where many people miss it. Their prayers don't line up with God's Word, and so their prayers go answered.

Ephesians 1:3

You are already blessed with all spiritual blessings! God didn't hold any back. Any blessing you could ever need in this life already belongs to you.

Is healing a blessing? Yes! You are already blessed with it!

God has set up a heavenly bank account for you with everything in it, and all you need to do is go make a withdrawal or write a check. God doesn't have to make the blessing yours – it IS yours! You just have to appropriate it by faith by believing that you receive it when you pray. The prayer of faith transfers the blessing from your heavenly account to the earth where you need it.

2 Peter 1:3-4

God has already provided everything for you that pertains to this life! He left nothing out. He didn't leave healing out!

God supplies all your needs – including healing needs – out of the provision He already made by Jesus Christ.

It's a wonderful day when you learn that everything you'll ever need is already yours as far as God is concerned – it's there for the taking. God did not give you the Holy Spirit to help you grovel at God's feet for your needs. He gave the Holy Spirit to show you the things that He already gave you (1 Corinthians 2:12)! That's why Paul prayed that God would enlighten the Ephesians to the inheritance that they already had in Christ rather than praying that God would do something new and give them the parts of that inheritance that they needed (Ephesians 1:15-23).

Taking What's Yours

Jesus said in Mark 11:24 that you should receive what you ask for in prayer – the Greek word for receive means take, which denotes a definite act on your part. “Receiving” is not resignation that waits for God to get around to doing something. Passive people get nothing. Jesus said that the violent take the kingdom by force (Matthew 11:12). This doesn't mean that you should be a jihadist engaging in literal violence, of course. (If you are such a person, please know that Jesus loves you and died for your sins so that you can be saved and set free from your bondage.) But you are “violent” in the sense that you seize something.

However, the violent “seizing” isn't how you take things from God. You don't rip healing out of God's clenched fist; you receive it from His open hand! However, you take it and grab it and don't let go – the way that a bulldog holds something in his mouth. You don't let Satan talk you out of it. You have to seize it in the sense that you clench it tightly no matter what the doctors say, no matter what well-meaning but ill-informed relatives say, and sometimes despite what well-meaning but ill-informed preachers say!

Satan is a Stealer, Not a Blocker

Some people have the mistaken idea that Satan can block their blessings. They picture themselves in a certain spot, their blessing in another spot, and Satan in the middle like an American football linebacker trying to block them from getting to the blessing.

That is a false picture because you already own the title to that blessing. Satan is too late to the party. The blessing was laid up for you in Christ, and it's already yours. Jesus didn't say that Satan came to prevent you from getting things; He said that the devil comes to steal (John 10:10).

Have you had a Lamborghini stolen from you this week? Are you concerned that Satan might steal a Lamborghini from you? You are probably not concerned if you are like most readers – because you don't have a Lamborghini! No one can steal something that you don't have! Satan wants to steal what is already yours. He can't stop it from belonging to you because Jesus already gave it to you.

God knows that healing is yours, and so does Satan. Satan is out to steal your blessing, but he needs your cooperation to do it. He has to get you to believe and speak his lies with your own mouth so that he is authorized to act in your body. He can't stop you from having healing in your heavenly bank account – it's already there! He wants to steal what you already have in Christ. Of course, he has a problem because even if he manages to steal something from you, you can receive it again from your heavenly account an unlimited number of times.

So the next time Satan tries to harass you with his lie, “This time, you're not going to get your healing,” you can inform him that he is too late – you already have it as part of your inheritance in Christ! Don't let him steal what's already yours. Instead, believe that you receive the blessings, including healing, that God says are rightfully yours already.

Healing and Text Messages

If I don't send you a text message, you cannot receive a text message from me. The only condition under which you could get a text message is if someone sends it. No amount of prayer or other action would allow you to receive an unsent text message!

If God doesn't send something, you can't receive it from Him. Fortunately, He already "sent" healing and it's part of your salvation benefits package.

Most Christians in effect beg God to send them a text, when what they really need to do is to receive the text that He already sent! Jesus didn't tell you to try to get God to send you something; He told you to receive. You can only receive what's already sent. You have to know that healing HAS been sent as part of the New Covenant. Then you can believe that you receive it. It requires faith to receive something that you can't see. The only way you know that it's there is by reading God's Word. Once you know what His 66-book text message – the Bible – has to say, you can receive healing (and any other blessing) from Him with confidence.

Forgiven People Can Be Healed

Forgiveness and healing always go together. We see it throughout Scripture. If you are forgiven, you can be healed! So we'll deal with this in two parts. In the first part, you'll see the strong connection between forgiveness and healing. In the second part, you'll see definite proof that you are forgiven if you are a Christian.

The Connection between Forgiveness and Healing

Psalm 103:2-3:

Bless the LORD, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits:
Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases;

Here David made it clear that God forgave all his sins and healed all his diseases. What would make you think that under a better covenant (Hebrews 8:6), God would forgive only some of your sins and heal only some of your diseases?

You can read the account in Numbers 21:5-9 of deadly serpents sent as judgment against Israel when the people spoke against God and against Moses and complained about the food God had supernaturally fed them. The solution was for Moses to put a serpent on a pole, and anyone who looked at that serpent could live. He would obviously be forgiven and also be healed. The serpent on the pole symbolized Jesus Christ. Don't take my word for it, take His in John 3:14! Looking at the mere symbol of Jesus could get you forgiveness as well as healing.

You may wonder why Moses didn't put a spotless lamb on the pole to represent Jesus. It is because Jesus did not look like a spotless lamb on the cross; He looked like a snake. He looked like sin. He became sin for us. He bore our sins on that cross.

You can read the account of the Passover in Exodus 12:12-13. The Israelites had to sprinkle the blood of a slain lamb on their doors. In fact, Exodus 12:7 specifies how it was to be done – it was to be spread across and up, which is fairly obvious symbol of the cross of Christ. The killer plague that took out the firstborn of Egypt everywhere else passed over houses that had this sign on the door. You can then note in Psalm 105:37 that there was no one feeble in their tribes after partaking of the lamb and sprinkling the blood. This is probably the biggest mass healing in history. They did not have to carry Granny out on a sedan chair (with all due respect for the original Ten Commandments movie) because Granny wasn't feeble. (Be sure to get your theology from the Bible and not from Hollywood films; it will save you a lot of deception especially when it comes to demon-related matters.)

Israel later forsook God and forgot about His command to celebrate the Passover in a certain way every year. In Hezekiah's day, they rediscovered the Law and realized they had been negligent. When they celebrated the Passover, even though they didn't get everything technically right, God answered Hezekiah's prayer and healed the people (2 Chronicles 30:18-20). So once again healing went along with the symbol of Christ. Again, don't take my word that Passover was a symbol of Christ; take God's Word on it in 1 Corinthians 5:7 where He says that "Christ our passover is sacrificed for us."

Another symbol of the cross appears in Exodus 15:25-26 after Israel faced dying of thirst because the water at Marah was undrinkable. Once again, a symbol of the cross (also known as a tree) provided healing. (When the tree was cast into the water, the water became sweet and drinkable.)

Before we move on to some other illustrations involving forgiveness and healing, consider this question: Is God the biggest false advertiser ever? If everyone could receive healing when a mere symbol that pointed to Christ was presented, but no one can receive healing because of what Christ Himself did, then God would be guilty of false advertising, and the symbols of Christ are better than Christ who was symbolized! In this world, we are used to misleading advertising. "All items in the store up to 70% off!" can mean that one stick of gum is 70% off while everything else is 0% off. "GOING OUT for BUSINESS" and "ALL ITEMS 5.99 OR LESS Selected Section" speak for themselves. Going to a car dealer promotion where you are "guaranteed to win up to $2500" at which almost everyone gets $5 is another example. "All cars $3000 off today only" sounded like a good enough deal that I went only to find that the stickers on all the cars had been marked UP $3000 that day only so that the net price was the same as any other day. "Everyone gets one of these big prizes or 2 gold coins" meant that you got 2 dollar coins that had been rolled in gold-colored glue. You expect that kind of nonsense when you get car dealer promotions in the mail. But God is not a man that He should lie (Numbers 23:19) or even mislead! If the symbols of Christ got you healed in the Old Testament, surely Christ Himself can get you healed in New Testament times!

Now let's consider some other examples. These are expounded upon a little more in the Healing and Atonement discussion.

In Numbers 16:44-50, anyone who looked at a serpent on a pole (a symbol of Christ on the cross) was both forgiven and healed.

In Job 33:19-25, we see that a forgiven person has the right to have his youth restored.

In Jeremiah 17:14, being saved and being healed are mentioned together.

In Jeremiah 33:6-8, being forgiven and being healed are mentioned together.

In Luke 5:17-26, Jesus said that He would prove that He could forgive sins by healing someone. In other words, the fact that the man was healed showed that his sins were forgiven – God was not holding those sins against him, so he did not have to suffer the physical punishment that he deserved for his sins.

In the forthcoming 1000-year reign of Christ, people will be forgiven, enabling them to be healed (Isaiah 33:24).

So if a person is forgiven, he can be healed. So now you have to ask yourself whether or not you are forgiven. If you're a Christian, the Word is very clear on this subject.

You Are Forgiven for Everything!

The passages below show you that you already HAVE redemption and you already ARE forgiven for all your sins:

Ephesians 1:7

Ephesians 4:32

Colossians 1:14

Colossians 2:13

Colossians 3:13

1 John 2:12

You are not going to get forgiven at some future point if you are a Christian. You ARE forgiven for all your sins, past, present and future, NOW. (All your sins were future sins when Jesus died on the cross!)

(If you have been taught that you can't receive forgiveness until you confess individual sins, please see What 1 John 1:9 Really Means to learn the liberating truth.)

Putting It All Together

Because forgiven people can be healed, and you are forgiven, you can be healed! NOW!

What If You Sin?

While this topic at first may not seem to relate to divine healing, I can tell you that MANY Christians “disqualify themselves” from healing because they do not understand the concepts put forth in this discussion. If you see yourself as an unworthy, undeserving, sinful little worm, you aren’t going to think that you should receive divine healing. You’ll have the attitude, “I don’t deserve healing, so if God in His mercy decides to heal me, it’s better than what I deserve. If He doesn’t heal me, I don’t deserve it anyway.” If that’s how you’ve been seeing things, it’s time for you to renew your mind with God’s Word, find out the truth, and never let that falsely humble religious mentality hinder you from receiving anything again! If you’ve had trouble receiving from God, this discussion may be exactly what you need.

If Jesus wanted you to get what you deserve based on YOUR track record, He wouldn’t have gone to the cross! He would have just let you get the punishment that your sins deserve! His mercy spares you what you deserve, and His grace gives you better than you deserve. Once you’re born again, you’re righteous and you DO “deserve” all of God’s blessings, including healing – not based on YOUR track record but based on Jesus’ perfect righteousness that is yours as a gift (Romans 5:17).

The moment you receive Jesus, God becomes your heavenly Father.

But what if you sin?

If you sin, God is still your heavenly Father. That doesn’t change one bit. Thank God, sin does not change your relationship to God. He is still your heavenly Father after you sin just as much as He was before you sin.

When I was a much younger Young, I did quite a few things that displeased my earthly father. Despite that, he did not cease to be my earthly father. Sin did not change my relationship to him. He was my earthly father just as much after I sinned as before I sinned.

Nothing in this book promotes sin or encourages trying to “get away with it,” but be assured that if you DO sin, God is still your Father. In fact, you cannot sin your way out of His fatherhood. The one thing you could ever do to stop God from being your Father would be to renounce Jesus as your Lord. Only receiving Jesus made God your Father, so only rejecting Jesus could ever make God cease being your Father. As long as you have not rejected Jesus, He is your Father as much as He ever was, even if you’ve sinned a lot!

You don’t get into the kingdom of God by not sinning, and you don’t stay in His kingdom by not sinning! You get into the kingdom by faith and you stay in the kingdom by faith. Sin did not stop God from becoming your Father when you came to Him through Jesus, and sin will not stop God from continuing to be your Father now.

OK, but now what about your fellowship with God? If your earthly father sends you to your room, you are still related to him but you lose fellowship with him for the time being. However, the way things work with your heavenly Father is different. Your earthly father never lived in you and went everywhere you went, but your heavenly Father lives in you and goes wherever you go.

But what if you sin?

If you sin, God still lives in you and goes everywhere you go. There is no such thing as “being sent to your room” spiritually and having your heavenly Father refuse to talk to you. In fact, if you’re in sin, you and He really NEED to be able to talk to one another so that He can help you get out of sin and stay out of sin in the future.

If you sin, the three Persons whom you need the most – the Father, Son and Holy Ghost – do NOT catch the last train for the coast the day that you sin! Jesus said that the Holy Spirit would abide with you forever (John 14:16). Forever is a long time! Forever means that He doesn’t take off on you just because you sin. Jesus and His Father abide in you, never leaving or forsaking you (Hebrews 13:5).

You must remember which covenant you are under! There is never a need for a New Testament believer to plead as David did in Psalm 51:11, “Don’t cast me out of Your presence! Don’t take the Holy Spirit from me!” He WON’T! You have a much better covenant than David had. God does not cast you out or take the Holy Spirit away from you if you sin!

Some people quote Isaiah 59:2 to try to prove that you sins DO separate you from God, but that was under the Old Covenant! You have a much better covenant.

The moment you receive Jesus, you become the righteousness of God in Christ (2 Corinthians 5:21). You don’t just HAVE righteousness, you ARE righteousness. You are so righteous that your picture should be in the dictionary next to “righteousness” so that people can see what righteousness looks like! In fact, you will not be one bit more righteous in heaven than you are right now. You can’t improve on perfect righteousness, and you have perfect righteousness – as if you’d never sinned at all!

But what if you sin?

Before you sin, you are the righteousness of God in Christ. After you sin, what are you? Correct answer: The righteousness of God in Christ! That hasn’t changed at all!

“But wait,” you might think, “surely sin did SOMETHING to my right standing with God!” But it didn’t.

Here’s what you need to remember: When you first received Jesus, did what you received depend on how little or how much you were sinning? No, of course not! So what makes you think that everything that was freely given to you now depends on how much or how little you’re sinning? That would mean that it’s harder to walk in God’s blessings when you’ve been walking with Him than it was to walk in His blessings the day you got saved. That makes no sense. Everything God gave you in Christ was by grace, not by your merit. It’s STILL by grace and not by merit even if you’ve walked with Him for decades!

It is the blood of Jesus that gives you access to God's throne – not your own ability to stay out of sin. That blood purchased your forgiveness and granted you fellowship with God, Jesus and the Holy Spirit. They all dwell in you as a believer.

But what if you sin?

If you sin, you still have fellowship with God, Jesus and the Holy Spirit, all of whom continue to dwell in you. And that's a good thing, because if sin really breaks your fellowship, you're going to have a rough time getting out of sin on your own without Their help! They can all remind you that Jesus shed His blood so that your sins would be forgiven. As a believer today, ALL your sins are forgiven. You walk in God's forgiveness, and Jesus' blood cleanses you from all sin.

But what if you sin?

God knew that you were going to commit that sin and that's why He had Jesus pay for your sin so that you could be forgiven for it! Jesus' bloodshed would have been for nothing if no one was going to sin! So if you sin, remember that the whole point of Jesus' sacrifice was to buy you forgiveness for all your sins – including that sin! Thank God that you are forgiven! (You do not have to add any works of your own to be forgiven – if you're in Christ, you ARE forgiven!) Rather than doing the devil's work by beating yourself up and making yourself miserable because you sinned, rejoice that it was just one more sin that Jesus already paid for – and you're forgiven!

As a believer, it is a wonderful thing to walk in God's favor and know His pleasure in what you do.

But what if you sin?

In this case, there has to be a slightly different answer, because God does NOT take pleasure in sin. He will not just send you ooey-gooney love notes from heaven if you do something wrong. He will correct you and prompt you to repent, as He did in the case of several churches in the book of Revelation. Just as any earthly parent who loves his child will correct that child, God loves you enough to correct you if you blow it! And He may be as sharp as Jesus was with some of the churches in the book of Revelation.

I know that you can start a big dust-up over the issue of whether the Holy Spirit convicts a believer of sin or not. (Fortunately, your opinion on this issue will not stop you from receiving divine healing either way.) Is it He or is it your conscience letting you know that you did something wrong? I believe that it's BOTH because the Bible, which the Holy Spirit moved men to write, mentions a LOT of specific sins, even in the New Testament. If the Holy Spirit speaks to you through Scripture, which you should allow Him to do, He's going to make the "specific sin" verses come alive to you along with all the others. In that way, He most certainly speaks to you about specific sins. I've even listed a lot (but not all) "specific sin" verses that Paul wrote in my reply to Objection: Teaching Grace Gives People a License to Sin.)

If you're saved, your born-again spirit does not participate in sin – it takes your flesh and/or your unrenewed mind to get you into trouble. Your spirit that is made in God's image will always lead you away from sin. However, your human will isn't born again! You have to decide whether to side with the real you – the hidden man of the heart – or with your flesh. You will have that struggle every day until Jesus returns or you go to be with Him before He does.

So your conscience will convict you if you sin. If your conscience does it, does the Holy Spirit have to do the same thing? Well, God corrects His true children (Hebrews 12:5-13). So if you sin, He will certainly talk to you about it! And Jesus will talk to you about repenting! God doesn't just sit there and let you hurt yourself by sinning and not say anything to you about it. He loves you too much to just leave you in sin, which is always destructive. You can argue whichever way you want about the Holy Spirit's involvement in it, but given that God and Jesus correct you, it is safe to say that you will be the recipient of divine correction if you sin! What you will NOT be is the subject of divine condemnation. You have passed from condemnation into life as a believer, and there is no condemnation for you (Romans 8:1). That doesn't mean that there is no conviction for those who are in Christ Jesus, though!

What if you shrug off God's correction when you sin? Does this affect your relationship or fellowship with Him?

Yes and no. Your relationship to God is still intact and your ability to fellowship with God is still intact. However, the tone of your fellowship will change. If you shrug Him off, He will keep trying to get through to you because He loves you, and He will get sterner with you. If you keep purposefully shrugging Him off, He may stop dealing with you and just let you suffer the inevitable consequences in this life of what you're doing. Remember that Jesus even gave the promiscuous "prophetess" Jezebel at Thyatira time to repent. In other words, He dealt with her graciously about her sin. But after she hardened herself and would not repent, Jesus' language to her got much sterner and He warned her of dire consequences if she did not stop what she was doing. (In this case, she was hurting His church, so He threatened severe punishment.) You can read about this in Revelation 2:20-23.

God will love you no matter what. He will still love you if you renounce Jesus – but the fact that He loves you would not keep you out of hell. He still loves you if you deliberately cling to sin after He deals with you about it, but you will not experience the same sweet fellowship that you would if you repent. God doesn't change (Malachi 3:6), so He does not get sweeter and sweeter as the days go by, but your fellowship with Him will get sweeter and His tone will get sweeter if you stop resisting Him!

Some people will interpret this change of tone to mean that God has not forgiven you, and that you had better confess your sin to get Him to forgive you so that He can change His tone with you. (This is based on a mistaken reading of 1 John 1:9. See What 1 John 1:9 Really Means for more on that.) However, that isn't what's going on. You ARE forgiven – that is not the issue. The issue is your persistence in doing something that is hurting you and/or bringing reproach to the gospel even though you are forgiven for doing it. God does not get strict with you because He hasn't forgiven you – He gets strict with you to get your attention when His prior efforts to correct you have failed!

Healing and forgiveness are both legally yours as a Christian, but you will have a hard time walking in the blessings He has already provided if you're having a tug of war with Him about something else. You should NOT expect your prayers for healing or anything else to be answered if you have hardened yourself and are willfully resisting His will, if for no other reason that your conscience will condemn you and you will lose any confidence to receive from Him while you are in that condition.

1 John 3:21-22:

Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God.

And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight.

If your heart is smiting you because you know you're doing something wrong, you won't have confidence toward God. God is greater than your heart and knows all things, but if you're deliberately disobeying His commands and doing things that are displeasing in His sight, you'll have no confidence before His presence. Actually, when you're willfully disobedient, you probably won't even want to be AWARE of His presence in you because you know full well what He has to say to you and you're trying to plug your ears to His pleadings.

By the way, the passage above does NOT establish a works gospel by teaching that you can only receive from God if you keep His commandments. No one could receive anything if that were true. There is almost surely something you are doing (or did today) that is sin, and if sin could keep you out of God's blessings, you would never walk in any of them – you'd be right back under the Law! John's point could not be that if you engage in any kind of sin, you can't receive! If that were so, the blood of Jesus that purchased your forgiveness was shed for nothing. Also, it would contradict what John said in 1 John 1:7 that if you walk in the light, the blood of Jesus cleanses you from all sin! The sin John talks about here is not just any sin that you might be committing right now – it's sin that you are aware of that God is dealing with you about – sin that your heart is condemning you for. A sin you're committing that you're unaware of (there probably are such sins!) does not cause your heart to condemn you. Your heart doesn't condemn you unless you know that you're doing something wrong.

Does this put you back in the same place as the traditional interpretation of 1 John 1:9 that God only forgives and cleanses you when you confess an individual sin? No, it doesn't. You're already cleansed and forgiven as a Christian – that is not the issue. The issue is that you are ashamed and embarrassed to approach God because you know you're ducking Him – much as Adam and Eve ducked God in the Garden of Eden after they knew that they had sinned. God didn't run away from Adam; Adam ran away from God. God is still greater than your heart and knows all things – He knows that He has forgiven and cleansed you even if you don't feel very "clean" at the moment because you feel guilty that you're resisting God.

But your fellowship with God will not have the same pleasantness if you deliberately stiff-arm Him when He pleads with you. You will still have a father-child relationship and the ability to fellowship, but it won't be the same. In the natural, I could decide to ignore my wife or do everything the opposite of what she wants this week. I could leave my wobbled-up socks all over the floor rather than putting them in the laundry. I could leave my towel on the floor after I shower. I could refuse to take out the trash. I could refuse to do the driving some of the time. I could refuse to do anything with her that she enjoys. Now, after a week of this, she will STILL be my wife. My legal relationship to her will not have changed. The fact that I can have a conversation with her will not have changed – and you can bet that she would want to initiate a conversation! However, the pleasantness of our relationship will not be there as long as I stubbornly do the opposite of her known will. The same applies to our relationship with God. You will still HAVE relationship, but God will want to initiate a conversation that your flesh will not like. Fortunately, He loves you enough to keep trying to get your attention and steer you away from ruinous behavior, even if He has to get stern with you. “God is good all the time” does not mean that “God never gets stern with you about sin.” In fact, it is His very goodness that leads Him to deal with you about destructive behavior so that you can live better!

In conclusion, sin you're not aware of will not hinder your healing. NO sin will change your relationship to God (other than the sin of rejecting Jesus). But it will change the tone of your fellowship if you persist in known sin, and because your heart will condemn you, you will lose confidence to receive healing or any other blessing. Thus, if you know you're sinning, don't be stupid – repent! It will be so much easier to receive after you do that.

The Sick Person's Greatest Need

If you ask most Christians what a sick person's greatest need is, they will answer without hesitation, "Prayer!"

And they're wrong.

The sick person's greatest need is to hear, believe and act on the Word of God concerning healing!

The church world's "knee-jerk" reaction is to call as many people as possible to pray. I am not saying that we should not pray for sick people, but we should not do it in the traditional way where we beg God to do something new about the person's healing, when the truth is that He has already done everything that needs to be done. A good prayer for the sick person would be that his eyes would be enlightened so that he can see that divine healing for every ailment has already been provided in Christ. The sick person needs to see that healing has been provided, and then he needs to believe that he receives it when he prays.

If Uncle Jack Potts, a compulsive gambler, is unsaved, would it make sense that as many people as possible would pray that salvation just would fall on him while he's cranking the arm of a slot machine in a casino? No, I'd hope that we would be asking God to send laborers to Uncle Jack who will tell him the plan of salvation so that he can act on it. To paraphrase Paul, how can Uncle Jack hear without a preacher? Someone has to tell him the good news or he will have nothing to believe and act on. It is the same with healing. If no one tells the sick person the truth so that he can know the truth and be set free, do we expect him to just figure it all out on his own? He needs someone to tell him the good news about healing!

If churches spent more time teaching the Word about divine healing and less time praying the prayers they pray for the sick, they would find that many more sick people would be healed.

Prayer cannot be your greatest need when you're sick yourself, because you can be healed without prayer if you take authority over sickness and command it to leave your body. If you want to go the prayer route (which you can), you believe that you receive your healing when you pray. But if you just speak to the sickness in faith, you can be healed without prayer. However, you won't be healed (barring some spectacular and unusual manifestation of the Spirit) unless you know, believe and act on the Word! So this shows that the Word is more important than prayer if you're sick.

The Bible never says, "He sent an army of intercessors and healed them," but it does say, "He sent His Word and healed them" (Psalm 107:20).

Your Body Is God's Property

1 Corinthians 6:19-20:

What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?

For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's.

In the clearest terms, Paul said that your body is God's, not your own. Both your spirit and your body were bought with the same price – the precious blood of Jesus.

Once you realize this, you will see how foolish it is to think that God would want your body to be sick. Why would God mutilate His own personal possession? Do you think that God wants “the temple of the Holy Ghost” to be broken down and out of commission? What glory would He get from that?

Under the Law of Moses, God spent chapters and chapters discussing every minor detail of His earthly tabernacle. He was so concerned about His Old Testament temple that we might wonder sometimes why such a large amount of space was committed to it. God was adamant that Moses make everything according to the pattern shown to him on the mountain. There were to be no substitutions and no compromises.

If God was this concerned about His tabernacle in the desert, how much more should He be concerned about His New Testament tabernacle – believers! Does God no longer care if His “house” is in rough shape? Or was He more concerned about how many pillars and hooks and sockets were in place fulfilling their functions than about whether your organs are in place fulfilling their functions?

Under the Old Covenant, God did not allow sickness in His holy sanctuary! Leviticus 21:16-23 contains laws stating that various classes of sick or deformed people were not to approach God with offerings because they would profane His sanctuaries. Because God did not want His Old Testament sanctuary to be profaned with sickness, surely He does not want His New Testament sanctuary (you) to have sickness! (You DO have the right to approach God if you're sick or deformed in the New Testament.)

1 Corinthians 6:15

Here your body is called a member of Christ. This is another definitive proof that your body, not just your soul and spirit, is now “in Christ.” How do you suppose Christ feels about His own members? We can see below in the next passage:

Ephesians 5:28-32

We read here that Jesus nourishes and cherishes His Church. We are members of His body. The Church is referred to as the Body of Christ on the earth. Why would Jesus make a member of His body sick when He cherishes His body? Our flesh is His flesh on the earth! He is concerned about it. We are one with Christ and our bodies belong to Him.

God could not “sicken you for a reason” because He is for your body, not against your body! God is in favor of your health (3 John 2), not against it! Moreover, your body is “for the Lord.” You are to use your body to serve and glorify Jesus. You can serve and glorify Jesus far more effectively outside a hospital than inside a hospital.

Your body is “for the Lord.” God has not made healing available so that you can carouse and get drunk and otherwise sin with more vitality and strength. Your body is His, and you should present it to Him as a living sacrifice (Romans 12:1). If you are holding out on God in one area of your life, you may not be able to be open to Him in another area of your life. If He’s dealing with you to stop taking your body to a strip club and you resist His pleadings, it will be hard to receive healing from cancer from Him in that same body, which you have trained NOT to cooperate with God’s agenda. It would be like trying to welcome God into your house while simultaneously slamming the door in His face. My general assumption throughout this book is that I am addressing God-fearing, Jesus-loving, Spirit-filled, consecrated Christians. Things will go better in your body when you treat it as God’s property and present it to Him as a living sacrifice.

1 Peter 2:24 is not a healing promise. In fact, it is not any kind of promise. God does not promise you anything in this verse. There is only the statement that Jesus did something for you. God did not say that He would heal you. He said that you were already healed by Jesus' stripes. That's how God sees it. Once you and God agree on this matter, you can receive what's yours.

This verse does not promise salvation from sin, either. It simply tells what Jesus did for you. It is up to you to act on it.

People make a mistake when they cite this verse as God's promise to heal them. A promise to heal you would put your healing off into the future. This verse puts it in the past tense. It says that Jesus already healed you. If you "believe that God will heal you," you are not in agreement with God at all. You are saying He will and He is saying He did. Can you see the difference?

The obvious question is, if you are healed, why are you experiencing pain in your body? This is probably the #1 misunderstanding that people have. As usual, it helps to draw a parallel with the spiritual side of salvation.

We know from many Scriptures that Jesus bore the sin of the whole world on the cross. He was punished in our place, thus purchasing complete forgiveness for us. The Scriptures say that He atoned not only for our sins, but the sins of the whole world (1 John 2:2). Yet not everyone is saved. That is because only some have received the forgiveness that Christ purchased for them. Those who do not receive this forgiveness do not benefit from it. When a sinner receives forgiveness, Jesus does nothing new as far as paying for sins goes. The sinner simply acts on the facts and receives what Jesus already made available.

No sinner would ever get saved by standing around saying, "God promised to save me in John 3:16!" It is not enough that the price was paid and the provision was made. The sinner is only saved when he receives something that already belongs to him as far as God is concerned. Salvation from sin does indeed belong to everyone legally, but only those who receive it get it. Those who don't receive it never enjoy the benefits that could be theirs, including the right to be with the Lord forever.

Likewise, healing belongs to everyone. It is part of the same atonement. But only those who receive it get to walk in it. You can't just believe that Jesus made it available to you. You have to receive it. Until you do, you will still experience pain in your body even though God considers you healed by the stripes of Jesus.

What Peter Didn't Say

Peter did not say that you are not sick. He did not say that your sickness must be a figment of your imagination because you are really healed. Such thinking is incorrect and dangerous; you could die denying the symptoms in your body. The statement, "You were healed" does not mean that you cannot get sick. Epaphroditus and Timothy were sick, and Paul did not spiritualize this. Peter's statement must be understood to say that you are legally healed by the stripes of Jesus, just as you were legally saved even before you were born again. In other words, healing belongs to you. It is part of your inheritance in Christ. Sickness may manifest in your body, but you have the right to make it leave.

Don't Beg for What's Already Yours

Do you go in every payday and grovel before your boss to get your paycheck? Of course not. You simply receive something that rightfully belongs to you. When something rightfully belongs to you, you do not beg for it.

When you go to the bank, do you beg the teller (or the ATM) to give you money from your account? Of course not! That money rightfully belongs to you.

That is why it is unproductive and useless to beg God for your healing. Don't beg and plead for something that is already yours. Instead, receive healing from God just as you would withdraw money from your bank account. God has already deposited your healing into your heavenly bank account. You have a legal right to withdraw it at any time.

In God's mind, you are already healed by the stripes of Jesus. Nothing can possibly change this fact. You never have to worry whether or not healing is yours, because it has been settled once and for all.

Your Healing Already Exists!

Don't treat your healing as something that you want God to manufacture in heaven and give you. Your healing already exists! It is waiting for you to take it. God already laid it up for you. Remember that faith is the assurance of something that is unseen. If your healing did not exist, you could not be in faith about it, because there would be nothing there to get. There would be no unseen thing to have an assurance of!

You are not creating anything with your prayers. You are receiving something. Jesus said to believe that you receive when you pray, not to believe that you create when you pray. When you receive healing, you are taking something that already exists that God is offering to you. He does not have to whip up a new healing for you in heaven because you prayed.

One of most awesome statements in the Bible is that God has given to you all things that pertain to life and godliness (see 2 Peter 1:3-4). This would certainly include healing. In other words, your needs have already been supplied in Christ. When you believe for a need to be met, you are simply making a withdrawal from heaven of something that has already been laid up for you. Full provision for everything that you need is already in storage waiting for you to claim it.

People sometimes get mad when you talk about claiming things, but that really is what you're doing! When I travel, I have a claim check that enables me to claim something that is already mine when I get to where I'm going. No one fusses with me for claiming my luggage – it's mine. No one should ever fuss at you for claiming your healing or anything else that pertains to life and godliness – it's yours! People talk as if you'll cause a heavenly power drain by making a demand on heaven's resources, but you can't possibly do that. Everything that everyone needs has already been laid up in Christ! Everyone could claim everything at once and it wouldn't put a dent in God's unlimited power.

When I claim my luggage, I don't try to make it exist. I know that it exists; I just want to pick up what's mine. When you claim your healing, you aren't manufacturing anything new, nor is God. You are just picking up what is already yours.

When you see that the provision of your healing is in the past tense, you are well on your way to receiving it. The provision has already been made; you only need to receive it when you pray.

Healed by Jesus' Stripes

1 Peter 2:24:

Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed.

When we think of Christ's atonement, we usually think of His suffering on the cross. However, His atonement did not start there. Before Jesus went to the cross, He had already been beaten viciously with a Roman whip. He was so weak from this that He could not even carry His cross all the way to His crucifixion site. The lashes laid on Jesus were part of the punishment for our sin that He had to bear.

We were healed by the whipping inflicted upon Jesus. How could His bruises heal us? He was bearing the physical part of the curse for breaking the Law in His body as our Substitute. This frees us from having to bear the curse for breaking the Law (which includes all sickness and disease) in our bodies.

If Jesus were not supposed to provide physical healing for us, He could have just hung on the cross and shed His blood for our forgiveness. He would not have had to endure the scourge that brought physical healing to us. The only explicitly stated benefit of the scourging that came before His crucifixion is healing. This is really where His body was broken, more so than on the cross. This is the act commemorated by the bread when we partake of the Lord's Supper.

Jesus did more than shed His blood for us. He had to allow His body to be broken for us. We celebrate both when we partake of the Lord's Supper. We should walk in the benefit of His broken body (healing) as well as the benefit of His shed blood (forgiveness). He was WOUNDED for our transgressions and BRUISED for our iniquities (Isaiah 53:5). He did not just shed blood for our sins; He had to be PHYSICALLY punished on our behalf. But because He bore our physical punishment for sin, He relieved us from having to be physically punished for sin. Our bodies are now redeemed from sickness and pain because of what He did.

According to YOUR FAITH Be It Done unto You!

One of the biggest barriers to receiving healing from God is the wrong idea that your healing is up to God. That is no different from saying that your salvation from hell is up to God. In both cases, God has made a provision for you through Christ's atonement, and in both cases it is up to you to believe this and receive what Jesus died to give you.

Suppose that you thought your salvation were up to God. "If God wants me to be saved, He will save me; if not, it must be His good pleasure that I remain unsaved." This is no less absurd than saying, "If God wants me to be healed, He will heal me; if not, it must be His good pleasure that I remain sick." God's will for you concerning both your salvation and your healing are clear from His Word. He wants you to have both, and you receive them both the same way – through your faith.

Many who are prayed over think that the preacher's faith is supposed to get them healed. This is not what Jesus taught. He never said, "My faith has made you whole." In many cases, He told the healed person, "Your faith has made you whole." It was up to the person receiving the healing.

Take the case of the woman with the issue of blood. Jesus was not conducting any kind of healing service when she touched Him. He was on his way to take care of another healing matter at the time. He had no idea that this woman was coming to Him for healing. He had to ask who had touched Him! The disciples were amazed because everyone was bumping against Him, but Jesus wanted to know who had touched Him in faith. He felt power go out of Him and He knew that someone had touched Him in faith, but He did not know who it was.

Therefore, this healing could not have had anything to do with Jesus or His faith. This healing was brought about solely by the woman's faith. Jesus told her that her faith had healed her.

Where did she get this faith? The same way you do – by hearing the gospel. The woman went and got her healing "when she had heard of Jesus." Someone must have told her the good news. Like anyone else, she had a general God-given capacity to believe, but she was not able to believe for this miracle specifically until she had heard of Jesus.

You will find the following statements in the New Testament (the Scripture references in context are below):

"As thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee."

"And Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy..."

"Thy faith hath made thee whole." (This phrase appears 5 times!)

"According to your faith be it unto you."

"Great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt."

“And perceiving that he had faith to be healed, said with a loud voice, Stand upright on thy feet.”

For your clicking-and-reading enjoyment, here are the passages of Scripture where Jesus (or in one case, Luke) said that the person’s faith (or a household member’s faith or a group of friends’ faith) was responsible for the healing:

The centurion’s son – Matthew 8:5-13

The paralytic – Matthew 9:2-8, Mark 2:2-12, Luke 5:17-26

The woman with the issue of blood – Matthew 9:18-25, Mark 5:25-34, Luke 8:43-48

Two blind men – Matthew 9:27-30

The Canaanite woman – Matthew 15:22-28

Blind Bartimaeus – Mark 10:46-52, Luke 18:35-43

A leper – Luke 17:12-19

The lame man at Lystra – Acts 14:7-10

There is also a case unrelated to healing where Jesus told a woman that her faith had saved her (Luke 7:50).

Now let’s look at what happened in a place where the people did not have exercise any faith:

The Bible does not say that Jesus refused to do many mighty works. It says that Jesus could not do them at Nazareth, and that He marveled at their unbelief. Consider this: Jesus Himself, the best preacher ever to walk the earth, could not get many people at Nazareth healed because of their unbelief. Here we see the opposite side of the cases where people’s faith got them healed.

How unfair it is for unbelieving congregations today to point the finger at the preacher when no signs and wonders occur. Yes, the preacher must believe also, but even if he does, not much will happen in a congregation with a hostile and unbelieving attitude. If Jesus Himself could not get results where there was such unbelief, no other preacher can, because the servant is not greater than his master.

It is not that God did not want to heal every disease at Nazareth. We know that healing was God’s will from Psalm 103:1-5 and elsewhere. The same preacher (Jesus) was healing multitudes in other cities. Jesus did not change from one place to another. What the people received depended more upon their faith or their unbelief than it did on Jesus!

If that was true then, that is still true today. It is not all up to Jesus. It’s not up to God who gets saved or healed; it’s up to us. “Whosoever will” can receive salvation and healing.

Read the account of the man with the demon-possessed boy in these verses:

Luke 9:38-42

Jesus attributed the disciples' failure to cast out the demon to their unbelief. He had already given them power and authority over all devils (Luke 9:1-2), so power was not the issue. They already had the power! The issue was not what Jesus could do, but what they could believe.

Then the man asked Jesus to do something "if you can do anything." Jesus again made it clear that the issue was not what Jesus could do, but what the man could believe. His answer was: "If you can believe, all things are possible to him who believes."

We know that with God nothing shall be impossible (Luke 1:36-37), but it's not solely an issue of what God or Jesus can do. It's also an issue of what you can believe.

In Mark 11:24, Jesus made it clear that you can have whatsoever you ask for if you believe that you receive it when you pray. It depends upon your faith, not Jesus' faith.

This is not a popular teaching these days because many people are lazy and do not want to take responsibility for anything. It's so easy just to say that whatever happens must be the will of God, and to let the will of Satan be done in your body while saying that it must be God's will. If it's solely up to God's will, you have no responsibility. Yet Jesus made it clear throughout His ministry that it is up to you, not Him, to do something. God is not responsible for any man's failure to receive something that is available to all.

This is especially true now that healing has been permanently provided "by His stripes" (1 Peter 2:24). Jesus has done everything He needs to do about your healing. Whether you receive the healing He paid for in His atonement is completely up to you. God can heal you, and God wants to heal you. The only issue is, can you believe it?

Many teach that Jesus healed people because He was God, but that can't be true, as He would have healed people from the time He was very young if the only reason He did things was His deity. He was just as divine during the first 30 years of His life when He did no miracles as during His relatively short earthly ministry when He did all His miracles. It was the faith of the sick people that made them well, not Jesus' faith. If the faith of the sick people made them well back then, YOUR faith can make you well today.

You can be healed in God's mercy by the manifestations of the Spirit operating through another believer. But the best way (and only sure way) to get healed and stay healed is to believe for yourself. Ultimately, it is according to your faith that it will be done unto you!

What Faith Is

Being Sure of Something You Can't See

Hebrews 11:1:

Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

Faith is being certain of something you don't see. It is evidence in your heart that you have something when there is no natural evidence that you have it.

Faith always refers to the present; never to the future. Faith is the certainty that you have something now. It is not the certainty that you will get something in the future. Thinking that you will get something in the future is called hope. Faith is the assurance of things hoped for. Thus, faith goes beyond hope. Faith brings what hope associates with the future into the present.

You have faith if you are a believer. You believe that you have something you cannot see – salvation from eternal judgment and from the wrath of God on sinners. You cannot find a legal document on earth that guarantees you such a thing (other than the Bible, of course). You cannot prove to anyone that you are saved without using Scripture. You may be a nice person, but many nice sinners are going to hell without Jesus. You may even do signs and wonders, but according to Jesus' words in Matthew 7:21-23, you could still be unsaved. There is no proof other than what God said.

You are not hoping to be saved; you are saved now. You are not hoping to get eternal life; you have eternal life now. You have the assurance of it. You have evidence in your heart of something you cannot see.

Faith for healing is no different. You are convinced that you have something you can't see right now. You accept God's word that you were healed by Jesus' stripes before you see any physical evidence of it.

Just as you must believe and confess unto salvation before your life changes and your sinful habits stop, you must believe and confess unto healing before your body changes and your physical problems stop.

Thomas had a problem with faith, as do many people today. He would not believe in Jesus' resurrection until he felt His wounds in person. He would not believe anything until he saw it physically first. That is not faith! It can't be, because Jesus told Thomas that he was faithless, which meant unbelieving (John 20:27). If you say, "I won't believe I am healed until I see something change in my body," you are unbelieving, not believing, when it comes to healing.

Jesus commanded Thomas to be believing instead of unbelieving (John 20:27). Faith therefore must involve your will; you can choose to believe or choose not to believe. God could not command you to do something if you could not make a conscious choice to do it.

Faith Is Based on the Bible

Thank God, we are not just commanded to “have faith!” Real faith always has a basis in the Bible. You have to be able to point to Scriptures that say that you have something you cannot see.

If you cannot quote one or more Bible verses to substantiate what you are believing for, you are not in real faith. You may be in strong hope, but you are not in faith. When the devil tempts you to stop believing, your only effective weapon is the Word of God. Ephesians 6:10-18 makes this clear. If you can't fight with the Word, you have nothing to fight with.

It is always good to have specific promises in mind, not just general ones about nothing being impossible with God, having whatsoever you say, and so on.

If you say that you believe you receive your healing, and suddenly your body gets worse, what will you do? If you have no assurance from Scripture that you had the right to pray and receive something you can't see, you will cave in and say, “Well, I guess it didn't work after all.”

God Is Able vs. God Is Willing vs. God Did vs. You Receive

You can climb a ladder on the way to real faith. First, you must believe that God is able to do what you need done. Like Abraham, you must be fully persuaded that what God has promised, He is also able to perform (Romans 4:21). If you don't believe that God is able to heal your disease, you can't receive healing from Him. Of course, you would be a fool to think that God can't heal your disease. When Jesus returns, every Christian on the earth will be instantly healed of every physical problem at once. Because God is able to do that then, it is no big deal for Him to fix one of your physical problems now! God is almighty. (You can read a lot more Scriptures about God's ability in the FIRST BASE section of The Baseball Diamond of Healing.)

The next thing you must realize is that God is willing to do for you what He is able to do. The leper who came to Jesus and worshipped knew that Jesus could heal him, but he did not know if Jesus would be willing. To this only person who ever asked, Jesus answered, “I will.” Jesus let the leper know that He was willing to do it as well as able to do it. God does not play favorites. His answer to the leper is His answer to you. He is willing to heal you as well as able to heal you.

But knowing that God is able and willing to heal you still does not get you healed. You can know that He is able and willing and stay sick. You need to know that God ALREADY DID something about your healing when He sent Jesus to be punished in your place. His sacrifice makes healing legally yours.

And even knowing that God ALREADY DID something about your healing doesn't get you healed. You need to believe that you receive that healing when you pray. (There are actually a number of different ways to get healed, but that is one of the best ones because you can do it by yourself.)

There are can be no ifs or maybes when you pray in faith to receive. Contrary to the popular delusion, God does not sometimes say, “Yes,” sometimes say, “No,” and sometimes say, “Wait.” God always answers faith with “Yes!” You must believe that His answer is “Yes” when you come to Him to receive your healing. You have the right to receive healing from Him. You must be convinced that there is no possibility that God will turn down your prayer because God made up His mind a long time ago that He wanted you well at all times – that’s why He punished Jesus with the sicknesses that you had coming as punishment for your sins.

A more thorough exposition of the thoughts in this section can be found in The Baseball Diamond of Healing.

How Do You Know if You’re in Faith?

If you have to ask, you aren’t. If you are in faith, you know it. You have an assurance, not a 90% certainty, that you have received something from God. If you aren’t sure if you received anything, it is safe to say that you didn’t. (It is possible to pray in faith and then get into fear and doubt, waver, and lose what you prayed for. Peter’s water-walking adventure is an example.) By definition, if you are not assured of something, you are not in faith. See How to Tell if You’re in Faith or Not for a more thorough discussion of this.

You do not look at your body to determine if you are in faith. Think about it for a minute and you will see how silly that is. Would you look at your body or look to your feelings to determine if you are saved today? Of course not! Does a sickness in your body persuade you to believe that you are going to hell after all? No! Why not? Because your faith is not based on your body or your feelings; it is based on the Bible. Salvation is not a feeling. It is a fact. Whether or not you feel saved when you roll out of bed in the morning, you still are. You know that because of what the Bible says. If you would not trust your body for information about your faith in this area, why trust it for information about your faith in any other area, including healing?

I understand that because your healing involves your body, it is tempting to let your body tell you what is going on. Remember, faith is the evidence that you have something you cannot see (or otherwise perceive with your body). If your body felt healed instantly, you would not need faith; you would simply know that your body was healed. No faith would be involved at that point.

Faith is like a deed. If you don’t own a house, perhaps you have played Monopoly. The only proof that someone has to pay you $50 to take a walk on the Boardwalk (assuming you don’t own Park Place, and you haven’t mortgaged Boardwalk) is your Boardwalk deed sitting in front of you. Your ownership of Boardwalk is intangible. The Boardwalk deed is proof of something intangible. If you own a house in real life, you have a real deed that proves the otherwise invisible fact that it is yours. You don’t wonder if you own Boardwalk or your house. You know you do because you have the proof. When you possess something by faith, you don’t wonder whether you own it, either. You have the proof.

The proof is not natural. Never look to your body for proof that you have received healing by faith. Faith is the only proof, even if your body tells you that you're worse off for a season!

Faith Is Not Enough!

You cannot inherit God's promises through faith alone. Hebrews 6:12 says that you inherit God's promises through faith and patience. Why do you need patience? Because once you believe God for something, patience will keep you on track until it manifests. It is possible to pray in faith, believe you receive something, and then let go of it through impatience. "Well, I guess I never got anything after all – I haven't seen anything yet!" At that point, you are expressing a different kind of "faith" – faith that you don't have anything. According to your (lack of) faith it will be (not) done unto you.

Examples of Faith

God told Noah that a flood was coming when there was no physical evidence of it. Noah believed God and acted on what God had said, thus saving his life and mankind in the process.

God told Abraham that He had made him the father of many nations (Genesis 17:5) before Sarah had conceived Isaac. Abraham believed this even though he had no physical evidence to support this fact. He continually called himself Abraham, meaning "Father of a multitude," although nothing seemed to have changed. Abraham "called those things that be not as though they were" and said he was the father of a multitude. He received exactly what he said. He spoke God's promise and God made good on it. He believed that he had something before there was any sensory evidence of it.

God told Joshua, "See, I have given into thine hand Jericho," when Jericho was just as fortified as ever and there was no physical evidence that the Israelites could possibly take that fortress city. Joshua believed God and spoke what God had said. He told his army, "Shout, for the Lord hath given you the city," when there was still no physical evidence of this. He spoke God's promise and God made good on it. He believed that he had something before there was any sensory evidence of it.

David took on Goliath, telling him ahead of time exactly what he would do to his head and carcass. He then proceeded to do it. David spoke ahead of time before there was a physical manifestation, but it was as good as done already as far as he was concerned.

Jesus cursed a fig tree, but there was no immediate evidence that the tree would die. It started to shrivel up from the inside out, where no one could see it until the next day. Jesus spoke faith-filled words and changed the natural circumstances. He believed that it was done and did not speak to the tree a second time, despite the initial appearance that nothing had changed.

Jesus gave His disciples a command to “depart unto the other side” of the Sea of Galilee (Matthew 8:18). A storm came up that looked as if it would kill them all, but Jesus was asleep. When they woke Him up, He spoke to the storm while it was still raging just as badly as before. After Jesus spoke faith-filled words, the storm stopped. You cannot say, “Oh, but that was Jesus,” because He rebuked the disciples for their lack of faith!

You can see some examples of those who received healing by faith in the discussion, According to YOUR FAITH Be It Done unto You.

No matter what faith is exercised for, it works the same way. You believe that you have something before you can see any physical evidence. You speak what you believe, and it comes to pass. To apply this to your healing, you must believe that you receive the healing that God says is yours before you see any physical evidence. You speak what you believe, and it comes to pass.

What Faith Isn't

Wishful Thinking or an Abstract Belief that God Exists

People today misuse the word faith to indicate hope or mere wishful thinking. For example, "I'm really sick and I don't know if I'm going to die or not, but I have faith." No, if you were in faith, you would speak God's word instead of defeat (2 Corinthians 4:13). What you are really saying is, "I don't really have any faith at all that God will do anything for me, but I assent to the fact that He exists."

James said that demons believe there is one God – and tremble. If you simply assent to the fact that God exists, you and demons are on the same level of faith. You cannot get saved by simply believing that God exists. This is obvious, because demons are not saved.

Your Christianity in General

Sometimes people use "faith" to indicate "religious persuasion," as in, "That man is of the Buddhist faith, and his sister-in-law is of the Hindu faith." Actually, it would be correct to say, "That man is of the Buddhist ignorance, and his sister-in-law is of the Hindu ignorance." (This is theologically correct, not "politically correct.") If any service involves other religions than Christianity, it is by definition not an "interfaith service" – the term "interignorance service" would be more appropriate. While Christianity is referred to even in the Bible as "the faith," this is not the same thing that Hebrews 11:1 is talking about. You can be in "the faith" as far as being a Christian, but not be "in faith" for your healing.

Denial

Faith for healing does not involve denying physical problems. It denies their right to continue in your body. It is not faith to pretend that symptoms in your body don't exist. That is denial, which can be dangerous or even fatal. You cannot just ignore the symptoms and think that they have to go away by themselves. Simply trying to make yourself stop thinking about your body is not faith, either. You must consider God's Word to be more powerful than anything going on in your body. Simply not thinking about your problems is denial, not faith. Wishing will not make your problem go away. Some people talk about blind faith, but faith is not blind. Faith faces and acknowledges whatever challenge comes before it, but it declares the victory to be already won. There is a difference between claiming victory in a fight and refusing to believe that a fight is going on.

Denial can be dangerous. If you need medical help, get it. If you are really in faith, the doctor will vouch for you healing. If you're not, he may well save your life.

Resignation

"I won't pray about it anymore. I've just put this matter into God's hands." What this may really mean is, "I am going to let God decide whether or not to heal me. I am not actively believing for anything. If nothing happens, I will not be at all surprised. Whatever happens, happens. I've done the best that I can." That's resignation, not faith. Faith does not put anything into God's hands, it takes something from God's hands!

Even those who know the Word can drift from faith into resignation if they do not keep their faith active. You can stop praying about something because you know you have received your answer on the inside. However, you can also stop praying about something because you have simply given up! Make sure that you know which applies to you.

Expecting Something to Happen in the Future

You cannot "believe" for a healing in the future. To say "I have faith that God will heal me" is an error. This actually means, "I hope that God will heal me, but I am not in faith for it." Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the assurance of things not seen (Hebrews 11:1). If you do not have the assurance that you have something that you cannot see now, you are not in faith. If you think you will get something in the future, you do not have the assurance that you have the unseen thing right now.

There is nothing wrong with hope. Faith, hope and love abide, but none is a substitute for the others. You cannot get saved by hoping that you will go to heaven. Likewise, you cannot get healed by hoping that God will heal you in the future. You could fool most Christians today into thinking that you're in faith by saying that you believe that God is going to heal you, but you won't fool God or your sick body!

Struggling to Believe Something

"For we which have believed have entered into rest" (Hebrews 4:3). If you haven't entered into rest, you haven't entered into faith. If you are struggling to make yourself believe something, you are not ready to pray in faith. Hear the Word on a continual basis on the topic of your prayer. If you need healing, go over Scriptures about healing. Instead of straining to believe, keep finding out what the Word says and faith will come automatically. Even if you aren't successful at first, it's worth developing the discipline of being in the Word so that down the road you can succeed at receiving from God. The best time to put the Word into your heart is before you need it, not during a trial! Many people are in no position to believe for anything during a trial because they never "exercised themselves unto godliness" before the trial started, and now they feel so rotten or are so disoriented that they aren't in a position to start looking into what the Bible teaches about healing.

Will Power

Faith is not a matter of trying to will something away. Again, we who believe have entered into rest. You are trusting in God's power, not your own will power.

Mind over Matter

You receive healing from God through your spirit, not through your mind. You are not attempting to “psyche” yourself into anything or control your body with your mind.

Throwing Away Your Medicine

Just throwing away your medicine could be harmful or fatal. It neither proves your faith nor compels God to heal you supernaturally. Your healing is only guaranteed when you receive it by faith. It is possible to put God to a foolish test by throwing out your medicine. If you are not in faith, you have not met God's condition for healing, and you will need that medicine that you just threw out. You will upset your doctor and look like a fool in front of unbelievers. Objectors to divine healing will make you another object lesson of a presumptuous fool in their books. Whether or not you are in faith has absolutely nothing to do with whether or not there is medicine in your cabinet. It is not necessary to throw out your medicine or stomp on your glasses to receive healing by faith. Get healed first, and then once you have physical proof of it, do what you want with your medicine or your glasses.

Mimicking the Words of Someone Else Who Is in Faith

You cannot get the same results as someone else simply by saying the same words that he does. For example, you cannot just parrot the words, “I believe I receive my healing. Hallelujah. Thank you, Jesus!” just because someone else did so and received his healing. It worked for the other person because he believed in his heart and spoke with his mouth. If you just speak with your mouth but don't believe it in your heart, nothing will happen. I prayed a “sinner's prayer” with someone once just to make him happy and remained just as unsaved when he was done because I didn't mean it. (I did pray it and mean it later.)

There is the confession of faith and there is the confession unto faith. The first speaks what you already believe. The second is simply speaking God's Word to yourself to build faith, which is a valuable practice that every Christian should do (see Joshua 1:7-8). Just don't confuse the two or kid yourself about which you are doing.

Paul cast out demons in the name of Jesus. When the sons of Sceva mimicked Paul's words and ordered a demon to leave in the name of Jesus whom Paul preached, they were the ones who ended up leaving the house, not the demon. They used the same name, but Paul was in faith while the sons of Sceva weren't. (See Acts 19:13-17.)

Being Pretty Sure of Something

There is a difference between being pretty sure of something and really believing something. If you have hands laid on you for healing, and you answer someone who asks if you got your healing, "I think so," you are not in faith. If you are in faith, you know it. If you don't know if you're in faith, you aren't. Being in faith is like being pregnant – you either are or you aren't. You can't be "sort of" in faith any more than you can be "sort of" pregnant.

Trying to Feel Better

Real faith does not consider your body, just as Abraham did not consider his body. See Romans 4:16-21. You do not have to "psyche" yourself into thinking that you feel better. Don't even try. It doesn't matter if you feel worse just after you pray. If you are in faith, your healing will manifest itself. Sometimes a healing minister who has laid hands on people asks for a show of hands of people who feel physically better already, and it is tempting to try to convince yourself that you feel at least a little better so that you can raise your hand. Don't bother. It should not hurt the minister's feelings if you don't see any change yet! Some people do not notice a change right away. That is normal and it's nothing to worry about.

Likewise, you don't have to keep checking your body every five minutes for the next day trying to convince yourself that you feel at least a little improvement. That is counterproductive; it will get you focused on the problem instead of the solution. If you are really in faith, you have entered into rest (Hebrews 4:3) and you are confident that God's power is working in you. Continue to thank God for your healing and make that your focus.

Having Faith in Your Faith

Jesus never said, "Have faith in your faith." Always remember that your basis for believing that you have received your healing is God's Word on the matter. God's Word cannot change. The devil will try to challenge you with the thought that you aren't really in faith. He will try to make you question whether you could really believe God like that. The way to conquer such thoughts is to remind the devil and yourself that God says you are healed, and you are simply agreeing with God's present statements concerning you. Don't make your faith the issue. God's Word concerning healing is the issue. You have the right to speak it continually, not just when you first pray, because it is always true.

Quoting Lots of Scripture

You could fool people even in most “faith churches” with the following answer to the question, “Are you healed?” “According to 1 Peter 2:24, I was healed by the stripes of Jesus. God’s Word says that I was healed, therefore I am healed. God is the Lord that healeth me. Jesus bore my sickness, and I am redeemed from the curse of the Law, which includes sickness.”

This seems like a good answer, but a person who is really in faith would more likely respond, “Yes!” He would not try to defend his answer or talk himself into it. The Scriptures are nice and they are true, but they do not prove that you have actually believed that you have received anything at all. They simply prove that you know the Bible’s teaching on the subject of healing, which is a different matter from appropriating that for yourself. You can mentally assent that the Bible is true without acting on it, but acting on the Word is the only way to get results.

Take as an example your eternal salvation. If someone asked you if you are saved, you would say, “Yes.” You would not get theological and say, “According to 1 Peter 2:24, my sins were borne by Jesus in His own body on the tree. By grace I am saved through faith. The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Christ Jesus our Lord.” In other words, you would not sound like you are still trying to talk yourself into believing something, which is what you would be doing, when you get right down to it.

You can and you should quote Scripture about yourself. But the quoting of Scripture is distinct from the actual prayer of faith that receives something that God has provided for you in Christ.

What Faith Is

How to Tell if You're in Faith or Not

With all the sad-sack stories floating around about So-and-So being in faith and dying anyway, you need to know if you're really in faith or not. Otherwise you can end up kidding yourself (as so many do), thinking that you're in faith when really you've just mentally agreed to some doctrinal truths. There is a difference between intellectually agreeing that healing belongs to you and actually receiving it. This discussion should help you locate yourself.

1. Are You Wondering Whether You're in Faith or Not?

If so, you're not! You don't wonder if you are really saved, do you? No, you don't, because you are in faith as far as that is concerned. No one would be able to convince you that you are not in faith, and you don't spend any time wondering whether you are "in faith" for your salvation.

In fact, if you're a Christian and someone asked you, "Are you saved?" you would not even stop for a second to think about it, would you? No, you'd immediately say "Yes" because that's what you believe in your heart. If you've really received your healing, you wouldn't stop to think about that either – you know that you've received it and it's an "instinctive" reaction to say, "Yes, I have received my healing." When you really believe something in your heart, you don't have to check with your head to figure out if that's what you believe.

The other questions here apply to you if you honestly believe that you are in faith, and you aren't wondering about it. They serve as a check-up to see if you really are in Bible faith for your healing.

2. Can You Quote Specific Scriptures to Back Up What You Say You Believe?

So many kid themselves into thinking they're "in faith" when they have no Scripture to stand on. Faith is not based on feeling like God heard your prayer. Faith is not based on a physical sensation when you pray. Faith comes by hearing God's Word; therefore faith must be based solely upon God's Word. If you can't quote chapter and verse to prove your healing, you're not in faith. If you don't know for sure that Christ bore your sicknesses to relieve you of having to suffer them, you have no real basis for believing for healing. You cannot trust the word of a man who says that he knows God wants to heal you. You must know what God says for yourself. So here's the test – what does God say about your healing? If you think that there is any possibility that God would turn you down when you come to Him for healing, you are not truly standing on Scripture and you are not in real faith.

3. Are You Still Praying about Your Healing?

If so, you are not in faith for your healing. The prayer of faith does not “bombard the gates of heaven.” You pray it once and that settles it. Once you believe that you receive your healing, any subsequent prayers will be thanksgiving and praise because you have received your healing. If you aren’t thanking God for what you already have, you don’t have it! If you’re still praying for your healing, you haven’t believed that you’ve received it yet. If I gave you $200, would you continue to ask me to give you that $200? Even if I wired it into your bank account and you had no natural evidence (yet) that I had done so, you would not ask me to give you that money after I told you that I deposited it into your account. So it is with your healing. If you’ve received it from God, you’re no longer asking Him for it.

I’ve lost count of the people over the years who’ve begged me, “Please promise you’ll keep praying for me.” That is a giveaway that they are not in faith at all. If they were, they’d be rejoicing over what they had received, not asking people to pray that they would get it.

4. Are You Rejoicing that You Have Received Your Healing, Just as if You Felt Better Already?

If you really believe you have received your healing, you should be rejoicing just as if you felt better already. You know you have received your healing and you won’t have to be sick anymore. You rejoice in your victory over the sickness.

If you are delaying your rejoicing until you feel better, you probably don’t really believe that the healing is yours right now, so you are not in faith.

5. Are You Worried about Your Condition?

Hebrews 4:3 says that we who believe have entered into rest. If you’re worried, you haven’t entered into rest, and you don’t really believe. That’s strong, but it’s true! If you’re worried about whether you will ever be normal again, whether you’ll be able to work and pay your bills, whether you’ll ever be pain-free, etc., you are not in faith. It’s not that you have no faith; it’s that you’re allowing fear to override your faith. If you’re still worrying, you’re wavering – between fear and faith. This is known as being “double-minded,” which prevents you from receiving anything (James 1:5-8).

6. Do You Have God’s Joy and Peace?

Paul prayed in Romans 15:13: “Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing....” If you have God’s joy and peace, you are probably in faith. If you are depressed and agitated, you are not really believing. “No joy” and “no peace” are giveaways of “not believing.” Check your joy and peace level right now and you’ll know if you’re in faith or not.

7. Are You Telling People that You Have Received Your Healing?

Real faith is both in your heart and in your mouth. If you have the “same spirit of faith” as Paul, you believe, and therefore you speak (2 Corinthians 4:13). Be honest. If you are secretly thinking, “I’ve received this healing, but I don’t want to commit myself to that fact publicly by telling anyone that I have done so,” you are not in faith and you have not received your healing. Jesus said that out of the abundance of your heart your mouth speaks. If having received your healing isn’t coming out of your mouth, it isn’t in your heart.

As pointed out elsewhere, it is not a lie to say that you have prayed and received your healing. It would be a lie to say that your body is not currently sick, but you have every right to proclaim a greater truth that will override the facts of your current physical condition. It is never a lie to quote the Word of Truth, which says that Jesus has “surely borne your sicknesses and carried your pains” and “by His stripes you were healed.”

Just as we would not accept the notion that a person is born again if he has never confessed Jesus as his Lord before men, we cannot accept the notion that you have received your healing if you are unwilling to say in front of other people that you have it right now.

8. Are You Expecting God to Heal You at Some Point in the Future?

If so, you have not received anything. You are hoping for your healing. You have not believed for it yet. You cannot “receive something in the future” when you pray. The literal Greek word for receive means take. If you say that you’re going to receive something in the future, it means that you intend to take something in the future, which means that you haven’t taken it yet. You have to receive it now. The manifestation may be in the future, but you have to receive it (with your spirit) now in order for the manifestation to occur. If you are waiting to feel different before you believe anything, you may never get healed.

9. Are You Preoccupied with Wondering When the Manifestation Will Occur?

Beware of checking your body every ten minutes “to see if your healing has manifested yet.” Abraham had strong faith, and he “considered not” his body and Sarah’s body. If you are constantly considering your body, either you are in very weak faith and in danger of caving in, or you were never in faith to begin with.

10. Are You Planning to Go to the Doctor to Find Out Whether or Not You're Healed?

If you expect the doctor to tell you whether or not you're healed, you haven't received anything. A person who is in faith doesn't visit the doctor to see if he's healed; he visits the doctor to confirm that he's healed! He lets the Word of God settle the issue for him, not the word of a doctor.

11. Are Your Mental Plans Consistent with Being Healed or with Staying Sick?

Faith without works is dead. If you are in faith for your healing, you are not thinking of "Plan B," "Plan C," and so on. You are not thinking of how you should sell your business because you'll never be fit to run it again. You are not calling your lawyer to amend your will. (Nothing against wills, but I think you understand what I'm saying.) You are not debating which relative should care for your children because you won't be able to. You are not telling your wife to call DownCo Discount Morticians to get an economical pre-arrangement for your upcoming demise. Instead, you are planning all the wonderful things you will be able to do because you are healed. You are thinking of how you will be able to testify to the Lord's goodness to sinners. You are thinking of how beautiful your life will be without sickness.

In other words, you see yourself healed in the future; you don't see yourself sick. This principle applies even to minor ailments like the flu. If you say you have believed that you have received your healing, but you keep thinking about how you will now rot in bed for four days and stay home from work, you are not in faith. If you believed that you had received your healing, you would see yourself going back to work and being productive and healthy. I have found that this test is one of the best indicators of whether you're in faith or just playing mental games. A good rule of thumb is that you won't see something on the outside that you don't see on the inside first.

You Have Faith

If you are a believer, you already know how to believe God. You have faith. Without faith, you could not have been saved, because you are saved by grace through faith (Ephesians 2:8-9). Don't allow Satan to tell you that you don't have any faith or that you cannot believe God. Those are lies.

You currently believe that you have something you cannot see. You believe that you are going to heaven and that you have eternal life right now. Yet you cannot see it or prove it in the natural. You could point to outward signs of being nicer than you used to be, but there are "nice" sinners out there on their way to hell, too. The only proof you have of your salvation is your faith. Faith is the assurance of something you cannot see (Hebrews 11:1).

You are betting your entire eternal future on something you can't see. You became a new creature in Christ, which is a greater work than a physical healing, by exercising faith in what Christ did for you on the cross. You have faith!

Romans 12:3 says that God has given to every man the measure of faith. So God says that you have faith. Don't side in with the devil and say, "I guess I just don't have any faith," because then you are lying just like the devil. If God says that you have faith, you do. Don't take sides against God!

Ephesians 2:8-9 says that faith is the gift of God, not of works, lest any man should boast. Hebrews 12:2 says that Jesus is the Author and the Finisher of your faith. Now what kind of faith do you suppose that the Lord gave you? Defective faith? Faith that won't get the job done? Inferior faith that leaves you wondering how other people can believe when you can't? Was God foolish enough to give you every spiritual blessing (Ephesians 1:3) but then give you faith that is unable to receive EVERY SINGLE ONE of those blessings? That would make part of what Jesus did for you be wasted effort! Would He pay for everything by grace but then give you inferior faith that is unable to access all of this grace (Romans 5:2)? NO!

Your faith is a gift from Someone who cannot give you anything that doesn't work. Every good and perfect gift comes from God (James 1:17), and faith is a gift from God (Ephesians 2:8-9). Therefore, the faith that God gave you is good and perfect – not defective. Your faith DOES work if you'll USE it! Think of righteousness. Romans 5:17 says that righteousness is a gift also. Is God going to put out a recall notice on your righteousness someday because it isn't perfect? No, your righteousness is already perfect right now. You will not be more righteous in heaven than you are right now! Likewise, your faith is a gift from God with no defects. If you struggle, the issue is with your still-unrenewed mind or your flesh, not your faith.

Are you stuck with Regular Person Faith while the early apostles got Special Early Apostolic Faith? No, Peter wrote to Christians and said that they had obtained “like precious faith with us”—faith that is equally as valuable as what Peter and his company had (2 Peter 1:1)! You got the same “measure of faith” (Romans 12:3) that they had, not some fraction of it. The Greek word metron used for “measure” denotes a fixed amount, just as a kitchen “measure” (which is what Paul means here) is made to contain a certain fixed amount. God doesn’t give some people Whopping Big Humungo-Faith and give other people Puny Little Faith. Some people just do more with their faith than other people.

I received the same number of muscles in my body that any movie action hero has. However, the action hero did more to develop his muscles than I did. I can’t blame God for that or accuse God of giving the action hero more muscles than He gave me. It came down to what we did with our God-given muscles.

God says that faith and love are in Christ Jesus (1 Timothy 1:14, 2 Timothy 1:13). Because you are in Christ Jesus, you can walk in faith and walk in love. (Greek Note: The King James Version could lead you to believe that only love is in Christ Jesus because of the use of the word is instead of are after “faith and love” – “the faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.” However, there is no verb “to be” (is or are) in the Greek in either of the verses just cited; it’s literally just “faith and love in Christ Jesus,” so translating this as “faith and love which are in Christ Jesus,” as in the NKJV, is justified.)

Don’t become introspective, trying to evaluate how much faith you have. If you have faith as a mustard seed, you could move a mountain if you use your faith. Concentrate on God’s promises and speak them out loud. The more you hear God’s Word, the more you will water that divine seed, and it will become natural for you to say what God says. The main thing that hearing God’s Word will do is cause your mind to be renewed to be in harmony with God. Then your mind won’t fight the real you – your spirit.

Take the pressure off of yourself to try to “manufacture” or “crank out” faith. YOU are not the source of your faith – God is. Remember that faith is NOT of yourself – it is the gift of God, not of works (Ephesians 2:8-9). Your faith will grow if you’ll keep using it and feeding it the Word, but instead of feverishly trying to whip up “enough” faith, just act on the Word once you know what it says – using the faith that God already gave you! Just act like the Bible is so – because it is! If God said, “If you do A, you will get result B,” then go do A and be absolutely sure that you will get result B because God always backs His Word. He cannot lie.

Want a real mind-stretcher? Jesus was a REAL Man, not just God in a man costume. That means that He had to operate under the limitations that would belong to any other man. Therefore, JESUS was given the same measure of faith that YOU have! He used His more, but He didn’t get more faith than you got! Let that fact soak in and it will be easier for you to see yourself doing the same works that Jesus did.

You need to spend time in God's Word if you want to grow in your faith walk, but you don't have to be in it every waking minute to have strong faith. Did you know that God understands that people have jobs and families? He didn't structure things so that only those who can hide out with a Bible all day (if there are any such people) can develop enough faith to receive all His blessings! Now you might not have enough time to study the Word AND be on social media for hours every week, so some of this comes down to establishing godly time management habits.

Jesus told you to "have faith in God" (Mark 11:22) and then He talked about what your faith could do. Jesus could not command you to do this if it were impossible! Therefore, you can have faith in God. You can speak to mountains and move them. Don't go around saying that you just can't believe God. Go around saying that you can believe God, because Jesus said that you can! Then believe God, acting on what He said! You WILL get the results that He promised.

Faith in Your Faith vs. Faith in God

Many Christians get very introspective when it comes to their faith. They're always trying to figure out if they have "enough faith" for something, as if they're trying to have faith that their faith will work. Of course, the devil will be the first to tell you that "you don't have enough faith" for whatever it is you want. The trap is that you can end up trying to have faith in your faith instead of exercising faith in God and His Word. The devil loves to tell people that they're faith isn't good enough because they haven't spent "enough" time studying the Word, praying, fasting, or whatever. His definition of "enough" time is always a little more time than you actually spent lately, no matter how much time it was.

Don't get me wrong; if you never study the Word, pray or fast you won't be as strong a Christian as you would be if you did these things. However, here is something for you to consider – how much time did the people healed in the Bible have to "develop their faith?" They did not have Christian books and CD's, they did not go to faith seminars and they did not have access to countless faith-building videos on the Internet. Many of them had just heard of Jesus, yet they received incredible miracles. It can't be as hard as we've sometimes made it out to be!

Jesus didn't teach, "Have faith in your faith." He taught, "Have faith in God" (Mark 11:22). Make GOD your focus, not your faith.

You can tell whether your faith is in God or in your faith by your focus. If the focus is YOU, you are trying to have faith in your faith. If the focus is JESUS and the provision that He already made for your healing, you are exercising faith in God and His Word. Get your focus off YOU and get it onto JESUS. Stop asking yourself how much faith you have and start asking yourself what God has said about the matter in His Word. Then just act on what He said. This is much less stressful than trying to be your own faith meter to determine how big your faith is right now. The people who received healings in the Bible didn't get all caught up in that. They just acted on the truth that Jesus is the Anointed One and they received from Him and His anointing. Today you have something way better – you don't just receive from His Anointing; you receive healing that was forever paid for when Jesus took your sicknesses before He died and rose again.

Believing in God vs. Believing God

Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness (Romans 4:3). He believed God who quickens the dead (Romans 4:17). Through his faith, he received a miracle.

However, demons believe in God (James 2:19) and are none the better for it.

It is one thing to believe in God (that He exists) and quite another to believe God (to accept His promise to you as a sure thing). Some who say when asked about their healing, "I'm believing God!" are really saying, "I believe in God and I sure hope He does something soon." Others say, "Well, I have faith." The problem is that you must believe in more than God's existence and do more than have faith. Everyone has faith (Romans 12:3), but not everyone uses it. You must believe God's promises and statements that healing is available to you, and you must believe that you receive healing when you pray (Mark 11:24). The difference between the person who believes in God and the person who believes God is that the latter will speak and act according to what he believes.

I've met people in prayer lines who have been in plenty of healing services without receiving anything. Once enlightened, they admit that they never once believed they received anything when they prayed. In other words, they didn't follow the rulebook and that's why they didn't get any results. They believed in God but they did not believe God.

Failure to believe God means that either (1) you are unsure of what He has promised to do for you, or (2) you are not sure that God will keep His promises and back His statements of fact in the Bible. You take care of both problems by reading God's Word. You will find out what He promised you, and you will see that God has been faithful to His Word throughout all the ages. You will start to understand that God will not make an exception out of you, and that His promises are just as valid as if He appeared to you in person and said them. Get to know God through His Word. That is the only way you can get to know Him better. The better you know Him, the more you will trust Him because you will see how trustworthy He is to back His Word.

Faith Is a Gift from God

God has given the measure of faith to every man, including YOU (Romans 12:3). This faith is something you have as a gift that God gave you; it is not something that you worked up yourself. If it were, you'd have something you could brag about, but because it is God's gift and not the result of your efforts, you have no grounds for boasting. Paul put it this way:

Ephesians 2:8-9:

For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God:
Not of works, lest any man should boast.

Most Christians take this passage to read that salvation is the gift of God rather than the result of human effort. While that IS a true statement, it is not the statement that Paul made in this passage. What he actually said was that you were saved through faith, and this faith was not "of yourself" (something you came up with) but was rather the gift of God. This faith that saved you was not the result of your works, lest you should boast.

Why is this difference important? So many Christians have put the pressure on themselves to "work up" faith. Yet this verse is plain that faith is something that God has already given you, not something that you have to work up or work for. If you have the mindset that YOU have sole responsibility to "raise your faith level," you will miss the glorious fact that JESUS is the "Author and Finisher of your faith" (Hebrews 12:2).

You still must hear the Word of God so that your God-given faith can latch onto specific things. If you don't know what is yours, your God-given faith can't receive it. But when you hear what God says about something specific, you can exercise your God-given faith for that particular blessing and walk in that blessing.

The devil likes to whisper, "Your faith is defective. You'll never get anything." But since when does God give out defective merchandise? What kind of faith do you think that Jesus is the author of? Faith that doesn't work? It would be totally out of line with God's character to give you a defective gift. The faith that is yours as a gift from God DOES work! Others have used that faith to receive miracles, and so can you.

If you're a Christian, you have ALREADY used the faith that God gave you to believe for the most important thing of all – the new birth. You can use that faith for other things now, including healing.

Forever Settled

The issue of your healing is not up for debate in heaven or on earth. Jesus paid for you to have it, so you are entitled to it. What you need to see is that God is not like men. When a man says, "If elected, I will give you MORE government freebies while CUTTING your taxes," you would probably roll your eyes and figure that he would be perhaps the ten thousandth politician to promise taxpayer-sponsored giveaways to get elected and then break his word. (He probably WOULD get elected because people want to believe him – they're in denial of the math behind the government budget. A more honest candidate could say, "In order to stave off eventual national bankruptcy, hyperinflation and chaos from an out-of-control national debt, we need immediate huge tax increases and drastic cuts to all government programs." He would be right, but he wouldn't be elected!) But when GOD says something, that's a different story. GOD is not a politician that He should lie! In fact, God is INCAPABLE of lying because He is a completely honest being!

God Cannot Lie

Numbers 23:19:

God is not a man, that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?

1 Samuel 15:29:

And also the Strength of Israel will not lie nor repent: for he is not a man, that he should repent.

Psalm 89:34:

My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips.

Hebrews 6:18:

That by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us:

Titus 1:2:

In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began;

Now consider what the Bible says about your healing in the light of the verses above. God cannot lie, so He did not lie when He said that He is the Lord Who Heals You (Exodus 15:26) and that He heals all your diseases (Psalm 103:3). He did not lie when He said that Jesus was made sick in your place (Isaiah 53:4, Isaiah 53:10, Matthew 8:17) and that by His stripes you were healed (Isaiah 53:5, 1 Peter 2:24). He did not lie when He said that we can cast out demons and lay hands on sick people, who will recover (Mark 16:17-18) and that we can do the works that Jesus did (John 14:12). He did not lie when He expressed His desire for us to prosper and be in health (3 John 2). He did not lie when He said that a bedridden person can call for the church elders, and that the prayer of faith WILL raise up that sick person (James 5:14-15). He did not lie when He said that He would take away from you ALL sickness (Deuteronomy 7:15). He did not lie when He said that Christ has redeemed you from the curse of the Law (Galatians 3:13), which includes EVERY sickness that there is (Deuteronomy 28:61).

When God Says Something, It's Settled

When God has given His Word on something, you can depend on it. Everything He says is settled FOREVER:

Psalm 119:89:

For ever, O LORD, thy word is settled in heaven.

Psalm 138:2:

I will worship toward thy holy temple, and praise thy name for thy lovingkindness and for thy truth: for thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name.

God has given His Word on healing, so the matter of your healing is forever settled in heaven.

The VAST majority of Christians fail to realize that healing is part of their covenant, so they petition God for their healing. They don't realize that the matter is forever settled. When something is forever settled, you DON'T go to God and ask Him to do something new. You rely on what He has already said, and as far as you are concerned, that settles the matter.

God has already made clear that you are redeemed from ALL sicknesses, which means that healing is RIGHTFULLY YOURS right now. That is a forever-settled fact. So don't try to reopen a closed case! God's will for your healing has been irrevocably stated. God cannot go back on what He said now that those words have come forth from His lips.

You can now approach God and believe that you receive the healing that He has ALREADY PROVIDED for you, knowing that as far as He is concerned, the matter of His will to heal you is FOREVER SETTLED!

Different Ways to Get Healed

There are different methods of healing in the Bible. This may have made you wonder what the proper way to get healed is. The good news is that there is more than one way to get healed, and all of the methods work! Some are easier than others. God has made provision for everyone from the newest believer to the most mature Christian to be healed. These are roughly in order from the easiest methods to the methods that require more faith.

Manifestations of the Holy Spirit

Sometimes the Holy Spirit uses a believer as a vessel to heal someone who is not exercising faith for his healing. The Bible describes gifts of healings as a manifestation of the Spirit in 1 Corinthians 12:8-11 and 1 Corinthians 12:28-30.

Sometimes even unbelievers receive healing this way. The gifts of healings operate as the Spirit wills, so you cannot “claim” that you will be healed by a special manifestation of the Holy Spirit. However, you do not necessarily need any faith to receive this way. This is probably the easiest way to receive a healing.

At other times, there may be a word of knowledge for a certain illness, and you may be asked to come forward in a service to have hands laid on you. You may need to exercise some faith to receive from the anointing. Sometimes the anointing can be so strong that you won't need any faith at all. The stronger the anointing, the less faith you need. If there were no healing anointing at all, you could still receive 100% by faith, as pointed out below, but if it was really God giving the minister a word of knowledge, He would not tease you by calling out your condition and then not making healing available if you'll respond.

This can be linked closely with the laying on of hands (covered separately below), although it is possible to be healed through the gifts of the Spirit without hands being laid on you. For example, I have had people get healed spontaneously while I played the piano or sang. I never laid hands on those people. Some ministers announce healings through the word of knowledge without touching people. Sometimes people come forward and the anointing is so strong that they can't even walk up to the minister to get hands laid on them. Occasionally, the anointing may be so strong that the minister can't get off the floor, either. It happened in Solomon's temple under the less glorious covenant, so why not now under the more glorious covenant (2 Corinthians 3:7-11)?

The Glory of God

In services where Jesus is worshipped in spirit and in truth, God may manifest His glory in the service. When this happens, people sometimes get healed spontaneously, whether they were expecting anything or not. At other times, the minister may direct those needing healing to just believe that they receive while God manifests His presence. It is easier to receive your healing when the anointing is all over the place. I have found that even if you don't get healed, you may be pain-free as long as the anointing stays; the anointing seems to be a very effective painkiller. After all, the anointing removes burdens and destroys yokes (Isaiah 10:27).

I remember preaching a particular service overseas, expecting to have a time of laying hands on the sick at the end. That was my plan before the service even started. When we got to the end, I sensed that the healing anointing was in the room, but I had no leading to lay hands on anyone. The only thing I felt led to do was sing a worship song I'd written and play the piano. People were healed of serious problems without anyone touching them. To be honest, I almost freaked out. People started coming up and testifying about how God's power suddenly hit them, instantly healing them. They talked about feeling "lightning bolts" hit them. I was probably the most surprised one of the bunch, though I shouldn't have been. I had become so used to laying hands on the sick at the end of services that I had slipped into a mindset that laying on of hands was the official way that God heals people at church services. Yes, it is one way, but God has other ways. A "no-contact" method is a lot easier on the minister. In large evangelistic crusades, God may have to move without the laying on of hands just because so many people need healing.

Believing + Medical Help

If you are not ready to simply believe for your healing, it is no sin to use whatever natural means you can to get healed or at least to get some relief for your condition until you get healed. This is not God's best, but it beats suffering. You can ask God to give the doctors wisdom to figure out what to do about your condition. You can believe for a speedier recovery than usual. You can find something you can believe for even if you are not ready to believe for your complete healing.

I am not saying that you should believe that by Jesus' stripes you were partially healed. That would not be true. But because healing is rightfully yours, you can legally believe for any part of it. Many times, you can have more than one condition, and you are ready to stand in faith in one but not the other. It's better to be healed of one (for now) than to keep them both!

You can't receive something you can't believe for. If you can believe for wisdom for the doctors and a speedy recovery, but can't believe for a complete healing, go ahead and receive what you can believe for. I've heard plenty of "supernaturally speedy recovery" testimonies over the years! We're all growing in our walks with the Lord, and we have to operate where we are in our faith walks, not where we'd like to be someday. Don't let anyone ridicule your faith if you trust God to guide the surgeon. I would rather hear that you believed God for a successful operation and had a supernaturally good one rather than hear that you died trying to believe God for a complete healing with no medical intervention.

Anointing with Oil and the Prayer of Faith

This method only applies to those who are too sick to go to church on their own. Please understand that this is a command, not an option. If you are in the hospital or laid up at home, you are supposed to call for the elders of the church to come and lay hands on you, anoint you with oil in the name of Jesus, and pray the prayer of faith over you (James 5:14-15). The Lord will raise you up. If you're still an unbeliever, you will also be forgiven for any sins you may have committed that made you sick in the first place. (If you're a believer, your sins are forgiven already – see Forgiven People Can Be Healed.) If you don't have a church, we have just identified one problem you need to solve right away. A televangelist is not your church. He cannot come anoint you with oil in person. (I'm not against televangelists unless they try to tell you that you only need them and not a local church.)

If you just have a cold or something, there is no need to call the elders together! James 5:14-15 talks about a serious situation. If people called the elders every time they had colds, many elders would have full-time jobs just visiting people. If you can make it to church, go request laying on of hands there.

You can get healed this way even if you personally don't have mountain-moving faith. God honors the faith of the elders as well as your obedience to His command to have them anoint you and pray the prayer of faith over you.

By the way, do not get mad if the elders don't visit you in the hospital if you never called and told them that you were there! Amazingly, some people really get mad about this; I guess they assume that if the pastor is really "in the Spirit," he will just know that they missed church because they were in the hospital as opposed to being on vacation or something. It is a violation of this Bible command to wait for them to call you. You are commanded to call them. (If you are unable to even make a call, have someone do it for you.)

It is also biblical to have an anointed cloth brought to you from a service where the healing anointing was in manifestation. But if you do so, you must do it in addition to the command in James, not instead of following that command.

It is a crying shame that most churches do not believe and practice James 5:14-16. Instead of sending the elders to anoint with oil and pray the prayer of faith, the pastor (or whatever they call the leader of the church) comes out and prays for the sick person to have patience and peace in his trial. The sick person stays sick and is “remembered” (but not necessarily prayed for) on Sunday morning. This is simply disobedience to the Word. That’s tough, but it’s the truth. After all, how many ways can you interpret James 5:14-16?

You can even request laying on of hands if you’re an elder yourself and you’re in the hospital. Don’t be too proud to obey God’s command!

Laying on of Hands

This method is good for younger believers. Another believer (who believes Mark 16:18) lays hands on you in the name of Jesus, and you recover. This method of healing should be part of the basic education of every new believer. That’s not my private opinion; that’s God’s opinion, as expressed in Hebrews 6:1-2. The laying on of hands is one of the six fundamental doctrines of Christ for a new believer to know. Laying on of hands can impart more than just healing, and I’m not saying that laying hands for healing is the entire “doctrine of the laying on of hands,” but it is surely an important part. Jesus also laid hands on children just to bless them, to the consternation of the disciples (Matthew 19:13-15, Mark 10:13-16, Luke 18:15). So it is okay to have a time of laying on of hands just to bless people! Laying on of hands was also a way of installing people into ministry positions (Acts 6:5-6, Acts 13:1-3, 1 Timothy 5:17-22), imparting the Holy Spirit (Acts 8:17-18, Acts 19:6), and bestowing other impartations (1 Timothy 4:14, 2 Timothy 1:6; the latter MAY be another reference to receiving the Holy Spirit in light of 2 Timothy 1:7, but you could take it either way.

This is one of the easier methods because someone else’s faith gets involved with yours. Not only do you believe that Jesus told the truth about laying hands on the sick, but the person laying hands on you does, too.

No wonder Paul used this method to heal the first person on an island when the rest had not seen God’s healing power yet; that healing encouraged the rest of the sick people to receive healing (Acts 28:8-9).

In fact, we see that at Nazareth, where unbelief prevailed, laying on of hands was the ONLY method that imparted healing to anyone (Mark 6:5). So we would be safe to say that laying on of hands works when nothing else does! Remember this the next time that you minister somewhere where there is a lot of unbelief!

Although laying on of hands is ideal for new believers, it is certainly not a sin for a mature believer to request the laying on of hands for his healing, either.

Communion

While this is not technically another way to receive healing, we found when we pastored that a disproportionate number of healings happened during communion services. I believe that this was because we were deliberately remembering that Jesus' body was broken so that our bodies could be whole. Our Law-stipulated physical punishment for sin was laid on Him so that now we are redeemed from sickness. We always preached this part of the Lord's Supper along with Jesus' shed blood – many people forget about His broken body and they don't even know why His body would have to be broken. In fact, a good thing to ask opponents of divine healing would be, "If Jesus did not have to bear a PHYSICAL penalty for our sins, why did His body have to be broken? Why couldn't He have just shed His blood to provide forgiveness for our sins?"

One reason there is so much sickness in the body of Christ is that people don't understand the significance of the broken bread, so a communion service is an ideal time to remind people that Jesus' body was broken so that ours could be whole. (You might expect me to quote 1 Corinthians 11:27-32 to back this, but that passage is really more about sickness that fell as judgment on those who partook frivolously of the Lord's Supper.)

I also believe that obeying the Lord's command to "do this in remembrance of Me" is something that He blesses, so it is no surprise to see signs and wonders follow our obedience to receive the Lord's Supper in remembrance of Him.

The Prayer of Agreement

Jesus gave us the right to pray in agreement with one or more other believers. He guaranteed that He would be "in the midst of us" when we gathered in His name. This Scripture, Matthew 18:18-20, is sometimes misunderstood to mean that Jesus is present whenever we have church and it's used to console each other when attendance is lousy at a meeting. But Jesus is present even if one person shows up, because Jesus lives in believers. He walks in the moment that you walk in! So it is bad theology to think that Jesus is not present unless you get two or three people together, at which point He shows up. That's not what He was talking about. He was talking about gathering in His name to agree on something, and saying that He would be there in the midst of us to make it happen when we agreed on it.

You and another believer can agree that you are legally healed by the stripes of Jesus and that sickness must leave your body. This takes a little more faith on your part than the previous methods. If you do not really believe that you can do this because Jesus paid for your healing, you are not in agreement, and thus you are not truly praying the prayer of agreement! However, it is still easier to have someone agree with you than it is to just do it yourself. Many times, the prayer of agreement will be prayed along with the laying on of hands.

If you are praying for a sick person, it is important to enter into agreement with him. There is no point in “agreeing” that the person will be miraculously healed if the person can only get in faith for a speedier recovery than normal using medical methods. You should share the Word with sick people. If they are not ready to believe for their complete healing, at least find something that you can agree on. Do this even if you would believe for more if you were in their shoes (or out of their shoes and in their bed).

The prayer of agreement will work if the person who needs healing is one of the people agreeing. Otherwise, you can't force something onto someone by “agreeing” that he will be healed! Trying to “agree” that Aunt Dorothy in Alaska will be healed without her knowledge or consent won't work any better than “agreeing” that she will be saved without her knowledge and consent!

Confessing Sins to Each Other and Praying for One Another

James goes on to say that we (believers) should confess our sins to one another and pray for one another, and the result would be that we would be healed. I don't think that we can state confidently that James said to pray FOR one another's healings in particular. Job was healed when he prayed for his friends, not by his friends praying for his healing. You can read James's instructions in James 5:14-16. I believe what he's saying is that if we are “real” with each other about our struggles and we pray for each other, this will result in healing. I don't think he's saying that we should “pray for one another's healing;” I think the comma is where it belongs after “pray for one another.” In other words, we confess our faults to one another and pray for one another, that we may be healed, as opposed to saying that we confess our faults to one other and pray for one another that we may be healed (note the missing comma in the second version). The original Greek is unpunctuated, which gives you some liberty to punctuate it either way, but I believe that the first way is more consistent with the rest of Scripture.

I should also point out that I DO believe in praying for the sick, but not in praying for God to heal the sick. It doesn't seem to me that James could be say that we should ask God to heal each other because it is senseless to have other people “ask God to heal you” when His Word says that He has already done everything necessary about the matter. We can, though, ask God to help others receive the healing that already belongs to them. We can pray that they will be illuminated about this and that this fact will become real to them.

If you DO believe that this passage says that we should “pray for each other's healing (and I can see how people might think that), you would need no other Scripture to prove that God wants us all well. God would never command us to pray a prayer that He would not answer, and His answer won't be “No” or “Wait.”

I had an interesting experience along these lines when I had a headache off and on for a day and a half for no obvious reason. My wife and I were praying for a friend in person about a matter not even related to divine healing, and while we were praying, it felt like someone poured something warm and tingly all over my head. I was fine from that point on.

Touching a Christian

A sick person can be healed just by touching a Christian in faith. A Christian is part of the Body of Christ, the fullness of Him (Ephesians 1:23), so for us to be His fullness, we must be able to minister as He did. After all, He did say that we would do the works that He did (John 14:12). One of those works was having people go up to Him, touch Him, and be healed through the anointing that was on Him. If that happened to Him, it should happen to us as well.

Speaking the Word

God's Word is health (medicine) to ALL your flesh (Proverbs 4:20-22), so it makes sense that you should speak it and expect that your body will respond to it. Where the word of a king is, there is power (Ecclesiastes 8:4). God is the King in His Kingdom, and His words are powerful. As you reflect on God's Word and speak it, you may find that healing comes without any other method being necessary.

As pointed out elsewhere, there is a confession unto faith, where you renew your mind with the Word, and a confession of faith, where you speak the Word that your mind is already renewed to. It is the latter that produces results because there is faith behind what you say.

Receiving by Faith

You can receive healing anytime, anywhere, without anyone else's involvement, by following Mark 11:24 (believing that you receive when you pray). You first must understand that Jesus purchased your healing already and that God is just waiting for you to take it. If you feel that you must twist God's arm to get Him to heal you, you are not yet ready to receive your healing in this way.

You are simply receiving a gift from God that has been reserved for you since Calvary. Contrary to what people might tell you, this is not a difficult thing to do. Let's face it, the people in the Bible who touched Jesus' clothes did not have the wealth of Bible teaching that we have today. Yet they managed to have it "done unto them according to their faith!" If it didn't take them years to figure this out, so it doesn't have to take you years, either.

Besides, if you are saved, you already know how to receive a gift that has been laid up since Calvary. That is how you were born again. You are a believer. Your spirit has been created in God's image in righteousness and true holiness (Ephesians 4:24). It just as natural for a believer to believe as it is for a sinner to sin!

The only thing that makes this hard is the enormous amount of junk teaching in the church world that makes fun of divine healing and those who practice it and leaves you with the mistaken idea that you cannot really practice Mark 11:24 and receive your healing.

Speaking to Your Condition

A related, but slightly different, method is to speak to your condition directly yourself and command it to leave in the name of Jesus. The basis for this is Mark 11:23, where Jesus said that you could speak to a mountain and it would be thrown into the sea. He said that if you say something with your mouth and believe it in your heart, you will have whatever you say. Prayer is not even mentioned in connection with this method. Prayer is not necessary to heal an illness; the exercise of your God-given authority as a believer over sickness is sufficient.

Jesus was not concerned with having you literally throw a mountain into the sea. That could cause trouble unless you also have the faith to stop the killer waves and other damage that could result from doing so. The point was that your words contain virtually unlimited power when faith backs them. You have the authority to speak a thing and have it come to pass.

Everyone uses this principle. The trouble is that the unbeliever and the immature believer use it against themselves. They get into fear and believe what the devil says instead of what God says. They speak what the devil says, and that comes to pass. Jesus did not say that you would have whatever you believe and say as long as it is good. You will have whatever you believe and say whether it is good or bad! Unbelievers can do this because this applies to whosoever.

The people whom Jesus commended for having great faith were those who believed so much in the power of words that they did not need anything else.

In Matthew 15:22-28, a Gentile woman who was not under the Old Covenant persisted in demanding that Jesus do something about her demon-possessed daughter. Jesus merely spoke words. He did not visit the daughter. The woman believed the words that Jesus spoke and her daughter was healed. Jesus said that this woman had great faith.

In Matthew 8:5-13 and Luke 7:2-10 you can read an account of a centurion who understood authority. He believed that Jesus could just speak words and his servant would be healed. He did not even ask for a personal visit. Jesus spoke words and the servant was healed immediately. Jesus marveled at this man's great faith and said that He did know of anyone in Israel with such faith.

In John 4:46-53, a nobleman did request a personal visit, but Jesus simply spoke words instead. The man believed that Jesus' words had authority, and the man's son "began to amend" at precisely that moment. Jesus never visited or touched the boy.

Jesus demonstrated the power of words to His disciples when He cursed the fig tree. The next morning, there was visible proof that it was dead, although this process started immediately but invisibly. This is the context for Mark 11:23-24 as well as Matthew 21:18-22. This is a good lesson when you are using words to make the sickness in your body die. Like the fig tree, the sickness may not immediately appear to be dead even though it starts to die the minute you speak. After a while, as long as you stay in faith, what was once only on the inside will manifest on the outside. You can "speak death" to something as Jesus did. Death as well as life is in the power of the tongue (Proverbs 18:21).

We can surmise from Jesus' statements about great faith that people who are experienced in walking in faith would use this method. A new believer would probably not receive his healing this way although he is legally entitled to do so as much as a mature believer.

Take Your Pick!

You can be healed in any of these ways. Use whichever you feel like using. If you don't feel ready to use the more "advanced" methods, use the easier ones. The main idea is to get healed! In His mercy, God has given you many ways to receive your healing!

You Are Holy and Worthy to Receive Healing

You are not some unworthy, sinful little worm. You are a new creature in Christ. You are holy. You are righteous. Therefore, you are worthy to receive healing. Do not pray to be holy, and do not pray to be found worthy. You already are both because of what Jesus Christ did for you. Failure to realize this will hinder your prayer life, because you will feel unworthy to receive your healing. God says you are holy and worthy. This does not mean that we bow down and worship you, but in God's eyes you are already holy and worthy to receive anything He provided in Christ because you are in Christ.

You are holy. You can present yourself a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God (Romans 12:1). The temple of God is holy, which temple you, as part of the church as a whole, are (1 Corinthians 3:16-17). The children of believers are considered holy (1 Corinthians 7:14). We were chosen before the foundation of the world to be holy and without blame before Him in love (Ephesians 1:4). We are growing into a holy temple of the Lord (Ephesians 2:20-21). Christ gave Himself for the church so that it might be holy and without blemish (Ephesians 5:25-27). You are reconciled in the body of His flesh through death, to be presented holy and unblameable and unreprouvable in His sight (Colossians 1:21-23). You are the elect of God, holy and beloved (Colossians 3:12). First Thessalonians was to be read to all the holy brethren (1 Thessalonians 5:27). God wants men everywhere to lift up holy hands (1 Timothy 2:8). You are one of the holy brethren referred to in Hebrews 3:1. You are part of a holy priesthood (1 Peter 2:5). You are part of a royal priesthood, a holy nation (1 Peter 2:9). The Holy Spirit in you is called, as if you couldn't figure this out, the spirit of holiness (Romans 1:4)!

The fact that God lives in you is proof that you are holy. God would not allow anything unholy into His presence in the Old Covenant. You are God's holy temple under the New Covenant, as you can see above.

You are worthy to receive healing because you are righteous! You are the righteousness of God in Christ (2 Corinthians 5:21). By the obedience of one [Christ] you have been made righteous (Romans 5:19). Your faith is counted for righteousness (Romans 4:5, Galatians 3:6). Jesus condemned sin in the flesh so that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in you (Romans 8:3-4). Righteousness is of faith (Romans 9:30). You have received the gift of righteousness (Romans 5:17). With the heart man believes unto righteousness (Romans 10:10). The kingdom of God is righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost (Romans 14:17).

Christ Jesus is made unto you righteousness (1 Corinthians 1:30). The New Covenant is called the ministration of righteousness (2 Corinthians 3:9). You, as a believer, are called righteousness in 2 Corinthians 6:14. Paul talked of being found in Him [Christ], not having his own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith (Philippians 3:9). Noah was an heir of the righteousness which is by faith (Hebrews 11:7). Abraham believed God, and it was imputed to him for righteousness (James 2:23).

There is no question that you are righteous right now if you are born again. Yet for some reason this is controversial today. Many still insist that you are still a fallen sinner and that your sins are just covered. According to this popular view, you are actually unrighteous, but the blood of Christ puts a righteous covering on you so that God sees you as righteous. This “covering” of sins is an Old Testament idea, not a New Testament idea. David could talk about his sins being covered, and that is the best that he could have under his covenant. However, your sins are more than covered, regardless of what certain songs may say. They are obliterated. You have more than a covering of righteousness. You are the righteousness of God in Christ. Your sins are washed away, not covered.

The verse at the beginning of this discussion proves that you have been recreated in righteousness and true holiness. Your new born-again spirit is righteous and holy, not sinful, and not in need of any kind of covering. Jesus Christ took your sin and gave you His righteousness. Your born-again spirit is every bit as righteous before God as Jesus Christ is!

Those who object to this say that if we were really just as righteous as Jesus was, we could not sin. That is not true. Your mind, to the extent that it is unrenewed with God’s Word, can lead you into sin. Your body, if you listen to its sense-realm information, can lead you into sin. God does not say that your mind is righteous or that your body is righteous. Your mind is not born again and your body is not born again. Your spirit is born again. Your born-again spirit is the “new man” that was created after God in righteousness and true holiness. You were re-created in God’s image. You are not omnipotent, omnipresent, omniscient, or worthy to receive worship, but you look like God on the inside. Your spirit was literally born of God.

Because you are righteous, your prayers for healing avail much! “Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much” (James 5:16).

What about other Scriptures that command us to be holy? Why would God command us to be something that we already are? These Scriptures speak of holiness in conduct, not holiness in terms of standing with God. Your holy conduct should reflect your holy standing.

See yourself the way God sees you. You are righteous. You have the right to receive healing from God along with all His other blessings. You are His holy temple. God was very concerned about the condition of His temple in the Old Covenant. He didn’t want to live in a run-down dump. Surely He does not want His current temple – you – to be a run-down dump, either.

Who You Are and What You Have

Look at who the Bible says you are and what the Bible says you have because you are in Christ. Then see if it makes sense to you that God would do all of this for you and leave out the healing of your body! I don't even claim that this is a comprehensive list, though it covers a lot.

You have eternal life (1 John 5:11-13). You shall not perish, but have everlasting life (John 3:16). You have everlasting life (John 3:36). You shall never see death (John 8:51). You will never die (John 11:26). [These speak of spiritual death.]

You are redeemed with the precious blood of Christ (1 Peter 1:18-19). You are justified freely by God's grace by the redemption that is in Christ Jesus (Romans 3:24). You are justified by Jesus' blood and saved from wrath through Him (Romans 5:9). Jesus has delivered you from the wrath to come (1 Thessalonians 1:10). God has not appointed you to wrath (1 Thessalonians 5:9). You are reconciled to God by the death of His Son (Romans 5:10). You have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ because you are justified by faith (Romans 5:1). You have been reconciled in the body of Christ's flesh through death so that you could now be presented holy and unblameable and unproveable in His sight (Colossians 1:21-23). You are reconciled to God (Ephesians 2:16). You have redemption through Jesus' blood, the forgiveness of sins (Ephesians 1:7). You are forgiven for all your sins (Ephesians 4:32, Colossians 1:14, Colossians 2:13, Colossians 3:13, 1 John 2:12). You were purged from your old sins (2 Peter 1:9). God forgets your sins (Hebrews 8:12, Hebrews 10:17). You can be sprinkled from an evil conscience (Hebrews 10:22).

You are the righteousness of God in Christ (2 Corinthians 5:21). You are righteousness, you are light, you are Christ [to the world by being part of His body], and you are the temple of God (2 Corinthians 6:14-16). There is no condemnation for you (Romans 8:1). The righteousness of the law is fulfilled in you (Romans 8:4).

You have been created after God in righteousness and true holiness (Ephesians 4:24). You are a new creation in Christ; the old has passed away and all things have become new (2 Corinthians 5:17). You are born of God (1 John 5:1).

Your old man is crucified with Christ so that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth you should not serve sin (Romans 6:6). You are freed from sin (Romans 6:7). You are dead to sin and alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord (Romans 6:11). You are under grace, and sin has no dominion over you (Romans 6:14). You are dead to sins (1 Peter 2:24). You are made free from sin, and have become the servant of righteousness (Romans 6:18). You are dead to the law by the body of Christ (Romans 7:4), and delivered from the law (Romans 7:6). You have eternal redemption by the blood of Christ (Hebrews 9:12). You were baptized into Christ's death, so that as He was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, you should walk in newness of life (Romans 6:4).

You are more than a conqueror through Him who loved you (Romans 8:37). You have received abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness, so you shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ (Romans 5:17). You are a king and a priest unto God (Revelation 1:6), a king and a priest on the earth (Revelation 5:10). All things are under your feet (since the Church is Christ's body and thus His feet on the earth) (Ephesians 1:22). God gives you the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ (1 Corinthians 15:57) and always makes you triumph in Christ (2 Corinthians 2:14). You are part of a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation (1 Peter 2:9). The Lord will deliver you from every evil work, and will preserve you unto His heavenly kingdom (2 Timothy 4:18). You have overcome the world (1 John 5:4-5). You are made alive together with Christ (Ephesians 2:1, Ephesians 2:5) and have been raised up to sit with Christ in heavenly places (Ephesians 2:6).

You are delivered from this present evil world (Galatians 1:4). You have been delivered from the power of darkness and have been transferred into the kingdom of God's dear Son (Colossians 1:13). You have the right to use the name of Jesus to make the knee bow of everything that is named (Philippians 2:9-11). You have overcome the wicked one (1 John 2:13-14). You have already overcome antichrist spirits (1 John 4:4). The Lord will establish you and keep you from evil (2 Thessalonians 3:3).

God freely gives you all things (Romans 8:32). You have received the Spirit of God so that you might know the things that are freely given to you by God (1 Corinthians 2:12). God gives you all things richly to enjoy (1 Timothy 6:17). There are many good things in you in Christ Jesus that you should acknowledge (Philemon 6). All things are yours (1 Corinthians 3:21-22). God's divine power has given you all things that pertain to life and godliness (2 Peter 1:3). God has already blessed you with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ (Ephesians 1:3). You shall never hunger or thirst (John 6:35). You are complete in Christ (Colossians 2:10).

Christ has received you to the glory of God (Romans 15:7). You are accepted in the beloved (Ephesians 1:6).

You have boldness and access with confidence through the faith of Jesus (Ephesians 3:12). You have access by faith into this grace (Romans 5:2). You have boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus (Hebrews 10:19). You can draw near to God (Hebrews 7:19, James 4:8). You can come boldly to the throne of grace, obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need (Hebrews 4:16). You are made near by the blood of Christ (Ephesians 2:13). You have access through Jesus Christ by one Spirit to the Father (Ephesians 2:18). You have been brought to God by Christ (1 Peter 3:18).

You have received a gift to minister to others (1 Peter 4:10). The manifestation of the Spirit is given to you for the benefit of others (1 Corinthians 12:7). You have been given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ (Ephesians 4:7). You have gifts that differ from those of others by God's grace (Romans 12:6). You are God's workmanship, and God has already pre-ordained good works for you to walk in (Ephesians 2:10). You have been set in the Christ's body as it pleased God (1 Corinthians 12:18). God works in you to will and to do His good pleasure (Philippians 2:13). Your sufficiency is of God, who has made you an able minister of the new testament (2 Corinthians 3:5-6). Rivers of living water flow out of you when you minister to others (John 7:37-39).

You have the love of God shed abroad in your heart by the Holy Spirit (Romans 5:5). God teaches you to love others (1 Thessalonians 4:9).

You are no longer a debtor to the flesh to obey it (Romans 8:12). You have crucified the flesh with its affections and lusts (Galatians 5:24). You have put off the old man with his deeds (Colossians 3:9). You have escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust (2 Peter 1:4).

You are a child of Abraham (Galatians 3:7), blessed with Abraham (Galatians 3:9), a partaker of the blessing of Abraham (Galatians 3:14), and Abraham's child according to the promise (Galatians 3:29). You are an heir of God through Christ (Galatians 4:7). You are an heir (Titus 3:7), an heir of salvation (Hebrews 1:14). You are a joint-heir with Christ (Romans 8:17). In Christ you have obtained an inheritance (Ephesians 1:11). You are called to inherit a blessing (1 Peter 3:9). You are a fellow heir with the Jews (Ephesians 3:6). You are worthy to partake of the inheritance of the saints in light (Colossians 1:12).

God works in you mightily (Colossians 1:29). The Word of God works effectually in you (1 Thessalonians 2:13). He who began a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ (Philippians 1:6).

God the Father is in you (Ephesians 4:6). God dwells in you (1 John 4:15). Your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit who is in you (1 Corinthians 6:19).

You [together with the Church] are the temple of God and the Spirit of God dwells in you (1 Corinthians 3:16). Your body is a member of Christ (1 Corinthians 6:15). You [together with the Church] are God's house (Hebrews 3:6).

You are a child of God (Romans 8:16, John 1:12, 1 John 3:1). God is your Father and you are His child (2 Corinthians 6:18). You are joined to the Lord and one spirit with Him (1 Corinthians 6:17).

Christ is establishing you and God has anointed you (2 Corinthians 1:21). You have an anointing from the Holy One and you know all things (1 John 2:20). The anointing that you have received of Him abides in you (1 John 2:27).

Jesus has given you His glory (John 17:22). You are brought into glory (Hebrews 2:10). You are changed into the image of the glory of the Lord, from glory to glory, by the Holy Spirit (2 Corinthians 3:18). You are called, justified and glorified (Romans 8:30). You are called to God's kingdom and glory (1 Thessalonians 2:12). You are called by the gospel to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ (2 Thessalonians 2:14). Christ in you is the hope of glory (Colossians 1:27).

You have glorious liberty (Romans 8:21). You are free with Christ's liberty (Galatians 5:1, Galatians 5:13).

You are sanctified (1 Corinthians 1:2, Hebrews 10:10). You are washed, sanctified, and justified in the name of the Lord Jesus and by the Spirit of our God (1 Corinthians 6:11). Christ Jesus has been made unto you wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption (1 Corinthians 1:30).

You are comforted by God in all your tribulation (2 Corinthians 1:4). God comforts you when you are cast down (2 Corinthians 7:6).

The world is crucified to you, and you to the world, in the cross of your Lord Jesus Christ (Galatians 6:14). You are crucified with Christ: nevertheless you live; yet not you, but Christ lives in you (Galatians 2:20). You are buried with Him in baptism and risen with Him (Colossians 2:12, Colossians 3:1). You are dead and your life is hidden with Christ in God (Colossians 3:3). You are not of the world (John 17:16).

You have a High Priest – Jesus (Hebrews 10:21). Jesus lives to make intercession for you and is able to save you to the uttermost (Hebrews 7:25). Jesus is the author and the finisher of your faith (Hebrews 12:2).

The Spirit is poured out abundantly on you through Jesus Christ your Savior (Titus 3:5-6). You are in the Spirit (Romans 8:9). You have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby you cry Abba, Father (Romans 8:15). You are sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise unto the day of redemption (Ephesians 1:13, Ephesians 4:30). You have been made to drink into one Spirit (1 Corinthians 12:13). The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made you free from the law of sin and death (Romans 8:2). The Comforter shall abide with you forever (John 14:16). The Spirit of truth is in you (John 14:17). The Holy Spirit teaches you all things (John 14:26). He reminds you of Jesus' words (John 14:26). He testifies of Jesus (John 15:26). The Spirit guides you into all truth (John 16:13) and shows you things to come (John 16:13). He will show you the things of Jesus (John 16:14-15).

You have not been given the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind (2 Timothy 1:7). You are delivered from the bondage of the fear of death (Hebrews 2:14-15).

God will never leave you nor forsake you (Hebrews 13:5). The Lord is your helper, and you will not fear what man shall do unto you (Hebrews 13:6).

God has given you the measure of faith (Romans 12:3).

You shall not be ashamed because you believe in Jesus (Romans 9:33, Romans 10:11). You shall not be confounded (1 Peter 2:6).

You, along with the rest of the Church, are being framed together into God's holy temple, a habitation of God through the Spirit (Ephesians 2:20-21). The Lord nourishes you, and you are a member of His flesh and of His bones (Ephesians 5:30). You have been baptized into one body (1 Corinthians 12:13) and are a member of the body of Christ (1 Corinthians 12:27). You, with the rest of the Body, increase with the increase of God (Colossians 2:19). You are in the household of God and are a fellow-citizen with all other saints (Ephesians 2:19). You are built up as a lively stone in a spiritual house in a holy priesthood (1 Peter 2:5). You and fellow believers are members one of another in the body of Christ (Romans 12:5). You are God's husbandry [farm] and God's building (1 Corinthians 3:9).

You are baptized into Christ and have put on Christ (Galatians 3:27). You and Christ are "of one" so He is not ashamed to call you His brother (Hebrews 2:11). As God is, so are you in this world (1 John 4:17). You are in Christ and He is in you (John 14:20).

Jesus became poor so that you through His poverty might become rich (2 Corinthians 8:9). God supplies all your needs according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus (Philippians 4:19).

God is able to do exceedingly abundantly above all that you ask or think according to the power that works in you (Ephesians 3:20). God's power to you who believes is exceedingly great (Ephesians 1:19). You can do all things through Christ who strengthens you (Philippians 4:13).

You have a better covenant, established upon better promises than the Old Covenant (Hebrews 8:6). God puts His laws in your mind and writes them on your heart (Hebrews 8:10), and puts His laws into your heart and writes them in your mind (Hebrews 10:16).

God has called you out of darkness into His marvelous light (1 Peter 2:9). You are a child of the light (1 Thessalonians 5:5). You are light in the Lord (Ephesians 5:8). You shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life (John 8:12). Jesus is your light, and you shall not abide in darkness (John 12:46). You hear and know Jesus' voice, and you follow Him (John 10:27).

You are the Lord's freeman and Christ's servant (1 Corinthians 7:22). You are free indeed (John 8:36).

Jesus and His Father love you and will manifest themselves to you by living in you (John 14:23).

Jesus Christ is your peace (Ephesians 2:14). Jesus gives you peace that the world cannot give (John 14:27). He made peace through the blood of His cross (Colossians 1:20). You have peace with God (Romans 5:1).

You can do the works that Jesus did and greater (John 14:12). You can ask anything in Jesus' name and He will do it (John 14:14). Jesus has chosen you to bear lasting fruit, that whatever you ask the Father in His name, the Father will give you (John 15:16). Whatever you ask the Father in His name, the Father will give you (John 16:23). You can speak to physical circumstances and they must obey you (Mark 11:23).

Jesus is preparing a place for you (John 14:2).

You have the mind of Christ (1 Corinthians 2:16).

All the promises of God are yea and Amen in Christ by you (2 Corinthians 1:20).

God makes manifest the fragrance of His knowledge by you (2 Corinthians 2:14).

You have God's treasure in an earthen vessel (2 Corinthians 4:7).

You are dead to the law, that you might live unto God (Galatians 2:19).

You are "the circumcision" (a true Jew) (Philippians 3:3).

You are renewed in knowledge after the image of Him who created you (Colossians 3:10).

God preserves your spirit, soul and body blameless until the coming of Christ (1 Thessalonians 5:23).

The angels are sent forth to minister for you (Hebrews 1:14).

You have obtained mercy (1 Peter 2:10).

God cares for you (1 Peter 5:7). The Father Himself loves you (John 16:27). He loves you with the same love with which He loves Jesus (John 17:23). Jesus loves you with the same love that the Father has for Him (John 15:9).

You have fellowship with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ (1 John 1:3) and with the Holy Spirit (2 Corinthians 13:14).

You have the right to cast out demons, speak in tongues, be immune from poisoning, and lay hands on the sick and see them recover (Mark 16:15-18).

Would God give you all of these other blessings and leave healing out? Don't some of these blessings imply that you would need to be healed? For example, how can you reign in life as a king and a priest on the earth if you are laid up in the hospital for the rest of your life? If God gives you all things, surely He cannot leave healing out. If Jesus saves you to the uttermost, surely He saves you from sickness. If all things and all blessings are yours, surely healing is included.

If you can believe all that, surely you can believe this:

Jesus Himself took your infirmities and bore your sicknesses (Matthew 8:17).

The Spirit quickens your mortal body (Romans 8:11).

You are redeemed from the curse for breaking the law, which includes every sickness there is (Galatians 3:10-14).

You were healed by Jesus' stripes (1 Peter 2:24).

Your body and spirit are bought at a price and are God's (1 Corinthians 6:20, 1 Corinthians 7:23).

God wants you to prosper and be in health, even as your soul prospers (3 John 2).

Mistaken Prayer Mindsets

Most Christians do their praying with mistaken mindsets that get in the way of being able to receive anything from God on His terms. Let's look at what some of these mindsets are. If you see yourself in one or more of these, it's time to change your mindset so that you can receive healing or whatever else you need from the Lord!

The Courtroom Mindset

You picture yourself going to God's courtroom to present a request to heaven's Prayer Resolution Panel in order to get one of four decisions: (1) Yes (2) No (3) Wait (4) Silence (no decision). You expect that God will be the Judge for your individual case.

You've lost already if you think that God has to make a decision! Faith does not try to get God to make a decision! Faith receives what God in His grace has already decided to give you! If you are not SURE that God says YES to whatever it is, you need to hold off on prayer for now, read His Word and find out what He has to say. If you pray according to His will, He hears you and you KNOW you have the petition that you asked of Him (1 John 5:14-15). But if you doubt (that is, you don't know what the will of the Lord is ahead of time), you must not think you will receive anything (James 1:5-8).

By the way, being your own advocate before the Father is above your pay grade. Jesus is your Advocate (1 John 2:1) – the ONE Mediator between God and man (1 Timothy 2:5). You are not your own mediator! If He's the ONE, that job description is filled and you can't be another one.

The Tug of War Mindset

You see yourself at one end of a rope and God on the other end, and you are determined to have a Jacob-style wrestling match with God to get God to cave in and give you what you want.

This would be a sad state of affairs: you vs. God!

I'm aware of a famous quote from a great revivalist who used to be a lawyer, "Argumentative prayers are the best kind of praying." But with all due respect to him, argumentative prayers are NOT the way to believe and receive what you need! You receive when you agree with God, not when you argue with God!

You won't get answers to your prayers if you see God as your adversary. The devil is your adversary; God is for you, not against you (Romans 8:31)! So stop seeing God as being against you, holding back your prayer answers. You'll get your prayers answered when you agree with God, which means agreeing with His Word. Rather than "You need to heal me!" (not biblical), side in WITH God and thank Him that He already paid for your healing when Christ paid for your sins. Then receive what God already paid for. Things work when you see yourself and God as being on the SAME side of your prayer!

The Majority Rules Mindset

This mindset concludes that the way to "move God" is to get as many people requesting the same thing of Him as much as possible. This lowers God to the level of most human politicians who try to please the majority.

Yet the truth is that you can be healed with nobody else praying for you as long as you "believe that you receive when you pray."

Heaven does not have a big thermometer poster like some charities have, so that if somehow you and others submit enough requests, God will finally move because the request-counter thermometer got to the top.

The mistaken "Majority Rules" attitude is also evident in many people's prayers for revival, their idea being that God will suddenly feel like doing something that He wasn't otherwise inclined to do if there is enough public pressure on Him. Again, the truth is that God isn't holding back anything from His church. He didn't give us the keys to only half His kingdom while keeping certain blessings locked up until enough people have "wail and travail" meetings beseeching Him for those special "revival" blessings, at which point He'll hand over the keys He's supposedly holding back until there is enough prayer.

The Bug Him until He Does It Mindset

This mindset pictures God as stingy, clenching your prayer answer in His fists unless you bug Him enough, at which point He will finally give in. At first He will supposedly tell you "No," but this will supposedly change to a "Yes" after you have pestered Him sufficiently with the same request.

Jesus explicitly taught against this mentality! Matthew 6:7 says, "But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking." By contrast, "the prayer of faith" to "believe that you receive when you pray" is prayed exactly once! After that, you keep thanking God for what you already have, not telling Him that you don't have it by asking for it all over again. In fact, if you ask God for it a second time, you prayed in unbelief the first time because you obviously don't believe that the first prayer accomplished anything!

The Moses-Mode Mediator Mindset

This mindset often manifests in “revival” praying in some circles, resulting in desperate cries such as, “Spare thy people, O God, from Thy fierce wrath!” The general idea is that you now take the place of Moses as a mediator between God and men, stopping God from raining down judgment on your area. When it comes to healing, you see yourself as a mediator who must talk God into healing someone.

However, as we saw in 1 Timothy 2:5, the “mediator” position is already filled – by Jesus! There are no job openings for mediators between God and man in the New Covenant.

This mindset is just another “I’ll change God’s mind” approach, and all such approaches are inappropriate. You don’t need to change God’s mind – you need to let God change your mind with His Word (Romans 12:2)! Then you will realize that God is quite fine the way He is, as He is already willing for everyone to have the healing that His Son already paid for.

The Who-Am-I Mindset

This mindset is encouraged by a number of “Christian” sermons and songs that moan about the author’s state – so unworthy, so undeserving, such a lowly worm, just a dirty, rotten sinner, and so on. Who am I to approach God, anyway? Who am I to think that God should hear and answer my prayers?

Well, for starters, you’re His blood-washed, forgiven child, who has access to God’s throne by the blood of Jesus (Hebrews 10:19). You’re a new creation – a saint, an ex-sinner. You are worthy and deserving because you’re created in God’s image in righteousness and true holiness (Ephesians 4:24). If you think you’re a dirty, rotten, undeserving sinner, you need to read You Are Holy and Worthy to Receive Healing. If you want to know even more about who you are, read the discussion entitled Who You Are and What You Have.

The “God Knows What’s Best, So ‘Whatever’” Mindset

This mindset assumes that whatever happens is the will of God and that He sometimes lovingly allows the devil to beat the stuffing out of you because He knows that sometimes it’s best for you to be roughed up and trodden underfoot by a defeated foe. So when you feel like you’re a doormat and Satan is wiping his feet on you, you assume that “Father knows best” and take it in stride rather than resisting the devil and his works in your life.

The fact that so many people end up in hell should be sufficient proof that “God’s best” cannot be determined by what actually ends up happening. Does God have a mysterious “plan” that involves many people suffering torment forever in the lake of fire because that is somehow for their good? After all, He allows it, and by some people’s theology, anything that He allows must be His will. Is that what He thinks when He allows you to sin?

God does indeed know what's best for you – healing and health! That's why He provided it for you and made it free for the taking. So don't defeat yourself in prayer with a "whatever" mentality. If you're basically going to throw up your hands and say, "Whatever happens, I'm good with it," why bother praying at all in the first place? If God is just going to give you what's "best" and if that could include suffering illness, you wouldn't need to pray at all; you'd just accept whatever happens as His mysterious will. I sincerely hope that by reading this and other discussions and God's own Word on the matter, you never fall into that trap.

How NOT to Pray for Your Healing

If you want to make sure that you never get healed, simply follow these instructions from ill-informed and ill-bodied people around the globe. These methods are practically guaranteed to ensure that you never receive your healing. Millions of sufferers worldwide can attest to the fact that these methods do not get you healed!

Let God Know How Sick You Are

Assume that the omniscient, omnipresent, all-seeing God has a blind spot when it comes to your condition. Enlighten Him with a detailed complaint about how bad your condition is. “Oh, God, I just can’t take this pain. It’s so bad. God, it hurts all over. I feel horrible. God, I’m so sick.” Make sure that you do not switch gears from complaining into anything the Bible calls prayer.

Beg and Plead with God to Heal You

Rather than believing the clear Scriptures that say that God is already willing to heal you, treat God as if He were a meanie who would barely give you the time of day, much less heal your body. Try to “talk Him into” healing you. State all the reasons why you think He should. Start with all the nice things you have done at church. Then proceed to the nice, clean, moral life you have been living. In no event should you bring up the fact that the blood of Jesus has made you righteous, because you are seeking to establish your own righteousness and worthiness to receive healing.

Take a lesson from the world’s “foxhole faith” and start making all kinds of promises of how you will serve God if He will just heal you. Make sure He understands that your service to Him is contingent upon your healing and that you are not consecrated to serve Him unconditionally at the moment. But, oh, how consecrated you will be after He heals you.

Pray the Same Prayer at Least 500 Times

Rather than believing that you receive your healing when you pray one time, don’t believe that you receive it at any time. Simply keep trying to “bombard the gates of heaven with your prayers” despite the fact that for you as a Christian, the gates aren’t shut.

Rather than taking to heart what Jesus said about using vain repetitions like the heathen, keep praying the same prayer over and over. “Oh, God, heal me. Oh, God, heal me. Oh, God, heal me. Oh, God, heal me.” is a fine one to start with. Later you can supplement this with, “God, hear my prayer. God, hear my prayer. God, hear my prayer (etc.)” Once you get good at this, you can come up with some clever permutations of each sentence to pray the same thing over and over without being strictly repetitious: “Oh, God, heal me. Heal me, Oh God. Oh, heal me, God.” (There are 24 possibilities with these 4 words alone.) This will make it at least a little less boring for the angels that are listening to your alleged prayer (the ones you haven’t already driven away with this blather).

Let as Many People as Possible Know about Your Sickness and Ask Them to Pray, Too

The more people you tell about your illness, the better your chances of finding people who, instead of agreeing for your healing, will agree that you have a big problem. Their unbelief can start to rub off on you. Telling everyone you know gives you an excellent chance to keep using your mouth to talk about how bad your condition is, which will help you stay in unbelief.

Determine in your heart that it is the quantity of prayers rather than the faith attached to them that will get you healed. Keep telling yourself, “If I could just get more people to pray for me, God would heal me.” Ignore any sensible folks who feel the need to share the Word with you rather than to simply pray for you. Consider prayer alone, irrespective of faith, to be the way to get healed. Then it will be done unto you according to your unbelief, and you can find some more people to complain to, oops, I mean, request prayers from.

Have Others Pray “Lump ‘Em All Together” Prayers

Instead of having others pray for you by name, insist that all prayer for you be done on a “lump ‘em all together” basis. Have your church just pray for “the sick” in general instead of for you in particular. Better yet, just have them “remember” the sick instead of actually praying for them. If they must pray for the sick, make sure that they pray “Bless the sick,” “Touch the sick,” or something else that does not involve the actual healing of the sick.

Get Unspoken Prayers to Be “Prayed” for You instead of Actual Prayers

Better yet, have them just think nice prayers about the sick. “Unspoken prayer requests” are the safest because they will always be unanswered prayer requests. They are a neat device to make sure that no one else can possibly pray in agreement with you.

Just Pray in Other Tongues All Night instead of Praying Anything in Your Native Tongue

Don't bother renewing your mind with the Word of God. Just figure that the Holy Spirit always prays in faith anyway, and let Him do all your praying for you. Ignore Paul's instructions to pray with the spirit and with the understanding. Also ignore the fact that you cannot receive anything in faith when you don't know what you're praying about. Just put your understanding in neutral rather than hooking it up with your spirit. Daydream, watch TV, play video games, listen to secular music and generally get carnal while praying in tongues.

Use Tongues to Pray the Devil Away

Attempt to "pray the devil away" by praying extra loudly, and supposedly authoritatively, in other tongues. This will give the devil a good laugh, because he doesn't understand tongues. Because you are nowhere told to pray to the devil, he will enjoy the undeserved attention you heap on him. The longer and louder you go, the better he will like it. Just don't believe in your authority in Christ. (If you were to do that, you would realize that you can just speak to the devil for a few seconds rather than praying to him.)

A similar method, in common use in the body of Christ, is to speak to the devil in a commanding tone of voice, but without really believing in your authority. Then pray rapidly, in special "fear tongues," to keep him away before he can get you back.

Ask God to Take Away Your Sickness

This method is popular, and it never loses its ineffectiveness. This is usually used by those who think God made them sick in the first place, but it can also be used by Christians who know that the devil is the author of sickness but don't understand their authority in Christ. Pray, "God, do something about this sickness. God, take away this sickness. God, stop the devil from doing this to me." Forget that stuff Jesus said about speaking to the mountain yourself, and ask God to "do something" about the mountain and to "take away" the mountain.

Give God Your Sickness

"Lord, I give You my cancer" sounds really humble, too. While it's hard to imagine how exactly you would give God cancer when heaven has none, or what God would do with that cancer if He had it, it's not about making Biblical sense – it's about repeating what countless other religious people said who "gave God their cancer." It's a great way to fob all the responsibility onto God so that whatever happens, it must be what He decided to do after you gave Him your cancer. Because it's all up to Him, if you don't get healed, well, that must be His will, right?

Get Pushy with God and Ask Him What's Taking Him So Long

Determine that any delay in receiving your healing is God's fault. Demand that He hurry up. Let Him know that you consider it unreasonable for Him to expect you to exercise patience between the time you pray and the time your healing manifests in your body, regardless of what Mark 11:24, Hebrews 6:12 and Hebrews 10:35-36 say. Then get really mad and determine that He isn't doing anything for you anyway. These words will be self-fulfilling.

Better Still, Get Mad at Him for "Allowing" You to Be Sick in the First Place

Demonstrate your ignorance of who heals and who sickens by blaming God for your illness. Or at least lash out at Him for "allowing" it to happen to you. For the sake of consistency, also complain bitterly about all those years that He "allowed" you to be unsaved and all the people whom He "allows" to go to hell. Let Him know just how unfair and unjust you think He is.

Pray for God to Heal You "If It Be His Will"

Rather than taking the time to find out from the Bible what the will of God is concerning your healing, just ask Him to heal you "if it be His will." Do not read Jesus' "I will" answer to the leper when the leper asked about His will, because this might persuade you to stop using this prayer. If you want a break from praying for healing, also ask Him to help you be a witness to others if it be His will, and to help you walk in love if it be His will, and to help you stop sinning if it be His will.

Better Still, Pray for Character instead of Healing

Focus on God having God build your character through your illness. Pray for character to be developed in you instead of praying for your healing. Then you will get what you pray for. God will work on your character in answer to your prayer, but you will not get healed. God will not give you one thing when you ask for another.

Be Vague

Don't actually talk to God about healing. Instead, ask God to "touch" you, "bless" you, "comfort" you, "strengthen" you, or some other nonspecific thing. Join the many others who have gone to church services and walked away unhealed after someone prayed that God would "touch" them instead of "heal" them! For maximum non-effect, pray a beggy, pleady prayer like this one I heard a minister pray once: "Oh, please, just a touch from God. God, please let this be the night!" He didn't get any results, and neither will you.

Pray Halfheartedly, Knowing that You Can Live with It Anyway

Do not treat your illness seriously. Why should you, if it isn't a serious illness? Just pray out of sense of duty that it's the thing to do, and because you know that all the "faith people" at your church would approve. Then flesh out by watching game shows and soap operas, reading a couple of tabloids, and playing violent computer games, and don't bother praying any more about it.

Pray to Be Healed at a Future Time, and Then Declare by "Faith" that God Is Going to Heal You

Rather than believing that you receive something when you pray (Mark 11:24), believe that you will receive your healing sometime after you pray, say, next Tuesday. "I believe that I receive my healing by next Tuesday." Then tell everyone that you are in "faith" that God is going to heal you by next Tuesday. You will be able to fool most people with this one, because they won't know the difference between that and real faith. (However, this won't cut it with people who read their Bibles a lot, because they probably noticed that no one in the Bible ever used faith to receive a healing "in the future.")

Worship, Worship, Worship!

Use worship as a substitute for faith. Play pretty worship music – or songs about what we are doing for God, how we are winning cities to God, about the anointing, about the effects of our praise, about what we think we are doing to strongholds, about all the cool things God does for you, about exhorting each other to worship God, or anything at all – assume that it is really worship as long as it says "worship" on the album cover. Do not pray in faith and believe that you receive anything. Just assume that if you worship long enough, you will just get healed in God's presence. Avoid reading God's promises and statements regarding healing because, after all, who needs to know the Word when we can just get everything we need by worshipping God and being in His presence? Then advise your sinner friends that if they need to get saved, all they need to do is worship long enough and God will save them because everything they need is in God's presence. That way, they can apply the same principle you're using.

Assume that your wonderful worship just tugs at the heart-strings of God and "moves" Him to want to heal you, which you assume He didn't want to do before you started worshipping Him. Use your worship to "get God to heal you" rather than thanking and praising Him that it was already His will to do so before you started worshipping.

This method of avoiding healing is more dangerous than the others, because if you hang around God, it is possible that He will start speaking to you about His Word and His desire to heal you, and you will wise up, or worse yet, actually pray the prayer of faith. Make sure that you base your relationship with God on experience and feelings, not His Word. Wait to "feel like" He wants to heal you rather than knowing His will from the Bible.

Sing Along With Pretty, Catchy Modern Unbelief Songs

Find some songs that talk about how you will worship God even if He never heals you or someone around you, and how it's OK with you if God chooses not to heal because you will accept it His loving, mysterious best plan for you. Singing that He gives and takes away is especially good for this purpose.

Pray to Anyone other than God the Father in the Name of Jesus

Do not pray a scriptural New Testament prayer to God the Father in the name of Jesus (John 16:23-27). Ask Jesus Himself for your healing. Better still, go through Peter, Paul and Mary. Actually, any dead saint will do. Jesus said that two or three can agree about anything on the earth, and dead saints aren't on the earth. So when you try to drag one of them into things, failure is guaranteed. St. Jude is a popular go-to saint for healing, but beware – he is notorious for making you run that silly “publication must be promised” statement in the personals section of your local paper when you get your answer. If you pray, “Hey Jude, I want to be healed” and are healed, you'll have to purchase a “Thank You Saint Jude” classified ad. (Of course, you'll only use your initials in the ad so that no one will know it was you, unless your name is Xavier Quinn, in which case X.Q. might give you away, or you live in a very small town, in which case we'll all know it was you anyway. Makes you wonder, if that thing has really “never been known to fail,” why don't people sign their full names proudly?) Anyway, getting dead saints involved is a surefire way to make sure that you don't lose your disability payments – because you won't lose your disability!

Pray for Your Healing Any Other Way You Want!

Indeed, any method of “praying for your healing” is likely to keep your healing away, because you are asking God to give you something that He says is already yours in Christ. His decision was settled irrevocably when He sent Jesus to atone for your sins. So keep praying for your healing “until you get it,” which you probably won't. As long as you don't act like Jesus already “got” your healing for you, you run little risk of being healed.

If you want to fail even more in prayer, concentrate on praying prayers God won't answer.

Prayers God Won't Answer

God answers prayers, but He doesn't answer ALL prayers. The following are prayers that God will NOT answer, no matter how sincerely they are prayed.

Asking God to Do What He Already Did

MOST prayers for healing offered in churches fall into this category. People make the #1 mistake when it comes to healing by asking God to heal themselves or others. But God has already done His part when it comes to healing, and now we must do ours by receiving the gift that Jesus has already paid for. Asking God to heal, even sincerely, is expressing unbelief in 1 Peter 2:24. God doesn't need to do what He already did. It is no different than praying, "God, please save my uncle." (Many people make the mistake of praying that, too!) God already did everything He needs to do about your uncle's salvation through Christ. Now someone has to tell your uncle the gospel and he has to act on that knowledge and receive Jesus as his Lord. God won't just swoop down from heaven and save your uncle, and He won't just swoop down from heaven and heal him, either. Unless there is a special manifestation of the Spirit, healing is received by faith, and faith comes by hearing the Word of God, not being prayed for. Your unsaved uncle needs to have someone share the Word with him. Sick people need to have someone share the Word with them about healing.

Asking God to Do What You're Supposed to Do

Nothing will happen if you ask God to cast a demon out of someone, because YOU are supposed to do it. You have the authority to do it, but that also means that you, not God, have the responsibility to do it. Jesus told His disciples to HEAL the sick, not PRAY FOR the sick. He gave them power to heal all diseases. As His disciples today, if we won't act on God's Word and pray "the prayer of faith" and lay hands on the sick so that they recover, God won't do it for us. It is useless to pray, "God, make the devil go away" when He told YOU to resist the devil. If you don't do it, God won't do it for you. It's not His job to resist the devil in your life. Praying "God, give me more faith" is also useless because faith for healing comes from hearing God's Word, and it is YOUR responsibility to read His Word so that your faith has something to attach itself to. Praying, "God, stop my flesh from flaring up" would be another useless prayer because it is YOUR responsibility to keep your flesh under.

Prayers to Override Someone Else's Free Will

You cannot successfully ask God to “make” a particular person marry you, or “make” someone get saved. That person might love sin and not want to get saved. Likewise, you cannot “make” someone get healed. Some people like having something to complain about, others don't want to lose their disability checks, some are just tired of fighting chronic illness and some want to die for other reasons instead of being healed. You cannot force your will on other people.

I have met people who did not want to be prayed for because they just wanted to die. You cannot pray for their healing when they don't want it. Most of the relatives will still pray for the person's healing because they don't want to lose that person, and they'll ask you to “agree” with them for the person to live. But if the person wants to die, you can't override his free will and “force” him to get healed. What if the person is still in the prime of life? I've met such people. Some people get to the point where they're basically committing “Satan-assisted suicide” by not fighting. As tragic as that is, you can't override their free will. Remember that Paul had a choice whether to depart and be with Christ or continue on (Philippians 1:23-24), and the rest of us have the right to make that same choice. God gives you the right to make choices – even ones that are not His best plan for your life. He sets before you the way of life and the way of death and tells you to choose life (Deuteronomy 30:19-20), but He won't make that choice for you.

Prayers to Determine God's Stand on Doctrinal Matters

You can do what Paul did and pray that you would have the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of God so that the Holy Spirit will open up God's Word to you. You cannot rightfully pray to ask God where He stands on a certain issue. For example, you could not pray to find out if homosexual activity is OK, if abortion is OK, if shacking up (thus giving the appearance of evil) is OK, if everyone is saved because Jesus died for everyone, and so on, and then go by what you “sense” God's answer is. Many have been led astray by a fake “voice of God” that was really the voice of Satan when they prayed prayers like this, and the “voice of God” told them something that was contrary to the written Word of God.

You NEVER, EVER get your doctrine from impressions in prayer! You only get doctrine from the Word! If any voice tells you something, know enough to check it out with the Word before believing or acting on it. Satan tries to appear as an angel of light (2 Corinthians 11:14), but his lies will never pass the litmus test of God's Word.

Any Prayers Contrary to Scripture

You can't ask God to kill the man next door because you wish you could marry his wife. You can't ask God to make your wife drop dead so that you can end your marriage without divvying up your assets or paying alimony. You can't ask God for creative ways to get back at people who have wronged you. You can't "believe God" for a huge financial harvest if you haven't planted any financial seed. Prayers asking God to do what He already did and prayers asking God to do what you're supposed to do would also fall into this broad category.

Prayers of Unbelief

James made it clear that you must not expect your prayers to be answered unless they are offered in unwavering faith (James 1:5-8). Those awful religious "if it be Thy will" prayers are in this "unbelief" category, as are beggy, pleady prayers beseeching God to do something about your healing. The disciples had no success casting out a demon when they were in unbelief. God nowhere states that the prayer of unbelief will heal the sick, but He states that the prayer of faith will (James 5:14-16). If you don't know God's will about healing you, don't pray about your healing until you do know what His will is from reading His Word. Otherwise, you'll be like most people, wasting your time praying in unbelief. When you're sure about what His will is, you can pray in faith, believing that you receive your healing when you pray.

Unspoken Prayer Requests

If you aren't praying with your mouth, you aren't really praying. While God does know what you're thinking, just thinking prayer requests at God is not prayer. For example, you could never be saved if that's your unspoken prayer request, because your MOUTH must "confess unto salvation" (Romans 10:9-10). No mountain will move if you just think at it – it can't read your mind, so you have to SPEAK to it.

You're Not an Exception

The devil tries to torment Christians with the idea that they are exceptions, and that healing will work for everyone but them. Here are some reasons that he might suggest that you are an exception:

“You Don't Read Your Bible and Pray Enough”

How much is enough? According to the devil, it's somewhat more than you actually do. If you read your Bible for half an hour a day and pray for half an hour a day, he'll tell you that healing is eluding you because you don't read for an hour AND pray for an hour. If you do read and pray for an hour each, he'll try to tell you that you need to spend two hours on each, and so on.

Reading your Bible and praying are important, but they do not get you healed. Healing is by GRACE. You RECEIVE it; you do not EARN it by doing enough reading and praying. What reading and praying will do is convince you that healing really IS yours by grace, which is a good thing. But there are people getting healed who don't do a whole lot of Bible reading and praying; they just ACT on what the Word says.

No one whom Jesus healed in the four gospels had a New Testament, let alone spent a lot of time reading it, and no one even had the unrestricted access to the Father in prayer that we enjoy today as born-again believers. So it can't all be about taking out a stopwatch and timing yourself. Besides, your success is based on how much Scripture you ACT ON, not on how much you READ.

When Jesus “healed them all” I think you can be sure that there were people in that crowd who were not particularly devout. Healing is by offered by grace and received through faith.

“You're Not Pleasing God Enough”

Satan tries to throw you back under the Law. As far as your righteous standing with God goes, you are just as righteous and deserving of an answer as JESUS! You “pleased God enough” when you confessed Jesus as Lord! You are under grace, where everything is free, not under the Law where you have to be good enough to get something from God.

“You Are Just Unable to Believe Like Other People”

Are you saved? Then you ARE capable of believing like other people! You had to believe to be saved. You have been given the measure (fixed amount) of faith (Romans 12:3). Don't let the devil tell you that you can't believe or that you don't have any faith. Rather than sitting there listening to his lies, sock him in the mouth with Romans 12:3!

“God Just Has Some Sovereign Reason to Withhold Your Healing”

Isn't it strange, then, that JESUS never had a sovereign reason to leave anyone without healing. He was always willing to heal them ALL, and ANYONE could have come and received healing from Him. He is the same today (Hebrews 13:8), so you can be sure that He is NOT withholding healing for any “sovereign” reason.

“God Has to Withhold Your Healing so that You Don't Get into Pride or Some Similar Fault”

God never withheld healing from anyone for fear that the person would get into pride, and He won't withhold healing from you. What you do with it afterward is up to you. Jesus told some people not to tell anyone about their healing, and they went out and disobeyed Him immediately! The fact that they seemingly couldn't wait to disobey the Lord's instructions did not stop healing from flowing to them.

“It Just Doesn't Work for You and You'll Never Know Why”

It would make NO sense for God to provide healing for you, and then leave you in a condition where you could never receive it and never know what you could do differently to get it. To say that healing does not work for you is the devil's ways of saying that the WORD, which effectively works in those who believe (1 Thessalonians 2:13), ISN'T working in you. He's a liar.

When I was a young Christian, I used to think that I was an exception – that I somehow couldn't get healed because something was wrong with my faith or there was some other mysterious reason that I couldn't figure out that I failed to receive when others were receiving. I'm very glad that I found out the truth!

God's Word Is Medicine

In these verses, God tells you how to have health in all your flesh. You must reverence and listen to what His Word tells you. You must attend to His words, not just dabble in them. Then those words become health (the Hebrew word can also be translated medicine or cure) to you – not just to part of you, but “all your flesh,” including whatever part is sick.

You cannot approach the Bible with a cavalier attitude. You must reverence God's words as you would reverence God Himself, because the Bible is a personal message to you from God. You must consider what He says carefully and spend time reflecting on it. God's promises must be planted in your heart so that they can produce a harvest. (See the parable of the sower in Mark 4.) If you don't plant and water seed, you don't get a harvest, no matter how much “confessing” you do for it. This is the primary reason that so few Christians get any lasting results from hearing good Bible sermons.

If you are constantly reflecting on your situation instead of the Word, you are planting seed for a harvest of failure instead of a harvest of healing. No matter how bad your symptoms are, keep the Word before your eyes and deem it more powerful than whatever you are facing.

Observe that all of God's Word is medicine, not just “Healing Scriptures.” Just as you cannot read only “Prosperity Scriptures” in order to prosper, you cannot read only “Healing Scriptures” all the time. In some cases, the very thing that is stopping your healing, such as unforgiveness, might be treated in a Scripture other than a “Healing Scripture,” and if you read only “Healing Scriptures,” you will never get healed! (Yes, you should read things other than this book about healing!)

If you were given a prescription for your illness, you would not get healed unless you took it regularly according to the directions. God says to keep the Word before you day and night, muttering and meditating upon it. The Word needs to have the kind of place in your life that it did in the life of the author of Psalm 119. (For space reasons, I have not included Psalm 119 here!) If you do not exercise this constant attention to God's Word, you are not taking the medicine according to the instructions. You cannot blame God if it does not work the way you think it should.

I'm not saying that you should ignore your spouse and your boss and only look at the Bible all day. But you can have an attitude of reverence for God and His Word all day.

Few people are willing to take the time to store God's Word in their hearts, and that is a major reason why so few are healed through faith. You won't walk in mountain-moving faith watching TV and entertaining your flesh all the time. If you want to really know and walk in God's Word concerning healing (or anything else), it will cost you something in study time. If you want a quick drive-thru solution to your sickness, you will not find it here. God's Word is not a magic wand that you just wave, but if you will take the time to meditate on it and then act on what you know, it will work for you.

Why Jesus Was Beaten

If you look at all the New Testament Scriptures that teach that Jesus redeemed us from our sins with His blood, you should start to wonder something. We know from Scripture that blood atones for sin, so why couldn't Jesus have just shed His blood for us to complete our redemption? If all we needed was the shedding of innocent blood, He could have just had His wrists slit by the Romans and He would have shed His blood and died a sacrificial death for us. By that logic, we would have been redeemed from sin if it had happened that way. (Of course, the Old Testament foreshadowings of Jesus would have had to have been different, as it was clear that the cross was foretold in the Old Testament.)

So why did the plan of redemption have to include having Jesus' body beaten mercilessly by the Romans before He ever went to the cross? Surely He shed blood at that time, but it's hard to imagine blood not pouring out as He was nailed to the cross. That would have satisfied the requirement for the shedding of innocent blood. Then the Lord's Supper could consist just of the fruit of the vine representing His shed blood, as there would have been no need for His body to also be broken for us.

Why, in Isaiah's literal terms, did God "make Him sick" (Isaiah 53:10)? We would have been just as much redeemed from sin if Jesus had been healthy on the cross when He shed His blood. But we know that it was not a healthy Man who was nailed to that tree. He was so ruined physically before He even got to the cross that He was unable to carry His cross, which He no doubt would have been able to do if He had been healthy until He was crucified.

Isaiah tells us explicitly why Jesus was beaten. He was wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities, the punishment that brought us well-being was upon Him, and with His stripes we are healed. Jesus was physically tortured to purchase physical healing for us. We are not physically healed by Jesus' blood; we are physically healed by Jesus' stripes. Peter mentions that He bore our sins in His BODY on the tree, and by His stripes we were healed. Jesus suffered spiritually to redeem us from spiritual suffering, and He suffered physically to redeem us from physical suffering.

So Jesus was not beaten to grant us forgiveness for sins; His shed blood purchased that for us. He was beaten to purchase healing for our bodies.

That HAD to happen because Deuteronomy 28:15-68 specified that God would lay illnesses on people who sinned. To redeem us from that curse (Galatians 3:13), Jesus had to have God lay those illnesses on Him as punishment for OUR sins.

Now, is this healing that He purchased available in this lifetime, or just in the world to come? Clearly it MUST be for this lifetime, because our new bodies will never be sick, and thus, they will never need to be healed! The fact that Jesus bore “our sicknesses” and carried “our pains” proves that what He did was for this lifetime, because there will be no sicknesses or pains in heaven that He could have carried for us. Because what He bore pertains solely to this lifetime, the redemption that He accomplished from sicknesses and pains must also apply to this lifetime. When we get our new body, our old body will be “transformed,” not healed. We will get immortal replacement bodies. We won’t keep our current bodies and just have them be “healed.” So the false comforters who talk about death “being the ultimate healing” are technically incorrect, as healing is not what will happen after you die. Therefore, healing for our bodies cannot be for the next age; it must be for RIGHT NOW!

God's Word Is Seed

In the parable of the sower, Jesus said that God's Word is seed. Notice that Jesus said that it is the seed, not you, that produces thirty, sixty, or a hundredfold – or not at all if it is planted in bad soil. It is God's Word working in you that produces a harvest. If you don't plant the Word, you will no more get a harvest than a farmer would get a harvest without planting seed.

It will help you greatly to realize that God's Word, the Bible, is not a collection of philosophical ideas. It is not the definition of a system of religion. God's Word itself is alive. Jesus said, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life" (John 6:63). Hence, God's words are not mere words; they contain inherent life and spiritual power. Hebrews 4:12 says, "For the word of God is quick [alive], and powerful..." God spoke through Isaiah, "For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater: So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." (Isaiah 55:10-11). (By the way, the conclusion that God's Word is "returned" to Him when we speak it and that is why it doesn't return void is NOT justified by the context of this verse. In fact, this passage says that just as the rain and snow DO NOT RETURN to Him but do things on the earth, so His Word DOES NOT RETURN to Him (empty) but it also does things on the earth. It's not that His Word doesn't "return" empty; it's that it doesn't have to "return" at all. You can speak His Word on the earth and the angels will back that Word (Psalm 103:20) but the Word is really staying on the earth, not "returning" to God in heaven. He "sent" His Word and healed them; there is no indication that His Word that healed them had to return to its Sender to accomplish its work any more than the rain and snow would have to return to heaven to accomplish their tasks. When God commanded light to "be," His Word didn't have to boomerang back to Him before there could be light.)

Just as a seed contains within itself the ability to grow and produce a harvest, the Word of God contains within itself the ability to produce a harvest. "For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe." (1 Thessalonians 2:13).

Do You Have Ears to Hear?

In the parable of the sower, it was up to you to have ears to hear. The seed can either produce a hundredfold in you or get choked out and produce nothing in you. The difference is the ground because it's the same seed. The kind of ground you are depends upon whether or not you have ears to continue hearing the gospel.

Paul said that you are God's husbandry (farm) in 1 Corinthians 3:9. You are a farm where God's precious seed is planted. How you care for that seed will determine how it will grow in your life, if at all.

Plant Now for a Future Harvest!

It is not a good time to start looking at healing Scriptures when the doctor tells you that you have three months to live. That would be like a farmer saying to his wife, "Honey, we only have two days of food left in the house. Quick, let's go out into the field and plant some seed today!" Seed takes time to grow. The time to plant seed is before you need the harvest, not when you need the harvest!

Prayer Is Not Seed

Many sick people are under the delusion that prayer is the key to healing, and that the longer they pray, and the more people they get praying for their healing, the more likely it will be for them to get healed. That isn't the answer. The answer is for the sick person to go over healing Scriptures until he sees for himself that it is definitely God's will to heal him. Prayer is not a substitute for faith! The prayer of faith is extremely short and is prayed only once. You believe that you receive when you pray. Long prayers are generally wrong prayers.

Imagine if the ignorant farmer above said to his wife, "Honey, I've got a better idea. Let's just pray longer and harder and get more people to agree with us. Then corn will come out of the ground and we will have a harvest!" No, it is silly to think that a farmer would get a harvest because people prayed, when he did not plant the necessary seed to produce the harvest. When it comes down to it, the only thing capable of producing a harvest is seed!

Sowing Seed into Others' Lives

It is important to realize that the Word of God is seed when you minister the healing part of the Gospel to someone else. People desperately need to hear that healing was provided in Christ's atonement. Sharing this with them will do infinitely more good than just offering to pray with them about their condition. Prayer is good, but to get a harvest of healing, they need God's Word on the subject, because nothing else can produce faith – not even prayer. Praying with them is like handing them a fish, while giving them God's Word on the matter is like teaching them to fish.

Healing Pleases God

God is pleased when you get healed, and God is pleased when He can use you to help others get healed.

Jesus went around healing the sick. He said, “And he that sent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him” (John 8:29). Because He always did those things that please God, healing the sick must please God. What a contrast to the unbelief of those who say that God is pleased when we glorify Him in our sickness!

God will be pleased when you receive your healing! He is not withholding it from you. He wants you to have it, and He will be pleased to see you receive it. It is God’s good pleasure to give you the kingdom (Luke 12:32).

How to See God's Will Concerning Healing

Jesus said that if you have seen Him, you have seen the Father. What do you see Jesus doing? Healing the sick (Acts 10:38)! When you see Jesus healing the sick, you have seen the Father in action. Therefore, it must also be God's will to heal the sick.

Jesus attributed the healings in His ministry to His Father! "But the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works. Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very works' sake" (John 14:10-11). Because God does not change (Malachi 3:6), He must still be willing to heal the sick today.

"If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also: and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him." – John 14:7.

"Then answered Jesus and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise. For the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself doeth: and he will shew him greater works than these, that ye may marvel." – John 5:19-20.

"The same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me." – John 5:36.

"For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." – John 6:38.

"If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also." – John 8:19.

"And he that sent me is with me: the Father has not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him." – John 8:29.

"The works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me." – John 10:25.

"I and my Father are one." – John 10:30.

"If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not. But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works: that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him." – John 10:37-38.

"And he that seeth me seeth him that sent me." – John 12:45.

"If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin: but now have they both seen and hated both me and my Father." – John 15:24.

"I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." – John 17:4.

Given the long list of New Testament passages where Jesus healed the sick (see that section), you must conclude this: Healing is God's will for you. When you have seen Jesus, you have seen God, and Jesus healed the sick. Jesus did His works in His Father's name, proving that it is your Father's will to heal you. Healing is part of the work God gave Jesus to do, so it is still the work of God today. Knowing that Jesus always did the will of God and pleased Him, you know that healing is the will of God, and it pleases Him.

If you want to see God's will concerning healing, just look at Jesus. Then you'll see it!

Would You Rebuke a Christmas Present?

This title probably surprises you because it sounds so ridiculous. You would probably not rebuke a Christmas present. (If you would, please refer to the section on mental illnesses.) But the question in the title is needed if you believe many Christians' bad teaching that sickness can be a gift from God to help develop your character. According to this line of teaching, sickness can be like a Christmas present to you from God.

If so, Jesus rebuked this "Christmas present" in Luke 4:38-39! In other words, He did the same thing with the fever that He did with demons! Jesus rebuked demons. Look up the word used here for rebuke in your concordance and you will find that it is the same word used for rebuke elsewhere in the New Testament. Jesus' attitude toward sickness was the same as His attitude toward Satan and his demons. He rebuked sickness harshly.

As Christians, we must take our Lord's harsh attitude toward sickness and treat it the same way that we would treat Satan himself. We should be no more tolerant of sickness in our bodies than we would be of Satan telling us to sin. Regardless of what some popular "Christian" books may say, sickness is never your friend. Who wants a Christmas present that steals, kills and destroys?

Jesus showed how to deal with things that steal, kill and destroy. When a storm was about to kill Him and His disciples, He rebuked the storm. He took authority over it and commanded it to stop. Because Jesus came to do the will of God and destroy the works of the devil, the storm could not have been the work of God. Jesus did not come to destroy the works of God! He never rebuked the works of God; He only rebuked the works of Satan. Therefore, it is clear that the fever was the work of Satan, not God. Jesus would never have rebuked it if it were from God. Jesus did not rebuke presents from His heavenly Father. James said that every good and perfect gift comes from above, not that every good gift and quite a few bad ones come from above (James 1:17).

YOU Can Do Miracles

“I can’t heal you, only Jesus can,” said the healing evangelist. “I couldn’t heal the broken wing on a fly.” The people were impressed by the preacher’s humility. He was trying to minimize himself and glorify Jesus. “Don’t look at me – look at Jesus!” he continued. “Only Jesus can work the miracle you need! I can’t do anything for you myself. I can only point you to Jesus.” Wasn’t this the right thing to do – to point people away from himself and toward Jesus? As you are about to see, everything he said was wrong from a truly Biblical perspective!

Acts 28:8:

And it came to pass, that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever and of a bloody flux: to whom Paul entered in, and prayed, and laid his hands on him, and healed him.

“No, Lord,” you may be thinking, “You must have meant that Paul prayed and YOU healed him.” I remember saying that to the Lord once when I read that verse! But that’s not what God said. Paul healed Publius’s father. God did not say that Jesus healed him; He said that Paul healed him. Paul was using his delegated authority.

But this runs counter to what most people think they know. They probably have never read that verse carefully before. It does not say, “Paul prayed for him and God healed him.” It doesn’t even say that Paul prayed for Publius’s father; it just says that Paul prayed. Then Paul laid his hands on him and healed him. This is consistent with Mark 16:18: “...they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.” Paul did what Jesus said; he laid hands on the sick person. Now we can be sure that Paul did it in the name of Jesus, that is, by His authority. But this verse makes it sound as if Paul had the authority to heal the man. And that’s exactly the case. Paul had authority as a believer to lay hands on that man for his recovery and he used his authority in Christ. Paul did not ask God or Jesus to heal the man. He knew that he was an authorized distributor of God’s healing power because of Jesus.

Once you see this principle, you will start to see it in other verses too. It is never sensible to build a doctrine on one verse of Scripture. You want at least two or three witnesses. So look at the following verse:

Acts 6:8:

And Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

Because I go by my middle name (Stephen), I’ve always liked this verse! But again, it says that Stephen, not Jesus, did wonders and miracles. Of course, we understand that Stephen could not have done miracles without Jesus, because Jesus said in John 15:5, “Without Me you can do nothing.” However, it’s obvious that Paul and Stephen were not “without Jesus” because they were believers. It seems God gave Stephen credit for doing the wonders and miracles. Wasn’t that robbing Jesus of His glory? Apparently God didn’t think so.

Now consider this similar verse:

Acts 8:6:

And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did.

The pattern is becoming obvious. The verse above says that Philip did miracles. It doesn't even say that Jesus did miracles through Philip, though we understand that Philip certainly couldn't do them apart from Jesus. But Philip wasn't apart from Jesus either.

Then we see a couple things Peter and John said in Acts 3 that would almost provoke a riot among modern believers. The trouble would start with verse 4: "And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us." This flies in the face of tradition, which says, "Don't look at us; only look at Jesus, because only He can do anything for you. Remember, we can't heal the broken wing on a fly." While it was Jesus working through them, they still told the man to look at THEM, as if THEY had something. And they did! Peter continued in verse 6, "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." Peter and John were giving that man what they had. They had the authority to use the name of Jesus for his healing, and they did it!

The religious council that tried the apostles recognized that THEY had done the miracle. They did not say that it was done by GOD, but rather by the apostles. I've underlined the key words for emphasis.

Acts 4:16:

Saying, What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it.

What we keep seeing is this: God has given man the authority to work miracles. We perform them by exercising Jesus' delegated authority. Religious man has always thought, "Only God has power. We can only pray that God will exercise that power. Only Jesus can initiate healing." But God has actually given the authority to heal and work miracles to MAN, as stated in Matthew 9:8: "But when the multitudes saw it, they marvelled, and glorified God, which had given such power unto men." WE are the ones who initiate healing with our delegated authority.

Note that the word "men" is plural. Matthew didn't say that God only gave the power to Jesus. Jesus operated as a man Himself (even though He was God), so the way He ministered is how we can minister also. Remember that He commissioned the twelve and then the seventy to go out and do miracles too. And lest we start to think that it is prideful to think WE could do the things Jesus did, consider what He said about the matter:

Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do he shall do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father.

He said that YOU would do the works that He did. He didn't say that you would pray and ask God to do them. Just like Paul, just like Stephen, just like Philip, just like Peter and John, YOU would do the works. You have His authority to go do them.

In fact, He commanded His disciples to do His works, too. If you read carefully, you'll see that He never commissioned His disciples to pray for the sick! He commanded them to HEAL the sick (Matthew 10:7-8, Luke 10:8-9), not pray for the sick. Now, we can "pray for the sick" by praying that they get a revelation of the healing that already belongs to them because of what Jesus did, and we can pray for laborers to reach them with the good news that Jesus paid for their healing and that they can simply believe that they receive it when they pray (Mark 11:24). But Jesus never suggested the modern form of ministering to the sick, which is asking God to do something to heal them. Today that is unnecessary because God did something when Christ went to the whipping post and the cross; He does not need to do anything new. Jesus gave His followers authority over ALL the works of the enemy (including, but not limited to, disease), as we see in Luke 10:19. Jesus didn't say that we'd pray for the sick and they'd recover. He said that we would lay our hands on them and they'd recover – He didn't even mention prayer as being a direct part of the process!

Luke 9:6 records that the disciples went out healing everywhere. They did the healing using the authority to heal that Jesus had given them.

Paul's discussion in 1 Corinthians 13:2 involved HIM moving mountains, not praying to God to move mountains.

Mark 16:17 is a good example of how things are supposed to work. In Jesus' name – by His delegated authority – THEY (believers, which includes you) shall cast out demons. Jesus did not say that believers would pray to God to do something about demons. He did not say that GOD would cast out demons in response to their actions or prayers. Prayer is not even mentioned in this verse! He said that THEY would cast out demons, showing that He has delegated authority to believers to act on His behalf. GOD does not cast out demons in the church age – BELIEVERS do! Jesus has given you the authority to go ahead and do it right now; there is no reason to wait.

Jesus never sent any preachers out WITHOUT commissioning them to heal the sick and demonstrate the power of the Holy Spirit. In fact, He ordered His disciples NOT to go out until they were filled with power from on high!

Luke 24:49:

And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.

When Jesus sent out the original twelve apostles, He gave them power to cast out unclean spirits and to heal all kinds of sickness and disease (Matthew 10:1). He told them, "And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give" (Matthew 10:7-8). Do you see it now? He did not tell them to pray to God about the sick, to "lift up" the sick in prayer, "remember" the sick, think "unspoken prayer requests" at God or any other modern church invention. He told them to heal the sick.

Consider also that in Mark 9:38-39 and Luke 9:49-50, we learn of someone who was not among the apostles but still cast out demons in Jesus' name. Jesus said that someone who did a miracle in His name could not afterward lightly speak evil of Him. Again, He said that someone (not God) did a miracle in His name.

Consider that everything today has to bow at the NAME Of Jesus. God didn't say that everything bows to Jesus, but rather to His Name (see Philippians 2:9-11 and Notes on Philippians 2:9-11). Jesus doesn't run around the earth using His name! Believers are the ones who use the name of Jesus. For example, in Acts 3:16, Peter said that Jesus' NAME, through faith in His NAME, had healed the crippled beggar. He didn't say that JESUS Himself had done it, although there is a sense in which that is true, given that Jesus Himself backs His name (John 14:13-14).

The main problem with the falsely humble assertion that you couldn't heal the broken wing on a fly is that you will inspire no confidence in the sick people whom you are trying to help. Rather than saying, "Look at us – we can give you what we have, namely healing, which we have the authority to command in the name of Jesus," we essentially tell the sick that it's all up to God because we don't have the authority to do anything about it. Then God, who has given such power unto men, doesn't do anything in response to our "God, please heal this person" prayers because He has delegated that authority to us and He won't do for us the thing He told US to do. Most Christians think it is GOD'S responsibility to do something when in fact it is MAN'S responsibility to do something that God has given man the authority to do. It is up to MAN to determine what happens on the earth (Psalm 115:16). People moan at what God "allows" when the truth is that what WE allow is allowed and what WE forbid is forbidden (Matthew 16:19).

In the silly 1968 Monkees movie, a rock band sat in the presence of someone who spouted a lot of spiritual-sounding nonsense and then said, "But then, why should I speak, since I know nothing?" Davy Jones (the Monkees' front man) said, "Nothing? You know nothing?" The man said, "That's right." Then Davy said, "You mean to tell me we've been sitting here listening to you and you know nothing?" So Davy wouldn't listen to him anymore. If you keep asserting that you can't help someone or heal someone, he is likely to think, "You mean to tell me that I've been sitting here listening to you and you have nothing?" That would be very different from the situation with the crippled beggar when Peter told him that he DID have something to give him. You have something to give people, too!

If you like the idea of telling people that you can't help them and then not helping them, but rather pointing them to God, I have an idea for you. The next time your church does an outreach to the hungry, don't take any food with you. Tell the hungry people, "But why should we speak, since we have nothing? But we're here to point you to God, who is the Provider. If you will trust Him, He will provide food for you to eat. If you get in line with His financial program by tithing and giving, you can have abundance so that you won't starve." You can find out how many people will come back next time. Probably, they will say, "You mean to tell us that we've been sitting here listening to you and you have nothing?"

A famous faith teacher used to tell everyone whenever he did a healing line that Jesus had put His fingers on his hands, which then burned like hot coals. He said that Jesus had given him a special anointing to minister to the sick. In fact, he said that the special anointing wouldn't flow if he didn't talk about it. He wasn't trying to brag; he needed to instill hope in the people that he HAD something that they could receive. If they didn't know that he had it, they would not have expected to receive from it.

Now I'm not recommending that you simply announce, "I can heal you!" That isn't what Peter did. Peter said that he HAD something – and we know it was from God. What he did was explicitly done in the NAME of Jesus Christ. After the man's healing, Peter was quick to point out that it was not by their OWN power or godliness that the man was healed (Acts 3:12). Rather it was done in the name of Jesus, through faith in His name (Acts 3:16). What Peter HAD was the delegated authority to minister in the name of Jesus. So we aren't leaving Jesus out of the picture and taking glory for ourselves, which would actually be dangerous; it didn't work out well for Herod when he let people worship him as a god (Acts 12:21-23)!

But saying "I can do nothing" does more harm than good because the truth is that God has delegated the authority to heal to YOU as a Christian. He is not going to do it Himself without your involvement. So if people look ONLY to God, they will be disappointed when He doesn't do anything apart from you. God doesn't do things that He delegates to others, such as resisting the devil and sharing the good news with the lost. If WE don't do it, it just doesn't get done.

As people grow, they'll learn that they can receive healing the best ways – by taking it themselves in prayer or by commanding it to leave in the name of Jesus. But if they're still at the point of needing laying on of hands, Jesus isn't going to leave His seat at the right hand of the Father to lay hands on them. Either a believer will exercise his faith in the name of Jesus or it won't get done.

So don't get into false humility with broken fly speeches. Paul warned us that we could get cheated out of our reward through false ("voluntary") humility (Colossians 2:18). People need to know that YOU have delegated authority, and that YOU can do something about their illnesses. It will be a constant source of joy to you when you realize that you have that authority and you use it and see wonderful miracles!

Authorized Distributors

All Spirit-filled believers are authorized distributors of the power of God. (If you're a Christian but you are not filled with the Holy Spirit, please read How to Be Baptized with the Holy Spirit to learn what to do to become an authorized distributor.)

You don't have to just think it would be nice to be one of those people who flows in the power of God and sees the sick healed. You can BE one of those people. As a Spirit-filled believer, you are already authorized to be one of those people, though you might not realize it yet. You don't have to make the mistake so many Christians make, which is to cry out for more power. You don't need more power; you need more revelation of what the Word says. Did you notice that when Paul prayed for the Ephesians, he didn't ask God to give them more power? After all, Paul started the church at Ephesus with about 12 men who got baptized in the Holy Spirit, spoke in tongues and prophesied (Acts 19:-1-6). What did Paul ask God to give them instead of power? "...the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him, the eyes of their understanding being enlightened that they might know the hope of His calling, and what are the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of His power toward us who believe..." (see Ephesians 1:15-23).

Instead of praying that they would receive power, he prayed that they would get a revelation of the exceeding greatness of God's power toward us who believe. That revelation is what is so sorely needed today.

You might go down to the mobile phone store and see a sign that the business is an "authorized distributor" of a certain smart phone. If you want one, they can sell you one. They don't have to call the manufacturer first to get specific permission to sell you that phone. They are already authorized to sell it to you.

It is that way with healing. You don't have to "pray in" a special request to headquarters to see if it is okay for you to distribute divine healing in the name of Jesus. You are already authorized to distribute it in His name. "They (the believing ones) will lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover" (Mark 16:18) . "The works that I do, you shall do also, and greater" (John 14:12). As an authorized distributor, you can find some sick people and start distributing what you have!

Your Authority over Sickness

Your Authority over Sickness

You have authority over all sickness and disease through the name of Jesus. Jesus said that in His name, you (the believer) will lay hands on the sick and they will recover. See Mark 16:15-18.

He said that it was to our advantage that He went away and sent the Holy Spirit (John 16:7). How can this be, given all the miracles that Jesus did? Anyone who was sick could go to Him and get healed while He was walking on the earth. How can it be better NOW?

It is better now because Jesus can be everywhere through His Body, the Church. Every member of His Body is authorized to do the works that He did in His name. What the multitudes could get from Jesus they can now get from us. This includes physical healing.

Too often we underestimate the power in the name of Jesus. A man who was not a regular disciple cast out demons in the name of Jesus during Jesus' ministry, to the consternation of the disciples. (See Mark 9:38-39 and Luke 9:49-50.) Jesus then spoke of a person doing a miracle in His name. This person was not even explicitly commissioned as far as we know. He simply used the name of Jesus!

In Luke 10:17-20 we see the disciples rejoicing over the fact that even the demons were subject to them through Jesus' name. Jesus said that He gave them power to trample on serpents and scorpions and all the power of the enemy, and that nothing would by any means hurt them. Of course, sickness is one example of the "power of the enemy," so we must have power over it.

Now God works with us, just as He worked with the disciples, confirming His word with signs following (Mark 16:20).

Ephesians 1:15-23 contains many powerful truths, one of which is, "God has placed all things under His [Jesus'] feet." All things would include sickness. Sickness is under Jesus' feet. But wait a minute. Jesus is the Head and we are the Body of Christ on the earth. Your feet are not part of your head, assuming that you are not some alien on Star Trek or something. They are part of your body. If all things are under His feet, they are under us. And if sickness is part of all things, sickness is under us. We have authority over it.

Acts 3:1-16 contains an account of a man who was made whole when Peter commanded him to get up and walk in the name of Jesus. Peter said that Jesus' name, through faith in His name, had healed the man.

Read Acts 4:29-33 and see how the disciples prayed. They asked for boldness and that signs and wonders would be done by the name of Jesus. (The bolder you are about proclaiming the full gospel, the more signs and wonders you will see.) In Acts 16:16-18, a Paul cast out a fortune-telling spirit in the name of Jesus Christ.

Jesus has the name above every other name, yet He has never used that name in the earth. Believers use His name. At His name, every knee must bow in heaven, on the earth and under the earth. This verse does not say that every knee will bow to Jesus. It says that every knee bows at His name. They will not hear Jesus' name from His own mouth; they will hear it from believers' mouths! (People who glance at this passage often completely misunderstand it.) The knees bow when we use the name of Jesus, the name above every name.

Plenty of things have names on this earth. AIDS, cancer, pneumonia, diabetes and other diseases have well-known names. The name of Jesus is above these names. We have authority over these things in the name of Jesus.

James 5:14-16 contains New Testament instructions for ministering to a seriously ill person. (If you just have a cold, you can go to church. You don't have to call for the elders to come to you.) This is just as much a command as being baptized, participating in the Lord's Supper and walking in love, yet regrettably, this passage is almost never obeyed today. Rather than visiting the sick and praying the prayer of faith to raise them up, we too often "remember" the sick on a list of sick people read from the pulpit. No, these people are to call for the elders of the church, who are to anoint them with oil in the name of the Lord and then pray the prayer of faith for them that will raise them up.

If we did not have authority over sickness in the name of Jesus, how could the elders be expected to pray "the prayer of faith?" If (as some say) we should ask for a direct revelation from God concerning His will before praying, there must be no scripture on which to base the prayer of faith. Because faith comes from hearing God's Word, if you have no Scripture for something, you have no faith for it. Your prayer becomes just so much wishing and begging and pleading. Yuck.

When you understand your God-given authority, it clears up issues such as why God "doesn't do anything" about a certain case of sickness. God isn't going to do what He gave US the authority to do. WE are supposed to do something about it in the name of Jesus. Pleading with God to heal someone is like asking Him to send an angel to take out the household trash for us rather than taking it out ourselves.

John 14:12-14 promises us that Jesus will do whatever we ask in His name. He did not qualify this by saying, "unless you ask for healing." The "works of Christ" that are mentioned in this passage would specifically include, not exclude, healing!

God's Power toward You

This passage describes the great power of God that is available to you. It is not simply a description of God's great power. It's a description of the great power that is available to you!

Most people agree that God has great power. However, few notice that this exceedingly great power is toward us who believe (v. 19)! It is not just great power, but great power toward you, available to you. According to this passage, God wants you to have a revelation of that. When you see this, you will realize that God's tremendous healing power is available to you right now.

The power of God lifted Christ up high above every name that is named. Diseases have names. AIDS, Alzheimer's, cancer, cystic fibrosis, flu, heart disease, leukemia, malaria, multiple sclerosis, pneumonia... the list goes on. These names are named daily in hospitals all over the world. But the power that God is willing to exercise toward you is the power that lifted up Christ above every name that is named, including the ones named above. And if Jesus is above them, so are you, because God has raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus (Ephesians 2:6). Think about that.

If He is above them, so are you, because you are seated with Him. Of course, you walk the earth in your physical body, but as far as your authority goes, you rule and reign with Christ NOW!

All things are under His feet. Where are His feet? On the earth, because that's where His body is! Are your feet attached to your head? No. They are attached to your body. All things are under His feet, which puts them under the Body of Christ. Every sickness that is named is under the Body of Christ. You have authority over sickness and God will back that authority (when you use it) with His great power that was sufficient to raise Jesus Christ from the dead and put all things under His feet.

We should know that God can do exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think. But do you realize how He will do it? According to the power that works in you! Too often people only read Ephesians 3:20 without the last phrase. God's power is at work IN you! You should acknowledge this and expect His power to work in your body. His power does not have to fall on you from the sky. God and His miracle-working power live inside you right now if you're a believer!

Your Authority over Sickness

Who or What Causes Sickness?

First let's determine whether sickness is bad or if it is a "blessing in disguise." The answer should be obvious to any rational person. Sickness is bad. It is not a blessing in disguise. It looks like a curse because it is a curse, not a blessing wrapped up to look like a curse. Were it not for religious but Biblically clueless ministers, no one would ever believe that sickness is a friend or a blessing in disguise. You certainly won't think so after you see what God says about sickness.

Luke 13:16 speaks of a woman who could not lift herself up for 18 years:

"And ought not this woman, being a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the sabbath day?"

The devil bound her. Jesus loosed her.

Sickness Is Oppression of the Devil

Acts 10:38:

How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil, for God was with him.

The devil oppressed the people. Jesus healed them.

Sickness Is Captivity

Job 42:10:

And the Lord turned the captivity of Job...

Job's trials, which most notably involved sickness, are called captivity. We know that Satan, not God, put all of Job's sicknesses on him.

Sickness Is a Curse

In Deuteronomy 28:15-68 and elsewhere, sickness is called a curse.

Sickness Is Evil

God speaks of the evil diseases of Egypt in Deuteronomy 7:15.

Satan is the Author of Sickness

According to John 10:10, it is the devil, not God, who steals, kills and destroys. Jesus came to give abundant life, not abundant death or abundant sickness. Sickness takes away from the abundance of your life. It also steals your time (and often that of others who must care for you) and sometimes destroys your bank account in the process. No one but a detached theologian would ever say that being unable to lead a normal life because of sickness is “abundant life.”

1 Corinthians 5:1-5

In this passage, a man is to be turned over to Satan for the destruction of his flesh. Therefore, Satan, not God, must be the one who would destroy the man’s flesh. If God were going to do it Himself, there would be no need to hand the man over to Satan.

These verses may be troubling at first, as they almost give the impression that the Church is coming together to curse someone in the name of Jesus! However, this is far from the case. The issue here is that a member was engaging in serious, willful and persistent sin. He was not repenting or even being told to repent by the other members. Later in the same chapter, Paul instructs us that such people are to be kicked out of the local church and not even eaten with (1 Corinthians 5:11-13)! In many churches today, such people are even put on the worship team if they are good musicians and no one obeys this passage about what to do with such people. Then such churches wonder why they aren’t seeing miracles while they tolerate this kind of sin in the camp, contrary to the Bible’s explicit instructions.

Actually, handing the man over to Satan means to disfellowship him. This was to be done so that the person would not go to hell. Far from being a malicious act tantamount to witchcraft, this “delivering unto Satan” is definitely an act of love. It’s a bummer to have the devil eat your lunch, but it’s even more of a bummer to go to the lake of fire that is the second death. The idea was that the church would quit praying for his protection and let the devil rough him up. Once this happened, he could realize the error of his ways, repent of his sin, realize that he was not actually saved, and get saved for real. (1 Corinthians 6:9-11 assures us that people who persist in such things are not saved.) We can see later in 2 Corinthians 2:6-7 that this man did repent: “Sufficient to such a man is this punishment, which was inflicted of many. So that contrariwise ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow.” So Paul’s purpose of “delivering him to Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that his spirit might be saved” was accomplished.

Also, this is not the way to deal with a shackled-up sinner who walks in and needs to hear the gospel. After such people get saved, they can repent and you can host their wedding or see them abandon their sinful lifestyle. Neither is this how you deal with a repentant brother who has “fallen,” as Galatians 6:1 says, “Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.” The people you kick out are those who pose as Christians but won’t repent of their immorality.

When God renovates the earth, there will be no sickness on it. He also says that there will be no curse. Sickness and the curse on the earth that came because of sin go together. In the future, there won’t be any sickness to get! If God were the author of sickness, we would expect it to be around throughout eternity.

In Exodus15:26, God said that He would not put the diseases on Israel that He put on the Egyptians because He is The Lord Who Heals You. This raises an interesting question – if God won’t put diseases on you in the first place, why would you ever need to be healed by The Lord Who Heals You? The only answer is that there has to be someone other than God who would be the source of a disease from which you’d need to be healed. And we know from many other Scriptures cited in this book that Satan is behind the propagation of diseases.

Based on these verses, you can see that Satan is behind sickness and God is behind healing and health.

Sickness in fallen creation is a judgment for sin. Thank God, Jesus redeemed us from sickness by allowing our judgment to be served on Him when He was punished in our place. Although sickness is part of fallen creation, it no longer needs to play any part in our lives. We are redeemed!

If You Blow It

You said something you wish you could unsay, but you can't. You got into a sinful habit and did things you can't undo. You made a mess because you didn't use wisdom in handling a situation. You hurt someone and lost a valued relationship with careless words or actions. You suddenly realize that something you've been preaching or singing about is actually unsupportable with Scripture and it's too late to take back your CD's. You let your flesh get the best of you and you lost your position because of it. NOW WHAT?

If You Mess Up, Fess Up

First, don't try to defend something that wasn't right. It will only communicate to your hearers that you aren't really sorry for what you did. For example, "Well, yeah, I got into porn, but you know, my wife wasn't being very attentive to my needs." You'd be better off saying nothing than blame-shifting like that. Adam and Eve both tried the blame-shifting game when they were confronted and it didn't work. It won't work for you, either. If you're sorry about what you did, say so, and don't drag anyone else into it. No one else can ever MAKE you sin. On the other hand, the whole world doesn't need to know what you did, and you can just make things worse by talking about your failure around people who weren't the offended parties.

Don't take the modern approach and excuse your sin as a disease. For example, "The disease of alcoholism took root in me." I don't care who comes out and says that your SIN is a DISEASE – if the Bible says it's a sin (for example, drunkenness), then it's a sin, not a disease. Be accountable for your own bad decisions.

If You Blow It, Join the Club

The Bible is full of people who really, really blew it – and God kept using them anyway! If you blow it, God can still use you, too! If God could only use perfect people, He would never use anyone! The devil will try to tell you that your life and/or ministry is basically over, but he never was one to promote grace. He is the ultimate legalist and lying is his trademark.

It's hard to imagine a higher-profile scandal than what happened between King David and Bathsheba. Yet God continued to use David after that. David really blew it, but he really repented, too.

In one well-known high-profile incident, two signs-and-wonders preachers who planted multiple churches together got so mad at each other over the handling of a certain associate that they parted company and never worked together again. This isn't a recent story; their names were Paul and Barnabas (Acts 15:36-39). We actually don't know what Barnabas did when that was over, but God certainly did not stop using Paul. Listen, the only people God has available for His kingdom work are imperfect REAL PEOPLE who have REAL SHORTCOMINGS and sometimes make REAL MESSES!

Moses messed up when he killed an Egyptian to try to prove that he was the man who was to deliver Israel. God still used him. Moses messed up again when he struck a rock that he was supposed to speak to. That was a very serious matter to God. But God kept using Moses after that anyway!

Judah got involved with a prostitute. In unbelief, Abraham got involved with Hagar to try to make God's promise come to pass when the promise was for supposed to be for him and his wife. Abraham lied about being married to his wife and this trait got handed down by example later! Paul insulted the high priest at Jerusalem and apologized; God kept using him. Samson had various shortcomings. Peter denied Jesus three times, and I don't know how you could do something much worse than that! But God wasn't done with Peter, who went on to see thousands saved when he preached within a week after he was baptized with the Holy Spirit! He did miracles. But later Peter got caught up with the Judaizers. Even Barnabas got caught up in their hypocrisy and Paul rebuked Peter publicly for it (Galatians 2:11-14). These were the "famous-name preachers" of their day! God still used them both; Peter went on to write two books of the Bible and Paul wrote even more! John Mark deserted Paul on a mission trip, but God wasn't done with him and he was later a blessing to Paul. I'm glad that the Bible is honest about the failings of the people whom God used. It reassures us that you don't have to be some kind of Christian superhero for God to use you.

Perhaps even more shockingly, Judas was a thief and God kept using him in signs and wonders! The Bible nowhere says that "the apostles – except for Judas – did thus-and-such." You can be sure that God didn't use Judas because of his upright behavior! If God could use JUDAS even after some of the things he kept doing, surely He could continue to use YOU!

I've been around long enough to have seen serious public rifts between household-name preachers in our day. I was shocked to hear one of them disparaging the other in a service I attended in person. While the preacher did not mention the other preacher's name, he described him in a way so that I doubt that anyone in the room could have mistaken whom he was talking about. Yet God continued to use both the man who was criticized as well as the man doing the criticizing mightily, regardless of what happened to the relationship between them! Sadly, the whole mess was over some rather nonessential side issues. On another occasion, household-name preachers broke ties with each other over a rather careless and unnecessarily offensive remark that one of them made. Yet God continued to use the preachers on either side of the rift even though they weren't on good terms with each other for quite a while. On yet another occasion, preachers who worked together in the same mighty outpouring parted company over an administrative matter that had nothing to do with doctrine. But God kept using both of them, too, albeit separately.

You wouldn't be the first person to offend people unnecessarily. On a certain regrettable occasion I did it myself and it ruined what until that point was a really good meeting. You learn from your mistakes, keep going, and let God continue to use you. In another instance, I was leading worship in another country in front of a lot of people and I gave the team what I thought was a signal to do the verse. It turned out that in that country, my signal was an obscene gesture which in the United States would have been the equivalent of giving the worship team the finger! But my ministry went on.

Don't believe the devil when he says that now you're unusable now. The WORD tells us that God's gifts and callings are irrevocable (Romans 11:29). They're still irrevocable even if you blow it – because of GRACE!

If you Blow It, Remember the Cross

The devil wants you to think, "God may have technically forgiven you, but He's still upset with you for doing what you did and making such a mess of things! He can never use you after this; He'll just have to get someone else. You'll never have a worthwhile life now because of what you did. In fact, you can expect something really terrible to happen to you or your family in the next week and it will be God's way of demonstrating His displeasure." Then he wants you to beat yourself up with statements like these: "I'm so STUPID! How could I have done that? What's wrong with me? Anyone with half a lick of sense would have known better. Now I guess I have to take what's coming to me. Whatever bad thing happens now, I deserve it."

David fell into this kind of self-recrimination. When Shimei cursed him, David refused to do anything about it because he thought that GOD had said, "Curse David" (2 Samuel 16:10). He figured he had it coming, and he was right, but God is not interested in dishing out what you have coming. If He were, He would not have sent Jesus to pay for your sins!

Hear this: If God's ability to use you depends on your ability to stay out of trouble, Jesus went to the cross for nothing! If we should all get what we deserve when we sin, Jesus' bloodshed was a waste of time! Why do you think He was tortured? He KNEW you were going to blow it in a number of ways, and He took "what you deserve" in your place. If He took it, why should you take it? The whole point of mercy is that you don't get the bad things you deserve, and the whole point of grace is that you do get the good things you don't deserve! If you blow it, you are still a child of God and every spiritual blessing still belongs to you (Ephesians 1:3). You don't forfeit the blessing of Abraham (Galatians 3:14) just because you blow it!

My experience is that MOST church people still operate under an Old Covenant legalism that keeps them from walking in victory. You don't reign in life because your track record is spotless; you reign in life because you have received the GIFT of righteousness (Romans 5:17), which has NOTHING to do with how much you have sinned or not sinned.

If You Blow It, Forgive Yourself

Jesus said that when you stand praying to believe that you receive, forgive if you have anything against anyone (Mark 11:25). THAT INCLUDES YOURSELF! YOU are probably the hardest person on earth to forgive! Jesus forgave you, so who are you to refuse to forgive anyone – including yourself – when Jesus says you’re forgiven? Don’t sit around heaping condemnation on yourself, which is SO easy to do! If it’s not easy enough for you to do, the devil would like to provide assistance doing it. You need to be able to point at yourself in the mirror and say, “I FORGIVE YOU!” It may even help to do that literally; It’s helped me to do that!

If You Blow It, Don’t Punish Yourself

You have NO RIGHT to punish yourself for doing something wrong. God alone has the right to punish you (unless you’ve done something that the civil authorities have to punish). He says that vengeance is His (Romans 12:19). He chose to take out His vengeance for your sins upon Jesus. You have no business taking out vengeance on yourself – you’re stealing from God, who is the only one to whom vengeance rightfully belongs! If you’ve been punishing yourself, repent for stealing from God. (Don’t punish yourself for stealing God’s exclusive right to punish sin!)

If Someone Else Blows It, Be Like God and Extend Grace

A famous preacher was caught sinning, and some other preachers tried to lift themselves up by putting this man down. All that did was tell the world that Christians don’t love each other, but rather turn on each other and distance themselves from each other when one of them sins. Far worse, it shows that they don’t forgive. How can you preach a Jesus who forgives sinners, no matter how horrible their sins, and then turn around and stab a fallen brother in the back when he sins? Sending the message that Christians do this could actually have turned far more people away from church than the original issue did. Ask yourself, “If I blew it, how would I want the Body of Christ to relate to me?” (Matthew 7:12) and do the same for the one who stumbled. If you just say, “I would never do anything like that idiot did,” you’ve turned yourself into a modern-day Pharisee like the man in Luke 18:10-14.

“Yes,” you may think, “but doesn’t 1 Corinthians 5:1-5 tell us to drive sexually immoral people who claim to be brothers out of the church?” Well, that passage tells you what to do with unrepentant immoral people, but you can’t apply it to a repentant person who fell, in which case Galatians 6:1 applies instead. Remember, even in the case of the man at Corinth, he repented and was restored to fellowship, not blacklisted for life. Now Galatians tells those “who are spiritual among you” to restore people, but in some places there aren’t any people spiritual enough to want to restore a fallen brother. Rather than saying, “We forgive you,” they may be more prone to saying, “Off with your head!” This is a trait that needs to change. I know at least one account of a repentant fallen preacher who went on to do greater things than he had ever done before he fell. In his case, the sad part is that the “sin” he was initially hung out to dry for was extremely minor if it was even a sin at all, but his legalist brothers heaped condemnation on him to the point that for a season he was convinced that he was lost and headed for hell, and this thought drove him into far more serious sin! Imagine the reward in heaven for whoever was spiritual enough to restore him so that he could get back to building the kingdom (James 5:19-20)!

If You Blow It, Remember that God Sprinkles You from an Evil Conscience

Having a conscience is not evil – God gave it to you to keep you out of trouble. However, Hebrews talks about being sprinkled from an evil conscience:

Hebrews 10:22:

Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.

What does that mean? It means that the blood of Jesus has washed your sins away, so you need not even think about those sins anymore. If God has promised to “remember your sins no more,” you ought to have the same attitudes toward past sins. Forget about them! Being constantly nagged by something stupid you did in the past is having an evil conscience, and God doesn’t want you to be tormented that way. Even if you retain knowledge of what you did in your memory (you’re not a computer database where you can just delete a record), the guilt associated with the event should be gone. It doesn’t mean that you’re defending what you did, but it means that you agree with God that you are eternally forgiven for what you did.

This purging wasn’t available under the Old Covenant:

Hebrews 10:1-4:

For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect. For then would they not have ceased to be offered? because that the worshippers once purged should have had no more conscience of sins.

But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year.

For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins.

People's sins were only COVERED, never TAKEN AWAY, under the Law of Moses. The sins were still "there" – they were just covered. You could still have tormenting recollections of your sins because they were never "gone." But under the New Covenant, your sins are WASHED AWAY, so there is nothing to cover up anymore!

If You Blow It, Grace Is Still Grace

Now I'll get to the main reason that I included this discussion in a book about healing. It is really easy to have a "sick in the pit of your stomach" feeling when you realize that you've blown it. I've felt that more than once, and you probably have as well! But if you're not careful, you can let down your guard, get David's self-condemning attitude as described above, and allow Satan to harm you with real physical sicknesses figuring that you have them coming. It's easy to get so depressed about a mistake you made that you stop obeying God's mandates to RESIST the devil (James 4:8, 1 Peter 5:8-10). But if you just let him run roughshod over you, you'll make a bad situation worse.

Suppose a man has been looking for work for months but he can't find anything. Finally, there is no food for his family. In desperation, he agrees to be a "custom courier" for packages that he knows full well contain illegal drugs. He gets the packages to someone else, gets paid and his family eats. Now the recipient goes out and sells the contents of his packages near the local high school to the students. Within a week, one is dead from an overdose and a second drives while high and plows into a family's van, killing two family members and permanently disfiguring a third one. The man realizes that the drugs he carried were likely the ones responsible. The next time he drives somewhere with his family, he deliberately steers the car into a large tree to try to end his heartache. His wife and daughter die, but he somehow lives without any injuries. He realizes that he may be in prison for murder for a long time once the police show up and see what he did. He is able to run down the road and he ducks into a church building. He hears about the blood that Jesus shed for him, believes the good news and gets saved on the spot.

Did this man receive forgiveness for everything he did? YES! We seem to have no problem believing (correctly) that the worst sinner in town could get saved and be instantly forgiven for everything. But now, if a BROTHER IN CHRIST commits sins that are far less harmful to society at large, does that same blood provide forgiveness for what HE did? All too often we know that a horrible sinner could be saved and then welcomed to church as part of God's family, but when someone is ALREADY SAVED, we can act as if his sin is unpardonable and we want to shun the person, lest anyone think that we are a friend to someone who was caught in sin and we might be seen as guilty by association. (That never stopped Jesus from being a friend to sinners.) That double standard needs to stop, especially in YOUR mind. If Christ's forgiveness applies to ALL of a SINNER'S failures, how much more does it apply to all of YOURS, too, now that you're saved! (If you don't believe that you have God's total forgiveness yet, please read Forgiven People Can Be Healed.)

Thank God that His grace is bigger than any of your failures! If Satan tells you that you “have that disease coming” because you deserve it, you can AGREE with him that you DO deserve it and then tell him that IT IS WRITTEN that Jesus took what you “had coming” in your place when He was wounded for your transgressions and bruised for your iniquities! IT IS WRITTEN that because of the damage inflicted to HIS body for YOUR sins, YOUR body has the right to be whole– all the time. Even when you blow it!

Perfectionism and the Fear of Making Mistakes

Christians often shrink back because they fear making a mistake. If you fear making mistakes, you will become a success at doing nothing, which is actually the biggest mistake of all. Everyone makes mistakes. Join the club and get over yourself. If you make a mistake, you're already forgiven, so you won't mess up your relationship with God.

We can sometimes act as if God can only use people who make no mistakes, but the opposite is true. He can only use people who DO make mistakes. For one thing, those are the only people on the earth. For another, He can't use anyone who does NOTHING due of fear of making a mistake! I would rather get something done and make some mistakes than do a perfect job of doing nothing.

Shrinking back due to fear of making a mistake and displeasing God is not humble. It is downright wicked, because that is the word God uses to describe it!

Luke 19:20-26:

And another came, saying, Lord, behold, here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin: For I feared thee, because thou art an austere man: thou takest up that thou layedst not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow.

And he saith unto him, Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow:

Wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with usury?

And he said unto them that stood by, Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds. (And they said unto him, Lord, he hath ten pounds.)

For I say unto you, That unto every one which hath shall be given; and from him that hath not, even that he hath shall be taken away from him.

Holding back on doing the works of Jesus because you are afraid you will let God down is wicked. God wants you out there furthering His kingdom, not getting lost in a morass of self-nit-picking. God will not love you any less if you fail at something because His love for you is unconditional! You can't "fail" your way out of God's favor. He is FOR you (Romans 8:31), not AGAINST you.

Perfectionism and the fear of making mistakes show an underlying pride problem – we want other people to think we're perfect! But that's the opposite of what James said we should do (James 5:16)!

My wife and I led worship at the church we pastored. I don't think there was EVER a service where I hit every piano note exactly right or sang every word right. But the worship still blessed people. I knew someone who had professional-level, trained vocal ability, but she would fall apart if she sang even one note slightly off. You won't be a blessing to people if you're only focused on your "performance." Worship isn't a performance; you can make a joyful noise! God is more concerned with your heart than with your vocal chords.

If we're honest with ourselves, we would admit that a lot of our fear is really about looking bad in front of other people when they see us make a mistake. But the fear of man brings a snare (Proverbs 29:25). It's a great day when you do everything you do for the Lord rather than to please men. Paul even said this about others judging him:

1 Corinthians 4:3:

But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment: yea, I judge not mine own self.

Paul was almost always going somewhere where a certain faction of people hated his guts. He would never have made it in the ministry if he were preoccupied with what MEN thought about how he preached the good news.

When Paul said he judged not his own self, he wasn't saying that he failed to "judge himself" concerning conduct when celebrating the Lord's Supper or something. I believe he meant that he wasn't always trying to find faults with himself. He didn't DELIBERATELY violate his conscience, but he was willing to admit that perhaps he was making some mistakes, and he was OK with that.

1 Corinthians 4:4:

For I know nothing by myself; yet am I not hereby justified: but he that judgeth me is the Lord.

Paul was saying that he didn't KNOW of any mistakes he was making, but he allowed for the fact that he might be making mistakes that he wasn't aware of. He didn't trash himself and think that doing the devil's job of accusing him was somehow humble and holy. He didn't spend his days analyzing himself to try to find some secret mistake he was making.

God would rather that you get out there and lay hands on the sick and get one of three people healed than have you do nothing because of fear of failure and succeed in getting zero out of three people healed.

When you plan to lay hands on a sick person, the devil may taunt you with the thought, "What if nothing happens? You will look bad!" The devil wants you to focus on yourself instead of on Jesus. That is a good recipe for failure. Meanwhile, Jesus did NOT say that nothing would happen. He said that the sick would recover (Mark 16:18). You should operate with the attitude that every time you lay hands on the sick, the anointing flows through you because you believe the words of Jesus. The sick person may not always receive that anointing, but you should assume that rivers of living water are flowing through you. And if things don't work out the way you'd hoped, you died with Christ anyway (Colossians 3:3, Galatians 2:20). Dead people don't get their feelings hurt. Dead people don't beat themselves up, either.

Wanting to do an excellent job honors God, but perfectionism does not. I have had to deal with “perfectionist” tendencies. I spent two years working on my 2009 music CD release (in my “spare time”) and I kept tweaking it and tweaking it in the studio until I got what I wanted. The results still weren’t absolutely perfect, but the time came when I had to stop tinkering and release it because it wouldn’t bless anyone if it stayed in my studio forever. For a while, my wife seriously wondered if I would EVER release that CD in my entire lifetime! We can be our own worst critics. It’s good to try to figure out how you can improve, but if you turn into a perfectionist, you’ll only see the bad side of everything you do, and that’s not healthy. I desperately wanted to put out a CD that I wouldn’t cringe listening to the rest of my life, thinking, “I could have fixed that.” I did succeed in that despite the fact that it was never going to be “perfect.” I even had a professional mastering engineer tell me that I was too picky. That’s getting over into perfectionism when that happens! There’s more to a CD than being “technically perfect.” I listen to some CD’s where I notice slight flaws, but I still enjoy them. In fact, any studio engineer can tell you that there is such a thing as being “too perfect.” You can fix slightly out-of-tune vocals with pitch-correction software, fix millisecond drum timing discrepancies by “quantizing” the drums, use the best takes of each individual phrase from 10 or more tries, adjust the volume on tracks to make each note have similar loudness, and I did quite a bit of that stuff. But if you’re not careful, you can destroy the “humanity” of a recording that makes people be able to relate to it. If a computer makes things totally perfect, it can sound to people like a computer, not a real person, made the recording!

Not much will be perfect on this side of heaven, no matter how hard we try. When I pastored, I learned in a hurry that you can’t please everyone. The room is too hot, the room is too cold, the music is too loud, the music doesn’t rock enough, the music is too modern, the music is not trendy enough, we do the same songs too much, we introduce too many new songs, the food in the fellowship hall doesn’t cater to vegetarians or the gluten-free crowd, putting dessert-type food out is too much of a temptation to those on diets, we have too many events, we don’t have enough events to meet everyone’s needs, and so on ad infinitum.

So even if YOU think you’re doing a perfect job, the fact is that you’ll probably be the only one who thinks so! I once took a demo recording of a song I wrote to a sound engineer who had his own studio. I asked him what I could do to improve my vocals, and he replied without hesitation, “Have someone else sing them!” But I went ahead and did my own vocals anyway on my CD, and I’m glad that I did. If I had felt like I had to please him, my CD would never have come out the way that it did, which I thought was quite good. Someone else could have done a more technically “perfect” job, but it wouldn’t sound like ME anymore. No one will have passion for a song like its author! Not everything that SOMEONE ELSE thinks is a mistake really is one. It’s good to listen to constructive criticism, but if you fall to pieces every time someone says you’re doing something wrong, you’ll never do anything significant. You have to be able to say, “Even if I don’t do everything perfectly, it’s OK. God can still use me to bless others. I will not spend my life going mote-hunting for failures.”

More recently, it seemed that every time I thought I was satisfied with this book, I would learn something else and want to put that in here, too. This process went on until the very day I released this book! I had friends who seemed convinced that I would NEVER finish this book because I was always continuing to work on it. Of course, I'm not going to stop learning more about the Word, but the time had to come when I said, "That's enough – let's publish this!" I am sure that this is NOT the "ultimate" book on healing and related topics because I will learn more things tomorrow that aren't in here! But at least I can put out an updated version at some point if I want to.

Wanting to be excellent is a virtue, but perfectionism will cripple you. The Holy Spirit will not flee if you hit a wrong note or mess up a word in a song or cite the wrong chapter and verse numbers in a message. The world will not end if you don't say exactly the words to a sick person that you think you should have said upon later reflection. The kingdom of God will go on, and so must you. Paul pressed toward the upward call of God (Philippians 3:14). You need to keep your eyes on where you're going, not on where you've been. The perfectionist always second-guesses himself and keeps looking in the rearview mirror with remorse, thinking, "I could have done better." That is the OPPOSITE of the example Paul set for you. I'm sure Paul wished that he had never persecuted Jesus, but the biggest problem with the past is that you can't change it! But you CAN change your future by making right choices in the PRESENT.

Faith in the Word and the Spirit of Faith

Attitudes and lifestyles are contagious. 1 Corinthians 15:33 tells us not to be deceived – bad company corrupts good morals. If bad company can rub off, so can good company. Proverbs 13:20 tells you that if you walk with the wise, you will be wise, but if you are a companion of fools, you will be destroyed. You need to associate with those who will help you in your faith walk, not those who will talk you out of your inheritance in Christ. Getting around those who believe God gets you used to seeing faith in action, and used to seeing God come through. This can be a tremendous confidence-booster for you.

Here is the point I want to make: Do not simply read this book and pray on your own! That is a big mistake! You were not designed to function on your own apart from the Body of Christ. You need others and they need you. 1 Corinthians 12:21 makes this very clear. Fellowship with others who will encourage you in your faith walk. Associate with those who have the “spirit (attitude) of faith” and speak and act on God’s Word. Their testimonies will not produce faith, but they will greatly build your hope and encourage you. Satan picks off lone rangers. Don’t be one of them. A brother or sister in Christ may have the very way to word something so that you see it even though you’ve missed it for years.

Don’t be confused by the term “spirit of faith.” It’s not another spirit that’s a fourth member of the Trinity! It just means an attitude of faith. You will find that the spirit of faith is contagious. (So is the “spirit” of unbelief.) When you get around those who have it, it will rub off on you. Then it will start to rub off on others! It’s hard to describe how it happens, but it definitely does. (As the old-timers like to say, some things are better caught than taught, and better felt than telt.) I love being around people who believe God and get results. It encourages me. When you get around a church full of people like this, you feel like they are doing more for you than your preaching could do for them.

So, build your own faith in the Word. But make sure that you associate with others who have the attitude of faith. You will then find the same spirit of faith operating in you – you will believe and therefore you will speak. You’ll talk faith instead of doubt and unbelief. You’ll start to act like those with whom you associate.

Healing Does Not Require Great Faith

Do not get “hung up” over the size of your faith. Receiving healing does not require great faith. You just have to act on the faith you already have. An important way to act on the faith you have is by speaking.

The apostles asked Jesus, “Increase our faith!” Jesus did not say, “Okay, here’s some more faith.” Instead, He said, “If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye might say unto this sycamine tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you.” (You can read the account of this in Luke 17:5-6.) Notice that itty-bitty faith could throw a big tree into the ocean if you attach words to it. Faith is like Tabasco sauce. A little goes a long way. Getting more faith was not the issue. Speaking was the issue.

Jesus also said to His disciples, “If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you” (Matthew 17:20). Notice that itty-bitty faith could move a mountain from one place to another if you attach words to it.

Walking in this faith is not only for “faith giants.” Anyone can do it. Jesus said, “Whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass, he shall have whatsoever he saith” (Mark 11:23). So anyone can do great exploits by faith, if he attaches words to it.

Whether you realize it or not, faith-filled words are the most powerful force on the earth today. God spoke everything into existence! We sometimes emphasize the faith part, but Jesus really emphasized the speaking part. If death and life are in the power of your tongue (Proverbs 18:21), surely sickness and healing are also in the power of your tongue. James said that if you can control your tongue, you can control your whole physical body (James 3:2).

The people who had “great faith” in Jesus’ ministry were those who believed that Jesus could speak and something would happen. The centurion and the Greek woman had “great faith” and did not need Jesus to make a personal visit to the person needing healing. His word was good enough for them. They believed that His words had power and authority, and that when He said something was done, it was done.

The next time the devil belittles you for your small faith, remind him that faith the size of a mustard seed can move a tree or a mountain when you attach words to it.

How to Build Your Faith

There is only one effective way to grow in faith for receiving more particular blessings:

“So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God” – Romans 10:17.

If you want to have more faith to receive more blessings, you need to hear more of the word of God. Even if you mentally acknowledge what it says, you must continue to reflect upon it and speak it to yourself. This hearing is not a one-shot deal where you hear it once and go your merry way. This refers to a process of hearing the Word repeatedly. The Word itself produces faith – it is called the “word of faith!”

Romans 10:8:

But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach;

Faith will come automatically when you keep hearing God’s words. They are not mere facts but spirit and life. When you get full of the Word, you get full of faith without consciously trying to do so! This is so simple that it’s amazing more people don’t see this, so they often resort to the ineffective means shown below. God’s word is the “word of faith.” Faith and the Word go together.

While some believers obsess with “building strong faith,” the issue is not as much needing more faith than acting on the faith that they already have. The man in Acts 14:7-10 was an example of this – he HAD faith to be healed, but he just wasn’t exercising it.

Here are some ineffective ways to try to get more faith:

Praying for More Faith

This didn’t work for the apostles, and it won’t work for you.

Luke 17:5-6

Here Jesus pointed out that you do not need “great faith” to do something, but you need to act on the faith that you have, even if it’s as small as a mustard seed! You do the majority of acting your faith with the words of your mouth. “Ye might say unto this sycamine tree....”

Trying Harder to Believe

This involves a struggle to “make yourself believe” something. Prepare for a lot of frustration and not much faith. God never commanded you to try to believe anything. He just commanded you to believe His words.

But there is a difference between believing His words and just trying to believe that you are healed. If you have no Bible basis for believing that you can receive healing as a gift from God, you will not develop more faith. You will stay frustrated and sick! If you still have doubts that the God of the Bible has made provision for your healing, the solution is to continue to listen to and read His statements about the subject. You will find that you will start believing, and it will seem natural rather than seeming like an impossible struggle.

Praying in Other Tongues

You are commanded to build yourself up on your most holy faith (Jude 20), but that verse does not say that speaking in tongues produces faith. It can help you enter into rest and become sensitive to the Holy Spirit so that you can hear the Word better, but faith still comes by hearing the Word, not by praying in other tongues. When you pray in other tongues, you are speaking mysteries that your mind does not understand. You will charge yourself up to act on whatever faith you have, but you will not get more faith.

Denying Your Circumstances

You will not develop faith by trying to forget your problems or by pretending that they don't exist. Doing so is not faith at all and only gives you practice lying to yourself. Faith does not deny that the problem exists; faith denies it the right to continue existing based on what God says.

Looking at Improvement in Your Body for Encouragement

Faith is based solely on God's promises, not on any apparent improvement of your condition. It does not matter to faith if you seem to be getting better or worse. You can rejoice at improvement, but remember that it is faith that creates improvement. Then you won't be shaken off your stand of faith if suddenly symptoms worsen or reappear in your body.

Hearing Exciting Testimonies

Testimonies will excite you and motivate you to believe God for yourself, but you cannot base faith on anyone else's experience. The fact that God healed someone else with your condition does not mean that you will receive your healing. What will you do if you hear that someone else with your condition died? Your faith must rest solely on God's Word. Then, even if no one else you know gets any results, you still can. Of course, to the extent that someone's testimony involves the Word of God, your faith will be built by hearing those parts of the Word that someone else believed.

The other problem with testimonies is that many are given at crusades by people who were healed by a special manifestation of the Spirit, not their faith. Someone could give a wonderful testimony of receiving this way, but you have no guarantee apart from your faith that YOU will receive such a healing. It's quite possible that in His mercy, God will suddenly heal an unbeliever who has no idea what's going on. God is looking for believers to BELIEVE rather than relying on special manifestations of the Spirit to receive healing.

Condemning Yourself for Your Little Faith

You will never get anywhere by chiding and belittling yourself. "Oh, I must be a 'ye' of little faith. God must be so displeased with me. I really am a failure at believing God. I should have more faith. What's wrong with me?" You will never develop great faith if you keep tearing down what little faith you have. You will just make yourself miserable. Besides, you'll be doing the devil's job of accusing and condemning you. As David did at Ziklag, you need to encourage yourself in the Lord, not discourage yourself!

Worshipping for More Faith

God does want you to worship Him, and failure to do so will definitely hinder you in every area of your life. However, you do not get faith by worshipping God. Worship is an expression of the faith that you already have, not a means to get more. If you are in the hospital, simply playing worship music all the time will not help you get out. It can help you stay focused on God and His Word, but the biggest thing you need to do (if you are coherent enough to do it), is to continue hearing God's Word on the subject of healing.

No Limits

There are NO LIMITS on what God can heal! He has provided healing for EVERYONE of ALL conditions, no matter how drastic, life-threatening or seemingly impossible to heal. This includes various named genetic “syndromes,” and conditions that involve missing body parts. The limits are at our end, not God’s end:

Mark 9:23:

Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.

Jesus said those words to the father of a boy who certainly seemed like he was beyond hope. Not even the disciples managed to get him cured of his demonic condition. But the issue was that the disciples did not BELIEVE – NOT that the condition was impossible to deal with. Obviously it wasn’t impossible because Jesus dealt with it, and He was none too pleased to find out that His disciples hadn’t gotten the job done by His authority in His absence.

Luke 1:37:

For with God nothing shall be impossible.

If NOTHING is impossible, the healing of Down’s Syndrome, Tourette’s Syndrome and anything on the “Autism Spectrum” is NOT impossible, and we should never for a minute think that these conditions cannot be healed in THIS life. Jesus healed ALL manner of sicknesses, so that would include these particular conditions. What He did then, He can do now through His Church – He’s just looking for us to believe!

However, our flesh tends to think, “Oh, that’s a REALLY HARD case – I don’t know if we’ll ever see God heal THAT kind of thing.” That’s why we must renew our minds with the Word – so that our minds side with our spirits instead of with our flesh. Your spirit (if you’re born again) will ALWAYS side with the Word.

Mark 11:23-24 makes clear that God isn’t putting any limit on what we can command to leave or what we can “believe we receive when we pray.”

Your MIND tends to limit God. That must be the case, because God is able to do exceedingly abundantly beyond what we can ask or think (Ephesians 3:20). What do you THINK that God can and WILL heal in this life? He can do exceedingly more than what you THINK He can do – even if you think big, which I want to encourage you to do! So if you can THINK of a “hard case” where someone needs to receive healing, God can take care of that case and even harder cases!

Matthew 16:19:

And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

Do you see any limit imposed in the verse above? If God didn’t limit it, neither should we!

John 15:7:

If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

Do you really believe Jesus? If you see a dire need for healing, don't you want to see it healed? Of course it's YOUR WILL and it's GOD'S WILL as well. So you should ask and receive so that your joy will be full, as we'll see below!

John 16:23-24:

And in that day ye shall ask me nothing. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you.

Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name: ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full.

Once again, we see that word whatsoever in the passage above. Does that sound to you like God has put a limit on His promise? No, it's the opposite – God is saying that there is NO LIMIT because you can ask the Father for ANYTHING in Jesus' name.

At this point, the doubters who obviously don't believe the Lord Jesus on this subject will sneer, "Does that mean that God will give you the Eiffel Tower if you ask Him to give it to you?" No, Jesus said that you were to ask in HIS NAME. That means that whatever you ask is something that you are pre-authorized to ask for from Scripture. That would INCLUDE healing, but it would NOT include the Eiffel Tower.

1 John 3:22:

And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight.

As is discussed elsewhere, this means that if you keep your conscience clean, you have the boldness to ask for "whatsoever" and receive it! (It is not a new works gospel that God rewards you if you do enough good works.)

1 John 5:14-15:

And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us:

And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him.

So again, WHATSOEVER you ask, if it's within the boundaries of Scripture, you can receive! When you encounter a sick person (or if you ARE the sick person), healing for the sickness is DEFINITELY God's will, so you can "ask according to His will" and believe for that healing to take place.

Matthew 19:26:

But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible.

Mark 10:27:

And Jesus looking upon them saith, With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible.

These last two Scriptures assure you that there are things that MAN considers impossible because MAN just cannot do them, but GOD can do those things that man has written off as impossible. What kind of “impossible” condition do you know of? With God (and you ARE with God), healing those conditions IS possible!

There are more Scriptures along these same lines in the FIRST BASE section of The Baseball Diamond of Healing. I encourage you to read through those Scriptures as well.

Healing and Paychecks

Under the Old Covenant, the blessing of God was a paycheck for good behavior. Everything depended on YOU. If you followed God's law closely, you were rewarded. If you didn't, you were punished. If you wanted to walk in God's blessings, you had to "measure up." God enumerated many specific blessings that would come upon you if you obeyed Him and many specific curses that would come upon you if you didn't.

Many believers still live with an Old Covenant mentality. They are convinced that God will bless them according to their own goodness. This mistake will stop you from receiving healing. Moses gave the Law but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ (John 1:17). New Covenant healing is not a paycheck handed to you for a job well done.

Under the New Covenant, Jesus earned a paycheck and handed it to you! What you get now is based on HIS goodness and HIS track record, not yours. The blessings of God were bestowed on you and became legally yours the day you received Jesus. You don't have to earn the paycheck – someone else already earned it for you and gave it to you.

Faith cashes Jesus' paycheck. You could walk around all day with a natural paycheck in your wallet and never benefit from it. You only get a benefit when you cash it. Likewise, the blessings of God are yours in Christ, but you won't get to enjoy them until you cash His paycheck by extending your faith to take what God has freely given you in Christ. That is your part. Simply act on what God said in His Word – Jesus paid the price to redeem you from all sickness and pain and He offers healing freely. Take it by faith when you pray.

How do you know if you've learned the paycheck lesson? If you "get it," you will never again try to convince God that He should heal you! Instead, you'll be thankful that He provided healing without regard to your works, and you'll receive His free offer.

Healing and Deliveries

Let's consider three scenarios. In the first scenario, you want a product that you saw somewhere. You arrange with the company to get it shipped to you. The company ships the product and now you wait until the delivery person shows up with it so that you can receive the package and enjoy it. In the second scenario, you have already ordered the product from the company and the shipping department has shipped it. The delivery person just showed up. Now you contact the company's sales department to get the product shipped to you. The third scenario is identical to the second scenario, but in this one, you don't call the company – you just take the package from the delivery person's hands and start enjoying the product.

The second scenario is ridiculous, but sadly, that scenario is where most Christians find themselves with divine healing! The first scenario sounds more reasonable, but it doesn't describe receiving healing any better than the second scenario. Only the third scenario is a picture of what to do with divine healing.

In both of the first two scenarios you are petitioning the company for something. Most people petition the Lord for healing in the same manner – and that is why nothing happens! What people fail to realize is that your healing was “shipped” when Jesus paid for it a long time ago, and the delivery person is just waiting for you to take it into your own hands. You don't have to approach the sales department and pay for the shipment. JESUS already paid for the shipment and had your address put on it. He took care of the shipping. It's now at your house waiting for you to take it.

In Mark 11:24, Jesus said to believe that you RECEIVE things when you pray. But you can only receive a package that has already been shipped! Jesus did NOT tell you to ask God to SEND what you want when you pray. There's a big difference. Healing has already been “sent” and now it is yours to receive. The word receive in Mark 11:24 is the Greek word lambano, which literally means to TAKE. It most certainly does NOT mean to “beg God to SEND.”

You could not have RECEIVED a text message from me today if I didn't SEND you one. You can only RECEIVE a text message that has already been SENT. Likewise, you RECEIVE healing because God already SENT it to you. It is part of your inheritance in Christ for you to enjoy. God already decided that you should have it. He paid for it by sending Jesus, and now healing has been SENT. Will you receive what is right in front of you? It's there for the taking.

The Importance of a Good Local Church

If you want to keep walking in victory, you need to be part of a good local church where healing and faith are taught accurately. Sadly, too many Christians who DO believe in healing fail to attend a church that also believes in healing. They pay a price for that. Unbelief is insidious. I know people who used to attend good churches that preached that healing is provided for everyone because of what Jesus did. They went elsewhere (for different reasons) and listened to unbelief from the pulpit. They said that they knew how to separate the wheat from the chaff, and that they wouldn't get caught up in unbelief. But they did! They'd make statements that would make me cringe, and would have made THEM cringe in times past. If you hang around people who don't believe in healing and make them your closest friends, you are not going to walk in much healing yourself.

When you're in a good church (I am), you get inspired and built up by the messages every service. The songs don't promote worn-out traditions of men. The other people in the church encourage you to believe God and receive all that He has for you, and you encourage other people. You also learn to walk in love because there will inevitably be someone that rubs you the wrong way (especially an unbeliever or a new believer). You can't learn that at home watching Christian TV! There is a good corporate anointing where there is an atmosphere of faith. The testimonies of others inspire you and your testimonies inspire others.

I remember being at a church Christmas party where they assigned seats. To my horror, I found myself next to one of the most loquacious, self-centered people I'd ever met, whose kids were little terrors. My immediate thought was, "No, Lord, ANYONE but HIM! This won't be a merry Christmas for me tonight!" I gritted my teeth and FORCED myself to walk in love toward that man. I listened when I didn't want to listen and smiled when I didn't want to smile. But you know, maybe that man hadn't really known much love in his life, but he found it at that church. He began to change. He ended up totally on fire for Jesus, was promoted to an important position and became a precious brother with whom I looked forward to chatting! You just can't have that kind of thing go on (on either end) if you just stay at home and listen to TV preaching and read books (even this one).

One study claimed that 90% of churchgoers choose their church for reasons other than the quality of the teaching. To me, that means that 10% have the right approach. Apparently, more people choose church based on its "cool music" (or lack thereof) than based on its teaching, and some even choose one based on its basketball opportunities. But having the most modern basketball court does not mean that you should travel there – if all you get is dribbles of the Word, there is no net benefit.

It used to be hard to find good churches, but it's a lot easier now. God has raised up pastors who preach His Word and love His people all over the place. No one today has a reasonable excuse not to go to a solid faith-teaching church. But there are plenty of unreasonable excuses:

Excuse #1: With Today's Technology, I Can Just Get Built Up Watching Christian TV and Videos and Reading Good Books

Yes, you can get built up, but Brother Faithbuilder on TV cannot come lay hands on you or counsel you. Sister Revelator will not be in the Emergency Room with you at midnight the way a real pastor would. (When I pastored, I became quite familiar with the local hospital, and it was a privilege to believe God and get people out of there.) Also, you can't learn to relate to people properly sitting in a chair in front of a television. You'll never have to learn to deal graciously with Rude Evan the Motor-Mouth who just got saved and started attending your church. Most importantly, you can't build up the body if you just stay at home. This life isn't all about you – it's more blessed to give than to receive. God has given EVERYONE a gift to share with His Body, but you can't do that if you won't be AROUND His Body! Knowledge puffs up, but love builds up.

Excuse #2: There Are No Good Churches in My Area

Then MOVE! I've done it solely for that reason and if you're smart, you will, too. Also, if "your area" consists of several blocks, I would urge you to consider the saying, "A church alive is worth the drive." I've driven a long distance back and forth to go to a good church, and if that's what it takes, you should, too. On the other hand, I've seen people pay a price for going to a conveniently-located dead little local church when if they drove half an hour to an hour, they could go do a really good church where the works of Jesus are being done. Later, when they need to walk in victory, they end up firing blanks at the devil because the crummy place they attend isn't teaching them much that is useful.

If can't find what you consider a good church anywhere, be assured that the problem is YOU! You won't find a perfect church anywhere because all churches consist of imperfect people like you who are at various stages of their Christian growth.

Excuse #3: The Romantic Pickings Are Better at a Certain Non-Faith Church

I've been shocked how often this becomes the motivating factor behind church selection. What you will find, as others have (sadly), is that you can find a sweet romantic interest who doesn't believe the Word any more than her pastor does. If things go anywhere with her, guess where she will insist that you go to church! You'll get to raise your kids in an environment of unbelief. You should pick a church mainly based on the quality of the teaching (other factors, like whether the people are loving, matter also). Trust God that He's able to find you a mate (if that's what you want) while you're going to a GOOD church!

Excuse #4: The Church Is No Longer Relevant; the Action Is on the Street

A lot of churches do manage to be irrelevant because they don't present Jesus properly (or at all) to outsiders. But there are plenty of good ones. God has given pastors until we all become a "perfect man," which means that there will be a need for pastors and their churches until Jesus returns. The church can never be irrelevant to God. God would rather move through a strong local church than have to do everything outside of church because the churches won't hear what the Holy Spirit has to say.

Excuse #5: I'm Too Busy – The Kids Have Soccer Games on Sunday!

If you want your kids to become backsliding buffoons, teach them by your bad example to seek first the things of the world and only seek the kingdom of God with their nearly nonexistent "spare time." They will learn from your actions that God and His people are really not important in the grand scheme of things. If you have any wisdom, you will take the kids with you to church despite the fact that they might not get to play in soccer matches. And as for you saying you're too busy, well to quote Jesus, "YOU have said it!" If you're too busy for church, you're too busy. So get less busy and start honoring God instead of violating Hebrews 10:25 every week.

Excuse #6: God Has Me in This Currently Dead Church to Be Its Great Revival-Bringer

No, Satan has convinced you to stay in your currently dead church to waste your time and energy spinning your wheels for nothing. I've met so many Christians who think God called them to overhaul some pathetic church. It NEVER works, so stop kidding yourself and get out of pride and out of that church. If the pastor doesn't want a move of God, there will be no move of God. PERIOD. Your faith and prayers cannot override the pastor's free will. No church will ever rise above its pastor. Besides, you're an idiot to go somewhere where YOU have to tell the PASTOR what's what. That pastor cannot possibly pastor you if you think that you have to pastor the pastor. You won't grow, except in unbelief, which is being preached with the help of your tithes, offerings and attendance. If you want a revived church, start attending one that is already revived! If there isn't one in your area, see the answer to Excuse #2 above.

Excuse #7: I Am Part of the Universal Church

Yes, you are, and you also are commanded (Hebrews 10:25 again) to be part of a local expression of the Universal Church.

Excuse #8: I Obey Hebrews 10:25 by Getting Together with Believing Friends around My Kitchen Table

Who is the pastor of your little bunch? Who is spiritually accountable before God for what goes on there? We all need a pastor. Is there a God-called pastor at your kitchen table? Some church plants start as house meetings, and that's fine, but real churches have a vision to outgrow that kind of setting! If all you have is believers who have fun little get-togethers when they feel like it, you do not have a church – you merely have a collection of unchurched people who happen to be in the same place at the same time. Real churches have God-given pastors and God-given vision; they aren't just friends who sit around a table prophesying great things to each other, usually getting wackier by the month because they have no shepherd to lead them away from trouble and from every wind of "new revelation" doctrine, which such groups are notorious for!

The Kingdom of God is Here NOW

When Jesus commissioned people to go out and preach, He commanded them to proclaim something, not just lay hands on sick people. He said to proclaim that the kingdom of heaven is at hand (Matthew 10:7). How different that is from what most people, even ones who believe in healing, are preaching today! There is a big emphasis on “revival,” a word that is not even used in the New Testament!

Rather than proclaiming that the Kingdom is here now as Jesus commanded, most people put it off into the future and talk about the greatest revival ever to hit the earth that is “coming” at some point in the future. I have heard this for decades. I told God a long time ago that I am not waiting for some revival to hit; I will just go do the works that Jesus commanded right now. And I have been privileged to see results that many people would associate with some kind of “sovereign move of God,” except that it wasn’t sovereign at all. While man waits and waits and prays and prays for a move of God, the truth is that God is waiting for a move of man! He is waiting for people to just believe His Word and go act like it’s true. Anywhere where people will do that, there will be a move of God, because God moves through man, not independently of man! He has to, because He gave man dominion over this earth. He gave the earth to the children of men (Psalm 115:16), which means that He can’t just barge in and do whatever He wants whenever He wants.

Some people think that if they study past revivals, they will somehow qualify to flow in a new revival because they will be revival experts or something. I beg to differ. No “move” has ever been the same as a previous one anyway. I know people who have tried to copy what people did years ago, assuming that if those actions led to revival, they will lead to revival today. Their attempts didn’t work, of course. What they’re missing is that what they did back then may well have been what the Spirit was inspiring them to do, but that doesn’t mean that He’s inspiring the same specific action today in a different age and a different culture. My advice to you is that you major a lot more on studying the New Testament than you do on studying past revivals. Faith comes by hearing the Word, not by studying interesting experiences from the past, though they can at least inspire us. And of course we need to do the only thing that Jesus told all seven churches in Revelation 2 and 3 to do: “He who has an ear, let him hear what the Spirit says to the churches.” We need to do what the Holy Spirit is telling us to do NOW, not what He told others to do way back when.

Many today also have an unhealthy obsession with figuring out where this incredible revival will start. The answer is easy – it will start in the immediate vicinity of whomever you ask, in some cases at his church, because someone has already come along and prophesied it. There are “prophets” who pretty much proclaim at your church (if you’re silly enough to let such people in) that your local fellowship will be the epicenter of the last-days, end-time worldwide move of God, and surely it shall emanate out from your church like the spokes of a wheel. The trouble is, that’s the same thing they told the last several churches they visited that are nowhere near yours.

Even in New England, where I lived for decades, I can think of several churches that have had prophecies like that; there are probably many more but I'm only counting the ones I've heard in person. They were all somehow going to be "the" catalyst for revival in New England. (Interestingly, at least one of these churches doesn't exist anymore, though I witnessed a well-known preacher give a "like-spokes-of-a-wheel" prophecy over this now-defunct church when he visited it many years ago.)

In fact, even in my prior home state (Maine), I have heard the following: (1) Revival shall start in the western mountains of Maine and spread across the state like a fire (this was given in the western mountains of Maine), (2) Revival shall hit the coast of Maine like a tsunami and shall spread inland throughout Maine (I heard this on the Maine coast where I used to live) (3) Revival shall start in Aroostook County (the northernmost part of Maine) and sweep south all over Maine from there (this was prophesied in Aroostook County) , (4) Revival shall come in through the East Gate – the easternmost part of Maine out by Calais, Eastport and Lubec and spread westward (you can guess that this one was NOT given in Portland) (5) Revival shall sweep up the coast from Kittery (the southernmost town); you can guess that this one did not originate in the western mountains, Eastport or Aroostook County. You get the idea. We had people in Maine tell us that God always "comes in through the eastern gate," so the end-time move of God MUST start in the easternmost place in the United States. However, if you get technical, St. Croix (U.S. Virgin Islands), is part of the United States (it's a territory) but it's farther east than Maine. Does that mean that St. Croix will be the true Eastern Gate? No, wait, if you get even more technical, the western Aleutian Islands are across the International Date Line and are thus technically farther "east" than anywhere else in the United States. including St. Croix! Maybe the Aleutian Islands are the true Eastern Gate from where revival will flow, though I don't think I want to move there and find out. It makes more sense to drop the whole Eastern Gate thing, frankly, and just start "doing" revival rather than debating where it will originate.

I have also heard reports that the big move of God will (1) Start in Alaska and hit the lower 48 states from there (so some say in Alaska), (2) Start in Florida and go across the southern part of the country, hit California and then come back across the northern part of the country, (3) Start in Maryland and proceed outward from there, (4) Start in New York City and move north to Boston and then the rest of New England, (5) Hit Boston and move on from there (a bunch of people in Boston were strongly promoting this prophecy, of course), (6) Start in the Caribbean and spread to the world from there (I was assured of that by friends in the Caribbean) (7) Spread to the world from Mexico (I saw a video of someone in Mexico prophesying this in Spanish) and...well, you can probably add the "prophecies" you've heard wherever you are about how it's actually where you are that this mighty move will start, and maybe they'll need to build a new international airport to handle all the people who will come in for the revival (that was actually said somewhere too).

This shows a sad lack of discernment in the Body of Christ, because obviously if there are 100 such prophecies, at least 99 of them must be false prophecies. However, I don't see the purveyors of these prophecies being shown the door for some reason, which means that people are hearing and believing a lot of false prophetic ministry these days. The Body of Christ needs to take scriptures about judging prophecy as lot more seriously. 1 Corinthians 14:29 says "Let the prophets speak two or three, and let the other judge." 1 Thessalonians 5:21 says "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." We are not to blindly accept prophetic words even if the person gets really excited and says, "Thus saith the Lord!"

Jesus, on the other hand, discouraged looking for where revival would hit because He taught that revival isn't going to hit you from here or there. He taught that it would come from within you!

Now when he was asked by the Pharisees when the kingdom of God would come, He answered them and said, "The kingdom of God does not come with observation; nor will they say, 'See here!' or 'See there!' For indeed, the kingdom of God is within you."

What most Christians are praying for is already within them! While Christians pray to no avail for God to pour out His Spirit ON them (a useless prayer for anyone who is already baptized with the Holy Spirit), God yearns to pour out His Spirit THROUGH them right now.

Now THAT is what we have to get the Church to see! Rather than waiting for the kingdom of God to manifest somewhere and spread, we are to go out and manifest the kingdom of God ourselves! NOW!

Joel's prophecy that the Spirit would be poured out on all flesh was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, and that outpouring has been available ever since! Any teaching that an outpouring of the Spirit must wait for any particular new action from man has to be wrong. Did you ever notice that Paul didn't ask the Ephesians if God had poured out the Holy Spirit on them or if God had given them the Holy Spirit? He asked, "Did you receive the Holy Spirit?" (Acts 19:2). He has already been "poured out" and "given" and now needs to be "received," not begged for or tarried for.

You will not get people in the proper attitude of faith by telling them that some sweet day (any day now), the heavens will open and a big revival will happen, and there will be signs and wonders and they can get miraculously healed. On the other hand, if you let them know that the kingdom of heaven is at hand to heal them RIGHT NOW, people will receive miracles. Faith can only receive NOW, so people need to know that the power is available NOW, not when some future revival hits.

We do ourselves a great disservice when we conclude that God in His "sovereignty" has chosen a specific spot for revival to start for some unknowable or capricious reason. At least one thing you can learn about revivals is that there were always people spearheading them. God will move wherever there is a hunger for Him to move and where people actually believe and act on His Word! It is not up to God willing it, it is up to us to decide if we will welcome the Holy Spirit and act on truth. It isn't based on a geographic location; it's based on the faith of God's people. It's not about "where" but rather about "who." Where the Word is taught accurately and the Holy Spirit is welcomed, God will confirm His Word with accompanying signs (Mark 16:20).

On the other hand, congregations that are part of the modern “Ashamed of the Holy Spirit” movement and forbid speaking in tongues on Sunday morning, blatantly disobeying 1 Corinthians 14:39 because visitors might get upset and leave, need not be concerned about what to do with revival crowds, because God will look elsewhere for a place to demonstrate His glory – it won’t be in some sorry dead establishment that cares about the approval of men more than about the approval of God.

Teaching that great power will be available someday in a coming revival robs the church of the opportunity to flow in what is already available today. Here is something to think about. What exactly do you think that God can give you in the future that he hasn’t already given you? He has given you every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ (Ephesians 1:3). He has already granted to you all things that pertain to life and godliness (2 Peter 1:3). If you are baptized with the Holy Spirit, you have already received power (Acts 1:8). You have the same Holy Spirit Jesus had, not some weak, watered-down Holy Spirit Lite. What spiritual resource are you expecting to get that you don’t already have? What do you think that God is holding back from you? Romans 8:32 says, “He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things,” while Psalm 84:11 assures us that God will not withhold any good thing from them that walk uprightly. Some would have us believe that God is withholding certain resources from us and that he will only release them in answer to certain kinds of “revival prayer.” I don’t see that anywhere in the New Testament. Do you?

Believers today sing in vain, “More love, more power, more of You in my life! More of You, more of You – and less of me! Pour out your power and love as we cry Holy, Holy, Holy! Anointing, fall on me! Let the power of the Holy Ghost fall on me! Send the old-time power, the Pentecostal power!” But God has already poured out His love in your heart by the Holy Spirit (Romans 5:5). He already gave you all the power you need when you received the Holy Spirit (Acts 1:8). You did not receive 62.7% of Jesus when you were saved and you do not have 31.2% of the Holy Spirit. You do not need more of God. You received the Lord all at once, not on an installment plan. There is no more of Him to get. (You might need to cooperate with Him more or spend more time hearing from Him, but that’s a separate issue. You can write your own song about that.) In fact, God even said explicitly that He doesn’t give the Spirit by measure (John 3:34 – click on this to see some important comments about why this verse has been mistranslated to give the wrong impression that God does give the Spirit by measure). You have an anointing from the holy one (1 John 2:20). The anointing abides in you (1 John 2:27). He who has anointed you is God (2 Corinthians 1:21). Stop crying out for more anointing and start letting the anointing you already have flow out of you like rivers of living water (John 7:37-39)! If believers in your area would do that, you’d have the kind of move of God people would call a revival!

Now let’s look at fifteen particular popular myths about doing things that will “produce revival,” and you can see if you have wasted your time getting caught up with them! If so, you can find better uses for your time.

First, there is the idea that we have to kick the principalities out of our municipalities to make revivals realities. You don't even have the authority to drive them out of town; if you did, the Bible would say so, and it doesn't. (Where will you send them, to somewhere where people don't pray as much? To somewhere in the Arctic?) Neither Jesus nor the apostles ever made principalities leave town, yet they had "revival" without doing it, so why shouldn't we? Principalities have the same right to be here that Satan does. Satan is not holding revival back with some kind of vast spiritual power. Satan is nothing more than a defeated liar with a big mouth and the same applies to his minions. It is up to us to spread the truth that contradicts the lies they try to spread. Real spiritual warfare is a war of thoughts that is fought on the ground, not up in the stratosphere somewhere. You can safely forget making little spiritual maps of which demons control which areas. Your time would be much better spent mapping which streets you'll evangelize next! You don't get people saved by rebuking some spirit of unbelief and commanding it to leave. When Jesus encountered unbelief in Nazareth, he didn't cast the spirit of unbelief out of town. Faith comes by hearing the word of God. If all you do is pray for the lost, they will stay lost. They need you to tell them the good news. If binding demons over cities could really produce revival, it would have done so a long time ago, as this useless action has been attempted for decades despite the fact that the perpetrators usually declare that this is some kind of fresh revelation from heaven.

Second, there is a related notion that if we open a "hole in the heavenlies" through worship, God will somehow pour out revival through that hole. That is also an unknown practice in the New Testament. What we think of as revival happened when they went out and preached everywhere. The Lord worked with them and confirmed the Word with accompanying signs (Mark 16:20). Besides, the heavenly hole theory makes Satan look really big and powerful, as if he could stop God from doing anything by stretching his power all over the area, and poor little God can only manage to cram something through a narrow hole in Satan's overwhelming force field, and then only if believers exert themselves greatly to open that teeny hole. Do you see how backward that is? Satan is the one who is defeated, not God. He hasn't just brought a knife to a gunfight; he's brought a water pistol to a nuclear war! He's completely outmatched and outclassed. JESUS has ALL authority on heaven and earth. Because He does, how much authority is now left over for Satan? Do the math! Satan is the like the Wizard of Oz, putting on a big show while begging you to pay no attention to the weakling behind the curtain who is actually putting on the show.

Third, there is the idea that massive prayer for revival will cause God to pour out revival. In other words, God is holding back on us, but if enough people bug Him long enough, he will cave in and do it. That means that we actually want revival more than He does. Do you see how ridiculous that is? The word “revival” is not even in the New Testament, much less instruction to pray for it. Yet some people purport that to really see God move, we must establish 24/7 prayer (which perhaps must be accompanied by 24/7 worship and other 24/7 things). I have visited a city where they have been doing the 24/7 thing for a very long time and been warned not to go into certain areas at night if I value my life. If all that prayer was really going to change the city, wouldn’t it have done so by now? No one on the street seems to be aware of any kind of “move of God” going on there despite decades of non-stop prayer. I’m not against prayer or worship, and if you a part of a group that just gets a kick out of taking shifts where you pray and/or worship from 2 to 4 in the morning on a regular basis, don’t let me stop you! But it’s foolish to think that the only way to see a move of God is such literally constant prayer. I am personally of the opinion that you would get a lot more accomplished if you had 24/7 evangelism, though I’m not seriously suggesting that you have to evangelize around the clock either. I even heard one person propose that if you shut the devil out of your area, but fail to have someone praying from 2 to 4 in the morning, he’ll sneak back in at that time. That’s silly. You can’t shut the devil out of the area anyway no matter how many hours you pray. Jesus couldn’t even keep the devil out of His final meal with His disciples; Satan entered into Judas in that very room! Jesus couldn’t stop Satan from manifesting his thoughts through Peter in Caesarea Philippi. If Jesus could just make Satan leave town, why didn’t he do it after his first temptation in Luke 4 so that he wouldn’t have to deal with the second and third temptations? If Jesus couldn’t just move Satan out of those areas, what makes you think you can? What we really need to do is reach sinners with the gospel so that they can then be taken out of Satan’s dominion into the kingdom of God’s dear Son (Colossians 2:13) and be taken from the power of Satan to God (Acts 26:18).

The only thing even close to praying for revival was in Acts 4:29-33, and that was primarily a prayer for boldness to evangelize: “And now, Lord, behold their threatenings, and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word, by stretching forth thine hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus. And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness.”

Even then, if you look carefully, you’ll see that they were NOT praying for God to step in and do sovereign signs and wonders on His own. They asked that the signs and wonders be done in the NAME of Jesus. Jesus never comes down and uses His own name! It was obvious that THEY were the ones who were going to use the NAME of Jesus to command signs and wonders to be done, and this would only be possible when they were out proclaiming the good news with boldness. And so it is today. We don’t need a “sovereign move of God,” we need boldness to preach and then command things to be done in the name of Jesus. (Consider how self-contradictory it is for believers to cry out for a “sovereign move of God.” If He does that in answer to our prayers, it isn’t “sovereign” at all the way the church thinks of “sovereign!”) Praying for GOD to do signs and wonders is not the New Testament pattern, but praying for BOLDNESS is.

Fourth, there is the idea that massive regional and national fasts will cause God to pour out something new. Aside from the fact that you've never seen that actually work, it misses the whole point of fasting in the New Testament. Fasting does not move God. (Prayer does not move God either; He's quite fine as he is – we are the ones who need to move from where we are.) Fasting in an attempt to influence God is a hunger strike, not a fast! Fasting is designed to keep your flesh under control. Fasting is Biblical and should be practiced by believers, though not some of these ridiculously long fasts that are being "called" by some people. (No one "proclaimed a fast" in the New Testament, though people did fast. Think about it.) If you asked many people why they are fasting, they would say, "So that God will pour out revival." But again, what are you without right now that you must fast to get from God? Also, the word "fast" means to "not eat!" So it is unbiblical to say that you will "fast television" unless you mean that you are not planning to eat your television, which is a good idea because televisions contain many non-user-serviceable parts that could harm your digestive system. Some people call it a "fast" when they give something up for 21 days, as Daniel gave up "pleasant bread, flesh and wine" for 21 days. I suggest that we just extend the period to 40 days and call it "Lent" – wouldn't that be original? If practicing Lent never caused an outpouring of power before, why should it today? Besides, there is no such thing as a "Daniel Fast" because what Daniel did was not called a fast in Daniel 10 – the word "fast" does not even appear in that chapter. Because the word "fast" means to "not eat" and Daniel was still eating, he was not fasting in the Biblical sense. Some have suggested that Daniel did what he did to break the power of the Prince of Persia, but the power of the Prince of Persia was not broken at all – the angel said he had to go fight the Prince of Persia some more when he was done with Daniel! In Daniel 10:20, the angel said, "and now I will return to fight with the Prince of Persia." However, you don't have to defeat the Prince of Persia or the Prince of Peoria or the Prince of Poughkeepsie or the Prince of Prince Edward Island because Jesus defeated all such "princes," stripped their power and publically humiliated them (Colossians 2:15). Stop trying to do what Jesus already did!

If people would fast more than they do in general, they would probably live less in the flesh and it would help us to have God do more through us. But that is not the same thing as trying to "move God" with fasting.

Fifth, there is the idea that if people in an area obey “prophetic mandates” given by “generals,” they will see God move in their area after they have carried them out. There are two problems specific to this as well as the general problem of relegating God’s power to the future. First, “general” is not a ministry office. Apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers are mentioned in Ephesians 4:11, but not generals, let alone further subdivisions into “one-star generals,” “two-star generals,” “three-star generals” and so on, as implied by a self-proclaimed “three-star general” I heard once who claimed he’d just gotten his third star from the Lord. Ministers are servants, not lords over God’s heritage (which we are told NOT to be in 1 Peter 5:3). Furthermore, there is no such thing as a “prophetic mandate” in the New Testament where a prophet gave believers in a certain area specific instructions to produce revival. Old Testament prophets sometimes gave mandates with ultimatums, and you had to obey them or get eaten by a bear or something. But Agabus, a New Testament prophet, never commanded anyone to do anything. He foretold a famine, but he did NOT command the believers to do anything specific about it. They made their decision based on what Agabus said, but not in response to a “prophetic mandate.” Agabus gave a personal word to Paul about what would happen to him in Jerusalem, but he did NOT tell Paul to go there or not go there, and this was not a mandate for the body in general. In Acts 13:1-3, the Holy Spirit spoke to the church at Antioch to separate Barnabus and Saul (Paul) for the work He had called them to; this probably came through one of the “prophets and teachers” assembled there, but this still was nothing like a prophetic decree for the body for revival as done in some circles. Although Acts 21:4 says that disciples (not prophets) in Tyre “told Paul though the Spirit not to go to Jerusalem,” (see Acts 21:4-5) this could not be classed as a “prophetic mandate” in the modern sense because no prophet was involved and only one person was given the instruction, not the “in Tyre” body of Christ. It is debatable how much of a personal “mandate” this actually was, because the Lord never seemed to rebuke Paul or tell Paul that he had missed it by going to Jerusalem, so it seems that it was an open-ended choice the way that Agabus left it. However, if we take the verse at face value, it seems that the Holy Spirit really was telling Paul not to go there. The only other explanation, if that is the case, would be that the disciples were telling Paul not to leave for Jerusalem during those seven days that he was there (Paul stayed there seven days) and that he was free to go after seven days (Acts 21:5: “When we had come to the end of those days, we departed...”) but I’ve never heard anyone else propose that at this writing, and it still seems kind of thin. Another school of thought is that they told Paul not to go to Jerusalem through what they THOUGHT were the gifts of the Spirit, but THEY were actually the ones who missed it trying to operate in those gifts. I would tend toward that explanation, which actually comes into play when trying to interpret the hardest verse in the book of Job (see Job Explained). In any case, Acts 21:4 is certainly one of the hardest verses the Bible to explain and I don’t claim to have the last word on it – other than the fact it doesn’t support “prophetic mandates” as given by some.

Sixth, there is the idea that we must have Joel 2-based wail-and-travail meetings to have revival. I guess in some cases these meetings are supposed to show God how sorry we are for sins we didn't even commit (other people in the same nation did them), while in others they may be weeping and wailing over their own sins. (By the way, they don't call them wail-and-travail meetings – that's my term – they are usually advertised as "solemn assemblies.") Aside from the fact that such solemnity doesn't seem to be in line with the joy unspeakable and full of glory that is ours in Christ, whose kingdom consists of righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Spirit (Romans 14:17), this is yet another case of basing New Testament behavior on an Old Testament scripture. Even people who run these meetings can't produce a single New Testament Scripture to back the idea. I asked one of the organizers of such a regional event once to give me a New Testament verse for it and he admitted he didn't have any. His take was that because Joel is in the Bible, we should obey it. But you could take that same reasoning and say that we should slaughter sheep, goats, turtledoves, pigeons, etc., because commands to do that are also in the Bible – in the Old Testament. Besides, those who want to "weep between the porch and the altar" saying "spare your people, O LORD..." (Joel 2:17) should go ahead 11 verses to a wonderful promise that God would pour out His Spirit on all flesh (Joel 2:28), which was fulfilled in Acts 2:2-4. The New Testament places no premium on sitting around telling God how sorry you are, and if people would spend the time they spend at such meetings reaching the lost, there is no telling what kind of positive impact it would have on their areas. It is a sorry idea indeed that what we call "revival" would hinge on us proving to God how sorry we are. This whole wail-and-travail idea is an example of the too-common mistake of trying to shoehorn Old Testament principles into our new and better covenant.

Seventh, there is the idea that we must pray mediatorial prayers as Moses did so that God will forgive our nation for its awful sins. "Spare us Thy fierce wrath for all the unborn children we have murdered and the concessions we have made to those who flaunt vile, unnatural lifestyles" would be a typical cry at such a meeting, though they might use less bold language. The idea is that God is mad at the whole country, and in His anger, He has decided not to freely give us all things any more, in contrast to many Scriptures cited above. It is also implied that God has not forgiven these sins, while in fact the blood of Christ was shed for every one of them so that the perpetrators would be forgiven. God's "anger" would also disprove the idea in 2 Corinthians 5:19 that God ISN'T holding sins against people. Supposedly our prayers will remit these sins so that God can smile on the land once again. But God's answer to the sin in your nation is not praying about it – it is the shedding of blood, without which there is no remission of sin (Hebrews 9:22). That shedding of blood has already been accomplished. Every person who has committed murder or engaged in an unnatural act can be reconciled to God on the basis of the blood that already paid for these sins. We cannot expect that Jesus will have to be re-crucified after we pray so that these sins will be forgiven. While these prayers seem biblical because they're in the Old Testament, they are notably absent from the New Testament that defines the covenant we have. Also, under our covenant, Jesus is the one mediator between God and man (1 Timothy 2:5). You are not called to do His job, which He is perfectly good at Himself. So stop trying to "stand in the gap" between fallen man and God and point people to the Bridge over the gap – Jesus!

Eighth, there is the related idea that we must pray a blood curse off the land because the blood of unborn babies is crying out from the ground for judgment on our land, and that until we do, we can forget about a move of God. This is based on Genesis 4:10, where the blood of righteous Abel cried out for vengeance, but it overlooks Hebrews 12:24, where we learn that the blood of Jesus speaks of better things than the blood of Abel. Abel's blood cried, "Judgment!" but Jesus' blood cries "Mercy!" Jesus' blood provided forgiveness for every abortion (murder) ever committed. Think of the condemnation this "blood curse" argument heaps on people who have had, urged, or performed an abortion – "All this is your fault, baby killer!" We need to be telling them instead, "You're forgiven! God loves you and did something already so that this won't be held against you. Receive His Son today and know His forgiveness!"

Ninth, there is the popular and oft-cited notion that if God doesn't judge our country, he will have to apologize to Sodom and Gomorrah. Thus, God is seen as an angry withholder of revival, and supposedly the only way God can move is if we stop all the immorality in our land and get the perpetrators to repent. But sinners aren't about to stop sinning unless they receive Jesus! You can't expect them to stop sinning without Jesus' help! And if one sin stops God from moving, won't any other sin do the same, in light of James 2:10? (If you break one law, you break the whole Law.) Besides, what about the fact that God hasn't appointed us to wrath (1 Thessalonians 5:9)? God does not judge the righteous with the wicked! That's why before the awful Tribulation judgments to come, he has to get His own people out at the event commonly called the Rapture so that they aren't judged along with the wicked. Look at the much-cited case of Sodom. The angel said he COULD NOT do anything until Lot got out of there (Genesis 19:22). The only righteous people in Sodom were removed, and had to be removed, before judgment could fall. It would be inconsistent for God to judge your country with the righteous still there! In fact, he'd spare a place if he could find only ten righteous people there (Genesis 18:32) – do you have more than ten righteous people in YOUR country? Besides, most of you could say that there are far more sinful countries than the one you live in; why wouldn't God's "judgment" start there instead? God already judged every sin in your country when they were all laid on Jesus. There have been no "national judgment" prophecies since Jesus spoke what He did over Jerusalem before He died on the cross. Under our covenant, prophets do not proclaim woes on nations. Also consider the fact that homosexuality, drunkenness, idolatry and many other sins were common in the Roman Empire, but none of that stopped Jesus or His disciples from working miracles in an area controlled by that empire. Why should you think that these sins will stop Him from performing miracles through the church today where you are?

Tenth, there is the idea that we have to OBTAIN God's forgiveness by observing 2 Chronicles 7:14, implying that God has NOT forgiven the sins in the land, but if we humble ourselves, pray, seek God's face and turn from our wicked ways, He will hear from heaven and THEN forgive our sins and heal our land. This was a great Old Testament promise, but it is problematic to apply it to a covenant where forgiveness has already been purchased by the blood of Jesus. You will NOT find anywhere in the New Testament where anyone exhorted Christians to have prayer meetings for the purpose of national forgiveness, despite the fact that 2 Chronicles 7:14 is accepted in most churches today as the pattern to follow.

Also, the irony is lost on most people that if you believe that 2 Chronicles 7:14 applies today, you MUST believe that GOD is afflicting the nation with sicknesses and other troubles. You see, that verse does not stand alone. It is NOT a sentence beginning with the words “If my people.” The entire thought properly starts in the previous verse and consists of an If...Then statement. “If I shut up heaven that there be no rain, or if I command the locusts to devour the land, or if I send pestilence among my people; if my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land.” So verse 14 only applies in a case where verse 13 is true. If you do not believe that verse 13 applies today (I don’t), then verse 14 does not apply today either. Do you believe that under grace in the church age God is withholding rain, sending locusts and sending epidemics? I don’t. Has there really been no rain in your country and are you currently overrun with locusts? If not, verse 14 does not apply. (Sorry if I just ruined your favorite “revival” prayer verse, but somebody has to say it.)

A second irony is that you must believe that you and the other Christians in your country are still practicing wickedness. Otherwise, this Scripture could not apply, as part of the condition is that God’s people turn from their wicked ways!

Eleventh, there is the teaching that we must repent on behalf of our nation of the wickedness being practiced in it to obtain God’s blessing on it. I challenge you to find anywhere in the New Testament where you can do other people’s repenting for them! You can only repent for your own sins, not the sins of other people in your nation. They will have to do their own repenting, or miss out on what they could have had if they repented.

Twelfth, there is the idea that misdeeds done to the original native inhabitants of your land are now stopping revival, and revival won’t happen unless we have special meetings to “reconcile” with these people and tell them how sorry we are for past injustices and pray to erase the “curse” on our land caused by the shedding of their innocent blood. I fail to see in Scripture where native people’s blood is more meaningful than anyone else’s, and I’m the direct descendant of an influential native chief myself. You owe me no apology for things you didn’t do to me yourself. This gets back to Genesis 4:10 and Hebrews 12:24 cited above, and the fact that every misdeed done to every native person was forgiven by the blood of Jesus and is NOT a factor holding back revival. The Roman Empire committed plenty of injustices to various people groups, and that didn’t stop God from moving back then. Also, do you really believe that crimes against native people are a special kind of sin that the blood of Jesus did not deal with, and that such sin can only be remitted by special prayer? Prayer doesn’t remit sin – only innocent bloodshed does, because without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin (Hebrews 9:22). This still didn’t stop people where I used to live from having a “Native Reconciliation” meeting to “cause revival.” It didn’t work, but years later someone else had the same “revelation” to have such a meeting thinking that IT would cause revival. (It didn’t.) It’s the same problem I keep pointing out – if we’d go out and reach the lost and use our authority, our time would be better spent than in these highly emotional but highly useless meetings.

Thirteenth, some Satan-glorifying Christians assert that witches have put a curse over the area and only intense united prayer will be able to break it. They are always the first to mention which covens are in the area, and they're afraid of the curses the witches are supposedly doing. Apparently they haven't heard yet that there is no witchcraft that works against God's people (Numbers 23:23) and that a causeless curse shall not alight (Proverbs 26:2). Christians trample ALL the power of the enemy and nothing will hurt them (Luke 10:19). If they would be as keen to discern what God has already done as they are what the devil claims falsely that he can do, we'd all be better off. There is not a single case in the New Testament where it was necessary to break any witch curse off an area before God could move. Satan and His minions are ALREADY defeated (Colossians 2:15) and you have ALREADY overcome them (1 John 4:4). So who cares what the defeated witches are up to? I don't. I couldn't be bothered with people who want to waste my time with their fearful talk about what Satan is up to. I really don't care. I'd rather know what GOD is doing.

But I'll even caution you on that. I know someone who was practically glued to Christian TV all day because this person did not want to "miss out on" anything that God was doing in the earth today. But being a "revival news expert" will not help you bring "revival" to your area. (This person proved it.) You would be better off spending your time praying and studying the Word than trying to keep up with what miracles are happening in what meetings this week.

And then there are the people who run from meeting to meeting trying to "chase revival." They think that if they go to wherever the latest "outpouring" is going on, they will become part of it and take that outpouring back to their own city. Now if the people at the meetings are really teaching the Word, someone might indeed go back to his city better equipped to flow with the Holy Spirit. However, that is not why revival chasers go all over the place like storm chasers trying to find the next tornado. Usually they assume that if they go to where an outpouring is, the same "revival anointing" will get on them, and they will become revivalists in their own area. If it were only so easy! If I could really get equipped to flow in "revival" by just going to revival meetings rather than spending a lot of time in study and prayer, I'd gladly take the shortcut and so would most people!

But that's the problem. There is no shortcut to growing in God. If you really want to flow with God, you have to grow. That takes time and effort on your part. Just flying somewhere to spend a week under a "revival anointing" will never be a substitute for personal growth. God is not instantly going to make a great revivalist out of a baby Christian just because he went to revival meetings.

Most "moves of God" bring flaky people out of the woodwork and you have to deal with them. I attended one set of meetings that really did have an impact on the city, and a woman informed me that God had told her to leave her husband at home and go to where revival was happening. I told her that she would be much better off going home and being a good wife to her husband, but she didn't want to hear it.

What is the story with such people? Their mistake is that they pursue EXCITEMENT when they should pursue GOD Himself. Many people make that mistake. Serving God IS exciting, but it does not consist of one “blowout” revival experience after another. Even Paul certainly didn’t live hidden in the Holy of Holies all day.

When you get wrapped up in EXCITEMENT rather than the WORD, you will inevitably get involved with things that seem exciting that God is not involved with. People a while back were all excited about stories of an attractive “babe angel” even though the Bible NEVER mentions any female angels. (Christians can watch secular TV and get “touched by” some really kooky ideas.) People at those meetings were bouncing beach balls around during praise and worship thinking that if a ball hit them, the anointing would hit them. Then someone came to our state who supposedly had a “revival angel” who caused revival to break out everywhere he went. No revival broke out in our state when he came. I know people who got all excited and begged me to go to meetings like those, but I didn’t waste my time. Successful ministries are based on the WORD, not on EXCITEMENT.

If you look at the inevitable slew of prophecies that come forth in some of these “revival meetings,” it’s downright embarrassing to look back 2 or 3 years later and see how many of those prophecies (IF ANY) came to pass. Again, you have people who mistake the EXCITEMENT of the moment for the Holy Spirit, and they miss it accordingly. They prophesied based on excitement rather than based on true Holy Spirit inspiration.

Fourteenth, there is the idea that if we just do the same thing that prior revivalists did, we will get the same results. If Jonathan Edwards had special meetings on “fifth Fridays” of the month, we’ll do it too so that we will have another Great Awakening where we are. I know people who deliberately did “fifth Friday” meetings to copy Edwards. Nothing happened. The meetings were so-so – they weren’t “bad” but on the other hand, they did not produce revival. When Edwards did it, he was doing what God told him to do to the best of his ability. Edwards didn’t have those meetings because some past revivalist had “fifth Friday” meetings. I don’t know of any two “moves” that ever worked the same way. If you’re going to be a copycat, copy what Jesus did and how He acted rather than trying to copy specific men and their specific actions. You have to follow the Holy Spirit for yourself just as revivalists in the past did.

My personal take is that if you would spend the time studying the WORD that you spend studying past revivals and revivalists, you will get much better results. You flow in “revival” when you find out who you really are in Christ and act on that, not when you just pile up information about past moves of God and their leaders.

The same problem occurs with people looking for church growth shortcuts. If Church X did program Y and grew, we assume that we will do Program Y ourselves and get the same results. That leads to disappointment. If someone did something that worked, it was probably what the Holy Spirit told THAT person to do. You grow by following the example of doing what the Holy Spirit tells YOU to do, not by following the exact actions that the Holy Spirit told someone else to do.

Fifteenth, there is the idea that you can go to a revival meeting in another city, participate in an “impartation service” and then expect to carry that same anointing back to your city and start your own revival. Perhaps that has actually worked in a small number of isolated cases, but when you think of all the probably tens of thousands of people (if not more) who have had hands laid on them for a “revival impartation” and then look at how few of them have actually gone back and done anything resembling the revival in question, you realize how silly this gets. Wouldn't it be wonderful if you could just be a carnal, immature, marginally committed Christian, go to such a meeting, have hands on you, and suddenly cause revival in your city? That's not how God sets people into ministries.

Not only that, but it would make you greater than Jesus and the apostles if you could get an “impartation” and be guaranteed to shake your city. Maybe your city is like Nazareth because no one respects Jesus or anything He does in your city. You aren't going to have revival there! You aren't greater than your master. Some places are just hardened to the gospel, and even JESUS wouldn't be able to do mighty works there, so you certainly won't do mighty works in such a place. The solution is not to believe for a phenomenal anointing to reach that city – it's to leave that city and go somewhere else where people actually WANT Jesus and what He offers. God has not told anyone that he has to stay in the same place butting his head against a brick wall his entire life. There are some places where you will just not have revival no matter who you are, and it's unrealistic to think that a special “revival anointing” will cause God to move where He is not wanted.

The main problem is YOU if you have the idea that you must get a special revival anointing to do the works of Jesus. You can do them right now! You don't have to wait.

Here is the irony of all this. If you think and act based on the idea that a move of God will come in the future, it will always be in the future to you. That very mindset is what is KEEPING it in the future! If you think and act based on the idea that God wants to move NOW, you will see God move NOW. The truth is that the kingdom of God is here NOW. We need to believe that and present that to other people instead of the idea that the kingdom will arrive someday and we have to wait for God to feel like pouring out revival. Let's preach as Jesus did instead of how man often preaches today, and we will see the results Jesus saw instead of the lack of results that man usually sees today. The kingdom is here. NOW!

Looking at the Unseen

2 Corinthians 4:18:

While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal.

At first, this verse appears to be a contradiction. How can you look at something that's invisible? The answer is that you have to look with your eyes of faith, not your natural eyes. The things you are to look at are eternal, but they are invisible to your sense of sight.

Notice that Paul did not say that we look at things that do not exist. He said that we look at things that are unseen. They exist. You just can't see them with your natural eyes. This is crucial to understand. The things of the Spirit are real and they exist. They are just invisible. Your healing already exists. If your natural eyes could see spiritual things, you would see that Jesus Christ has already provided your healing for you, and all you have to do is receive it. It is there now in the spirit realm.

Too many people think of their healing as something that doesn't exist. Therefore, they cry and beg and plead and holler and try to talk God into doing something about it. They think that God has to "create" their healing. That is not true. Your healing already exists in the realm of the Spirit. Your faith is not creating something new, spiritually speaking. Your faith is receiving something that already exists in the spirit realm. When you receive it with your spirit, it manifests in the natural realm where you and everyone else can see it. From the world's perspective, you are healed when your healing manifests in your body. From God's perspective, your healing already exists and belongs to you as a believer. All you have to do is receive it with your spirit so that it can manifest in the physical realm. God doesn't have to do anything new for you. You just receive what Jesus already made a heavenly reality a long time ago when "by His stripes you were healed."

Your faith takes hold of something unseen and it then becomes seen. This is what God's definition of faith in Hebrews 11:1 talks about. Faith is the certainty of something unseen. It is being certain that you have something real that your regular senses cannot yet detect. Your basis for believing that you have it is the Word of God on the matter. God says you were healed. That means that your healing exists now. You can receive it now and enjoy the benefits. But while you are in faith, you are certain of something that you can't see. You have it and are convinced that you have it, even though you can't see it.

That is the essence of faith. For example, you already believe that your salvation from hell exists, even though you cannot see it. You believe that you have citizenship in heaven, but you have no proof outside the Bible that such citizenship is yours now. It's real, more real than the physical world around you, because it will outlast the physical world around you. The physical world around you is temporal, but your heavenly citizenship and salvation from hell are eternal. You simply need to start doing with healing what you are already doing in other areas of your life.

When something changeable meets something that cannot change, it is the changeable that will change! Applying this to your body, the physical facts are temporal. They can change. God's Word is eternal. It cannot change. When the facts of your condition meet the eternal Word of God, the Word of God will not be what changes! Your circumstances must change to line up with the Word.

Once you have believed that you have received your healing, it is important to stay active, rather than passive, with your faith. Look at eternal things. Continue to meditate on God's Word concerning healing. It is possible to receive something and then let it slip away through neglect, fear or doubt. Peter received the ability to walk on water but he let it slip when he got into fear. Keep encouraging yourself in the Lord. Keep speaking what God says about your healing. Keep thanking Him that healing is yours. You are not trying to make something else happen; you have already prayed to make it happen. You are just staying in faith and refusing to get into doubt or unbelief of God's Word.

Peace in a Storm

When you go through one of life's storms (which come to everyone), it is tempting to think, "I will be so glad when this trial is over and I can go back to normal living and be at peace again." That is a wrong attitude. The gospel gives you something better than that. You can have peace while the storms of life rage around you! You can have perfect peace when you are in true faith, even if your body is telling you all kinds of disagreeable things and your doctor has given you a morbid report.

A life-threatening storm raged after Jesus told His disciples, "Let us pass over unto the other side." Apparently Jesus thought that once He had spoken that, it was as good as done, even though a nasty storm came up that filled the boat with water! The disciples were obviously not as convinced.

Mark 4:35-40:

And the same day, when the even was come, he saith unto them, Let us pass over unto the other side. And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him even as he was in the ship. And there were also with him other little ships.

And there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full.

And he was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow: and they awake him, and say unto him, Master, carest thou not that we perish?

And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm.

And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?

Jesus, after being roused from His nap in the back of the boat, gave stern rebukes to both the weather and the disciples! It is bad enough to be a "ye of little faith," but here Jesus said that the disciples had no faith, which is worse! They had the measure of faith in general like everyone else (Romans 12:3), but they had no faith in Jesus' words.

Jesus still walked in peace while the disciples were panicking. Jesus never panicked. Recall that when a demon was thrashing a boy around, Jesus was having a calm conversation with the boy's father about how long that had been happening. We are supposed to follow in Jesus' footsteps, so it is NEVER right for us to get into panic mode about ANYTHING, no matter how dire or life-threatening it seems to be.

The disciples had their minds on the situation, not on the words that Jesus had spoken. If you want to stay out of panic mode, you have to force yourself to think about what God has said about your situation, not what anyone else has said, and not what it "looks like."

If you will do this, you will walk in peace even if the doctors just told you to make arrangements with a funeral home! Whether you walk in peace or not depends on what you choose to think about. Most people don't take responsibility for their thoughts. They think that if a thought pops into their head, there's not much they can do about it. But that's not what the Bible says!

Philippians 4:8:

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

The Bible commands you to think on certain things, so it is definitely your choice what you think about! You can choose to be full of cares, or you can choose not to carry any cares and walk in peace:

Philippians 4:6-7:

Be careful [full of care] for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God.

And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

I have had situations where I didn't know what the source of my next dollar would be. When I was a younger Christian, I would toss and turn most of the night wrestling with the devil's question, "What are you going to do? How will you pay your bills? How will you avoid losing EVERYTHING?" When I got to know the Word better, I learned to cast my cares on the Lord (1 Peter 5:7). I continued to tithe even when it looked like I couldn't afford to do it, and I just trusted God to continue to honor His Word, which of course, He did. Any time I would have spent worrying would have been a total waste, as God came through yet again. Besides, worrying is a SIN because God says not to do it! Sin is never good for you in general, and it certainly isn't good for your health. If you let yourself worry about your health, you'll just make yourself sicker!

But if you focus on God and His Word, you can have perfect peace in the midst of a trial. You don't have to wait until the trial is over. Jesus gives you peace that is naturally impossible, but you must cooperate by not letting your heart be troubled or afraid:

So don't accept the devil's lie that you can only return to the place of peace once all the tough issues in your life are resolved. Enjoy God's peace right now, despite the circumstances. You can do it, just as Jesus did!

Dealing with Fear

If you have been diagnosed with a serious illness or are experiencing alarming symptoms in your body, it is very important that you learn to deal with fear. The devil will try to get you into fear over what the doctor or your body tells you. You must deal with fear. Do not entertain it. Trying to operate in both faith and fear is like trying to run your car in first gear and reverse at the same time. You won't get far.

Fear is not of God. God wants you to be free from fear.

Luke 1:74:

That he would grant unto us [through part of Christ's work], that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear,

You are delivered from fear! "For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear..." (Romans 8:15). Through death Jesus destroyed him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and delivered them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage (Hebrews 2:14-15).

"There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love" (1 John 4:18). So part of overcoming fear must be acknowledging the presence of your loving Father. "I will fear no evil, for thou art with me" (Psalm 23:4). "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore we will not fear..." (Psalm 46:1-2). "But whoso hearkeneth unto me shall dwell safely, and shall be quiet from fear of evil" (Proverbs 1:33). "Fear thou not, for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness" (Isaiah 41:10). "For I the LORD thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee" (Isaiah 41:13). "Fear not, for I am with thee..." (Isaiah 43:5).

This is further amplified in Psalm 91. The following belongs to the man who "dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High" and "abides under the shadow of the Almighty" and says of the LORD, "He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust:" "Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day; nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday. A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee." Here God tells you that you do not have to fear sickness if you abide in Him, even if 11,000 people around you have just dropped dead from it.

In other words, you have heard that cancer has killed millions of people. Say that the doctor tells you that you will probably have cancer because it runs in your family. You can confidently state that you do not have to have cancer, let alone die from it, because you abide in the secret place of the Most High.

This may run contrary to what your Christian friends will do. Some of them may panic and think that they need to hold an all-night emergency prayer meeting for you. You don't have to panic, even if you are diagnosed with a fatal illness. Even if thousands have just fallen from the same thing, you do not have to fall.

Satan loves to work you over about supposedly faith-filled Christians who died because of the same condition you have. Don't let that distract you. You can never really know someone else's heart or someone else's situation, and you will probably be in for a few surprises when you get to glory. You can still receive your healing, just as you could still get saved even if thousands of people around you go to hell.

"Do not be afraid of sudden fear, neither of the desolation of the wicked, when it cometh. For the LORD shall be thy confidence, and shall keep thy foot from being taken" (Proverbs 3:25-26). "In righteousness shalt thou be established: thou shalt be far from oppression; for thou shalt not fear..." (Isaiah 54:14). Note that sickness is the oppression of the devil (Acts 10:38).

Fear, like faith, will change your circumstances. "The fear of the wicked, it shall come upon him" (Proverbs 10:24). What you say and believe in your heart will come to pass. Jesus did not say that this principle only applies toward positive things!

Jesus contrasted faith and fear: "Why are ye so fearful? How is it that ye have no faith?" (Mark 4:40). "Why are ye so fearful, O ye of little faith?" (Matthew 8:26). Jesus told Jairus, the ruler of the synagogue, "Fear not: believe only, and she shall be made whole" (Luke 8:50).

When one of God's angels visited someone in the Bible, the angel would often say, "Fear not" (Genesis 21:17, Daniel 10:12, Daniel 10:17-19, Matthew 1:20, Matthew 28:5, Luke 1:13, Luke 1:30, Luke 2:10).

It is vital that you dwell on things that will encourage you in your faith (the Word, testimonies of people who got healed of fatal illnesses by faith, etc.) instead on those things that would encourage fear (finding out how horribly Uncle John suffered before he died, ignorant books by promoters of unbelief, etc.).

The Spirit of Fear?

2 Timothy 1:7:

For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.

The fear discussed here is not fright but rather timidity or cowardice, as you can verify by looking up the word fear used here in a concordance. It is not the Greek word phobos, the kind of frightening fear that most people think of when they first see the word fear.

Thus, this verse cannot be used to "prove" that the phobos kind of fear is a spirit. However, there certainly are spirits out there that will try to intimidate you and get you into fear. You have authority over them. But at least technically, there is a difference between saying that fear is a spirit and that there are spirits that will try to get you into fear. If you struggle with timidity, rather than trying to cast out a spirit of timidity, it would be better to pray for BOLDNESS (Acts 4:29-33), which is the opposite of timidity. If you get boldness, timidity leaves!

Another way that you could look at this verse is that it's about the Holy Spirit, who does not promote timidity but rather power, love and (literally) self-control. ("Sound mind" here means self-control. This verse is not about having a healthy brain; see Verses Incorrectly Cited as Healing Scriptures.)

What Paul is really saying is that God has not given us a cowardly attitude. "The wicked flee when no man pursueth: but the righteous are bold as a lion" (Proverbs 28:1). You can do a good job working yourself into fear without any help from the devil if your mind is not renewed with the Word of God. Jesus did not tell Peter or the others to rebuke a spirit of fear; he told them to believe instead of fearing. Faith is the antidote to fear. Trying harder not to fear is not the antidote. You don't overcome sin by trying harder not to sin; you overcome sin by believing God's Word, which in particular, tells you that you have victory over sin now. Rather than rebuke a spirit of sin, you believe in the victory over the flesh that Christ has already granted you (Romans 6:14, Romans 8:12, Galatians 5:24). Likewise, you don't beat fear by trying not to fear, but rather by hearing God's Word and letting it build your faith.

More Proof that Fear Is Not a Spirit

If fear of the "frightening" kind were always a spirit, Paul needed to get deliverance! He spoke of "fears within:"

2 Corinthians 7:5:

For, when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side; without were fightings, within were fears.

Would anyone who preaches that fear is a spirit like to take this to its logical conclusion and say that Paul had one or more spirits of fear within himself?

Circumstances alone will tempt you to get into fear, and you'll have to deal with it. Your mind can give you enough reasons to fear (when it's not renewed with the Word) without any demon having to bring you fear.

It is clear that Paul did not try to "cast a spirit of fear" out of himself to solve the problem.

If fear (phobos) is always an evil spirit, we're all in trouble, because we're all told to fear (the same word phobos!) the Lord!

Fear Is a Choice

John 14:27:

Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

You can let your heart be afraid, or you can “let not your heart be afraid.” The language here makes it clear that it is your choice. You never have to fear. The Bible is full of commands to “Fear not.” If it weren’t your choice, and you couldn’t do anything about it, God would be unjust to command you not to fear! Therefore, you CAN choose not to fear.

This does not mean that you will not feel fear, any more than you will not feel anger or jealousy at times. Between your flesh and the devil, you will feel these things and many more. But it is up to you whether you resist them and reject them or give in to them. It is not sin to be tempted to sin, and it is not sin to feel like sinning. It is only sin to actually sin!

Fear Requires Faith!

In a sense, fear is faith running in the wrong direction. If you are in fear, you are afraid because you believe something! You believe the wrong thing, but you still believe something. Most likely, you believe that something awful will come to pass when you have no proof that it will. If you are in strong fear, you have proved that you can operate in strong faith! You are going not by circumstances, but by what you believe your circumstances will be in the future. If you can do such a good job of acting on what you believe, even without natural proof, just turn it around and start treating God’s Word the same way that you treated the bad report that got you into fear.

How many times have you lost a good night’s sleep over something that never really happened? I’ve done it more than once. The problem was that I let contrary circumstances become more real to me than God’s promises.

If you can believe that something bad will happen even though you can’t prove it in the natural, surely you can believe that something good will happen instead, even though you can’t prove it in the natural. Everyone believes something. What you believe will determine what you say, and what you say will determine what you receive. It works in both directions. Stop using this principle against yourself, and start using it for yourself!

The Best Way to Beat Fear

God has already given you all things pertaining to life and godliness (2 Peter 1:3). All things are yours (1 Corinthians 3:21-22). You are complete in Christ (Colossians 2:10) and God has promised to take care of you (Philippians 4:19, Psalm 23). If you believe this, there is no basis for fear. All fear is rooted in ignorance or unbelief of something that God said. If you are in fear in any area, there is guaranteed to be Scripture that covers your situation. If you would believe that Scripture, you would no longer fear. You would replace your faith in the devil and the world with faith in God. God has provided all you need to triumph in Christ in every situation (2 Corinthians 2:14). You will find your answer in His Word. Please note that it’s not a case of praying on and on. It’s a case of finding out what God says and choosing to believe that instead of something else.

Rather than just trying not to fear, which is really trying not to believe something, find out what to believe and believe that instead! You can't believe God's Word and believe that you're going to fail at the same time.

Mind Control

Too many Christians think that they can't help all the negative thoughts that swirl through their heads. The Bible is clear that you CAN control ALL of them. We are told explicitly what to think about and what not to think about. That is PROOF that YOU CHOOSE what you think about!

Philippians 4:8:

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

The above is NOT a suggestion that you might try if you want a happier life. It is a COMMAND for all Christians. That is different from good advice from a self-help guru. God not only wants you to think about positive things; He COMMANDS you to do it!

But what do many Christians think about all day? The news! Did you know that the news outlets DELIBERATELY emphasize negative things to grab your attention? It was proved a long time ago that negative news gets more attention and cranks up ratings more than positive news. (I majored in broadcasting in college; the adage was, "If it bleeds, it leads.") Why do they do that? Because it WORKS! People gravitate toward the negative. That's why so many Internet ads say, "Hotels hate this," "Power companies hate this," and so on. It's more appealing "click bait" for most people because it's negative. Also, why do ad agencies hire beautiful models to promote cars, toilet paper, batteries, paint, or whatever else has nothing to do with the owner's looks? Because it WORKS! "Sex sells" was another broadcasting school adage, with the follow-up that it even works on people who complain about it because they'll still sneak peaks at the gorgeous women who soothingly tout the advantages of a certain brand of men's hand razors. Just get that brand and all the pretty women will suddenly start chasing you down! Those ads WORK because most people are carnal!)

If we really took God's command seriously, we would not spend all that time clicking through one negative news story after another. And we would do a much better job staying out of fear, because we wouldn't be afraid that life as we know it will end in ten years due to global warming (as the United Nations people were saying many decades ago, by the way, but I guess THIS TIME you're supposed to ignore their track record and believe them!), while recession lurks just around the corner, while you might be the next victim of gun violence if you step outside your house, while your job will probably be replaced by a robot or by someone overseas within the next year or two, while just about everything you eat or wear causes cancer, while the government is unraveling by spending all its energy fighting within its ranks rather than running the country, while your government pension will probably be partly unfunded by the time you need it, while new killer diseases are being discovered...you get the idea. If you steadied your mind on the WORD, you'd just laugh all that stuff off, knowing that even if any of this happened and it really did affect a lot of people, God would still take care of YOUR needs and keep YOU healthy no matter what!

I realize that from a media perspective, you might not get a lot of website hits with headlines like, "NOBODY Killed in School Shootings for the Last Three Months," "Economy Looks Good for the Foreseeable Future," "Police Becoming More Effective in Rounding Up Crooks; Urban Areas Safer," and so on. But we are to renew our minds to avoid conformity to the world (Romans 12:2), not rot our minds by synchronizing our thoughts with the world's way of thinking.

I am convinced that if Christians would take a hard look at their media viewing habits and start making some drastic changes to avoid picking up worldly attitudes, they'd find that their Christian walks would become easier, living fear-free would become easier and living out the Word would become easier. If all you see all day is shows and movies showing people fornicating, murdering, cursing, and so on, it will be hard for you to think positively! Don't be fooled – bad company ruins good morals (1 Corinthians 15:33). "Oh, I don't hang out with fornicators, killers or sewer-mouths; I know better." DO YOU? If you let them into your house through your TV, you ARE hanging around them. Now THAT is a sobering thought!

Good Fear

The Greek word phobos (think of the English word phobia) refers to traditional fear as opposed to cowardice. Yet there is a POSITIVE kind of fear (phobos) that will keep you out of the NEGATIVE kind of fear (phobos) – the fear (phobos) of the Lord!

I did a count of the Biblical uses of the word fear and found that 43% of the time, it was something positive (almost always the fear of the Lord, but occasionally a deep respect for someone).

So "fear" in and of itself is not necessarily negative – it's just that you need to fear the Lord instead of fearing the devil, fearing cancer, fearing demons, fearing Alzheimer's, and so on.

Mental Diet Advice

If you keep the Word in your thoughts, fear has to leave. You will always gravitate toward what you dwell on. If you dwell on negative junk, you will inevitably be pulled into fear and negativity when you face challenges. If you abide in the Word, you set yourself up for a joy-filled (though not challenge-free) Christian adventure! Because FEAR has so much to do with your thoughts, beating fear is about getting your thought life under control and setting your mind on God and His Word. When you really know what God has said, you realize that there is NO REASON that you should ever fear anything or anyone. When you walk in the fear of the Lord, the fear of anything else will dissipate.

Do It Anyway

What if you don't feel confident to lay hands on the sick like those bold preachers on TV who preach at major campmeetings? It seems so easy and natural for them, but YOU find yourself always battling thoughts of doubt that it won't work for YOU. Hmm...maybe YOU aren't even called to do it, because if you were, surely you would be a ball of confidence like those other preachers who must be called in a way that you aren't. Thus saith the devil! He tries to talk everyone he can out of laying hands on the sick.

Do it anyway.

Want to know something that might shock you? Even "big name" preachers battle thoughts of doubt just the way you do! How do I know? Because the same devil who tries to talk YOU out of laying hands on the sick tries to talk them out of it, too – his temptations are "common to man" (1 Corinthians 10:13). In other words, he uses his same tired old tricks on everyone. Also, I know that the "big names" battle contrary thoughts because they have spiritually dead flesh the same way you do. No one is exempt from having to deal with the flesh in this life.

What if you feel AFRAID to lay hands on the sick, especially someone with a serious condition?

Do it anyway.

Consider the apostle Paul. If anyone was "confident," if anyone had a revelation of the Word, if anyone was a "well-known" preacher, it would have been Paul. But even Paul battled INNER FEARS (2 Corinthians 7:5). He got a lot of sick people healed ANYWAY. So even if you battle inner fears the way Paul did, YOU can get a lot of sick people healed ANYWAY.

What if you don't feel like you've done a very good job of LIVING the gospel this week? Should YOU be laying hands on a sick person?

Do it anyway.

God doesn't use people because they're morally good. He uses people because they're available. So go ahead and be God's instrument of grace for that sick person. God would prefer that you be morally good, but the only people He can use in healing the sick are morally imperfect people like you.

What if YOU need healing in your own body? You don't want to be a hypocrite, after all. Should you wait until YOU have absolutely no physical imperfections before you lay hands on other people who have physical imperfections? No!

Do it anyway.

Always act on the WORD and nothing else. The WORD says that you SHALL lay hands on the sick and they SHALL recover (Mark 16:18).

The bottom line is that you need to settle this in your heart:

“I am determined to act on the Word NO MATTER HOW I FEEL and NO MATTER WHAT CIRCUMSTANCES TELL ME!”

So throw all the devil’s reasons why YOU can’t lay hands on the sick into the landfill where they belong and DO IT ANYWAY!

Sin, Punishment, Sickness and Satan

Sin deserves punishment. God, being just, MUST punish sin. Yet everyone sins. So how can God avoid having to continue to punish us for our sins? His way of doing it was to lay our sins on Jesus and punish Him in our place. Now our sins have been punished. The price for them has been paid. We need not pay a debt that was canceled when Jesus paid it for us.

Part of the punishment for sin is sickness. The “curse of the law” in the Old Testament makes that clear. So to be punished for our sins, Jesus had to be made sick. That is the only way that God could justly declare that the punishment for sin had been satisfied. Because Jesus took the punishment of sickness in our place, we do not need to bear the punishment of sickness in our bodies. He redeemed us!

Where does Satan fit into all this? He doesn't! He is an outlaw, a rogue. He has NO part in the plan of God. God and Satan NEVER cooperate with each other. Satan is completely disobedient to God; he is always anti-God and anti-Christ. God does not “use” Satan as his holy henchman to punish sin! God says, “Vengeance is mine, I will repay” (Romans 12:19). Thus, vengeance upon sin is GOD'S sole prerogative, and He chose to take out His vengeance upon Jesus on the cross for our sins. That was His right.

Satan is a thief. He wants to STEAL the right to punish sin, but he does not have that right. Punishing sin is God's right alone, never Satan's. Satan has no right to punish you or anyone else for sins! Everything he does is illegal. If Satan had the right to punish sin, Isaiah would have prophesied that THE DEVIL made Jesus sick when He was on the cross because it would have been THE DEVIL who got to punish our sins when Jesus took them upon Himself. But the devil had nothing to do with our redemption. GOD, not the devil, made Jesus sick to punish our sins (Isaiah 53:10).

The next time sickness comes knocking at your door, remember that it is a work of the devil. He has no right to make you sick. God alone has the right to punish sin with sickness, and He chose to punish your sins by making Jesus sick. That means that you get to walk free from sickness as if you'd never sinned. Don't accept the devil's ILLEGAL sickness! Instead, accept God's LEGAL healing that Jesus purchased for you!

Set Free from Fear of Punishment

1 John 4:18:

There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love.

Most Christians misunderstand the verse above, with a little help from the King James translators. The way it is worded above, it sounds like it is saying, “Fear is a real bummer – if you’re in it, you’ll be tormented!” But the Greek word translated torment does not actually mean agony – the word actually means punishment. In other words, fear has to do with punishment. Most modern translations (not the King James or NKJV) recognize this and word it accordingly using the word punishment, and explain that fear involves, or has to do with, punishment.

I believe that the point John makes in this verse is that if you are going around fearing God’s punishment, you do not really comprehend His love for you yet.

God loves you! He is not interested in punishing you – He punished Jesus so that He would NOT have to punish you.

Yet many Christians cringe before God thinking that He is out to get them. If anything bad, like sickness, comes along, they assume that God is punishing them for some sin that they committed. But if that were true, what use was it for Him to punish Jesus for that sin? If you’re just going to “get what’s coming to you” anyway, the cross was a waste of time and you should burn in hell. Thank God for His mercy that spares us the punishment we deserve!

But God is just, so doesn’t that mean He HAS to do something to you if you sin? NO! He is just, and the justifier of the person who believes in Jesus (Romans 3:26). It is JUST for Him to count your sins as paid for because Jesus already paid off your debt. No JUST judge would force you to pay a huge credit card bill if a nice benefactor had already come along and paid off that bill for you. Making you pay wouldn’t be just at all because a single charge doesn’t have to be paid twice. Likewise, there is no need for your sin debt to be paid twice, because Jesus already paid it. So sickness is NOT a case of God making you pay up for your sins when you have received His Son who already made all your payments on your behalf.

Once you see how much God loves you, you realize that you do not need to fear His wrath. God has not appointed you to wrath (1 Thessalonians 5:9) – Jesus delivers us from the wrath to come (1 Thessalonians 1:10). (Note: That isn’t a typo. The King James says delivered, but the Greek verb is actually in the present tense, i.e., delivers.) The wrath of God did not pass away with the end of the Old Covenant; a quick look at the book of Revelation should be enough to prove that. Jesus did not eternally pacify the wrath of God or stop it from coming in the future upon mankind, but His sacrifice removed the wrath of God from believers forever. As a believer, you do not have to be bound by fear that God is going to do something horrible to you because you did something wrong. You need to believe in His love for you, and in His Word that declares you blameless in His sight.

I am well aware that some people take that last thought to an unreasonable extreme and reason that because they are blameless in God's sight, they can sleep around and bar-hop with no consequences. After all, if God is not recording their sins in heaven now, what difference does it make? Well, for starters, fornicators don't enter the kingdom of God, so if someone really thinks he can fornicate with no regrets, that person is not a believer at all, even if he used to be one. Besides, sin exacts a penalty in this life, and the cross has NOT delivered you from paying certain consequences for sin. Proverbs warns that you will have a reproach that cannot be blotted out if you commit adultery. (Proverbs 6:33 says "A wound and dishonour shall he get; and his reproach shall not be wiped away.") That doesn't mean that adultery is an unpardonable sin that the blood of Jesus could not wash away, but it does mean that your reproach in this life among mankind will not be wiped away. It will be a permanent stain on your record and will cost you opportunities you might otherwise have. Sin always costs you something in this life, so you want to avoid it at all costs! The cross of Calvary did not make sin any less deadly than it ever was; it gave you victory OVER sin so that it can't dominate you anymore unless you willingly yield yourself to it.

However, as a believer, God still deals with you as He would deal with Jesus – another blameless person. The only difference is that God never needed to correct Jesus, but He will correct you if you get into sin. However, he will NEVER condemn you for getting into sin – the devil is the one who condemns. There is no condemnation for the Christian (Romans 8:1).

So we will assume that you are a Biblically normal Christian who submits himself to Jesus' lordship. When you sin, you feel bad about it because your conscience convicts you. You need to realize that God loves you as much as ever and that He stands by ready to help you overcome that sin. He is FOR You, not AGAINST you (Romans 8:31). He is out to help you, not out to "get" you. You cannot possibly sin your way out of God's love!

Why is this discussion in a book about healing? Because if you have ANY thought left in your head that your sickness may be God's way of punishing you, you cannot receive your healing by faith. If God handed you the sickness, how could you ask Him to remove it? You can place yourself, as many do, on a big works treadmill by reasoning that if you just stop a certain sin, God will heal you. But the devil will be sure to point out another sin to you (he is the accuser of the brethren – Revelation 12:10) and tell you that unless you get THAT sin out of your life too, you won't qualify for healing. In his way of thinking, you will NEVER qualify for healing, and as far as your works go, that is correct. But you do not have to qualify for healing with good works because Jesus qualified you for healing. You – not some future, perfected version of you, but the current, imperfect version of you – are qualified for healing by the Lord Jesus Christ. Now that is really good news!

So just receive the healing that Jesus paid for you to have. Don't think that you have to wait to "get your act together a little more" and then approach God to receive healing. Healing is a mercy, not a merit badge. So "let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need" (Hebrews 4:16).

Redeemed from Wrath

Many Christians don't understand the glorious truth that they're redeemed from God's wrath. God doesn't "have it out" for you! He isn't fuming about your latest mistake. His wrath was poured out upon Jesus, and YOU are no longer one of the "children of wrath" (Ephesians 2:3). Jesus delivers YOU from the wrath to come (1 Thessalonians 1:10). YOU are not appointed to wrath (1 Thessalonians 5:9).

Now consider that sickness is part of the wrath of God on the ungodly!

When Jesus became sin for us, He was "made sick" with "our sicknesses" and "our pains." That HAD to happen because sickness is part of the wrath that He pours out. Jesus bore that wrath in your place, and now you do not have to bear any of it!

In the book of Revelation, we see awful physical ailments coming upon people –torment so bad that people want to die (Revelation 9:3-6). These are part of God's wrath to be poured out on those who did not obey the gospel of His Son Jesus Christ. This wrath is the lot of sinners who refuse to receive Christ – but it's never going to be YOUR lot as a Christian! You are exempt from all the terrible physical ailments that will be poured out in the book of Revelation.

I want you to see a simple point. SICKNESS is part of the outpoured wrath of God. You are redeemed from wrath. So you are redeemed from sickness!

Is Your Situation Hopeless?

If it is, good! You won't be the first person to be delivered from a totally hopeless situation! God has delivered His people from so many hopeless situations, it would be hard to count them all. You may fit right into the pattern. First, the hopeless situation, and then the supernatural deliverance that was impossible through natural means.

Of course, I won't kid myself into thinking that you necessarily enjoy being in a hopeless situation, such as a report that you have an incurable disease that will slowly destroy your body, hurting and embarrassing you, making you an increasing burden on your family's time and money. But at least a report like that defines the situation clearly. You must either believe God or die. Either you put His Word to work in your life, or your life on earth will end. In a way, that is a better situation than one where the doctors think that trying eleven different treatments might cure you or delay the progression of your illness. In the case where they might be able to help you, you would be tempted to lean on the arm of flesh and waver in your confidence in God's Word more easily. When it's God or an early exit, the choice is easy. You have no good choice but to hear God's Word and act on it.

It's funny how we get so down on the spies with the bad report who could not enter Canaan, and the grumblers who predicted that the Egyptian army would "terminate" them at the Red Sea, but then when we face a situation that pales in comparison, we don't want to walk the walk of faith that Moses did. We admire Moses for his courage and trust in God, but we want to run away from the situation rather than be taken through it. We get an electric bill in the mail that we can't pay and we panic. Let me tell you, God can deliver you from things much bigger than electric bills!

The Israelites were not just being sued at the Red Sea. They were not just going to be inconvenienced. They were going to die. There was no way out. They were surrounded. They followed God's instructions, and it looked as if God had let them down and given them up to die. Some even said so. Picture what they must have feared. No life to enjoy a spouse and children, no chance to ever fulfill their dreams and make something of their talents. Just a sure, ugly death at the hands of the merciless Egyptians. Just watching the enemy butcher your family and friends, knowing that you're next. It was over; there was no way out. This is not a fairy tale. This happened to a seven-figure group of real flesh-and-blood people like you! Death was certain and everything was hopeless – except for one thing. These people had obeyed God's Word, and God was not going to let them fail. God had promised them something – the land of Canaan. God's promise meant more than all the Egyptian fighters and chariots put together.

God's promise was the only thing these people had, but it was all they needed. When God's promise is the only thing you have, rest assured that it is all you need, too. And God has provided healing for your body even if the doctors have given up hope. God parted the Red Sea for the Israelites. That was impossible – there was just no way it could happen. God can heal whatever is wrong with your body even when seems to be no way that it could happen.

Later, God told Israel to conquer Jericho. Talk about “Mission: Impossible!” The shout of victory out of their mouths caused Jericho’s walls to fall flat. The shout of victory out of your mouth can flatten the walls that stand before you, no matter how impenetrable they seem. God is well able to give you the victory when you can’t possibly figure out a way to get it.

How about Daniel? Wouldn’t you consider being thrown into a den of lions to be a hopeless situation? It was certain death. We get religious about it because we know the outcome, but Daniel was going to be executed as a criminal. They just happened to use lions instead of gas chambers, electric chairs, firing squads or lethal injections back then. He would have made a good subject for one of those “death row” movies. All appeals have failed. They throw a switch or pull their triggers. But the gas that is supposed to end his life somehow doesn’t do it. The electricity in the chair doesn’t hurt him. The bullets all miss. He’s not dead. This is a fairly good illustration of what it must have felt like to be Daniel. He was a regular person like you, not some comic book hero. I’m sure he had some disagreeable feelings before he got thrown to the lions. How would you feel if you were about to be executed using the standard procedure where you live? All Daniel had was God, and God was all he needed.

Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego were also supposed to be executed for their stand for God. Their situation was hopeless, too. You just don’t survive being thrown into a furnace. The people who threw them in didn’t even survive! Don’t you suppose they might have had some tense moments, even though they knew that God would deliver them? It was God or nothing, and God was all they needed.

What about David at Ziklag, where the enemy had torched the city, carried off the women and children captive (including David’s wives), and his own army started to commit treason against him by speaking of stoning him? How would you like to be David that day? This really happened to a real person. David did not have the advantage of reading 1 Samuel 30 to see the outcome. David was probably about ready to die! He was “greatly distressed.” I suppose that if bandits kidnapped your family and burned down your house, you would be greatly distressed, too. Don’t get religious about it; you know full well that you would not consider it a good day. David “encouraged himself in the Lord his God,” prayed and got instructions from God, and got everything back! If David had quit, he would not have gotten anything other than a fatal stoning. He chose to encourage himself in the Lord despite impossible circumstances. If David can do it and get the victory, so can you! David didn’t have your new and better covenant!

Consider Hezekiah’s dilemma. He had at least 185,000 men coming at his city, intent on conquering it. How would you like to have 185,000 people heading toward your town, intent to take it over? Not only that, but they’ve hired a good PR man who has managed to put fear into the people in your town so that they feel defeated before the battle even starts. You can see why Hezekiah “rent his clothes.” (Rent means tore; it does not mean that Hezekiah visited the local tux shop.) When he cried out to God, God sent an angel and killed 185,000 people in one night. (Side note covered elsewhere in this book: God can and will remove you from the picture if you actively set yourself against His people. You won’t stop His plans. God reserves wrath for His enemies. The idea is not to make yourself one of His enemies.)

Now on the other hand, King Asa had a hopeless situation – an exceedingly great disease. King Asa did not encourage himself in the Lord his God. He did not seek God at all. He looked only to doctors who could not cure him. He died. Asa served the same God that David, Daniel, Hezekiah and the others did. In times past, his trust in God delivered Israel in battle. But when he stopped trusting God, God stopped coming through for him.

Backslidden Israel got into some really hopeless situations, and the people died!

From this, we see that being in a hopeless situation is by itself no guarantee that you will be delivered. If you stay true to God and to His Word, you will be, but if you doubt Him or trust in man, He will not necessarily come through for you. God does the impossible stuff but it is up to you to trust Him and take Him at His word.

Now suppose that you took the religious world's approach to a deadly illness. You just accept it as the will of God. You pray to die as painlessly as possible and to have peace while so doing. There won't be any deliverance for you if you do that – you'll just die! The greats of faith listed above were actively trusting God to deliver them. Their deliverance did not just happen. Hezekiah got no help until he asked for it. God will not just swoop down from heaven and heal you just because you are a Christian any more than He would just swoop down and save sinners irrespective of their cooperation.

The woman with the issue of blood in Mark 5:22-43 got no help until she reached out and received it from God. I don't mind stating that God can and does use doctors, but He didn't use the doctors who worked on this woman. She lost everything paying their bills and still only got worse. She had an incurable disease, but her faith got her healed of it. (That's not being arrogant; Jesus Himself said that her faith had made her well. Argue with Him if you don't like that.)

Think of all the blind and deaf people Jesus healed. Their situations were incurable. No one else was going around healing those people. Yet nothing was impossible when men came to the Savior. He is the same Miracle-Worker today.

Your illness is curable, even if your doctor says it isn't. The Great Physician stands ready and able to heal you. He will be more than happy to heal you of your hopeless terminal illness!

Where to Get Your Doctrine

This should seem obvious, but the only place where you should seek doctrine is the Bible.

“Jesus Told Me So” Doctrine

Unfortunately, in modern faith circles, there is a tendency toward direct doctrinal revelations where “Jesus told So-and-So this in person” becomes the primary reason why something should be believed. The fact that someone says that Jesus said something is NEVER in itself a reason to believe ANYTHING. It doesn’t mean that Jesus didn’t really appear to the person, but unless Jesus showed them Scriptures to support the revelation, you need to lay aside that vision as far as doctrine is concerned. Reject any doctrine that is not clearly supported by Scripture, no matter how passionately someone pleads that the Lord gave him a direct revelation.

I’ve read some wonderful revelations that line up with the Word, but I’ve encountered too many so-called revelations that actually contradict the Word and thus could not possibly have been from the Lord. How will you know? You MUST “prove all things” with the Word before accepting them. The better you know your Bible, the less likely it is that you will be deceived by an offbeat revelation. Such an offbeat revelation would be nothing new, as even in Paul’s day they had “every wind of doctrine” blowing through the church, the result being instability instead of maturity.

I am not asking you to believe ANYTHING I say in this book based on a divine encounter. I have not at this writing had a face-to-face encounter with Jesus, though I’ve met several people who have had one. You should only believe what I say if you agree that the Word backs it up. If you don’t agree that what I say lines up with the Bible, go with the Bible instead of with me.

You cannot get doctrine from even your own “inner impressions.” If you feel that the Lord is showing you something (this happens to me often), insist on seeing it in Scripture before teaching it to anyone else.

Experience-Based Doctrine

Many anti-faith people as well as faith people base their doctrine on experience, either their own or someone else’s. Quite a few of these experience-based beliefs are found in the Objections Overruled! section of this book. It is NEVER right to believe something because of what happened (or didn’t happen) to someone. You MUST get your doctrine exclusively from Scripture if you expect to be a stable, mature Christian. If you get your doctrine from a book just because it’s the new Christian bestseller, you are probably setting yourself up for failure, as a lot of books are better at selling than they are at telling the real gospel.

“I Saw It on TV” Doctrine

Taking a TV preacher’s word for something as opposed to going to the Scriptures for yourself will never produce strong faith. The fact that someone else believes something won’t help you unless you have a Bible basis for believing it for yourself. Ask the sons of Sceva how it worked out for them when they just went by what someone else preached without their own revelation of it!

“Lost Books of the Bible”

Some people try to get doctrine out of the “Lost Books of the Bible” that should have stayed lost! There was a good reason that these books were not included in the canon of Scripture – they didn’t go with what the rest of Scripture said or they were just made-up stories to begin with. Apocryphal books are not Scripture and should never be relied on for doctrine.

Your Church and Your Pastor

I hope that you have a pastor who preaches the Word without compromising or tickling people’s ears. Even if you do, you can’t believe something just because your church’s statement of faith says it or just because your pastor says it. If a doctrine is right, your pastor will have shown you in the Word where that doctrine came from so that you can look up verses for yourself, believe them and act on them.

Why You Can Believe in Divine Healing and Not Get Healed

Many people all over the world attend good churches that preach and teach divine healing. Their statement of faith says that Christ's atonement purchased your healing. Yet they are not healed! If you ask them if they believe in healing, they will assure you that they do. They know all about 1 Peter 2:24. They know what Matthew 8:16-17 says. They have heard that God heals all their diseases, as Psalm 103:3 says. They know that God is the Lord who Heals You from Exodus 15:26. They may be able to quote many more verses about healing. If you tried to tell them that healing is not for all today, they would never believe you. Yet they are sick! Sometimes the church people are just as sick as the world when a stupid little virus goes around. How can this possibly be?

They know that there can be hindrances to healing, but they are not deliberately violating their consciences and choosing to sin. They are not in unforgiveness, envy, strife, or anything else that would hinder their healing. They are walking uprightly before God. Yet they are still sick!

It is possible to believe in divine healing and never get healed. You can have 100% correct theological doctrine about healing and stay sick. That is because you do not get healed by believing in the doctrine of divine healing!

You need to believe in the doctrine of healing to get healed, but you do not get healed by simply believing that Jesus bore your sicknesses for you. You do not get healed simply by believing that God is both willing and able to heal you, or even that He would surely heal you.

You get healed when you receive your healing from God. You have to receive it. You have to ACT on the Word. There is a big difference between agreeing with the doctrine of healing and believing that you personally have received your healing. If you merely assent to the fact that divine healing is for all today, you have not done what Jesus said to do. You have not believed that you received when you prayed. That is the key step. You can get everything else right, but if you do not pray and believe that you receive your healing, you will stay sick unless medicine and doctors can help you.

Many of us who theologically believe in the doctrine of divine healing do not have as much "heart faith" as we think we do in the matter. We think we believe it until we get sick. Then we let our bodies tell us what is going to happen. We haven't really let it become a part of us. We let the seed get planted, but we don't take the time to water it and care for it. If you just go to church once a week and hear that healing is for you, but you never take the time to reflect on and speak these Scriptures about yourself out of your mouth, your faith will never be where it needs to be. You will be frustrated, knowing in your head that you should be healed, but not seemingly able to overcome your senses when it comes to receiving healing. If you want to be a person of faith, there is a price tag. You need to study God's Word diligently and speak it out of your mouth. Get used to hearing yourself agree with God about your healing. Then, when you get sick, it won't be so hard, because your words have agreed with God all along. You can just keep saying what you're used to saying.

The Difference between “The Anointing” and “Your Healing”

It is possible to confuse “the anointing” with “your healing” when you are being ministered to in a service setting. I have some thoughts on this to share with you that I believe will help you.

When you are in a prayer line, it is common (at least in better places) to feel something tangible in the air. You are feeling “the anointing.” However, it is possible to feel the anointing go into you and still not receive your healing. In fact, if you don’t receive your healing, the anointing will go back out of you because there will be no demand on it.

It is possible to feel the anointing so strongly that you cannot even stay on your feet, and yet get up without your healing. That is because the anointing is not the same thing as your healing. The anointing will go into you and work in your body when you exercise faith for your healing. It’s not enough just to be around the anointing. Recall the story in Luke 5:17-26 about how the power (anointing) of the Lord was present to heal the religious leaders. The anointing was there to heal them all, but they did not get healed because they did not mix faith with that anointing. The anointing by itself is not enough. Even if you are healed by the gifts of the Spirit with no faith of your own, you will generally need faith to keep your healing.

I think what happens is that some people feel the anointing and assume that it is their healing. Then they don’t exercise any faith because they figure that they must have received something already because they felt the power of God. Then they are disappointed when they feel rotten again after the anointing subsides or the service is over. They think, “I felt something, so I assumed I had my healing.” But faith does not have anything to do with your physical feelings! You don’t assume anything based on how you feel after you pray, even if you sense the presence of God all over you. You wouldn’t ask your body how it feels to determine if you’re saved or righteous before God, would you?

On the other hand, if you keep your focus on God and His Word rather than on the minister or your physical sensations in the service, you will pull the anointing right into yourself. It will go to work in your body and bring about the healing that you desire. If you’re going to focus on something, focus on receiving your healing, not on feeling the power of God. Most of us love to feel the power of God and get “goose bumps,” but the idea is to receive something, not to feel something. Remember, it’s a healing line, not a feeling line. You can receive your healing without feeling a thing. Do not assume that just because you did not feel a tangible anointing, you did not receive your healing. As I’ve said elsewhere, I remember being the only person left standing in a healing line once where I received by faith. I was also the only one I know of who received his healing then. We don’t know if the people in Jesus’ ministry fell over or not. If they did, God doesn’t consider that important because He doesn’t mention it. The idea is to get healed, not upended.

Can you see the difference? The power of God (the anointing) can be there to heal you, but just because you feel it in the air or feel it go into you does not mean that you have received your healing. You receive by faith, not by feelings. Stay focused on receiving your healing. Don't be distracted by feelings. If good feelings come, enjoy them, but don't depend on them to determine whether or not you received your healing.

Your Heavenly Father and Your Healing

If your children disobeyed you, would you deliberately put chicken pox on them to teach them something? Would you teach them patience by putting cancer on them if you could? Would you try to develop their character by making them gasp for every breath with a lung disease?

Of course not! You do everything you can to help your children get well, don't you? You certainly don't try to make them sick.

God reveals Himself as your heavenly Father. Are you a better parent than God? If you would not do the things listed above, and God would do them, you would be a more loving parent than God. Some agency would surely declare God to be an unfit parent.

If you could do something for your sick child, wouldn't you do it? God can do anything. He loves you and wants you to be in health. He is not withholding healing from you or your children. However, he has put healing on a faith basis. To receive healing from God, you must believe that you receive it. God is not waiting to feel like healing you. He is waiting for you to receive something from Him in faith – something that He is ALREADY offering you.

Jesus told a foreign woman that deliverance for her daughter's problem was the "children's bread." He was talking about not giving Gentiles what was for the Jews under the Law. He did not say that healing was a special favor; He said it was the children's bread. In other words, it's a necessity that your heavenly Father has provided for His children. It belongs to His children. Now under the New Covenant, Gentiles are equal partakers with Jews of God's healing mercies. The children's bread belongs to you, too.

It amazes me that anyone can say, "God is love," and then say, "God wants you to suffer sickness so that you will grow." Is that what love would do? I suppose there are some deceived Christians out there who think that sickness will work out for the best, and that it is really better for you than not being sick, and God knows that and loves you enough to make you sick. But God's kind of love is better than that. God's kind of love does not abandon you and leave you as a helpless doormat for the devil. God loved you enough to give you His best, His Son Jesus Christ. He also says that with Him He freely gives you all things (Romans 8:32), including healing. God is good and God is generous. That is what God is really like. He has given you His Spirit within you that cries out, "Father!" (See Romans 8:15 and Galatians 4:6. The word actually used for "Father" is the Aramaic word Abba, and its actual meaning is debatable. That is not because of any chance that Paul was referring to a Swedish pop group, but rather because some theologians claim that it means Daddy, while others claim that it is a more formal way to address a father. I haven't seen reliable evidence that it really means Daddy, and I don't assert things that I can't prove myself. But one thing stands out no matter what it means – it means that you have the SAME relationship with your Father now that Jesus had, because HE referred to Him as "Abba, Father" (Mark 14:36) – exactly the same term that the Holy Spirit uses to cry out to Him through us in the 2 verses above. This makes sense because you are Jesus' brother or sister now (Hebrews 2:11).)

Religious people couldn't care less if you talk about God, but when you start calling Him Father, they get upset. God is your spiritual Father. You have a physical father on the earth, but your physical father is not your spiritual father – God is your spiritual Father. He is a better Father than your natural father is. He loves you and cares for you.

If your picture of God is that he is ready to condemn you for everything, you must renew your mind with His Word and discover how wonderful He really is. Otherwise, you will never trust Him for your healing because you won't think He's good enough to let you have it. God is for you, not against you (Romans 8:31). God is not your problem; He is your answer. God is not your Sickener; he is your Healer. He loved you enough to have Jesus bear stripes on His back before He went to the cross to pay the price for your healing.

You are not redeemed from suffering persecution, but you are redeemed from suffering illnesses. Your Father does not want you to suffer with sickness. He wants you to be healed, and He sent His Word to heal you (Psalm 103:20), not to "comfort you in your sickness." He loves you as your Father. If you get the picture of God that Jesus and the New Testament writers paint, it will be much easier for you to receive your healing.

Quickened by the Holy Spirit

Here Paul tells us the blessed fact that God, who raised Christ from the dead, will impart life to your mortal (not dead) body through the Holy Spirit who lives in you! This same Spirit did miracles through Christ throughout His earthly ministry. (Remember that Jesus was anointed with the Holy Spirit and did no miracles before then.) You don't have some weak, wimpy, watered-down Holy Spirit Lite or Holy Spirit Limited Trial Version. You have the same Spirit who ministered through Jesus! Not part of the same Spirit – the Holy Spirit is not divisible (John 3:34). You have the same Holy Spirit in you who did Christ's miracles, and raised Him up (1 Peter 3:18) from where the "dead ones" were.

And what will he do for you? Paul says that he will quicken (give life to) your mortal body. As discussed in an objection reply elsewhere, this certainly refers to this current life. Paul is not talking about the Spirit quickening your dead body! He's talking about the Spirit quickening your current mortal, but not dead, body.

If the Holy Spirit was able to heal the sick through Christ, don't you suppose that He could heal your body as well? He's living in you, after all. You don't have to run to a healing crusade to find Him. You have a Person inside you who is well able to cure every disease that you could possibly have. The power to heal your body is in your body right now! Now you can release your faith in the Healer who indwells you.

You can go to a healing service where the Holy Spirit manifests Himself. But the same Holy Spirit who does those healings is in you all the time. The same Spirit who moves in those services wants to give life to your body on an ongoing basis. Stop and think about the Powerhouse within you! There is no power shortage with Him. The Holy Spirit has more than enough power to heal any problem you have. Welcome Him to do His work of giving life to your mortal body.

Power, Then and Now

There are two main types of power in the New Testament. One is the Greek word exousia, which means “power over” in the sense of authority. The other is the Greek word dunamis, which means power as we normally think of it – might or energy. We can see both in Luke 10:19, where Jesus gives His followers power (authority = exousia) over all the power (might = dunamis) of the enemy. Our discussion here involves the word dunamis.

Jesus was anointed with dunamis according to Acts 10:38. What did He do with this dunamis? We see that Jesus walked in the “power (dunamis) of the Spirit” in Luke 4:14: “And Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee: and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about.” We know that dunamis involved healing power – Luke 5:17 says that the power (dunamis) of the Lord was present to heal the people. In Mark 5:30 and Luke 8:46, the woman with the issue of blood touched Jesus and power (the King James Version uses the word virtue but it’s the same Greek word dunamis) came out of Jesus and went into the woman, healing her of her affliction. In Luke 6:19, “virtue” (dunamis) went out of Jesus and healed them all. The word dunamis is used many other places in relation to Jesus’ earthly ministry and the miracles that He did.

Now the question is, is this dunamis something only Jesus could have or something that we as His followers can also have today?

One foreshadowing of the answer is found in Mark 9:1, where Jesus said that there were some there who would live to see the kingdom of God coming in power. Tradition tells us that this referred to the Mount of Transfiguration, but that doesn’t make sense. The kingdom of God did not manifest in a new way on that mountain, and no one got a miracle or a healing either. In fact, there was no exercise of dunamis there. However, Jesus could have been speaking of the Holy Spirit’s coming in Acts 2:4, which some there DID live to see.

Ready to get excited? Jesus made things clearer when He told His disciples to wait in Jerusalem until they were endued with power (dunamis) from on high (Luke 24:49). He explicitly said this His followers would receive power (dunamis) when the Holy Spirit came upon them (Acts 1:8). This is still available for “as many as the Lord our God shall call” (Acts 2:39) – including YOU! Paul went so far as to say in 1 Corinthians 4:20 that the kingdom of God (which you’re in) is not a matter of word (talk) but of power (dunamis).

The dunamis that Jesus had is the same dunamis you receive when you receive the Holy Spirit! That is why Jesus said that the person who followed Him would do the works that He did and greater (John 14:12).

The Holy Spirit on whom Jesus depended to do His miracles now resides in YOU. Has the Holy Spirit changed His will since Jesus' day? Of course not; we see miracles done in Jesus' name through the power of the Holy Spirit in the book of Acts. The Holy Spirit is the "Spirit of might" (Isaiah 11:2). He will always be the Spirit of might. The fact that you have the same Holy Spirit available to you that Jesus had available to Himself is the reason why you can do the same works that Jesus did. It is why it was expedient for Jesus to go away – so that millions of authorized distributors of Holy Spirit power could be around the globe.

Are YOU expecting to go out and do Jesus' works and greater? If you aren't, you should be! As Christians, we should believe the words of our Lord and go act on them.

Whose Power Is It?

Acts 3:12:

And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?

YOU do not have to generate the power to heal the sick! You simply need to be a channel of GOD'S power that heals the sick. It's HIS power...flowing through YOU. That is why you don't have to FEEL like you have all kinds of power inside you when you have an opportunity to lay hands on a sick person. God's power manifests when you exercise the AUTHORITY that you have in Christ to lay hands on the sick.

Some people have gotten all caught up in what THEY have to do to build spiritual power. Hmm...maybe if they went on a long fast, they would receive more spiritual power. No, that's unbiblical. You do not FAST to get power – you FAST to keep your flesh under so that your flesh doesn't get in the way of exercising the Holy Spirit's power. You receive spiritual power by being baptized with the Holy Spirit! If you're already baptized with the Holy Spirit, you already HAVE power. The question is what you do with it.

Let's see what the Bible says about our father in the faith, Abraham:

Romans 4:21:

And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform.

Abraham was fully persuaded that what GOD has promised, GOD was able to perform.

This verse does NOT say that Abraham was fully persuaded that what GOD had promised, ABRAHAM was able to perform.

It is clear that Abraham was NOT able to perform the needed miracle – it took God's power to do that. This was not power that Abraham worked up. Abraham simply placed his faith in God that God would back His word with His power.

You should do the same. When you lay hands on a sick person, believe that God will back His Word with HIS power. That's a whole lot better than trying to “work up” power yourself to do something that only God can do.

How Much Do You Desire Healing?

You need to settle in your heart whether you really want to be healed or not! Do you really want to be healed, or do you want to have some reason to remain the object of sympathy and have people dote over you, at least until they get tired of hearing you only talk about your pains and sufferings? Do you really want to be healed, or would you rather continue to lie in bed, hang around the house watching TV and collect disability payments? Do you really want to be healed, or do you want to die? Do you really want to be healed, or do you fear losing your social acceptance among others who have your condition? Do you really want to be healed, or do you want an excuse to complain and act ornery all the time? Do you really want to be healed, or is it less important to you than watching game shows and soap operas until the undertaker takes you under? Do you really want to be healed, or do you only want healing if you can still devote the same amount of time you're used to spending on video games, watching TV shows, reading and writing social media posts, and so on?

If you have decided in your heart that you can live with it, and it really isn't important to you one way or another if you get healed or not, you do not desire healing. Do not attempt to apply Mark 11:24 if that is so. Right after you pray, the devil will lean on you to give up, and you will. If you are not determined to receive your healing, you won't receive it – or else you'll forfeit it soon after you receive it. You can't be wishy-washy about it, because you will get negative pressure. You will get it from your body, you will get it from unenlightened Christians, and you will get it from the devil. Sometimes you'll get it from the doctor, too. If you don't really care, you are sure to cave in and you won't be able to stay in faith.

(By the way, a trip to concordance will establish that the word desire in the King James Version of Mark 11:24, could better be translated ask. So I deliberately didn't use that verse as a theme text for this topic, because that would make the common mistake of preaching something that is true but basing it on the wrong Scripture.)

In John 15:7, Jesus said, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." If you don't really want healing, don't ask for it until you do. Also, notice the condition that you must abide in Jesus and let His words abide in you. If you don't meet the condition, you don't qualify for the promise.

You must spend time meditating on healing Scriptures. It doesn't have to be every waking minute, but you need to plant and water the seed of God's Word in your heart so that it can spring up and produce a harvest of healing. If you are unwilling to do this, just call the doctor and let medicine do all it can for you, because you won't be healed supernaturally.

Some people don't see the need to pay this price because they know someone who was healed by a manifestation of the Spirit without exercising faith. Maybe they were healed of a prior illness that way. Thank God for signs and wonders and people who get instant miracles, but they are the exception, not the rule. In general, people must receive healing by planting healing Scriptures in their hearts until it is more natural to act on them than to act contrary to them. You must be willing to mortify your flesh by the Spirit so that you act on what God says and not based on seemingly overwhelming pains and feelings. No Christian has a guarantee of being healed through the gifts of the Spirit, but every Christian has the right to receive healing by acting on God's Word. It takes work. You must labor to enter into rest, as contradictory as that seems at first.

Maybe you don't want to aim your faith at a minor physical condition that doesn't matter much or could be solved by a couple of aspirin pills. Just make sure that you know where you stand. Don't try to use your faith for things that you don't really desire, because you'll back off at the first circumstance or report that says that you aren't healed. However, I recommend that you DO aim your faith at EVERY condition, no matter how minor. It's good practice. Then if anything really serious comes along, you're already used to believing God and not your flesh.

Now let's assume that you really do desire your healing. You are willing to face the inevitable pressure and contrary circumstances and stand your ground. You must believe that you receive your healing "when you pray" and you shall have it. Those are your instructions from your Creator and Father. Obey them!

God would be unjust to command you to do something that you cannot really do. If Jesus said that you can believe you receive something when you pray, you can do it. That's right, YOU. You, the person with your name, reading this computer screen, can believe you receive the healing you desire when you pray. Jesus said you can do it. So you can. Don't let anyone talk you out of it and don't talk yourself out of it.

Consider the tenacity of some of those whom Jesus healed. Blind Bartimaeus cried out to Jesus all the louder when men around him told him to shut up (Mark 10:46-52). The woman with the issue of blood could have been stoned for being out in public, but went out and touched Jesus anyway (Matthew 9:20-22, Mark 5:25-34, Luke 8:43-48). No wonder she feared and trembled when she told Jesus all the truth! The Syrophonecian lady persisted in asking for deliverance for her daughter after the disciples kept trying to get rid of her and even after Jesus told her (correctly) that she had no right to healing because she wasn't a Jew. The ten lepers weren't supposed to be anywhere near Jesus, but came anyway to be healed. These people wanted healing and put their lives where their mouths were. What a difference from those who blab a few "Healing Scriptures" because they think that's all they need to do. Friend, you will need some tenacity if you want to be healed and stay healed! Many men today will try to talk you right out of your healing, just as they tried to do to Bartimaeus. You will need some patience and Holy Ghost boldness if you expect to be healed.

You may not feel like you can do it. You probably feel like you can't do it. Big deal. Walking by faith has nothing to do with how you feel about it. You can't let your emotions rule you. One of the biggest lessons you need to learn in life is that you can act on God's Word without feeling like it will work, and it will still work! As long as you believe in your heart, you can even have doubt in your head! Did you realize that? Doubt only chokes your faith when you act on it instead of acting on what God said. As long as you act on what God said, you will get God's results. Acting on what God said includes speaking what God says about your situation.

Get ready to experience great freedom in your life when you realize that you can believe that you receive when you pray. (You already did that to get saved.) This is not some special advanced topic for faith giants. This is easy and you can do it. Nothing is so bad that you can't overcome it with faith in God and His Word. Knowing this destroys fear in your life. You will no longer be afraid of some awful thing that Satan might bring you next. You will know that no matter what comes along, you will be able to overcome it with your faith. You will be able to believe that you receive when you pray and your answer will manifest and your problem will be over. You will speak and you will "have whatsoever you say."

Why You Might Not Want to Pray to Receive Your Healing Right Away

One sure way to frustrate yourself and tie yourself up in knots is to attempt to pray the prayer of faith to receive something when you are not really in faith. It is not enough to know that some preacher believes in healing. You have to believe it before it will work for you.

This is one cause of the whiny “I tried it and it didn’t work” testimonies that some people have. There is no such thing as “trying” to be in faith, anyway. You either are in faith or you aren’t. If you’re “trying” to be in faith, you’re not in faith. Did you ever notice that Jesus did not teach that faith was a struggle? We who believe have entered into rest (Hebrews 4:3). If you’re struggling, you haven’t entered into rest, and therefore, you don’t believe. I’m not saying that to be ornery; I’m trying to help you.

You will not get more faith by praying more. You will just get more frustrated. You get faith by reading and hearing God’s Word, not by praying. As one preacher said, prayer does not make faith work; faith makes prayer work. If you are not ready to believe that you receive, it is not time to pray! It is time to read and hear the Word. That is the only way that you will build your faith. Even hearing testimonies of how others received their healings won’t build your faith although it will give you hope.

I am convinced that we preachers sometimes do our listeners a disservice when we major on testimonies of miraculous, instantaneous healings that were the result of special manifestations of the Spirit. Sure, we want everyone to know what drastic conditions got healed when we ministered because that makes us look good. But there is something far more important than looking good as a preacher. The main objective of any healing preacher is (or should be) how to teach people to receive their healing for themselves. Some unbeliever or backslider might get a great healing through the gifts of healings in a service, and that’s exciting. However, that won’t necessarily help you receive your healing. You can’t do what the other person did, because sometimes the other person didn’t do a thing. God just had mercy on him.

To some extent, it depends on our purpose. If the purpose of the meetings is to get unbelievers saved, it is right to trumpet God’s goodness through testimonies of amazing miracles done by the Spirit. God can and does use this method to get sinners to come and be saved. However, if the purpose is to see believers get healed, this should not be the primary emphasis. It is my personal opinion that we should share more testimonies of people who believed they received, saw absolutely no results for a while or even had things get worse, and then had what they had received manifest in the natural. This might not please the crowds as much, but it would give the serious Christians in attendance a lot more help by showing them examples to follow in receiving their own healing. I would rather see more people get healed than try to convince you that I’m really hot stuff.

Jesus was rather direct about it. He said to believe that you receive when you pray and whatever it is that you ask shall be yours. If you are not prepared to believe that you receive when you pray, you are not ready to pray! That's not a sin; we've all been there. This isn't a put-down. You will ultimately do much better if you wait until you are in faith before you pray. There is no point in praying until you are there. Or if you pray, pray that God will make the Scriptures about healing come alive to you as you read them. Even if your situation seems desperate, it will not help you one bit to try to receive something that you are not really convinced you are receiving when you pray. It will hurt you rather than help you. It will make it harder for you to pray the prayer of faith later.

You can't be "half in faith" and "half receive" something. If you are not in faith, you won't receive anything. James warned about how the double-minded man receives nothing from the Lord (James 1:5-8). The double-minded man is part in faith and part in doubt, and he receives nothing, not some pro-rata portion equal to the ratio of his faith to the sum of his faith plus his unbelief.

Build your faith in the Word before you pray. This is why having multi-day healing meetings is effective. Some people are just not ready to receive in the first service in the crusade, and it might hurt them more than help them to lay hands on them right away. But if they take the time to hear the Word, they will have a basis for faith. Then when they come up for prayer, they are prepared to believe that they receive healing when they pray.

Why You Don't Have to Touch Jesus as He Passes By

Some traditional people have an expression about touching Jesus as He passes by in a service. That is not a Church Age concept. Too often we picture Jesus seated at the right hand of God in heaven and forget that He also indwells you, the believer! Jesus the Healer lives inside you! You don't have to go find Him somewhere and wait for Him to walk by while singing Kum Ba Ya Ma Lawd. All that He is dwells in you!

There is such a thing as responding to the anointing in a service. In such a case, you should answer a call for a healing line that applies to you as quickly as possible (without bowling others over to get down there). That is responding to the anointing, but not really responding to Jesus as He passes by, despite the popular expression.

The same Jesus Christ (Hebrews 13:8) who healed all that were oppressed of the devil (Acts 10:38) lives inside you now!

Colossians 1:27 speaks of "Christ in you, the hope of glory." Jesus promised to live in you (John 14:23). God the Father is in you (Ephesians 4:6). God dwells in you (2 Corinthians 6:16, 1 John 4:15). Your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit who is in you (1 Corinthians 6:19). God Almighty lives in you! He won't pass you by. He is in you to stay! The Spirit abides with you forever (John 14:16). The same presence of God that was in the Old Testament "holy of holies" is now in you. When Jesus died, the veil in the temple in front of the holy of holies was torn from top to bottom, indicating that God had moved out! The same awesome presence that was there is in you now!

You do not have to try to grab Jesus as He passes by or try to get Him to "Kum Ba Ya." He already Came Into Ya. The same Jesus who healed the multitudes lives in you! You have constant access to the Healer, the Miracle Worker. During Jesus' earth ministry, if you wanted a healing, you had to go find Him. Now you don't even have to look for Him, because you know where He is! The same Jesus who healed the sick in the Bible lives in you. He is available to heal you today!

Why You Don't Need to Pray the Power Down

God's power is already down! We can pray for the "power gifts" of the Spirit to manifest in our services, but anyone who knows the Word can receive healing without a special manifestation of the Spirit. You can get anything you need by believing God's Word.

We can and should pray for manifestations of the Spirit as signs to unbelievers (and carnal or weak believers, for that matter). Thank God for people who get healed that way. But you don't need to get healed that way.

There is no power shortage on the earth.

"For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth" (Romans 1:16). "For the preaching of the cross is to them the perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God" (1 Corinthians 1:18). The gospel is the power of God!

Why is this? Jesus has already provided for us everything we need, including healing. We don't need to ask that God's power will fall on people. We need to tell them that healing is already theirs so that they can believe it. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believes. The power is not activated in their lives when we pray for power. It is activated when they believe and respond to the gospel.

That is how you got saved. No one had to pray for "saving power" to come over you. No one had to believe that there would be a special "salvation anointing" for you. The power to save you was there all along. It did something for you when you believed the gospel. It is no different with healing. There is enough power in the room you are in right now to heal every sick person on the earth. How do I know that? God is in you, and He has that power! It is not a question of power. You don't have to pray for "healing power" to show up. The power to heal you has been there all along. It does something for you when you believe the part of the gospel that pertains to healing.

Jesus told His disciples that they could not cast out a demon because of their unbelief. He did not say it was due to their lack of power. It could not have been, because He had already given them "power over all devils" before this event happened. They did not need to pray more power down. They needed to believe Jesus' words. The gospel is the power of God to him who believes.

I can still remember a passionate sermon I heard once at a Pentecostal church. The preacher was getting all excited and being very dramatic. He kept saying over and over, "People, we need the power of God! We need the power of God in church today. We need to pray for more power. God, give us your power!" It was very heartfelt and also one of the worst sermons I have ever heard in my life. (It was not the worst. I think that one I heard about God causing His people to fail so that only He would get glory was worse, as was one about Mary leading an attack on Satan in the last days.) I sat there thinking, "Doesn't this man know anything? He's telling us to pray for something we already have! Thank God that the people are falling asleep and barely paying attention and this rubbish won't sink in!"

You have authority over Satan now. You have authority over sickness now. There is no more power to get. You have it. It is not a case of getting more power; it is a case of using what you have. The reason few people do so is that they do not feel like they have this power. So what? God told you to believe the gospel, not feel the gospel. The New Covenant is not a feeling. It works when you act on it.

If you are looking for healing through a special manifestation of the Spirit in a service, you may have to keep looking for “the power.” You can receive healing just as well when you are not in such a service.

I got healed of my worst medical problems to date through faith in the Word. There was no tangible anointing present in any of the three cases; I just believed that I received my healing. In one case, things got a lot worse for almost a couple of weeks, but then the problem (a growth in my eye) instantly vanished and never came back. I did not need more power. I did not need extra prayer. I had already prayed and believed that I had received my healing. I stood on God’s Word and His Word became the power of God to me because I believed. Through faith and patience I inherited the promise (Hebrews 6:12).

Why God Can Never Withhold Healing from You

Satan sometimes fools Christians into thinking that God is withholding their healing from them because He's upset or because their Christian walks don't measure up. So let's clear the air on this one and prove that God can NEVER withhold healing from you.

Ephesians 1:3 tells us that God has blessed us with ALL spiritual blessings. 2 Peter 1:3-4 tells us that God has given us all things that pertain to life and godliness. 1 Peter 2:24 doesn't tell you that Jesus' stripes provided a way that you might be able to get healed. Rather, it declares healing as something that is already yours because it was purchased with Jesus' stripes. The Holy Spirit wasn't given to help you get things from God; He was given to show you the things that God ALREADY gave you (1 Corinthians 2:12). Paul didn't pray that the Ephesians would GET an inheritance from God; He prayed that God would open their eyes to see the inheritance that they ALREADY HAD (Ephesians 1:15-23).

God can't withhold healing from you because it is already your legal possession. It belongs to you as a believer. It's ridiculous to think that God WON'T give you something that He already GAVE you!

Just as a natural illustration, say that Rich Mann, host of the show "Something for Nothing" on the Reality Network, shows up out of the blue and deeds over a nice car to a couple named Reid and Kawmi Marks. The camera crew then gets to track them for a while to see how their lives are changed. At one point, Reid and Kawmi have a conversation on camera about how they actually detest rich people and think that their wealth should be forcibly redistributed by the government. Then Reid realizes that they just "bit the hand that fed them" and says in despair to Kawmi, "There's no use trying to use that car today. Rich is probably mad because of what we said, and there's no way he'll let us have the car today." Kawmi says, "But that car is already OURS. Rich has no say about it because he gave it to us. It's in our name. If Rich has a problem with us, it's too late! Let's go drive our car!"

While Rich was unhappy with how the Marks couple responded after his gift, he still didn't take it back. A deal is a deal. (He was at least grateful that he was the comfortable host of "Something for Nothing" rather having to be the star of "Alone in the Wilderness," where he would have had to brave the elements while not letting the footprints or shadow of the cameraman get into any shots and spoil the illusion of total solitude.)

Of course, Kawmi was right – when something is already yours, it's too late for someone to "withhold" it from you. That is why God can never withhold healing from you. The only issue is whether you will walk in the healing that He already "deeded over" to you.

Trust the Word to Work

When you preach healing, or any other part of the gospel, take the pressure off yourself and put it on the Word. It can handle pressure better than you can! Too often we think that it is the slickness or clarity of our presentation that will get people healed, but the Bible teaches otherwise.

1 Corinthians 2:4-5

1 Thessalonians 1:5

1 Corinthians 4:20

You don't have to have advanced public speaking skills to share the Word. Now, I'm not excusing being unprepared or trying on purpose to be hokey just to prove you're a "good ol' boy." But you should expect God's power to back up your words. God's power backing up imperfect public speaking is infinitely better than eloquent powerlessness. Don't worry if you aren't Ken or Barbie, either – most people aren't! If you don't think you're a great public speaker, join the club – although Paul was brilliant, he was considered a miserable public speaker and he wasn't even good-looking (which alone would probably cost him some TV gigs today). God used him anyway, and He can use YOU, too!

2 Corinthians 10:10:

For his letters, say they, are weighty and powerful; but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible.

It's the WORD that you're preaching that produces results, not your personality or delivery:

1 Thessalonians 2:13:

For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe.

Colossians 1:6:

Which is come unto you, as it is in all the world; and bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and knew the grace of God in truth:

God's Word is not bound (2 Timothy 2:9); it runs swiftly (Psalm 147:15). God sent His WORD and healed people (Psalm 107:20). Expect the Word to grow mightily and prevail (Acts 19:20).

Paul got a lot of results by putting the word out regardless of his appearance or speaking ability, and you should expect the same! At the end of the day, how much you benefit your hearers depends on how much of the Word you have given them, not on how entertaining or sensational you were.

Jesus Opened Heaven

I want to share with you the deeply spiritual thing I did that ensures that I always preach under an open heaven.

I got saved!

Jesus opened heaven.

I find it quite aggravating when people keep trying to come up with ways to “open heaven.” The only reason that people come up with these gimmicks is because they believe that heaven is closed. That’s also why the gimmicks are so useless and flaky – they try to accomplish what has already been accomplished.

So many Christians have more faith in defeated demons than in the King of Glory who conquered them all. They picture the sky as being full of ugly demons and figure that their special prayers are required to punch a hole in the demon layer so that a little trickle of glory can pour out somewhere where there is an open heaven. That is absurd.

You do not need to “open heaven” with extravagant praise and worship. I LIKE extravagant praise and worship. I express myself exuberantly when I praise and worship God. Good praise and worship creates a nice atmosphere and it pleases God regardless of the benefits it has for us. I’ve led worship as some good-sized campmeetings, so I am certainly not against it. But it doesn’t grant an audience with God – the shed blood of Jesus does. And that’s a good thing. That blood is forever shed, much as Satan wishes that he could un-shed it. We aren’t always offering extravagant praise and worship, so if that is what opens heaven, heaven is only open the minority of the time. But because of Jesus’ blood, heaven is open ALL the time! I like that much better than the picture that some people paint.

You do not need to “open heaven” by having 2 Chronicles 7:14 meetings. You only need those if the conditions in 2 Chronicles 7:13 apply – that GOD shuts up heaven and there is no rain, GOD commands locusts to devour the land, and GOD sends pestilence among His people – things that will NEVER happen under the New Covenant. 2 Chronicles 7:13-14 is one thought, which is why 2 Chronicles 7:13-14 does not apply to the New Covenant. Read it for yourself! You might be shocked, but you might also be mightily blessed when you stop wasting your time asking God to have mercy on your country. (I think that even the phrase “Lord, have mercy” should be replaced with the phrase “Lord, thank You for your mercy,” but I’m pickier than most people.) God IS already merciful, and Jesus already IS our merciful High Priest. We don’t have to ask Him to become merciful, toward you or toward your country.

2 Chronicles 7:13-14:

If I shut up heaven that there be no rain, or if I command the locusts to devour the land, or if I send pestilence among my people;

If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land.

You do not need to “open heaven” with “spiritual warfare.” A horrible amount of time gets wasted by Christians who think that they have to go up to the high places to tear the devil’s kingdom down. Spiritual warfare takes place between your two ears, not between the two Van Allen belts. If you want to see people delivered from the devil’s kingdom, lead them to Christ instead of commanding demons to leave town. They have a right to be around, but they don’t have the right to defeat Christians.

We don’t have to open heaven to get heaven’s treasures on the earth. We are ALREADY blessed with every spiritual blessing (Ephesians 1:3). We already HAVE BEEN GIVEN all things that pertain to life and godliness (2 Peter 1:3-4). Christians are notorious for constantly trying to get what they already have and become who they already are. (Read Who You Are and What You Have to make sure that you’re not asking for what’s already yours!)

God says that you can come boldly to His throne of grace so that you can obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need (Hebrews 4:16). This is PROOF that heaven is open to you.

Picturing a closed heaven leaves you with the incorrect mental impression that God is withholding things from us. So many people think that heaven will be shut until we reach a certain quota of revival prayer. I can tell you exactly how much revival prayer is required under that scenario – just slightly more than you actually have time to do! But the Word tells us that God didn’t spare His Son, so how will He not with Him freely give us all things (Romans 8:32)! NO good thing (including “revival”) will He withhold from them who walk uprightly (Psalm 84:11)! Contrary to popular opinion, God is not holding back anything! He’s just waiting for people to make themselves available for His use. (On-the-job training is available).

Lazy, carnal Christians are the impediment to moves of God, not closed heavens.

If someone wants to be saved, does he have to wait until the local cosmic intercessors club opens heaven? NO. He can receive the new birth right now. If someone needs a healing or a miracle, does he have to wait until the local cosmic intercessors club opens heaven? NO! He can receive his healing or miracle right now.

You don’t need to ask God to open up the heavens. They’re open.

You don’t need to gather the intercessors and bombard the gates of heaven. They aren’t shut.

We Hold the Keys

Believers have a lot more latitude to act on the earth than most of them ever know. Tradition has left believers with the notion that everything that happens is up to God in His sovereignty. Then they get frustrated when they ask God to do something and He doesn't do anything. Their usual conclusion is that God has made a "no" decision to the matter in His sovereignty, when that is far from the truth. Much of the time, the issue is that we don't realize that God has already given us authority on the earth and that He will back us when we use it. If we don't use our authority, nothing happens, and all too often we think that God's will is the reason that nothing happened.

We think sometimes that Jesus holds all the keys, but He doesn't! Jesus holds the keys to hell and death (Revelation 1:18), but He has given the keys to the kingdom of heaven to the Church (see Matthew 16:19). I realize that many have interpreted Jesus' remark to mean that Peter personally would have the keys, but if that were the case, what happened when Peter died? Did the Church no longer have the keys because Jesus collected them from Peter when he came to heaven? That wouldn't make much sense.

What heaven binds and looses depends on what we bind and loose on the earth. Jesus gave us that authority.

Therefore, it is not a matter of just "waiting on God" to see what God wants to do. Jesus taught the opposite of that in many of His statements. In particular, He has given us the privilege of asking things in His name and receiving them from the Father. He did not put any restrictions on what we could ask for, though of course we could not ask for something contrary to the Word, such as causing your spouse to die and the neighbor's spouse to die so that you can marry that neighbor's hot spouse. (There have actually been people "believing for people to die" like that to satisfy the adulterous desires of their hearts, but that would be asking amiss and God would never honor something like that.)

Here is what Jesus said as far as receiving from the Father in His name:

Whatever you ask the Father in Jesus' name, HE will do it (John 14:13-14).

If you abide in Him and His words abide in you, you'll ask whatever you will and it will be done to you (John 15:7).

Whatever you ask the Father in His name the Father will give you (John 15:16, John 16:23-24).

Ask in His name and you will receive, so that your joy may be full (John 16:24).

These verses teach the opposite of leaving everything up to God's will. Jesus said if you abide in Him and His words abide in you, you will ask what you will. He didn't say that you would pray to try to find out what God wills and then God would do whatever His sovereign will is anyway.

Do you see how much freedom you have to determine what you want? God doesn't decide what you ask for – you do. As long as your prayer is consistent with His known will in Scripture (1 John 5:14-15), you can be confident that God will give you what you ask Him for.

He gives man similar latitude in deciding whom to marry. He will not order a New Testament believer to marry anyone or to stay single; He has left that choice up to us. Of course, the prospective spouse has to be a believer (2 Corinthians 6:14, 1 Corinthians 7:39). But it is not God's place to order you to marry "the ONE" for you. There is no such person; there are probably many different people you could be happily married to if you both walk in love and follow Jesus. God can certainly bring good people across your path and let you decide what you want to do. If there were only ONE such person, you would have to marry whomever GOD chooses for you, not whomever YOU choose, and where would you be the rest of your life if something happened to the ONE? You probably know of some cases (one of which may even involve you!) where Person A wanted to marry Person B, but Person B wanted Person C and married Person C instead. That is OK (whether you think so or not); it doesn't mean that Person B "missed God!" And before we leave this topic, I would urge you to RUN from any "prophetically arranged" marriage situation. Make your own decisions and never base such an important choice on what someone "prophesied" to you. People can really mess up their lives acting on such prophecies; I know a couple that met online and only met in person three days before their marriage. They got married due to a prophecy and almost immediately wanted a divorce when they found out what it was like to be around each other all the time. There is more to married life than just the "spiritual" aspect!

God also gives man latitude in deciding when he wants to go to heaven. Remember that Paul didn't know (for a while) what he (not God) should choose, whether to stay on the earth which benefitted the believers, or do depart and be with Christ, which is far better (Philippians 1:23-24). The amazing thing there is that God allowed Paul to choose!

God will not force His blessings on you, you are free to "have not because you ask not" (James 4:2). It is up to YOU what you want to believe and receive from God.

God also gives you latitude when it comes to your giving. He said that each man should give as he has purposed in his heart (2 Corinthians 9:7), not the amount that God "gave" him. That's why I've never done an offering where I tell people to pray and see what amount God "gives" them. I can just picture them whispering back and forth with their spouses, "Honey, what amount are you getting?" Some preachers even say that if you're "getting" two numbers, the higher one is God. I suppose at some point some even "craftier" preacher will say, "If you're 'getting' two numbers, they're both God, so give them both!" But the Bible truth on the matter is that God lets you make that decision. If you sow a little, you'll reap a little, and if you sow a lot, you'll reap a lot (2 Corinthians 9:6). It's up to you how generous you want to be and how much you're willing to extend your faith. If you want to throw a dollar in the plate, God won't send a heavenly henchman to demand more, but don't complain about the people around you who are walking in all kinds of material blessings because they've chosen to be generous givers who reap a large harvest while you've chosen to be stingy with God. God has provided the means for you to prosper, but He will never force you to prosper if that's not what you want.

You can speak death or speak life – God has put them both in the power of YOUR tongue (Proverbs 18:21). It isn't up to God to make you say one thing or another; He has left that responsibility with you. If you are wise, you will make your words line up with God's words rather than lighting your life on fire with your tongue.

God told Joshua that if he would meditate on (mutter) and act on His words, Joshua would make his way prosperous. God didn't say that HE would make Joshua's way prosperous; it was up to Joshua! So man can also choose to hear, believe and act on God's words and prosper in life or choose to ignore or fail to act on those words and end up with a house that has a great fall. That's up to us, not God.

Matthew 7:24-27:

Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock:

And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock.

And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand:

And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

Both people above heard the Word. This is NOT a case where one person heard the Word and one didn't. It is a case where both HEARD the Word but only one of them ACTED ON the Word.

God told the Israelites (through Moses) that He had set before them life and death, and He commanded them to choose life (Deuteronomy 30:19-20). You get to choose life or death and deal with the result of your choice. You even get to choose whether you go to heaven or hell based on whether or not you receive Jesus.

YOU decide the level of faith you walk in as a believer, too! Faith comes by hearing the Word (Romans 10:17), and it is up to you how much of God's Word you want to hear. If you don't spend much time in the Word, you will have anemic faith because you won't know what God has given you as an inheritance. You can't walk in what you don't know. But if you spend a lot of time in God's Word, you will develop great faith because you'll be familiar with your inheritance. If you only read your Bible once a month, God will never force you to read it more. However, you will bear the consequences of not knowing what is written when the devil tempts you, and you will not live a prosperous life. (If you "don't have time" for the Word, you "don't have time" to prosper!)

So we can see that God leaves a lot more up to man than most people realize. You can decide what you want to ask for. If you're content with just a cottage below, God will let you live in a cottage and He won't condemn you for it. If you're happy living a life where your clothes are not new and you don't have much money (and are even happy to sing these things to others), God will allow that. You can live a bunch of weary days before you fly away. But you don't HAVE to live that way. It's up to you, not God, who has already provided the blessing of Abraham for you (Galatians 3:14).

Matthew 28:18:

And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.

The word power in this verse is the Greek word exousia, which means authority, as opposed to the Greek word dunamis, which refers to power in the sense of energy. “Power” in Matthew 28:18 is the kind of power meant when we use the words “power of attorney.” Power (dunamis) and authority (exousia) are not the same thing. For example, a man holding a lollipop-like STOP/SLOW sign in a construction zone turns his sign to STOP in one direction, and an 18-wheeler comes to a stop in front of him. That man assuredly does not have the POWER (dunamis) to stop the 18-wheeler. The driver of the 18-wheeler stops because the STOP/SLOW man has the AUTHORITY (exousia) to make him stop.

Jesus said that all authority in heaven and in earth has been given to him. So how much authority does Satan now rightfully have on the earth? Do the math. ALL – ALL = ZERO! Jesus has ALL authority, so Satan has ZERO authority. Anything Satan does is completely criminal according to the courts of heaven.

When Jesus paid for our sins, He broke Satan’s right to dominate man. All authority on the earth was given to Him, leaving none left over for Satan. Satan became the biggest loser in the history of the universe. He lost his authority to make things happen on the earth. He was legally dethroned and brought to nothing. No more did Satan have any legal right to exercise his tyranny over man through sin and sickness.

Now Satan has no authority on the earth. All his works (sin, sickness, addictions, mental torment, etc.) are COMPLETELY ILLEGAL. He has no legal right to afflict mankind at all, because Jesus legally redeemed mankind, which includes you. Jesus came to destroy the devil’s works (1 John 3:8). He still has the right to be here. He will try to see what he can get away with due to people’s ignorance. But he no more right to rob you than a thief has the “right” to rob your house – even if he gets away with it. In the name of Jesus, we can stop Satan in his tracks if he tries to afflict us.

However, the earth is still a mess. How can that be? Unredeemed men still cooperate with Satan and he is still their spiritual father. Man has authority, so Satan needs men to work through, but he can still find them readily, which is why we still have terrorist acts, wars, abortion clinics and gay pride parades.

Jesus commanded His church to GO because He has all authority – but He now shares His authority with His Body, the Church. His church was authorized with His “power of attorney” to transact kingdom business in His name. He told His disciples to GO and that in His name they would drive out demons (Mark 16:17). Church elders could anoint the sick with oil in His name with His promise that He would forgive (if necessary) and raise up a sick person (James 5:14-15). We see in the book of Acts that miracles were done in the name of Jesus (see Acts 3:6, Acts 4:10, Acts 16:18). In other words, they were done by His delegated authority.

Christ's authority now works (or doesn't work) through the church. If we use our delegated authority, we can advance God's kingdom on the earth. If we don't use it, God will not use it for us, and the kingdom will not be advanced.

Some people go too far with this and teach that Jesus GAVE His authority to the church, the implication being that He abdicated it and now we have it and He doesn't. But you can't back that with Matthew 28:18 or any other Scripture. Actually, Jesus taught the opposite. He STILL has all authority in heaven and on earth, and He has delegated, not handed over, His authority to the Church.

This is further proved by the fact that in His name we would cast out demons, baptize people, etc. In His name basically means "by His authority." Thus, HE must still be the One with the authority; He has just delegated it to us that we can use it on the earth today. If He had deeded it all over to the Church, we would no longer do things in His name (by His authority); we would just do things from our own authority without a need to invoke the name of Jesus.

There is a difference between (1) having the owner of a corporation assign you a job and give you the authority to make decisions within your job and (2) having the owner of the corporation hand over the whole corporation to you. This sometimes gets mixed up.

Don't Neglect Your Authority

Satan's authority level over you is ZILCH – YOU are the one with Jesus' delegated authority over HIM and his works. But you must use it. If you don't, the job won't get done. Jesus will not command sicknesses to leave from His throne in heaven. You must take your authority over them and command them to leave. Then the risen Jesus will back His name. If you sit around waiting for GOD to make sickness leave, you'll wait for the rest of your life – which might end up being shorter than it should be.

Say that your pastor appoints you to be in charge of security for your church. You are stationed outside the main door. While he is preaching, you see a man with a handkerchief over his face, a can of mace and a large knife approaching the church entrance from the parking lot. You watch him go past you and attack people in the congregation, wondering why the pastor didn't stop it from happening. While that may seem silly, that's exactly how most Christians handle the devil. He gets away with all kinds of things while Christians wonder why God didn't stop him. It's because God gave YOU the authority to stop him, and it is no longer God's job to do it, it's yours – just as it would be your job as the security person to stop the mace man from entering the church. That was not the pastor's job anymore because he delegated it to you.

Most people think that Jesus still has all the authority to Himself, but His command to do things in His name proves this false. When Jesus gave His disciples authority over all the power of the enemy, He didn't intend for them to send a runner to Himself to let Him know that a demon was present and that His help was needed. Because they had authority, they could handle the demon situation themselves using Jesus' delegated authority. That is what He expects from us today.

Who Is in Control of Your Life?

The religious reflex is to say, “God is!” But God is not totally in control of your life. You are largely responsible for what happens to you. God is actually only in control of your life to the extent that you believe that He is, say that He is and allow Him to be. The extent to which you will believe and say that He is depends on how much of His Word abides in you.

If God were totally in control of your life, you would never sin! It is not God’s choice for you to sin; it is your choice. You were on your way to hell before you were born again. You chose to be saved and go to heaven. God did not force you to do it. God does not force anyone to do anything. He sets before you life and death and asks you to choose life (Deuteronomy 30:19-20). But it is you making the choice, not God.

If we could just get this through the heads of religious Christians, we would be a long way toward having them walk in the blessings of God, including healing. Too many Christians use God’s sovereignty as a cop-out. In effect, they say, “Whatever happens to me is part of the perfect will of God for my life, because God is in control of my life.” They lie back and allow the will of Satan to be done in their bodies, their finances, and the rest of their lives. I’m not kidding. I knew a Christian woman who attributed everything that happened to her to God. When she got a pay cut, she told the sinners where she worked that God was using this to teach her something. That was unintentional slander of God’s character. She later lost her job completely. I wonder what God was teaching her then. If God were really like that, Satan could lose his job because God would be out-doing him.

Death and life are in the power of your tongue (Proverbs 18:21)! God framed the worlds with His Word; your personal world is framed by your words. You decide if you will have sickness or health, poverty or wealth, anxiety or peace, depression or joy. James said that your tongue is like the rudder on a ship (James 3:2-6). You steer your course through life with your mouth. It is not up to God to do that; it is up to you.

Please understand that you do not have the right to do whatever “you” want. When it comes to your place of service in the Body of Christ, God arranges the parts as it pleases Him (1 Corinthians 12:18), and you do not have a say in the matter. He is your Lord and you obey Him whether you “feel like it” or not. But if you walk with Him, He will work in you both to will and to do His good pleasure (Philippians 2:13). You will find yourself having godly desires that line up with His will for your life. I am not teaching against consecration; consecration is vital. In fact, unconsecrated Christians will have a very difficult time receiving healing or anything else from God. If you are resisting His will in one area, it is difficult or impossible to receive His will in another area.

God is not in control of the earth. He owns it but He does not run it. The devil, by and large, runs Planet Earth. But the only reason that he is “the god of this world” is that men cooperate with him. By himself, Satan cannot run this world, and neither can God. It is man who decides what happens here. We can authorize Satan to act and we can authorize God to act.

Psalm 115:16:

The heaven, even the heavens, are the LORD'S: but the earth hath he given to the children of men.

God has given you the ability to resist the devil (1 Peter 5:8-9) and make him flee (James 4:7). So YOU are in control of whether or not he gets a place in your life. That's why God commands YOU not to give him any place (Ephesians 4:27). This command shows that YOU (not God) are in control of how much "place" (opportunity) the devil has in your life.

God has already given you all things pertaining to life and godliness (2 Peter 1:3-4). It is not a case of God doing something new for you. Everything you need is at your disposal; you simply receive it from God. God has already taken care of all your needs, including healing. You decide whether or not to receive what you need. That is not God's decision – it's YOURS. If God had His way completely, you would walk in EVERY blessing that Christ gave you as your inheritance.

Jesus, the Best Faith Teacher

Have you ever noticed that in Acts 1:1-2, Luke says that He wrote about what Jesus began to “do and teach” in his Gospel of Luke. That clearly implies that He is still teaching today! He does it today through the Holy Spirit whom He sent to “teach us all things” (John 14:26). Scripture calls Jesus the “Author and Finisher of our faith” (Hebrews 12:2).

It is up to us to read the Word so that faith can come for specific things. We need to give the Lord something to work with. But we don’t want to get carried away to an extreme on either end. One extreme would be that the Lord just dumps faith on you without regard to your attention to His Word. This is clearly not the case. However, you can go to the other extreme and put all kinds of pressure on yourself to build your faith, and conclude that it’s solely up to you to do that without the Lord’s help. If Jesus is both the Author and the Finisher of your faith, surely He is supposed to have a role in the process too!

You should expect Jesus to teach you faith through His Word and His Spirit. Given that the Holy Spirit teaches you ALL things, that would include teaching you faith, wouldn’t it? You need be to open to Him and realize that God is still in the business of showing you mighty things that you don’t know! A staple Scripture for my life, given that I have a calling to teach the Word, has been this one:

Jeremiah 33:3:

Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not.

In other words, don’t just read your Bible with your own understanding to try to figure everything out. Ask God to help you understand it. After all, He wrote it for you, not for Himself! Pray, as Paul did for the Ephesians, that God will give you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him (Ephesians 1:15-23). Believe me, if you’ll pray that, God will answer your prayer! It’s so much better than just being dry and intellectual in your approach to the Bible.

By no means should you turn your brain off when studying Scripture. You need to compare Scripture with Scripture to accurately divide it. Concordances and Hebrew and Greek study tools are useful and I have learned a lot by really delving into verses that many people skim over. That kind of study has its place, but nothing can replace the illumination that the Holy Spirit gives. He will always give you illumination OF the Word, not illumination BEYOND the Word. (I don’t want to hear your latest doctrinal revelation if you have no Scripture to back it up!)

Trusting the Lord to teach you takes all the pressure off YOU to figure everything out. Given that Jesus is the Finisher of your faith, and YOU are NOT the finisher of your faith, it makes sense to let the Finisher of your faith do His job in your life!

God Is Never Too Busy

Because we are time-bound, we sometimes think of God as being time-bound along with us, but He isn't. God created time. That means that He existed when there was no such thing as time. God has already seen the future, which is why He was able to speak through people about things that were certain to happen but hadn't happened yet. God inhabits eternity, not time (Isaiah 57:15). He saw every sin you'd ever commit and punished Jesus for it already. He saw every sickness and pain you'd ever face and laid them upon Jesus already.

This means that God is never too busy to talk to you and answer your prayers. God can give you His undivided attention all the time! God is not like some people who will "sort of" listen to you while they're also sending and receiving texts. So the idea that you don't want to "take up God's time" with a minor issue is flawed. God has all the time in the world to deal with EVERY issue that matters to you. You aren't "time-sharing" Him with everyone else. No condition is so minor that it is "not worth God's time" to deal with it.

God is with you at ALL times, never forsaking you (Hebrews 13:5). He is available to you 24/7 every day you live! He doesn't have to try to prioritize you against everyone else. He is just as available to you as if He had no one else to care for. Let that sink in and see if it doesn't make you bolder about bringing your requests to Him!

For additional thoughts on this matter, see the answer to Objection: We Should Not Take up God's Time with Petty Healing Needs When So Many Other People Have Far More Serious Problems.

Don't Do This

If you want to get healed, let me tell you something I used to do that will definitely not work. That is sitting around condemning yourself for your lack of faith. The devil would love to use you against yourself in this way.

If you are thinking any of these thoughts, you can be sure that they do not come from God: "I'm a failure. I stink. I just can't believe for my healing. Everyone else can, but I can't get healed. I know what the Bible promises me, but I just can't get it. My heart must be so wrong. If I were just a better Christian, I could believe God. I'll bet Jesus is mad in heaven right now, saying, 'Oh, ye of little faith. How long must I put up with you?' What's the matter with me? Why can't I have childlike faith in God? My faith is so small. I'm a spiritual mess-up."

According to Philemon 6, your faith becomes effective by acknowledging the good things that are in you in Christ, not by acknowledging doubt and unbelief. According to Romans 10:17, faith comes by hearing the Word, not by hearing yourself trash yourself. Stop focusing on yourself and start focusing on the Word. Stop considering yourself and start considering your High Priest who is the Author and the Finisher of your faith (Hebrews 12:2). Stop pulling up your seed and start watering it.

If it's any consolation, I used to think the thoughts above, and I was cured of it by continuing to read the Word about healing. Instead of struggling to get faith, read the Word and faith will come by hearing it. It may not seem as if anything is changing for a while, but keep it up. You will find that it is not nearly as hard to believe God as you thought it was.

Also, you may be struggling with something you don't need to struggle with. It is not supposed to be a struggle to "pull down" your healing from heaven with your faith. Your faith receives something that God has already decided is yours. God is freely offering healing to you. Once you see that, you will understand that it is not a struggle at all, any more than you have to struggle to believe that you are saved after you receive Jesus. We who believe have entered into rest (Hebrews 4:3), not struggle. Struggling is not faith. Faith rests in the promises of God.

Dissing yourself will never produce positive fruit. Why give the devil a day off? He doesn't even need to send any of his troops your way when you do his dirty work for him! God is for you (Romans 8:31). If God is for you, why should you be against you, thus taking sides against God concerning yourself? Quit it now! Read the Word and build your faith, rather than tearing down your faith!

Your Spirit Isn't Sick

If you're battling illness, it is helpful to recognize the fact that it is only your body, not your spirit, that is sick. The real you is a spirit being that will live forever. You have a soul and a body. But your spirit will live on (with the Lord) without your current body. To be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord for a believer (2 Corinthians 5:8), which this discussion assumes that you are.

It is very easy to identify yourself as "the sick" when your body is uncomfortable. It is easy to forget that the real born-again you is a spirit being created after God in righteousness and true holiness (Ephesians 4:24). In a very literal sense, "you" are not sick – your body is sick.

Lest you think that it is unbiblical to split yourself up that way, I am not asking you to think any differently than Paul did. Paul said that he kept his body under (1 Corinthians 9:27). So Paul did not identify himself as his body. Rather he saw himself as master over his body, and so should you.

The key is to remember that the real you – who has authority over bodily illness – is not your sick body. The REAL YOU can control what goes on in YOUR BODY.

See You Have Authority over Your Body for more on this topic.

You Have Authority over Your Body

God does not refer to your body as you, even though most people consider a person and his body to be the same. God refers to your body as “your body” instead of “you.” You should always make the same distinction in your mind. Rather than thinking, “I am sick,” you should think “My body is sick.” (Yes, I know that you were healed by the stripes of Jesus, but I am making a point.)

I have had wonderful things happen in services where I was standing for my own healing while I ministered! My condition didn't affect the anointing at all. You know why? The anointing comes out of your spirit, not out of your body. Remember, Jesus said that rivers of living water would flow out of your belly (speaking of your spirit) – John 7:37-39. I was not sick! My body was sick. That is why you can minister healing even when you feel rotten yourself!

You can control your body! Your words can determine whether you get well or get sick, and whether you live or die. Death and life are in the power of the tongue (Proverbs 18:21). James 3:2-6 shows that your tongue can either “set the course of nature on fire” in your body or “bridle your whole body.” Like a rudder or a bit in a horse's mouth, your tongue can control your body. You can get into sin and pay a price in your body, or speak wholesome words and reap health in your body.

You are not a helpless slave of your body. Paul said in 1 Corinthians 9:27, “But I keep my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway.” Paul is talking about mortifying the deeds of the body, but the point I want to make is that your body is subject to you – the real you, or your spirit. Paul didn't say that he kept himself under subjection. He said that he kept his body under subjection. Paul understood that his body was not the real him. You are a steward over the unique body that God has given you, but your body is not the real you. The real you will live forever. Your current body will rot in the ground.

Romans 6:12 says, “Let not sin reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof.” It doesn't say not to let sin reign in you. The real you is a spirit being who has been born again, recreated in God's image in righteousness and true holiness (Ephesians 4:24). There's an interesting side note here that might bless you and might make you mad, since it cuts across the grain of modern theology. You do not have an old man and a new man both living in one body! The old man is dead, all things have become new, and you are a new man in Christ. The Christian struggles not with an old dead spiritual nature (which is gone), but with a mortal body, which is led by its senses and what “seems” right, and with the mind insofar as it is not yet renewed with the Word of God. That is why Paul said not to let sin reign in your body. Again, there is a distinction between you and your body. You are not to let sin reign in your body. Your body is what is referred to as “the flesh,” not an old sin nature that is gone now. If you follow your body, you will indeed get in trouble. That is why you have to keep your body under subjection, as Paul did.

In 1 Corinthians 6:18, the sexual sinner sins against his own body (not “himself”). In 1 Corinthians 13:3, Paul talked about giving his body (not “himself”) to be burned. In Romans 12:1, Paul beseeches you to present your body as a living sacrifice to God. There are many, many other places where Paul referred to his body as “his body,” not “himself.” Your body is not you! You can’t get sick! Only your body gets sick! And you, the real you, have authority over your body. So use your tongue correctly to speak the Word of God about your body. Speak that you were healed by the stripes of Jesus. Speak life, not death. Your body will respond.

It Isn't YOUR Sickness

It Isn't YOUR Sickness

It makes me want to throw something at the TV when those stupid ads come on that say, "I manage my depression with thus-and-such" or "When my allergies flare up, I use bla-bla-bla."

It is a mistake to go around talking about "your" cold, "your" allergies, "your" cancer, "your" trouble breathing, and so on. Don't take ownership of diseases. They do not rightfully belong to you. As a child of God, healing is your possession and sickness is not your possession. Sickness belongs to its originator, Satan. It is trespassing in your body!

It will help you if you keep this perspective. As long as you consider it "your" flu, you've got it! It's yours. Don't consider it yours – God doesn't. God declares you healed. It's the devil's flu trespassing illegally in your blood-bought body. The devil's flu is working in a member of Christ on the earth, where it does not belong.

The Bible tells us exactly what happened to your sicknesses. Surely He (Jesus Christ) has borne our sicknesses, and carried our pains (Isaiah 53:4). Jesus Christ bore your sicknesses in your place when He paid for your sins. Our sicknesses most certainly include your sicknesses. Peter agrees when he says that by Jesus' stripes you were (physically) healed (1 Peter 2:24). Therefore, you have a right to say, as God does, that all of your sicknesses were laid upon Jesus. Any sickness that attempts to attach itself to you does not belong to you legally. It is trespassing on God's property. It can't be yours in the sense that God wants you to have it, because Jesus Christ took care of your sicknesses – on the day that they became HIS sicknesses as punishment for YOUR sins.

So literally, you can think of and speak of things as the depression that Jesus took, the cancer that Jesus took, the high blood pressure that Jesus took, the allergies that Jesus took, and so on. HE took ownership of what were YOUR sicknesses when He bore YOUR sickness Himself. Just as He "bore away" your sins so that they would not be considered yours anymore, He "bore away" your sicknesses so that they would not be considered yours anymore. You know that the Bible forbids stealing. So don't steal back sickness by claiming something as yours that Scripture says belonged to Jesus when He suffered in your place and took your diseases!

It would be interesting to see the look on someone's face when someone asks you what's wrong and you say that it's the allergies that Jesus took. I wouldn't necessarily recommend really saying to most people because they would have no idea what you're talking about. But still, you should at least think that way.

Remember also that technically, you are not sick! In general usage (including some Bible verses), people are said to be sick, but if you think about it, only your body is sick. Your spirit isn't sick! The real you on the inside is not sick! Only your earthly tabernacle has the problem. (This is a good truth to remember if you are preaching and you feel rotten. The rivers of the anointing will flow from your spirit, not your body, and since your spirit isn't sick, it won't be hindered. I have seen a marvelous anointing and been used by the Holy Spirit in services where I felt awful, at least when I started!)

You are a spirit being and you have a physical body. Your body is not you. It can't be you, because after your body rots in the ground or is cremated, you will still be around. Paul talked about his body as such – his body. He said that he kept his body under (1 Corinthians 9:27). He didn't say that he kept himself under because his body was not his real self. He kept his body under. Whether you realize it or not, you have control over your body through the power of God's Word. You can stop it from sinning, and you can stop it from staying sick, too.

This may seem like a subtle point, but when you grasp it, it will help you immensely: You can have something in the spirit before you have it in the physical, and you can not have something in the spirit that you have in the natural. You have the growth inasmuch as it is in your body, but you can refuse to own it in the spirit realm. You can declare that the growth is not yours, because it legally isn't. It does not belong to a child of God, who was healed by the stripes of Jesus. It may be in your body illegally, but you can declare boldly that it is not yours and that you refuse to have it in your body. You declare that you have healing, not sickness, because healing is legally yours. You can believe that you receive healing when you pray and take possession of it. If you "have" the healing, spiritually speaking, you do not "have" the sickness any more.

I like to put it this way: I do not own this illness. It is not mine. It is the devil's and it has no right to exist in my body. I refuse to accept it as mine. I am healed by the stripes of Jesus. I am redeemed from the curse of the law (Galatians 3:13), which includes every sickness and every disease (Deuteronomy 28:61). Jesus bore all my sicknesses for me (Isaiah 53:4), so no sickness belongs to me today. I am redeemed from this curse that is trying to attach itself to me. I take authority over it in the name of Jesus and I command it to leave my body now. I believe that I receive complete healing for my body now as I pray (Mark 11:24), and I thank God that it is accomplished. From now on, I will thank God for delivering me from the devil's attack of sickness and stop worrying or praying about it, other than to thank God for the healing that I already have.

You Win!

1 Corinthians 15:57:

But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

2 Corinthians 2:14:

Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place.

Romans 5:17:

For if by one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ.

Revelation 1:6:

And hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

Revelation 5:10:

And hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth.

1 John 5:4-5:

For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.

Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?

If there were no verses in the Bible about healing in particular, these verses should be sufficient to tell you that you can have it. If you have victory over sickness, you can get rid of the sickness. If you always triumph in Christ, you triumph over sickness. Sickness cannot take away your victory in Christ or stop you from triumphing in Christ. If you get sick and die, you have victory in heaven, but you did not get victory and reign in this life, as God wants you to.

If you reign as a king in life, sickness cannot rule over you. How can you reign in life while you're stuck in bed popping pain pills? How can you function as a king and a priest if you're out of circulation? Being laid up sick is NOT reigning in life. You have to be a deceived Christian to believe that being sick is reigning in life, because no unbeliever would consider that to be reigning in life!

Nothing can defeat the child of God who uses his faith. Your faith is the victory that overcomes the world. Through faith, many others have received victory over disease. So can you. (See According to YOUR Faith Be It Done unto You.) They walked in victory, and so can you.

What's Better than Healing? Health!

3 John 2

God's will for you is health, not simply healing. Here we see that God's desire is for you to be in health. This is far better than getting sick, getting healed, getting sick again, getting healed again, and so on. Thank God, healing is available to you when you get sick, but health is available to you so that you don't have to get sick in the first place. It is not God's perfect will for you to get sick and need healing!

Here we see that by Jesus' stripes (the damage to His body from His flogging) you were healed. It is important to recognize this as a statement, not a promise. Peter did not say that by Jesus' stripes you were promised healing when you get sick, although that is also true by implication because of your legal standing with God. Peter puts your healing in the past tense. You were healed. If your healing is in the past tense, you have the right to walk in health at all times, because healing has already been accomplished for you as far as God is concerned.

Of course, if any among you is sick (notice the if), that person can call for the elders of the church and receive healing through the prayer of faith (James 5:14-15). But James's very use of the word if shows that sickness is not something that has to be part of everyone's life. It needs to be done away with. This is because the Christian is to walk in health, not simply healing.

Psalm 91

Here we see that the pestilence is not to come near you. It is not to come nigh your dwelling. That means that the latest flu strain does not have any business being in your home. If the pestilence does not come near you, you won't get sick from it and then need healing. You will walk in health because you don't get sick first. We can see this even under the Old Covenant.

Romans 8:11

Here we see the ongoing quickening (life-giving) work of the Holy Spirit in your body. This life-giving force can keep you from getting whatever sickness is going around.

Exodus 23:25-26

God promised Israel that He would take sickness away from the midst of the people. This goes beyond a promise to heal diseases if they came (which He did elsewhere), but shows that even under the Old Covenant, it was God's will that there not be any sickness in the first place. Even if you want to interpret this as healing sicknesses when they come, it is still a health promise and can be interpreted no other way.

Healing and the Blood of Jesus

When the Israelites splattered the blood of the Passover lamb on their doorposts, the killer plague that took Egypt's firstborn passed over them. Christ is called our Passover (1 Corinthians 5:7). It is significant that the symbol of His blood kept sickness away under the Old Testament. In this case, it was a killer plague that instantly took the lives of the firstborn children throughout Egypt. But the killer plague did not touch those who kept the Passover and placed the sacrificed lamb's blood on their doorposts. If this mere symbol of Jesus Christ could keep a plague away, how much more should Jesus Himself, whom the Passover symbolized! Jesus was clear at His last Passover feast that the Passover wine and bread represented HIMSELF (1 Corinthians 11:23-25).

This shows us that God's will for us is not only healing but health. We know that God healed any feeble people in Israel at this time also, because there was not one feeble person among them in the exodus from Egypt (Psalm 105:37). But notice that the blood on the doorpost did not heal anyone of the plague. It kept them from getting the plague in the first place. This agrees with Psalm 91's promise of no plague coming near the house of the man who abides in God. Healing is available because Christ's body was broken for us in our place, but health is also available. You don't have to get sick and then get healed.

When Israel transgressed against God, atonement was made for the people's sin and the sicknesses were taken away. Blood sacrifices were offered to God. Jesus was the ultimate blood sacrifice. If sickness could be removed by a one-time atonement of animal blood in the Old Testament, surely it can be removed by the blood of the Son of God, which was shed once for everyone!

You're THE HEALED, not THE SICK

How you see yourself can make all the difference in the world when it comes to receiving and keeping your healing. You have the choice of these two mindsets:

Wrong: I am THE SICK trying to become THE HEALED.

Right: I am THE HEALED defending my covenant rights.

It is clear that God refers to you as THE HEALED because He says that you were healed by Jesus' stripes (1 Peter 2:24). If you were healed, you're THE HEALED as far as God is concerned.

That doesn't mean that you don't have any symptoms in your body. We don't operate in denial when our bodies don't feel right. We don't make a false claim that we are symptom-free when we still have symptoms. The question is whether or not the condition you're facing has the right to remain in your body.

Here are other ways of expressing the same two mindsets above:

Wrong: God needs to do something for me to get me from being THE SICK to being THE HEALED.

Right: God has already done all He needs to do about my healing because I am THE HEALED.

If you think that God has to do something new to heal you, you don't understand how divine healing works, and you will not receive it because you don't believe the Word. You are not in a place of faith for healing until you understand that Jesus' work is FINISHED as far as your healing goes. He did everything He needed to do to redeem you from sickness, which was part of the curse for breaking the Law. It is your place to RECEIVE something that God already says is yours (because you are THE HEALED). As I said in the very first discussion in this book, the #1 mistake that Christians make with divine healing is asking God to heal them! That is no better than it would be for an unsaved person to say, "Please, God, DO something about my miserable unsaved condition!" He already did all that He needed to do. The sinner doesn't need God to do a new work to provide for his salvation; he needs to trust in the finished work that already paid for his salvation. The sick person needs to trust in the finished work that already paid for his healing.

Rather than begging God to turn you into THE HEALED, see yourself the way God sees you – as THE HEALED right now. Because you're THE HEALED, sickness has no authority to stay in your life. You can take the authority that you have in Christ and command sickness to leave your body.

Have you noticed that the "full armor of God" is almost completely defensive and that you are told to "stand" instead of "conquer?" The position of the Christian is one of being in an occupying army, not a conquering army. Jesus already did the conquering for you. He conquered sin, Satan and sickness once and for all. A person who "stands" isn't moving – he's defending what he already has. In God's eyes, you already HAVE healing and you are simply defending your right to it because you are THE HEALED! Make sure that you see yourself that way and healing will suddenly become a much easier matter for you.

Healing and Prayer

If there is any area where people get confused about healing, it is probably in the area of prayer. The common misconception is that we need to get a maximum number of people to bombard heaven's gates with requests for your healing, and this will maximize your chances of getting healed. That is totally wrong. There is no need to bombard heaven's gates to get something that is already yours. (Besides, heaven's gates aren't shut to you in the first place!) You do not need to talk God into healing you. God operates according to His Word, and specifically by your faith in His Word. The majority does not rule Him!

The problem with the "bombard heaven" mindset is that it assumes that healing is something that you have to "get out of God." Some people use Jesus' parable of the persistent midnight knocker to teach that you should just keep praying until God gives you what you want. That is not a picture of God. God is not withholding your healing from you! God wants you healed! He already made provision for your healing. You don't need to pray Him into doing anything about your healing. He has already done all that He needs to do about it. It is now your move, so to speak.

I am an avid chess player, and I know that you would be thrown out of a chess tournament if you kept making moves when it wasn't your turn. That would be against the rules. There are rules concerning God's dealing with man, too. God moves when it is His turn, but He does not move when it is your turn.

If I were playing a chess match and my clock were running and I failed to make a move, eventually the clock would indicate that I had forfeited the game on time. I would be declared the loser. It would not be my opponent's fault; it would be my fault. I could not blame my opponent for my loss of the game.

Well, thank God, He is not your opponent; He is your ally. But the same idea still applies. If you do not move when it is your turn, you lose. It is not God's fault; it's yours. God will not make a move when it is not His turn.

God made His move when He sent Jesus to bear such a lashing that He was marred and disfigured more than any man (Isaiah 52:14). That disfigurement brought physical healing to you. Healing is now available on a "whosoever will" basis, just like forgiveness of sins. It is now your move. Your move is to receive what God freely offers you right now.

Now suppose that instead of making a move in the chess game, you simply prayed in tongues the whole time. You would surely be more edified by the time your clock ran out, but you would still lose the game because you did not move. You can pray in tongues on and on for your healing, but you still lose if you do not move. When you pray in tongues, you speak mysteries to God in the Spirit. Therefore, you do not need to pray in tongues for healing, because healing is not a mystery. God has made it absolutely clear that healing is for you. There is no need to pray in tongues about something when the will of God has been made known to your understanding. (This is true in all areas, not just in the area of healing. For example, you never pray about whether God wants to you marry an unbeliever, because He already told you in 2 Corinthians 6:14 not to be unequally yoked with unbelievers.)

I am not saying that it is wrong to pray in tongues when you are sick; I am just saying that you cannot pray “the prayer of faith” in tongues. “Yes,” you say, “but doesn’t the Holy Spirit always pray in faith? He can’t pray in unbelief, can He?” No, He can’t, but to pray the prayer of faith, you must believe that you receive something when you pray. You can’t believe that you receive something if you only pray in tongues, because you have no idea what you’re praying. Your understanding is unfruitful, to use Paul’s words (1 Corinthians 14:14). You can’t receive something by accident. To receive from God, you must know that you are doing so! You can’t receive healing without knowing it any more than you can receive the new birth without knowing it.

If you want to pray in tongues while asking God to reveal to you the cause of your problem, that’s fine. I was having trouble with persistent headaches and when I was praying in tongues, felt that I should look into having my wisdom teeth out. Maybe you are not as dense as I was and would have figured it out, but I thank God for tongues. I had the wisdom teeth out and the headaches stopped. (Obviously, I am not against doctors, although I am glad I will never have to repeat that particular experience. By the way, the next day, a famous healing minister was in town and I went to his meeting. Before the meeting, I couldn’t even eat, and when it was over, I could eat whatever I wanted without hurting, which I promptly did because I was very hungry. I believed God for a fast recovery and got it. You can do that, you know.)

There is no need to pray marathon prayers. This is where so many people miss it. They think that if they pray for eight hours, they will get their healing. Actually, you would be better off praying for eight seconds in faith to receive your healing. It would make the 8-hour marathon prayer totally unnecessary.

If you listen to most Christians pray, you will discover that they are wasting much of their time. They are praying for things that are already theirs according to the New Testament – things that they could just receive from God. If you want to pray for eight hours after receiving from God, that’s fine. Thanking God that you already have something for eight hours would hardly hurt you. You only pray the prayer of faith once. After that, there is no need to ask for what you want again, because you have already received it. If you pray after that, just thank God for what you already have, regardless of whether you have yet seen any change in your body.

Church people too often use prayer as a substitute for faith. You cannot make up for a lack of faith with extra prayer. Rather than rambling on and on, people need to build their faith in God’s healing covenant. We would see more results if we would emphasize the receiving part by the sick person, rather than stressing that prayer be made for the sick person.

James didn’t just tell the elders to pray for the sick in a general sense. He said specifically that the prayer of faith would heal the sick person.

It certainly is scriptural to pray for the sick to get a revelation of God’s healing covenant. We are told, “Bear ye one another’s burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ” (Galatians 6:2). Sometimes the Spirit will just put an urge on you to pray for a sick person, and you should follow His leading. However, your prayer is for enlightenment for the sick person, not that God will perform some new act to heal him.

One final aspect of prayer involves preparing to minister to others. The fact that you don't need to even pray to receive healing (you can just command sickness to leave in the name of Jesus) does not mean that you don't need to pray about how you minister healing! Jesus spent a lot of time praying, so did Paul. God doesn't expect you to take every waking minute away from your family to pray, but you DO need to pray to be effective. In particular, I've found that praying in the Holy Spirit helps me be sensitive to His leading when He wants to use me in special manifestations. (He wants to use YOU, too, the only question is how (1 Corinthians 12:7)!) You don't know everything about a person's life, but the Holy Spirit does, and you can pray perfect prayers for the people you're ministering to in the Holy Spirit. Of course, God does expect you to use your normal language as well (1 Corinthians 14:15).

You will never be an effective minister if you think that you can just whip Sermon #57 off the shelf and dish it out to the people without doing any praying. By praying, you can be ready to minister the Word and the Spirit to people. Even the particular passages you preach should be the result of asking God which ones are most needful for the people who are going to hear you.

The nice thing about praying in the Spirit is that you can pray about difficult situations BEFORE they even come up! Doing all your praying without tongues is like praying with one hand tied behind your back – you miss out on so much!

If you don't think YOU really need to pray, Paul has three words for you – “Pray without ceasing” (1 Thessalonians 5:17). Now that doesn't mean that you go around all day mumbling prayers under your breath in public, as I saw one well-intentioned but ill-informed person do. This only made him look like he had a mental problem, even though he was just trying to obey that verse. Paul did not mean that you should literally pray non-stop! That would be hard to do given that you have to sleep at night, to say nothing of the fact that you have to interact with other people on your job. What he meant was, “Be consistent in prayer.” In other words, don't neglect prayer.

The Power in the Name of Jesus

Mark 9:38-39:

And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbid him, because he followeth not us.

But Jesus said, Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me.

Luke 9:49-50:

And John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbid him, because he followeth not with us.

And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us.

Here we have a very interesting situation. An unauthorized, uncommissioned preacher was successfully casting out demons in the name of Jesus. This man was not one of the ones anointed by the Lord to cast out demons. Jesus never gave him any power or authority. This was before the Church Age. This man was not saved, let alone baptized in the Holy Spirit. How on earth could he have cast out devils in the name of Jesus?

One thing this man obviously had was a revelation of the power of the name of Jesus. He realized that Jesus had authority over all devils. So the man ordered devils to leave in the name of Jesus. He knew that they were subject to Jesus. He seemed to know that His name had authority on the earth. And thus, a “nobody” made the disciples angry with his success in the ministry.

If you think that’s something, consider Matthew 7:21-23, where we see that even an unbeliever can use the name of Jesus to cast out devils and do wonderful works! The disciples knew the power of Jesus’ name; in Luke 10:17-20; they were rejoicing that the demons were subject to them through Jesus’ name. This is the first recorded “use” of the name of Jesus.

If this unidentified man could use the name of Jesus like that then, how much more can we use it now! After all, Jesus identified some of the works that believers would do in His name, including healing of the sick and casting out of devils (Mark 16:15-18). Jesus said in John 14:12-14 that we would do the works that He did. How? By using His name. If we ask anything in His name, HE will do it. That is why Luke says that his gospel was a record of what Jesus began to do and to teach. Jesus is continuing “to do and to teach” through His Body on earth, the Church.

This is a little different from the thought expressed in John 15:16 and John 16:23-27, where Jesus promised that whatever we ask the Father in His name, the Father will give it to us. In John 14:12-14, we see the truth that Jesus Christ Himself backs up His own name. He has pre-authorized us to use His name as a blank check that He promises to back. We ask for something to be done in the name of Jesus and Jesus does it.

What a privilege! And what a deal, too! We get the easy part. We simply use the name of Jesus. He does the hard part – healing. Too many times we pray when instead we should simply use the name of Jesus. A quick tour of the New Testament shows that the apostles did not really pray for the sick – they used the name of Jesus to heal the sick. (Yes, Paul prayed before he laid hands on Publius’ father in Acts 28:8-9, but the Bible does not say that he prayed for the man. He prayed and then laid hands on the man so that he would be healed.) The disciples knew that Jesus backed His name and they used His name freely.

In Acts 3:1-16 we see that Jesus’ name, through faith in His name, healed a crippled beggar. In Acts 4:7-10, Peter said that the man was healed “by the name of Jesus Christ.” In Acts 4:29-33, the disciples prayed that signs and wonders would be done by (note the use of that word again) the name of Jesus. In Acts 16:16-18, Paul commanded an evil spirit to leave in the name of Jesus Christ and it did. We should expect the acts that Jesus did to be done wherever we use His name.

The Name of Jesus Makes Everything’s Knee Bow NOW

Philippians 2:9-11 shows us that the name of Jesus is powerful enough to make the knee bow of everything everywhere. This passage doesn’t say that they bow to Jesus; it says that they bow at His name. We are the ones who use that name – Jesus doesn’t use His own name on the earth today.

Someone took me to task for this rendering of Philippians 2:9-11, objecting that this was a prophecy about the Great White Throne Judgment. I can see how someone could read it that way, but there is a problem with that interpretation. Revelation 20:11, beginning the account of this judgment, says, “And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them.” They don’t exist, at least not in habitable form, at the time of the Great White Throne Judgment! Five verses later, we read in Revelation 21:1, “And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.” So during this judgment, there is no heaven (in the sense of the atmosphere over the earth), and no inhabitable earth, since both are being renovated by fire. No one is left “under the earth” when the earth is no longer there. So it makes no sense that a Scripture that talks about knees bowing in heaven, on earth and under the earth could refer to a time when these places won’t be around.

There is no mention of knees bowing at this judgment anyway; perhaps this has been confused with the judgment seat of Christ for believers.

Romans 14:10-12:

But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. For as it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God. So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.

This talks about the Judgment Seat of Christ, which is completely different from the Great White Throne Judgment. The former is for believers only, where our works done in the body are judged; the latter is where unbelievers receive their final damnation sentence. The devil and his cohorts are not present at the Judgment Seat of Christ, nor are unbelievers, so their knees cannot bow to Christ during this judgment either!

Because the devil and his demons won't be at that judgment seat, their knees won't be bowing then. So Philippians 2:9-11 can't mean that their knees will bow at the judgment seat of Christ. However, it does make sense that their knees must bow now, given that we have authority over the devil and demons in the name of Jesus (Luke 10:17-20, Mark 16:17). Even the demons must acknowledge His lordship, as they are powerless to stop any command issued to them in His name.

Someone further objected that you can't just go shout the name of Jesus in a fast-food place and make every knee bow there "on the earth." That's nonsense if you understand why you use the name of Jesus – to do His works on the earth. Jesus did not go around making knees bow at the local eateries. In fact, this passage is generally translated to read (as in the King James quoted here) that things, not people, bow their knees. If that surprises you, consider that Jesus spoke to a storm and stilled it and spoke to a tree and killed it. Things on the earth bowed to the Head of the Church. Given that we are His Body, the fullness of Him who fills all in all (Ephesians 1:23), it should be no surprise that things on the earth bow when we use the name of Jesus.

Your Authority Is Not Based on How You Feel Today

I know people who have been healed of serious conditions when the preacher felt nothing and they felt nothing while being prayed over. One of these was blind before a meeting but he got his sight even though nothing manifested until the next morning. My friend who laid hands on him and the man himself felt absolutely nothing at the time. I was there and I didn't feel anything either. You can't go by feelings. I've seen wonderful miracles at times when if I went by how I "felt" I would be sure nothing was happening. The policeman directing traffic downtown may not feel as if he has authority when he gets up in the morning, but the cars will still stop when he puts his hand up.

You don't have to feel like the name of Jesus will work any more than you have to feel like your car will start when you turn the ignition. Feelings have nothing to do with your authority in Christ. The President does not stop being the President if he rolls out of bed one morning and doesn't feel like he's the President. You might not even feel like you're saved in the morning. You can't be led by feelings. All you have to do is use the name of Jesus. It's easy; don't make it hard. Believe that He will back His name, as He promised He would, and help someone get free! If someone who didn't even know Jesus personally could get people free using His name, surely we who have Him living inside us should be able to do it!

The Powers of the World to Come

The writer of Hebrews speaks of those “who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come” (Hebrews 6:4-6). It is not this discussion’s intention to delve into the qualifications for committing the unpardonable sin. The point I want you to notice is that we today can taste the powers of the world to come.

What will the world to come be like? During the Millennial Reign of Christ, the inhabitants of the land will not be sick (Isaiah 33:24). In our final home where we live on the new earth with God, there will be no crying or pain, and thus no sickness to cause pain (Revelation 21:4). We will be changed in an instant and given new bodies that can never decay. Think of the power that will take! However, a down-payment of that kind of power is available today, just as the Spirit has been given to us as a down-payment of the blessings to come.

Thank God, it is possible to taste the powers of the world to come today! You don’t have to wait until then. Yes, sickness will be done away with eventually, but you can experience God’s power that drives out sickness today. The manifestation of God’s power will be widespread during the Millennium, but you can taste it now.

Most Christians don’t know that they can taste the powers of the world to come in this life. But they can!

I Prayed in Faith – Now What?

One of the most crucial lessons for you to learn in your Christian walk is what to do between your prayer to receive by faith and the time when the answer manifests itself. Like the fig tree that Jesus cursed, your illness may not die instantly on the outside.

You Don't Need to Pray to Receive Again

One mistake novices make when the healing they received hasn't manifested yet is to pray again, figuring that maybe if they "believed they received" some more, they would have some more. That is not faith, and it can uproot the seed you have already planted for your healing. Rather than cultivating good ground for the seed, you are throwing away the seed before it has a chance to sprout. Do not keep saying, "Lord, I really do believe I receive my healing now." All that proves is that you didn't do it the first time. If you didn't receive it the first time, you do need to pray again, but don't let the devil talk you out of anything you've already received.

Don't Let the Devil Do This to You...

The devil will probably whisper in your ear, "You're not in faith! You're not in faith! You prayed all right, but you weren't in faith. You'll get nothing!" How will you respond to this? Obviously, don't agree with him. He will lie and tell you that you are not in faith when you are. He would like you to believe that this unbelief is coming from the inside of you, when it is just coming from him as a thought from the outside.

Don't try to defend your faith by thinking of how much you were really in faith when you prayed. Instead, look to the Word. That is the only Scriptural method of dealing with the devil. Dwell on the same passages you thought of when you prayed your original prayer.

"By Jesus' stripes you are healed" is always a true statement, not just when you prayed. A good response would be, "I am healed by the stripes of Jesus. Healing is my covenant right. Sickness is a curse and I am redeemed from it. It was true when I prayed, and it is true now. I will continue to believe what God says about my healing. My faith is not in my faith, but in God's faithfulness to His Word. I ordered this sickness to leave in the name of Jesus. Jesus promised me that I could ask anything in His name, and He would personally do it. Jesus is at work in my body, healing me right now."

How to Pray after Receiving Your Healing by Faith

Every prayer you pray after your initial prayer to receive should reflect the faith of the first prayer, not negate it. Your prayers concerning your healing now become prayers of thanksgiving and praise to God for the healing that He already gave you. We who believe have entered into rest (Hebrews 4:3). You no longer need to petition God for your healing. You have settled in your heart that you took the necessary steps and you are thanking God for the results in advance.

This is a whole different subject, but praising and thanking God is important. Praise and thanksgiving do not “get you into the presence of God” (the blood of Jesus does), but they are important, and it is right to come before God with praise and thanksgiving. If you do not cultivate the praise side of your Christian walk, it can hinder your success in other areas, including healing. Sometimes you just have to do as Paul and Silas did in jail and sing praises to God when your body is hurting!

It is not necessary to praise God to receive your healing (it’s free), but it is bad taste not to praise Him. Jesus was critical of the nine lepers who were healed but did not return to give God thanks (Luke 17:12-19). It is proper to thank God for healing you! When you have received your healing by faith, you can thank Him that you have already received it, because you have. You do not have to wait for the manifestation of it in your body.

In fact, if you have to wait for your healing to show up in your body before you start praising God, you are not really in faith to begin with. If you had really received your healing, you would be thanking God for giving it to you already!

Hear and Be Healed

Come to Hear, Not Just Be Healed

Luke 6:17-19

In both of these passages, we read that people came to hear Jesus and to be healed of their diseases. If you want to be healed, it is important that you hear the Word of God. Do not simply run from one healing crusade to another, trying to get healed through “gifts of healings” in operation.

It shows a bad attitude to attend a healing crusade and nod off while the minister is preaching God’s Word on the subject of healing. You have already missed it if you think, “Come on, preacher, let’s get to the good stuff – lay hands on the sick!” You can get healed 100% of the time by simply believing God’s Word. You are not guaranteed to be healed through the gifts of the Spirit 100% of the time. If you are unwilling to be in faith when hands are laid on you, you should save your gasoline and your time and not bother attending. It is hearing the Word that produces faith. If you will not listen, no faith will be produced in you. If you will hear God’s Word, faith will rise in you and you will be in a position to receive your healing.

Remember Psalm 107:17-20! God sent His Word and healed them. His Word can heal you, too. To ignore the Word is to ignore God’s primary avenue of healing for the believer. Hear and be healed!

Plant God’s Seed in Your Heart

Jesus told a parable about different people who heard the Word of God. The seed was the same in each case. The ground it was planted in determined the harvest. After telling the parable, Jesus made a very strong statement about hearing and not hearing the Word, and the results of each. Read the Parable of the Sower:

Mark 4:2-25

This last verse of this passage is puzzling if you don’t read it in context. In context, it is crystal clear. Things will be given to him who has ears to hear. From him that does not have ears to hear, even what he has will be taken away. If you hear the Word, you will receive things from God. If you refuse to hear the Word, you will not only fail to receive from the Lord, but you will lose things you already have. Hence the importance of continually hearing the Word, not just hearing it once and then saying, “Yeah, I heard that already.”

It is difficult to preach healing to people who have a “Yeah, I heard that already” mentality. If they really know that healing is theirs, why do they get picked off by every two-bit virus that comes along, just like the rest of the world? If we really know we’re healed, we won’t get sick even when everyone else does. We will stand out from the world. You cannot convince anyone you know that healing is yours until you start walking in it. Faith comes by hearing the Word, not by having heard it once.

Beware of Offenses

You might as well be forewarned – you will not be popular with a lot of churchgoers if you start believing God’s Word about healing. Some people will call you a cult member, others will say that Satan is the one who healed you, and still others will actively try to talk you out of your healing and defend to the death their own right to stay sick. Jesus warned that Satan will come to try to steal the Word from you. The anti-healing books on the market today are tools he uses for this. Jesus warned that there would be persecutions for the sake of the gospel. You must not cave in when people belittle you for your stand for God’s Word.

Replies to common objections are included in this book so that you won’t be scared off by something that someone writes against divine healing.

When to Plant Seed

God’s Word is His seed. Plant it in your heart and it will grow. By planting healing Scriptures in your heart, you are planting for a healing harvest down the road. It may not come overnight, but it will come if you are consistent about hearing the Word.

Don’t do what most people do. They wait until they get sick to start paying attention to healing Scriptures. When you are sick, you often don’t feel like reading healing Scriptures. You just want to lie in bed and moan. It is harder to concentrate on what you’re reading.

If you wait until you are sick to read healing Scriptures, you are like a farmer who suddenly realizes that he has two days’ worth of food left in his house and says, “Honey, we’ve got to plant some seed now, quick! We need a harvest in two days so we can eat!” It’s a little late then, isn’t it?

I am not suggesting that you dwell only on healing Scriptures. If you want a better marriage, more money, a better love walk, or to walk in greater victory over sin, there are other topics you will have to read in the Bible. Reading healing Scriptures will not give you faith for these other things. Reading healing Scriptures gives you faith for healing. You don’t plant corn and reap tomatoes.

Keep Your Ears Open

Do you have ears to hear? Continue to hear the Word. You are God's husbandry [farm] (1 Corinthians 3:9). Let God's Word grow inside you to produce a harvest of healing!

The Confession UNTO Faith and the Confession OF Faith

God needs your vocal agreement. When you agree with God concerning any matter and say so, you release His power on the earth. The power is already everywhere; God is omnipresent and omnipotent. But that power is not released until God's Word comes out of your mouth. We see this principle in Romans 10:9-10, where confession is made unto salvation. Salvation is not yours until you confess (say) that it is. We would not accept a testimony that someone got saved if no one heard the person declare Jesus Christ to be his Lord. You would not baptize someone who has never said that Jesus is his Lord. Likewise, healing does not manifest until you are willing to say it out of your mouth. You're kidding yourself if you think you have something but you'd be uncomfortable telling anyone else that you have it. Jesus said that out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaks (Matthew 12:34-35). If you won't say it, you don't really believe it. That might sound hard, but it is definitely the truth.

It is not difficult to tell what people really believe. Just listen to them talk for a few minutes and you'll figure it out. If they say anything other than "I have received my healing; it is mine now," you know that they are not in faith, even if they mentally agree with the doctrine of divine healing and can quote all the Scriptures on it. There is a difference between assenting to a doctrine and actually receiving something. If you really believe something, you will say it. You will have the spirit of faith that says, "I believed, therefore have I spoken" (2 Corinthians 4:13).

God sent His Word and saved you from your sins. God sent His Word and healed you (Psalm 103:20). But only when you say it do you receive it. Otherwise, the power that was there for you all along goes to waste. It is not up to God to speak His Word unto salvation; it is up to you.

I am not talking about a "fake it till you make it" mentality, where you pretend to believe something until you really do. There is a confession unto faith and a confession of faith. A confession unto faith repeats God's Word to yourself so that you get used to hearing yourself agree with the Word. This develops your faith. A confession of faith releases the power of God in the situation now and receives the answer now. You may need some time to continue speaking God's Word before it becomes more real to you than whatever it is that you're facing.

In Joshua 1:7-8, Joshua was commanded to meditate on (mutter) the Word regularly so that he would observe to do it and then make his way prosperous. Note the 3 steps here: (1) Confess the Word, (2) Do the Word, (3) Prosperity follows your doing of the Word. A similar thing is referred to in Psalm 1:1-3.

A constant awareness of the Word was commanded back under the Law:

Deuteronomy 6:7:

And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

Deuteronomy 11:19:

And ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

We aren't under the Law today, of course, but Christians would be much better off if they spent more time studying God's Word for themselves. Many Christians barely seem to recognize the need to read their Bibles, and this is evident by the shocking ignorance of clear biblical principles that is rampant in today's church world. You can only act on the Word that you know!

Usually a confession unto faith will be necessary for a while to retrain your mind to think in line with God's Word instead of thinking according to worldly principles. Once the Word really becomes real to you, the confession of faith will result in whatever aspect of salvation you need, whether it is healing, finances, or something else.

If you fill up a squeeze bottle with ketchup and squeeze it, ketchup will come out. If you fill it with water, water will come out instead. Whatever you are filled with is what will come out when the squeeze is on, so you need to lay up God's Word in your heart so that it comes out when things get tough. If you have been filling yourself with worldly TV shows, the "advice" of some TV "doctor" is all you'll have in your heart to come out, but if you've been filling yourself with the Word, the Word will come out.

It is not a long-term solution to play "confession police" for each other and try to correct each other's confessions. If someone is speaking wrong things, he has not yet laid up enough of the Word in his heart to speak right, and the only solution is for the person to immerse himself in the Word. Simply advising him, "Stop saying that the pain is killing you" will not change things if he really believes that the pain is killing him. He will need to believe "by whose stripes you were healed" more than what the pain tells him, and pain can have a very loud voice!

There is no "quick fix" here. But you can develop strong faith by continuing to hear and reflect on God's Word. The investment is well worth it!

Crossing the Bridge from Head Knowledge to Revelation Knowledge

How many of us have been frustrated because we “knew” that we were healed by Jesus’ stripes, yet sickness remained? Many times people have a head knowledge of the Word, but head knowledge won’t get the job done. You may have discovered this already!

There is such a thing as mental assent that is not faith. Mental assent agrees with the Bible that healing belongs to you. Faith TAKES that healing when you pray. The biggest difference between mental assent and faith is that mental assent does not act, but faith always acts. Faith without works is simply dead mental assent. Real faith always has corresponding works and words (James 2:14-26). Real faith would say, “I KNOW that I have received my healing no matter what my body is telling me right now.” Mental assent would say, “Healing is mine, but I don’t understand why nothing is happening.”

Head knowledge says, “I UNDERSTAND it with my brain.” Revelation knowledge says, “I KNOW it in my knower!” When you KNOW that you are healed, you will not be rattled by physical evidence to the contrary, whereas head knowledge will throw in the towel and question why it didn’t work for you.

Head knowledge “receives” healing and then still sees you as laid up in bed for the next week. Revelation knowledge sees you as well and able to function as if you never had the illness. Both kinds of knowledge SEE something, but it is revelation knowledge that SEES you well. You have to SEE yourself well on the inside before you will ever SEE yourself well on the outside.

I’ve done an illustration while preaching to make this point. I will suddenly point at someone and ask, “Are you saved?” The person will respond without even stopping to think, “Yes!” I then point out that the person who responded did not have to stop and think for a minute what the Word said about his salvation. (“Let’s see, I’m saved if I confess Jesus as Lord and believe that God raised Him from the dead...I have confessed Him and I do believe that God raised Him from the dead, so...I guess I’d have to conclude that I am saved.”) Head knowledge has to stop and ponder things over. Revelation knowledge does not have to think – it knows! The old-timers talked about “know-so salvation” and you can have “know-so healing” as well.

If you KNOW that you’re saved, saying that you are saved is now a reflex reaction, not something you think about. You can get to the point where it is the same when you say that you are healed.

Are you frustrated because you have heard that you were healed by the stripes of Jesus, but you just don’t seem to be able to believe it? All of us have been there at some point. I know I have! There is a missing link to get from having heard that healing is yours to actually being able to believe it and receive healing for yourself.

That missing link is meditation on the Word. The Bible way to get a revelation, not just head knowledge, of the Word is to spend time meditating on (thinking, muttering to yourself) the Word. I am not talking about some weird eastern religion here. When you bring up the word “meditation” people think about getting into the Lotus Position, chanting a meaningless syllable and emptying their minds. That’s cult meditation that just invites demons. Biblical meditation RENEWS and FILLS your mind with something; it doesn’t EMPTY it. Scriptural meditation is the muttering and contemplating of what God says. It’s like taking a nugget from the Word and chewing on it and then chewing on it some more. You keep pondering what the Word says. You let it not depart from before your eyes and keep it in the midst of your heart (see Proverbs 4:20-22). You think about it day and night (Psalm 1:1-3, Joshua 1:7-8). That’s how you get it to really become part of you. Faith comes by hearing the Word of God, not by hearing it once and never bothering to hear it again because now you think you know it.

This is not simply a nice suggestion. It is a requirement for anyone desiring godly success in life.

Joshua 1:7-8

You succeed in life when you do God’s will. To do God’s will, you must fill your mind with what His will is, so that when the pressure is on, you know what to do and do it. Then you make your own way prosperous.

Notice that Joshua was not to let the book of the law depart from his mouth. Of course, this means that he was supposed to speak the words contained in the book, not that he was supposed to run around like a dog with the actual book of the Law in his mouth. Joshua was supposed to continually speak the Word of God.

This is what you should do, too. Continually reflect on God’s Word. If you need healing, you should major on Scriptures about healing. However, God told Joshua to do all the law, not just its healing part, if he wanted to succeed. Quoting healing verses while refusing to walk in love is not a recipe for successful living.

It is up to you, not God, whether or not you meditate on His word and prosper. If you refuse to pay close attention to His words because you’re always “too busy,” don’t blame God when you don’t seem able to get anywhere in your faith walk.

Paul prayed for the believers at Ephesus that God would give them the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him (Ephesians 1:15-23). He didn’t just pray that God would give them intellectual head knowledge. This is a prayer that you can – and SHOULD – pray for yourself often. God will answer it, and the results can be life-changing as you get revelation of His Word.

Finally, make sure that you are a doer of the Word and not a hearer only. God did not promise Joshua success if he only meditated on the Word. He had to do it. So do you. But doing it becomes easier once you fill your heart with it.

I am not discounting the fact that God gave you a brain and He wants you to think. After all, you do have to think to read this book, or read the Bible for that matter. But revelation knowledge already knows what to think. By the way, I am not treating “revelation knowledge” the way the term is used in some circles to describe revelation outside of the Bible. I am talking about revelation knowledge OF the Bible!

So the bridge we are crossing is the bridge from KNOWING INTELLECTUALLY that you are healed to SEEING yourself healed. So how do you change what you are seeing? Should you exert extra, incredible willpower to “see” yourself differently? That’s precisely what some people think (whether they admit it or not) and they just end up frustrated trying through their own human effort to see themselves as Scripture sees them. That isn’t a bridge; it’s a dead-end road.

If you will continue in the Word, you will begin to see yourself as the healed defending your inheritance, not as the sick struggling to break into the land of the healed. It will take time. If it happened instantly, there would be no need to meditate on the Word. But if you keep the Word before you, your thinking and then your reflexes will change. If someone were to approach you and say, “Are you healed?” you would be able to answer “Yes!” without having to think about it just as easily as you would say “Yes!” if someone asked you if you are going to heaven.

Ridiculous Healing Confession Bondage

One of the greatest truths you can learn from Scripture is the importance of speaking things that agree with the Bible. This is sometimes referred to as “positive confession,” but there is a subtle difference. You can make a “confession” that seems “positive” but isn’t biblical and get no results. You can make your mouth agree with God’s Word and get outstanding results. For example, you could say, “Every day for me is a happy day.” That is certainly a positive confession, but not really in line with Scripture, since happiness refers to an emotional state, and even great faith men like the apostle Paul were not “happy” every day. On the other hand, you could say, “I rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory,” and that would be agreeing with the Bible (1 Peter 1:8). God’s Word is His power unto salvation (Romans 1:16). It produces results. Even when you don’t have emotional happiness, you can still rejoice gloriously because joy is a fruit of the Spirit, not a fruit of your human emotions. A good Bible verse to use to show this distinction is Hebrews 12:2. Jesus’ body did not want to go through the torture of the cross, and yours would not either. Someone “sweating blood” in emotional agony, as Jesus experienced in Gethsemane, could not be considered “happy.” Yet Jesus, for the JOY that was set before Him, endured the cross, seeing the shame of that horrific death as nothing compared to what He would accomplish by His sacrificial death for our sins. There was joy even when there was not happiness. Jesus looked past the temporary agony to see that His actions would produce the ability for us to be born again in righteousness and true holiness (Ephesians 4:24) and to be able to be called His brothers and sisters (Hebrews 2:11).

So the type of “positive confession” that is also an affirmation of God’s Word has a profoundly good impact on our lives, and every believer should speak what God says, not what situations seem to be saying. Remember the Israelites who would not agree with what God said about being able to conquer the giants in the Promised Land. You don’t want to be like them. Remember how Joshua agreed with what God had said in front of the whole nation of Israel. You want to be like him in that regard.

Word-confirming positive confession is a powerful tool, so if a little is good, more of it would be even better, right? To some degree, yes, but it is possible to take things of God that are a blessing and go to such extremes with them that they turn into bondage.

For example, Jesus commanded us to reach the lost. But if you make a goal for yourself that you will win one person to Christ every day for the rest of your life no matter what, you can get in bondage to soulwinning! What if the people where you're witnessing are ornery sin-lovers who reject Christ? As far as God is concerned, you get credit for sharing the plan of salvation with them, and what they do with it is between them and God. Remember that even with the apostles in the Book of Acts, some believed and some disbelieved! They did their job by presenting the good news; they did not "fail" if they preached to certain people (Jews in particular back then) who rejected their message. Will you never take a true vacation day with your family because you must win a lost person every day? Will you never have time to play a game with your family because that time could have been spent evangelizing? There will always be one more lost person you could reach, after all. You can put yourself into bondage in such cases even though what you're doing is good. If Satan can't lick you, he'll join you by trying to get you to push something to such extremes that it becomes bondage instead of full of life.

Another example is prayer. We should all pray and not faint (Luke 18:1)! If Christians spent more time praying for their leaders (1 Timothy 2:1-2) than they do complaining about those leaders (which is nowhere commanded), things would probably be very different in our nations (and churches). But some people think they can't have any fun because they must spend every spare minute praying. In that case, prayer, a good thing, becomes bondage because they push it to such extremes they don't enjoy life anymore. (Such people usually feel superior to those of us who would dare just go have a good time with our spouses doing something completely unspiritual, but fun.) Anyone seeing their "driven" lifestyle of prayer would think, "I'm Glad I'm not a Christian like that person!" Is that a good witness?

And so it can be with confessing Scripture over yourself when it comes to healing. If you need to be healed, I wouldn't put any limit on how often you could make your mouth agree with God's Word about it. But in some circles it's advocated that you speak healing confessions over all kinds of different body parts every day to make sure that you stay in good health.

For example, "I declare that my liver is working properly today. My pancreas produces the correct amount of insulin today. My blood pressure is 120/80 today. I declare that my heart functions normally all day today and so do my lungs. My gall bladder is blessed, and my immune system functions at its fullest capacity. My knees, hips, and other joints are pain-free today. My thyroid gland produces the right amount of whatever it is that a thyroid gland produces. My kidneys function in the perfection God created them for. My skin is clear and my vertebrae all line up properly without having to pay a chiropractor a bunch of money. My appendix does not burst or cause me trouble. My tonsils remain uninfected. My blood vessels do not have cholesterol buildups and my hair does not get split ends. My intestines function normally and my esophagus is blessed. My ears will not ring and I will not see funny little floaters in my eyes when I look at a bright sky. My sinuses remain clear. My feet do not swell or get blisters."

But then one day you break a tooth munching an ice cube, and you suddenly realize – you never confessed life over your teeth that day! Then you start thinking about what the dental procedure will cost, and your stomach starts to hurt. Oops, you did not confess for your stomach's well-being either in the confessions above! Do you see how this sort of thing can easily lead to bondage instead of freedom? Nothing in the confessions above is bad to say, and if you have the time to do it, you're certainly not sinning. But if you think that you must name every body part you can think of every day, lest it develop a problem, you are actually operating out of fear, not faith! You are operating in Ridiculous Healing Confession Bondage.

It is like making a new ritual confession before you turn the key in your ignition to go somewhere. "I will not be T-boned by an SUV today. I will not be rear-ended by a convertible. I will not slip on black ice and ram into the car ahead of me. I will not hit any animals today. No drunk driver will come nigh my vehicle. No driver who is ignoring the road because he's texting or talking on the phone shall collide with me. My car will not have a flat tire that will make it veer into the wrong lane." And so on. You can't possibly think of every potential disaster that could happen, and you don't need to. Just believe that Psalm 91 applies to you (assuming that you meet its conditions). Likewise, you can believe that the Spirit of God who raised Christ from the dead imparts gives life to your mortal body (Romans 8:11) without having to mention all your body parts and specific things that might go wrong with them.

God wants you to have abundant life, and that means having a right balance of things so that you don't go overboard in any one particular area. Affirming God's Word with your mouth is important, but you can trust God to take care of you rather than trusting yourself to "confess away" every potential problem that your head can think up.

Healing and Atonement

One of the most noteworthy themes in the Bible is the connection between healing and atonement. When a sacrifice was made (often a blood sacrifice), healing or protection from sickness was the result. Symbols of the atonement of Christ produced healing in the Old Testament, as you will see below. How foolish to think that the Israelites could be healed by the symbols of Jesus Christ, but that Christians cannot be healed by the very Jesus Christ who was symbolized! Healing, atonement and forgiveness are found together throughout the Bible. Where there is atonement and forgiveness, there is healing. Since Christ atoned for your sins and forgave you, you should expect to be healed physically, too.

Exodus 12:12-13 says that the plague that killed Egypt's firstborn would pass over any house that had the blood of the Passover lamb on the front door. This symbol of Jesus Christ kept sickness away. The "destroyer" would not visit any house with this blood on the door. (Exodus 12:23: "For the LORD will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when He seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side posts, the LORD will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you.") The Passover lamb is explicitly declared to represent Christ in 1 Corinthians 5:7. Not only did the killer plague stay away, but also not a single Israelite was even feeble after this (Psalm 105:37). Israel walked in health after partaking of this symbol of Christ's atonement.

It is noteworthy that the Passover consisted of both the blood and the body, and commands were given for both. The blood sprinkled on the door redeemed the people from the plague, but the body was also significant because the people were to eat it. The people would not have had time to bake anything because of the haste with which they had to flee Egypt. The body of the Passover lamb was for their physical strength. We should expect the blood of our Lord (symbolized by the Passover) to redeem us from plagues, and we should expect the body of our Lord (also symbolized by the Passover) to give us physical strength. This is good to keep in mind when you partake of the Lord's Supper.

Exodus 15:23-25 cites an interesting case where water was undrinkable, but after Moses threw a tree into the water, the waters were "healed" in the sense that they were made sweet (drinkable). This tree probably symbolized Christ's cross, and interestingly, it is in the very next verse that God made His healing covenant with Israel, declaring that He was the Lord who healed them.

Exodus 30:11-16 contains a command to the Israelites to give "ransom money" to the Lord to make atonement for their souls, so that there would be no plague among them. Atonement kept sickness away from them.

The "law of the leper," as found in Leviticus 14:1-32 and Leviticus 15:13-15, required atonement to be made for a leper to be admitted back into the camp. The healed leper could not be readmitted without this atonement.

Numbers 8:19 says that the Levites were given to make atonement for Israel, so that there would be no plague when they came near the sanctuary. God is holy. The people under the Old Covenant could not approach Him in their sins. If they did, judgment would break out, as it did against the Philistines who stole the ark of God (1 Samuel 5:1-6:5). Atonement allowed men to approach God with no fear of getting a plague.

Numbers 16:44-50 tells how a plague that killed 14,700 people was stopped when Aaron made an atonement.

Numbers 21:5-9 contains the story of the complaining Israelites, many of whom died from a plague of serpents. The plague was stopped when Moses lifted up a brass serpent on a pole. Anyone who looked at this symbol of Christ was healed and forgiven. Jesus compared Himself to Moses's serpent in John 3:14. It follows that anyone who looks to the One symbolized by the serpent should also be healed and forgiven.

Numbers 25:3-13 tells of another plague that killed 24,000 people before it was stopped by an atonement.

2 Samuel 24:10-25 and 1 Chronicles 21:7-27 tell of another plague that ended when a sacrifice was made.

2 Chronicles 30:18-20 says that the Lord healed Hezekiah's people after they kept the Passover, which symbolized Christ's atonement. How sad it would be if you could be healed by the symbol of Christ's atonement and not by the very thing it symbolized! This would make the symbol more powerful than the real thing when it comes to healing. This shows that physical healing continued to be connected with the Passover even in a memorial of the actual event.

Job 33:19-25 shows an understanding even in Job's day of the principle of healing following a ransom (atonement).

Psalm 103:1-5 says that God forgives all your sins and heals all your diseases (among other things). Forgiveness and healing go together. When your sins are forgiven, you can get healed.

Isaiah 33:24, pointing to the millennial reign of Christ, says that the forgiven people will not be sick.

Isaiah 53 prophesies about the Messiah who would be bruised for our transgressions. He would bear our sicknesses and pains, and with His stripes, we are healed. 1 Peter 2:24 echoes this. See Isaiah's Prophecy of Redemption for definite proof that healing was part of Christ's atonement.

Matthew 9:2-8, Mark 2:2-12, and Luke 5:17-26 all give an account where Jesus heals a paralytic as proof that He has power on earth to forgive sins. When the sins were forgiven, the person could be healed. Now that your sins are forgiven, you should be healed as well.

It should be clear from the above that atonement stops plagues, and forgiveness results in healing. Now that Jesus has bought forgiveness for us through His atonement, we must conclude that healing is now ours as well. Otherwise, the mere symbols of Christ brought God's people more than Christ Himself did, which would be ridiculous as well as "false advertising" on God's part.

The Acceptable Year of the Lord

Luke 4:18-19

Jesus was sent, among other things, to proclaim “the acceptable year of the Lord” (verse 19). What does that mean? It is almost certainly a reference to the Old Testament “year of jubile” in which those who had been forced to sell possessions were to have them returned.

Leviticus 25:8-13:

And thou shalt number seven sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years; and the space of seven sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years.

Then shalt thou cause the trumpet of the jubile to sound on the tenth day of the seventh month, in the day of atonement shall ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land.

And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof: it shall be a jubile unto you; and ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family.

A jubile shall that fiftieth year be unto you: ye shall not sow, neither reap that which groweth of itself in it, nor gather the grapes in it of thy vine undressed.

For it is the jubile; it shall be holy unto you: ye shall eat the increase thereof out of the field.

In the year of this jubile ye shall return every man unto his possession.

The basic idea behind the year of jubile was that if you had to sell your property to someone to pay your bills, you were to get it back in this year. Slaves were freed and could go back to their families. Debts were canceled. Liberty was to be proclaimed to all the inhabitants of the land. Note that this was linked to the “day of atonement.”

I do not claim to be able to prove this absolutely, but it seems that Christ was likening His soon-coming atonement with the Day of Atonement in the year of jubile, at which time people were to get their lost possessions back. In the verse at the start of this discussion, Jesus said that He had come to proclaim deliverance to the captives. Then He said that He was sent to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord. In the Day of Atonement in the year of jubile, liberty was to be proclaimed throughout the land. In other words, the captives got to go free that year. I don't think it's too much of a stretch to conclude that Jesus was likening His coming atonement and its resulting liberty to the captives to the year of jubile and its Day of Atonement.

What does this have to do with healing? Recall that healing was a covenant right even under the Law of Moses. Everyone had a right to be healed by Jehovah Rapha, the Lord who Heals You. Obviously, many people in Jesus' time were not walking in this right. Healing was their rightful possession (Jesus called it the “children's bread” in Mark 7:27), but they had lost it. Jesus went around restoring this possession to the people who had lost it. His atonement provided the means by which we can have our possessions back. We can get back what Satan has stolen from us, including our health.

Also recall that Jesus declared sickness to be bondage to the devil (see Luke 13:11-16), and Peter said that sickness was the oppression of the devil (Acts 10:38). Given that Jesus was declaring liberty to the captives, He must have been declaring healing to the sick, since He considered it a form of captivity. He came to set at liberty those who were bruised, just as all men were set at liberty in the year of jubile after the Day of Atonement. I consider this allusion to the year of jubile to be another indication that Christ's atonement was to bring liberty and healing for all.

Healing Is a Good Thing

Another proof that God wants everyone healed is the fact that He will not withhold good things from the upright. Is healing a good thing? Ask any sick person. God never said that He would meet every need except healing needs. He never said that He would give good things except healing. Even if there were no regular healing verses in the Bible, the presence of these verses alone would prove that God is willing to heal everybody.

Psalm 23 talks about God's provision for us. In the first verse it has the statement, "I shall not want." Why? Because "The Lord is my Shepherd." Certainly, if the Good Shepherd is in control of your life, you should not be in want. (The verse means that you shall not lack, not that you shall not "want" anything in the modern sense. This is not Buddhism, which tries to get you to quit wanting anything so you're not disappointed by what you don't have!) It doesn't mean that you won't want to be healed; it means you won't lack for healing! If God would not heal you, you would still be in want of healing if the Lord were your Shepherd, and this verse would not be true.

Psalm 34:9-10 says that those who seek the Lord shall not want any good thing. (Want again means lack.) You should not lack healing. Healing is a good thing, isn't it?

Psalm 84:11 says plainly that God will not withhold anything good from the upright. Healing is good, so God will not withhold it.

Psalm 145:19-20 says that the Lord fulfills the desire of those who fear him. If you are sick, you desire healing, don't you? God's will is to fulfill your desire.

Matthew 7:11 says that God gives good things to those who ask him. Is healing a good thing? Of course! Therefore, God will give it to those who ask for it.

Jesus said in Mark 11:24 that you can receive whatever you believe for when you pray. This includes healing. Jesus did not say that this would work for everything except healing.

If you're sick, is it your will to be healed? Jesus said in John 15:7-8 that if you abide in Him and His words abide in you, you will ask what you will and it shall be done unto you. Therefore, if it is your will to be healed, and you let God's words abide in you, you know that you can be healed.

In John 15:16, Jesus made it plain that God would give you whatever you ask for in His name. You can ask for healing in the name of Jesus and God will give it to you. It has already been laid up in heaven for you. You are receiving something that already exists in the realm of the spirit. God has already reserved it for you. He doesn't have to go do something new about your healing.

John 16:23-27 contains yet another promise that you can ask the Father for anything in the name of Jesus and get it. That would include healing.

Matthew 18:18-20 shows us that when people agree on something in the name of Jesus, He is there in the midst of them to bring it to pass. This would include healing.

Romans 8:32 says that God freely gives you all things with His Son. “All things” includes healing.

Even if you never read a traditional “healing Scripture,” the facts shown above would be sufficient to let you know that you can ask God for healing and get it – because healing is a good thing!

Pre-approved for Healing

Ever get those credit card applications in the mail that say that you're pre-approved for a new credit card, car discount, or whatever? (Nowadays they are more likely say that you were "pre-selected" or "pre-approved to get this application" which is meaningless, of course, as they can still turn you down. It is like a flyer that says, "Our goal is 100% credit approval!" Does that guarantee that they will definitely approve you for financing? No, they were careful not to say that!) But they used to send notices of "pre-approved" credit cards. All you had to do was sign your name and send back the completed application. You were guaranteed to get the credit card, to say nothing of the right to have your supper interrupted for a while by telemarketers pitching "payment protection plans" to cover you if you lose your job, various insurance policies, shopping services, travel clubs, and so on, all administered through the same bank and conveniently billable to your new credit card.

If someone responded to such a pre-approved offer the way Christians act toward healing, he would:

- Send back the application with a list of good references who can vouch that he is truly deserving of this pre-approved credit card. "Joe has lived a good moral life. If anyone is deserving of this credit card, surely he is."
- Write a passionate letter pleading for the card. "PLEASE give me this card! If you do, I promise that I will rack up big bills with it. I will make only the minimum payments and help you build your next skyscraper downtown with all the interest I pay you. I will even make late payments after I come back from a long vacation to incur more charges and pad your coffers still more."
- Throw up his hands and say, "Well! If they really wanted me to have this credit card, they would just send it to me. I guess they really don't want me to have it."
- Say, "No way do I want this credit card. Sinful Sam down the street got this same offer. I'm insulted to be offered exactly the same terms as Sinful Sam."

You can't do a thing to deserve your healing. Jesus made you worthy to receive it. Jesus already paid a price so that you could be healed. You are pre-approved for healing.

I didn't receive my pre-approved credit card the last time I got one of those mailings. You know why? I didn't send in the application! That wasn't the credit card company's fault. The only reason I didn't get it was because I did not act on the pre-approved offer.

God already made provision for your healing when Jesus bled and died. You had not done a thing to please God. Your salvation was reserved for you while you were still in sin. Healing is available on a gift basis only. It is not a trophy for a handful of especially consecrated Christians.

The problem is not God, but modern philosophy and theology, as reflected in Proverbs 32:1-6, which you may read now as long as you realize that the real Proverbs has only 31 chapters! (These verses aren't actually in the real Bible but people quote them as if they were!) The truth of the matter is that God will never say "no" to a request backed by His covenant. 1 John 5:14-15 makes this clear.

Some people even tell us that sickness is a friend and a blessing. If sickness is a blessing, instead of gifts of healings operating in the body of Christ, we should have gifts of sickening. Preachers should be heard saying, "There's a man in the third row, and God showed me that you are well. As I speak, God is blessing you with pain in – I think it's your lower back, but I could be wrong..."

Healing is available to you on the same pre-approved basis as salvation from hell. It does not become yours to enjoy until you respond to God's offer. The good news is that you can't be turned down when you send back your application in faith!

Saved!

When God says that His Word is His power unto salvation, what does He mean? We usually think of this in terms of being saved from hell, but the words used in the Bible for saved and salvation actually encompass more than that. Let's go on a little tour and see what else salvation encompasses.

One of the primary Greek words used for salvation is sozo. This is used in Matthew 1:21, which says that Jesus shall save His people from their sins. 1 Timothy 1:15 tells us that Jesus came into the world to save sinners. Jesus said that whoever believes and is baptized shall be saved (Mark 16:16). So being saved obviously includes its traditional meaning of being saved from your sins.

The disciples in the boat used the same word when they asked the Lord to save (rescue) them in Matthew 8:25: "And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, Lord, save us: we perish." Peter cried, "Lord, save me" when he began to sink while walking on water (Matthew 14:30). So we see that save can also mean rescue. Preservation in a general sense is indicated by 2 Timothy 4:18: "And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom." This again is the same word sozo.

Sozo is used in James 5:15, where the prayer of faith shall save the sick. In this sense, the sick person will be healed. Jesus told a blind man, "Receive thy sight, thy faith hath saved thee" (Luke 18:42). Again, the word sozo means healed there. In 1 Timothy 2:15, where a godly woman is promised that she will be saved through childbearing, I believe that the meaning of that same word sozo is that she will be physically preserved through the process. (That particular verse is sometimes taken to mean something different; see Notes on 1 Timothy 2:15.)

There are plenty of other cases where sozo means healed. Here they are. The underlined words in each passage were translated from the same Greek word sozo:

"For she said within herself, If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole. But Jesus turned him about, and when He saw her, He said, Daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole. And the woman was made whole from that hour." – Matthew 9:21-22.

"And besought him greatly, saying, My little daughter lieth at the point of death: I pray thee, come and lay thy hands on her, that she may be healed; and she shall live." – Mark 5:23.

"For she said, If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole." – Mark 5:28.

"And he said unto her, Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace, and be whole of thy plague." – Mark 5:34.

"And whithersoever he entered, into villages, or cities, or country, they laid the sick in the streets, and besought him that they might touch if it were but the border of his garment: and as many as touched him were made whole." – Mark 6:56.

“And Jesus said to him, Go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole. And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in the way.” – Mark 10:52.

“They also which saw it told them by what means he that was possessed of the devils was healed.” – Luke 8:36.

“And he said to her, Daughter, be of good comfort: thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace.” – Luke 8:48.

“But when Jesus heard it, he answered him, saying, Fear not, believe only, and she shall be made whole.” – Luke 8:50.

“And he said unto him, Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole.” – Luke 17:19.

“If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole...” – Acts 4:9.

“The same heard Paul speak: who stedfastly beholding him, and perceiving that he had faith to be healed...” – Acts 14:9.

We can see that God’s idea of what saved is [sozo] encompasses more than just avoiding hell when you die. You are not only saved from eternal damnation, but in God’s eyes, you are saved from various temporal troubles as well, including sickness. The next time you think about the fact that you are saved, think about all that this word means in the Bible! Realize that Jesus your High Priest is able to save you to the uttermost (Hebrews 7:25), not just save you from sin. Realize that you are more than just reconciled to God. Jesus Christ saves you on an ongoing basis! As Romans 5:10 says, “For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life.”

Delivered!

You are delivered from the power (authority) of darkness and brought into the kingdom of God's dear Son (Colossians 1:12-14). God is not going to deliver you. You are delivered now. It has already happened. It is incorrect to pray that something will happen that has already happened. You do not need to pray for victory over the devil and his weapons. You have victory now. Do not ask God to deliver you from Satan's power. He did! You are in the kingdom of God's dear Son now. Thank God for that!

This is one of the simplest, yet least-acted-upon truths in the Church world today. Most Christians talk about how the devil is beating them up and how bad things are. They are unaware that the devil is getting his power from their mouths. Jesus spoiled principalities and powers (Colossians 2:15) and they have no legal right to dominate a Christian – until the Christian gives them that right with his mouth!

Do not talk defeat. Do not glorify the devil by exalting his alleged power over you as a believer. Talk about Jesus and how He set you free from Satan. Talk about the victory that is already yours in Christ. Talk about how you have been brought into Jesus' kingdom already and how He is Lord over every area of your life right now.

Satan is powerless until you authorize him to act with your mouth. He has no authority. You have the authority. Satan's game is to get you to use your authority against yourself. If you say that the devil is doing this and that to you and leave it at that, you have authorized him to act, and he'll surely take advantage of it!

You must stop saying that the devil is beating you up and doing all kinds of bad things to you, and start saying that you have been delivered from the devil's power. If you say that the devil is lording it over you, you are taking sides against the Bible. If you say that you are already delivered from Satan and that Jesus is Lord over every area of your life, you are agreeing with the Bible and thus with God.

Any fool can state physical facts. "It looks like the money won't come in. It looks like I'm going to die. It looks like the devil is winning." The man of faith looks beyond the facts just as the two faithful spies saw the giants in Canaan but affirmed that they were well able to go possess the land because God had promised it to them. The other ten spies talked about the giants, and talked Israel right out of the victory that would have been theirs. The giants did not keep the Israelites out of Canaan. The Israelites' unbelief of God's promises kept them out. They could have defeated the giants. God told them so. The giants did not defeat even one of them; they defeated themselves and dropped dead in the desert. If they had taken on the giants, the giants would have lost! The devil is no different from those giants in Canaan. He can't defeat you. You can only defeat yourself by doubting God and backing away without a fight.

Sickness is one area in which Satan lords it over believers today. Luke said that Jesus healed those who were oppressed of the devil (Acts 10:38). Sickness is part of the “power of the devil” over humanity. God says that you have been delivered from the devil’s power, which includes sickness. This is consistent with Peter’s statement, “By whose stripes you were healed (1 Peter 2:24). Jesus has made you free from the claims of sickness over your body. Satan has no right to exercise lordship over your body. Because Jesus paid for the redemption of your body as well as your spirit (1 Corinthians 6:19-20), Jesus is the rightful Lord over your body. The will of God should be done in your body. The will of Satan (sickness) does not have to be done because you have been set free from his power.

Do not ask God to deliver you from the devil’s power. Agree with God that you already are delivered from the devil’s power. Then act and talk like it. Once you get a revelation of this, it will be a key to victory for you in every area of your life.

Say What

The words that come out of your mouth control your destiny. They affect the realm of the spirit. They bring life or bring death. They can bring healing to your body or keep you sick. In fact, your confession of Christ or your failure to confess Christ out of your mouth determines whether you see heaven or hell when you die!

Jesus said that what you speak, believing, you will get. This promise in Mark 11:23 is not restricted to good things. Jesus did not say that you would receive whatever you said believing as long as it was something good. Like a car, this principle also runs in reverse! If you believe the wrong thing and speak the wrong thing, you are guaranteed to receive the wrong thing. You can have faith in God, believe His words, and get what He wants you to have, but you can also have faith in the devil, believe his words, and get what he wants you to have.

There are two principles here. The first, in Mark 11:23, is that you can speak to your obstacles in faith and make them leave. If you can speak to a mountain, it is surely easier to speak to cancer, heart trouble, etc., and command it to leave your body. You have the authority in Christ to do exactly that. If you believe this, you will speak to your bodily trouble, and it will have to obey your words.

We have usually emphasized death being in the power of your tongue as something negative that you use to hurt yourself. However, you should be glad that death is in the power of your tongue! You can speak DEATH to cancer or any other disease and kill it with faith-filled words!

Few Christians walk in the light of this fact, but we should raise our walk to meet the Bible standard rather than lowering the Bible standard to match our walk.

The second principle, in Mark 11:24, involves receiving from God in prayer. This is another way to be healed. You believe that Jesus has paid the price for your healing and that healing is rightfully yours as a Christian. God doesn't have to do anything new; He already did all He needed to do when He sacrificed His Son. Now you receive this gift just as you received the gift of salvation from hell. If you believe that you receive it when you pray, you will have it, regardless of whether you notice any difference immediately.

The angels of heaven stand ready to back your words. In Psalm 103:20 we see that angels obey God's words. If you speak God's words out of your mouth, the angels go to work to make sure that they come to pass. However, if you speak something else out of your mouth, the angels are handcuffed, and you can license Satan's forces to work against you!

In Jeremiah 1:12, God says, "I will hasten my word to perform it." The Hebrew word translated hasten in the King James means to watch out for, not just to hasten. In other words, God is watching over His word to make sure that it comes to pass quickly. But where will that word come from? Out of your mouth! God's words are in the earth, but they do not benefit you until you speak them in faith.

You could not be saved until you confessed Jesus with your mouth. Romans 10:9-10 says that you believe with your heart and confess with your mouth unto salvation. It works the same way with healing. You believe in your heart that God bought your body with the same atonement that saved you from sin (1 Corinthians 6:19-20). Then you speak that with your mouth, and healing manifests in your body.

Note that Luke 12:8-9 says that your words decide whether or not Jesus confesses you before the angels! Your words determine your eternal fate! You are justified or condemned by your words (Matthew 12:37). Your words also determine your fate in this life.

How powerful can words be? Words made everything there is! Hebrews 11:3 says, "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear." Just as God's words framed this world, your words frame your world. So it is important not to get careless with your words. Proverbs 13:3 warns, "He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his life: but he that openeth wide his lips shall have destruction."

It is important that your words line up with God's Word. According to God, you were healed by the stripes of Jesus (1 Peter 2:24). So it is always correct to say, "I am healed by Jesus' stripes." You agree with God when you say that. You do not agree with God if you say, "I am sick and it doesn't look as if things will get any better." You do not even agree with God if you say, "I believe that God is going to heal me." (That puts off into the future something that God has already provided for you!) You want to agree with God!

You are not lying when you say that you were healed by the stripes of Jesus, even though your body may not bear witness with this yet! You would be lying if you denied being sick. There is a difference. You are not denying that there is a problem in your body. You are simply stating a higher truth (your redemption) that will overrule the current physical facts about your body.

You may sometimes act like an unbeliever. You are still correct to state that you are dead to sin and living unto righteousness (1 Peter 2:24) even when you just acted like the devil incarnate. You can't deny that you sinned and that the physical evidence would seem to indicate that you are not even saved. But there is a higher truth that gives you victory over sin, and you are correct to say so. The more you affirm to yourself what you have in Christ and who you are in Christ, the more you will believe it and act like it. (If you want a good spiritual exercise, read Who You Are and What You Have and continually confess those things. It will improve your life. It certainly improved mine.)

It's easy to say, "I have received my healing" around church people of like precious faith. The real test is what you say outside of church! If you don't dare say that you have received your healing by faith, you really haven't received it. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaks (Matthew 12:34-35). If you won't say it, you don't really have it.

2 Corinthians 4:13 is a good indicator of who is and isn't in faith for healing. If you believe something, you will say it. If you won't say it, you don't really believe it yet. Listen to what someone says and you will soon find out what is in his heart. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaks (Matthew 12:34-35).

A person who has truly received something that redemption has paid for will be in "praise mode" rather than "request mode." In general, it is good for you to live a life of praise and thanksgiving, as this is God's explicit will for you. ("Rejoice evermore. Pray without ceasing. In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." – 1 Thessalonians 5:16-18.) You may not have a full revelation of God's will for you in every area of your life, but you have a plain revelation of His will when it comes to this! I want to be in His will, don't you? Living in praise and thanksgiving mode will help you live a victorious life.

Psalm 107:1-2 says, "O give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever. Let the redeemed of the LORD say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy;". So here's a quick quiz that almost everyone in Word circles will flunk. If you are the redeemed of the Lord, what should you be saying? (a) The word "so" (b) That you are the redeemed of the Lord (c) That God is good and His mercy endures forever. Most faith people "know" that the redeemed are to SAY that they are redeemed (choice b), but that isn't the context. Choice (c) is correct within the context when you read both the verses in this passage. In other words, you are not just to confess that you are redeemed (which is not praise to God, though it's still beneficial to do that), you are to praise God for His goodness and mercy.

Your words can corrupt not only your success in life, but also your physical body! In fact, the words that come out of your mouth will defile you more than the food that you put into your mouth (Matthew 15:11). Speaking bad things about others will eventually make you sicker than living on soda, potato chips and chocolate bars. James 3:2-6 contains a strong warning about the way that your words can set on fire the very course of nature in your life. But James also says that if you can control your tongue, you can rule your entire body. Don't let anyone talk you out of this glorious fact – you can rule your entire body with your mouth! In other words, you can make it obey you.

Think of it! If you speak right things with your tongue, you can stop yourself from getting sick. Kind words can even promote health in others. (See Proverbs 12:18.) If you speak evil with your tongue, you can make yourself sick! This is no great revelation to most modern doctors, who have documented the links between bad attitudes and illness, but this point seems to be lost on many Christians today. (They wouldn't say some of the things they say if they really believed James!)

James also said that no man can tame the tongue. Does this mean we give up and let our tongue become the local sewer? No! There is a way to tame your tongue, but you cannot do it in your own natural strength. It's simple. You lay up God's Word in your heart. Jesus explained this principle in Luke 6:45. Whatever is in your heart will come out. So the idea is to put the right things into your heart so that the right things will come out of your mouth.

This is not strictly a New Testament idea. Joshua 1:7-8 makes it clear that this was an Old Testament practice as well – at least it was supposed to be!

This takes time. There is no shortcut. You must study God's Word and reflect upon it. Only then will it fill your heart and come out of your mouth.

The good news is that this works automatically. Try it and see! The more you put God's Word in your heart, the more it will just come out of your mouth naturally in the face of adversity. You won't have to "work it up."

Healing Does Not Require Great Faith

If Jesus Were to Appear to You...

If Jesus were to appear to you and say, "I have healed you. Healing is yours. You can receive it right now," what would you do? Would you doubt Him? Would you argue with Him that we never know what God will do? Would you tell him that He's wrong because no one can really do this faith stuff? Or would you take your healing? I hope that you would believe His words and take your healing.

Jesus is the Word (John 1:1-2). He has already told you that He has healed you (1 Peter 2:24). The written Word of God has just as much force as if Jesus appeared to you and said those things in person. The Bible contains God's words to you. It is a more sure word of prophecy than if you had a vision or a visitation. You could always dispute what you saw or heard in a vision, but the Word of God is forever settled in heaven (Psalm 119:89). You can always go back and verify what it says and be sure of it.

If you would receive your healing if Jesus said these things in person, you should receive your healing now because He has said those things to you personally through the Word of God. Failure to do so indicates that a vision would be more important to you than the written Word, which is a very dangerous attitude. Anything God says in the Bible has the same authority as it would if Jesus appeared to you and said it to you in person.

Think about it.

God's Mercy and Compassion

Psalm 145:8-9

One of the facts God stresses most about Himself is His great mercy. He declares that His mercy endures forever. See Psalm 136, verses 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26, for starters. (All these verses end with "for his mercy endures forever.") See Psalm 23:6: "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the LORD for ever." Psalm 25:10 says, "All the paths of the LORD are mercy and truth unto such as keep his covenant and his testimonies." God "retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy" (Micah 7:18). Lamentations 3:22-23 says, "It is of the LORD'S mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not. They are new every morning: great is thy faithfulness."

Remember Jehoshaphat's singers who went out before the army? The victory was won by praising God. What in particular did they praise Him for? Was it "for His awesome power maketh even an H-bomb seem like a BB gun?" No. They sang, "Praise the LORD; for His mercy endureth for ever!" God wants you to know about His power, but He wants you to know about His mercy, too! Plenty of people who believe that God is all-powerful don't believe that God would be merciful enough to heal them. Actually, He is so merciful that He sent Jesus as a one-time sacrifice to provide the mercy of healing for anyone who wants it.

Do you know what they were singing about in Solomon's temple when the glory of God came in and the priests couldn't even stand up? "For He is good; for His mercy endureth for ever" (2 Chronicles 5:13).

In case you haven't gotten the gist of this yet, God is good and His mercy endures forever.

Because Jesus was God in the flesh, we should expect to see the same characteristics in Him. And we do.

In Mark 1:40-45, Jesus was moved with compassion and healed a leper. He could not have done this to show off His power, because He told the leper not to tell anyone about his healing. This was an act of compassion on the man, not a publicity stunt.

In Matthew 14:14, Jesus was moved with compassion and healed a multitude of sick people.

In Matthew 20:30-34, Jesus had compassion on two blind men and healed them.

In Mark 5:2-20, Jesus told the ex-demoniac go tell his friends how the Lord had had compassion on him.

In Mark 9:17-29, the demonized boy's father asked Jesus to have compassion on them. Jesus cast the devil out.

In Luke 7:12-16, Jesus had compassion on a dead man's mother and raised her only son from the dead at his funeral.

If Jesus was moved with compassion then, He is still moved with compassion today, because He has not changed (Hebrews 13:8). If He had compassion on the sick in His earthly ministry, He has compassion on you today if you are sick. Today He is your “merciful and faithful high priest” (Hebrews 2:17). If He were unwilling to heal you today, His mercy and compassion would have decreased since He walked the earth, and He would not be a merciful high priest to you.

Sometimes we can teach faith and leave people with the impression that our God “who is a faith God” is simply sitting up there with a faith meter, waiting to see when you will get your act together and believe His Word enough. That is a false picture. Yes, God is moved by faith, not by need, but He is very willing to help you walk in faith. He gave you His Word so that you could have faith and receive what is yours. He sent the Holy Spirit so that you might know the things that are freely given to you by God (1 Corinthians 2:12). The Holy Spirit will teach you all things (John 14:26) and guide you into all truth (John 16:13), including the truth about your healing. You have not just been left here to flounder around on your own, “trying” to believe God. You have His Word and His Helper!

God wants to help you receive your healing! He wants you to walk in everything that Jesus provided for you. What a waste it would be for Jesus to provide something that you never receive! That isn't God's will. God is more interested in your healing than you are. He paid a tremendous price to buy it for you.

God loves you and He cares about whether or not you get healed! He wants you to be in health and prosper, even as your soul prospers (3 John 2).

Because God is merciful and compassionate, we should be imitators of God (Ephesians 5:1) and be merciful and compassionate ourselves. As He is, so should we be in this world. Therefore, it is never an appropriate response to news of a sick brother to say, “Well, that's his problem; if he would just get in faith, he'd get healed!” We are to bear another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ (Galatians 6:2). This does not mean that you should bear the person's sickness, but it does mean that you should pray for the person instead of judging him. (You wouldn't ask God to heal him, but you would ask God to enlighten and strengthen the sick person.) You are part of the same Body as that person. When one part suffers, all suffer (1 Corinthians 12:26). You should never have a “That's his problem!” attitude. Be glad that Jesus does not have that attitude!

Healing and Compassion

Healing and Compassion

Would you like to see more “supermarket aisle” healings? I would. I’ve had the privilege to lay hands on some people individually in such public settings, but I’ve missed out on some good opportunities, too. I believe that as we are more moved with compassion as Jesus was (see God’s Mercy and Compassion), we will see more miracles. Jesus was moved with compassion, not with a desire to make His ministry more notable, and we need to be moved the same way.

If you see a sick person, it is easy to just say, “Glad that’s his problem, not mine!” But God’s compassion welling up in you can negate that fleshly attitude and help you see that person through God’s compassionate eyes. The Holy Spirit can help you realize that you have the ANSWER to that illness in the name of Jesus, so you can do something about it rather than just watch that person suffer.

Now I’m not saying that you should just go up to every sick person at the store and ask to lay hands on him because if people don’t know you, they can just dismiss you as a kook. But if you can strike up a conversation and make the person feel more comfortable around you, you may be able to work in the fact that Jesus paid for all of us to be completely well, just as you may be able to bring up the new birth.

I’m not going to preach this as doctrine, but I have times when God’s compassion for a sick person rises up so big in me that I just start bawling while I’m laying hands on the person. Every time that has ever happened to me, the person was completely healed. It wasn’t something I worked up; it was God’s divine compassion flowing through me. I got to experience briefly just HOW MUCH God loves the person and HOW MUCH God wants that person to be completely well – HOW MUCH God is “touched” by that person’s infirmities with the same compassion that caused Him to sacrifice His only Son so that everyone could be forgiven and healed.

Healing and the Prodigal Son

Luke 15:11-32 contains the story of the prodigal son. We can learn many things about the nature of God from this story, some of which relate to healing.

We can see that the father (who represents God) had compassion on the backslidden son when he came to himself and repented. Sometimes a person is sick because he has consciously turned away from God, and once he repents, God heals him. When such a person receives a dramatic healing, the religious people can get very upset because they figure that if anyone deserved such a miracle, they did. Like the elder son, they miss the key point that the father made: "All that I have is thine." Healing belonged to them all along! All of God's healing ability was theirs for the asking.

There is no point leaving a healing crusade mad because the people you think of as spiritual "low life" get miracles while you don't. The same power is available to you! Sometimes a repenting backslider or sinner is more conscious of his need for God (and more humble) than you are, so he finds it easier to receive a gift from God. Thank God for good works, but your good works won't heal you. Healing is a gift that Jesus Christ purchased for you. Don't ever forget that! You didn't merit it. He gave it to you while you had still done absolutely nothing to please God and you were still in sin.

Don't be like the self-righteous elder son who was too mad to go enjoy the food and the music! He was only hurting himself with his attitude. All that God has is yours. The Scriptures tell us that you have been blessed with all spiritual blessings in Christ (Ephesians 1:3) and that God has already given you all things pertaining to life and godliness (2 Peter 1:3-4). Healing is yours. Get it for yourself, and don't get mad when someone else gets it. Rejoice with the person, because that's what God is doing!

God's Promises Have Conditions

It is a mistake to “claim” healing Scriptures without regard to their context. If you are not deliberately disobeying Him, you have a clear conscience to receive all of His precious promises (1 John 3:21-22). However, most of the “Healing Scriptures” we quote have conditions attached to them. The Bible never teaches that you can just live wrong on purpose and expect to walk in all of God’s blessings. It is instructive to review the conditions. As covered in an objection reply, we are not establishing a gospel of works, but neither are we tempting God by ignoring His conditions while claiming His blessings.

In some cases, an Old Testament condition was fulfilled on our behalf because of what Jesus did. If a Scripture describes what will happen to the righteous, that Scripture applies to you because you are the righteousness of God (2 Corinthians 5:21). So you can claim such a promise without a perfect human track record of your own.

In Exodus 15:25-26, the condition for having God keep you healthy was, “If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the Lord thy God, and wilt do that which is right in his sight, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes.” As a believer, God treats you as if you HAD kept all His statutes, so you have “met” this condition to have God heal you.

Exodus 20:12, Deuteronomy 5:16 and Ephesians 6:1-3 link long life with your honoring of your parents. This is still conditional, even as quoted in the New Testament.

In Exodus 23:25-26, the condition was, “And ye shall serve the Lord your God...” Then God would take sickness away from you. If you serve Him today, you should expect the same.

In Numbers 21:5-9, you could be healed of a fatal snakebite, but only if you steadfastly beheld the symbol of the crucified Christ. Today, you are promised immunity from snakebites as a Christian (Mark 16:18).

In Deuteronomy 5:33, the condition was, “Ye shall walk in all the ways which the LORD your God hath commanded you...” to live long and prosper. Today God treats you as if you had always walked in all His ways under the Law.

In Deuteronomy 6:2, the condition for long life was, “That thou mightest fear the LORD thy God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments, which I command thee...all the days of thy life....” It is still a choice to fear the Lord, but you have the same right standing as far as keeping commandments as you would have if you kept all of them.

In Deuteronomy 7:12-15, God promised to take sickness from you “if ye hearken to these judgments, and keep, and do them.....” Today we still need to have ears to hear the Word, but God will treat you as if you kept all His judgments.

In Deuteronomy 11:8-9, prolonged days were promised under this condition: “Therefore shall ye keep all the commandments which I command you this day....” Once again, God treats you as if you had kept all the commandments based on your righteousness in Christ.

In Deuteronomy 11:18-21, long life was available under this condition: “Therefore shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul, and bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes. And ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt write them upon the door posts of thine house, and upon thy gates....” This means constantly keeping God’s Word before you! How many sick people ignore this principle and just think God should wave a wand and heal them while they watch soap operas in the hospital! The general idea still applies that you will lengthen your life if you give heed to the Word.

In 1 Kings 3:14, God promised lengthened life “if thou wilt walk in my ways, to keep my statutes and my commandments, as thy father David did walk....” As a believer, you are treated as one who has kept his statutes.

In Job 5:26, the promise of long life is linked to being one whom God corrects (Job 5:17: “Behold, happy is the man whom God correcteth: therefore despise not thou the chastening of the Almighty:”). In the New Testament, we need to pay heed to God’s correction because it is for our benefit (Hebrews 12:5-13).

In Psalm 34:11-14, the promise of many good days is for you when you “Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile. Depart from evil, and do good; seek peace, and pursue it.” We are exhorted to keep our tongues from evil in the New Testament as well, letting no corrupt word proceed from our mouths (Ephesians 4:29, James 3:10, 1 Peter 3:10-11). We should expect many good days if we meet this condition.

In Psalm 41:1-3, the giver to the poor is promised strengthening on his sickbed. Isaiah 58:6-11 talks of speedy health to the one who helps the poor. While healing is part and parcel of the New Covenant, you cannot claim these promises unless you give to the poor.

In Psalm 84:11, God withholds no good thing from those who walk uprightly.

Psalm 91 is full of protection promises. However, the following conditions are stated:

“He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High,” “I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust,” “Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the most High, thy habitation,” “Because He hath set his love upon me,” “because He hath known my name.” If you aren’t doing and saying what this Psalm says to do and say, you don’t qualify for the benefits.

Proverbs 3:1-2 is yet another passage promising long life if you “forget not my law; but let thine heart keep my commandments.” God will treat you as if you DID keep all His commandments, but it is still a good idea to remember His Word.

Proverbs 3:7-8 says health comes when you “Be not wise in thine own eyes: fear the LORD, and depart from evil.” Proverbs 10:27 contains a similar thought. These promises only apply if you meet the conditions.

Proverbs 3:16 and Proverbs 9:11 say that long life comes from wisdom. These promises don’t apply to the unwise, even today.

Proverbs 4:10 says that when you hear and receive God’s sayings, you’ll live long. Proverbs 4:20-22 promises health to all your flesh when you “attend to my words; incline thine ear unto my sayings. Let them not depart from thine eyes; keep them in the midst of thine heart.” These are still conditional promises.

In Isaiah 40:29-31, renewed strength is promised under the condition that you “wait upon the Lord.”

That was under the Old Covenant. What about our New Covenant? Does it have conditions, too?

That favorite “faith” verse Mark 11:24 is immediately followed by teaching in the next two verses that you must forgive – it’s part of the instructions for the New Testament prayer of faith. (See Mistake: Unforgiveness for that passage.)

1 Timothy 2:15 promises that a woman will not die in childbirth – but only if she and her husband continue in faith, holiness and sobriety.

1 Peter 3:10-11 echoes the language of Psalm 34:11-14 and basically says that if you want to live a long time, watch your mouth.

3 John 2 expresses God’s desire for you to be in health, but notice that it is “as your soul prospers.”

Some Corinthians failed to walk in healing despite their knowledge and willingness to flow in manifestations of the Holy Spirit. They were judged for their irreverence toward the Lord’s Supper. If you want to walk in health, making light of communion and treating it as ordinary food and drink is not the way to go! That is an insult to Jesus.

We are not “redeemed” from the blessings promised in the Old Covenant in our new and better covenant, but you must realize that some of the blessings had conditions, so they cannot just be “claimed” independently of those conditions. If you ignore God’s Word, are a miser, are wise in your own eyes, and generally don’t fear the Lord (in the reverential sense), you have no right to claim any of the promises listed above that depend on those.

To What Extent Can We Claim Old Testament Healing Promises?

Do You Really Believe in Healing?

Many churches say, “We believe in healing,” but they don’t believe in healing in a way that will help anyone receive it. Many times, what they mean is, “We believe that God heals today, but we do not believe that God wants to heal everyone of everything in every case.” Or perhaps they mean, “We believe that God heals today through the gifts of the Spirit, but we do not believe that healing was provided in Christ’s atonement.” I submit to you boldly that if you don’t believe that healing was provided in Christ’s atonement, you have insufficient faith to be healed. If you aren’t sure that God is willing to heal everyone, you can never be sure that God is willing to heal anyone.

This is not a little side point. It is a monumental, major big deal. It makes the difference between getting healed and staying sick.

If you don’t believe that Jesus was made sick in your place to redeem you from sickness, you have no basis for faith for your healing. Faith and question marks are incompatible. If you doubt that you receive your healing when you pray, you have failed the qualifications to receive from God in James 1:5-8, and you must not think that you will get anything from God. (Don’t get mad at me for saying that; I’m just quoting James!)

If you cannot support your belief for your healing with Bible verses, you are not in faith. Faith comes by hearing the word of God. It’s that simple. Faith must be based on a specific promise or statement of God. It is not a free-floating attempt to believe something without regard to God’s Word.

If you don’t believe that healing was provided in Christ’s atonement, you cannot be sure that God ever wants to heal anyone in particular, including you. By your “logic,” your only choice is to try to get a special revelation from God of whether or not He wants to heal you, and whether or not He wants to do it now. This is doomed to fail, because God has already given you His Word on the matter, and you cannot expect a special revelation of this any more than you can demand a special revelation of whether God wants you to walk in love. You have no sure way to minister to the sick if you believe that God can make exceptions. If He can make sovereign exceptions, you can’t be sure that God wants to heal any particular sick person on whom you lay hands. You are ministering in hope but not in faith. You can’t possibly fulfill James 5:14-16 and pray the prayer of faith, because faith is based on the Bible.

If you do get anything from God without believing that Christ took your sicknesses to redeem you from them, you may lose your healing and not get anything the next time you need healing. You will have no Scripture to confront the devil with when you are attacked, which you will be, just as surely as you are reading this. You need Scripture, not just prayer, to run the devil off. If you can’t respond the way Jesus did to the devil’s attacks – by saying, “It is written” and quoting what is written – you are firing blanks at the devil and he knows it.

I am not trying to be mean by making this point so boldly. I want to shock you into reality so that you don't kid yourself about where you stand for your healing. Unless you have Biblical proof that you can receive healing from God now, you are not in faith and you are in no position to get healed. This needs to be presented boldly because so many people think they're in faith for healing when they're not, and then we who preach healing as a covenant right get a bad name because "So-and-So was really in faith for his healing and he died anyway." That is why we must preach boldly that Christ bore both sin and sickness. A watered-down gospel designed to please men (even Christian men) will have watered-down results. Don't think that you'll get along with everyone when you start preaching this. People will fight you for their "right" to stay sick.

But when you know that Jesus bore your sicknesses for you, you understand that you do not need to bear sickness in your body. You understand that sickness is illegal and that it is trespassing in your body, which is a blood-bought member of Christ. You know that you were healed by a completed act that cannot be nullified by the sum total of the devil's attacks or pallets of anti-healing books. You know that because God has legally healed you already, He will have only one possible answer for you – "YES" – when you come to Him to receive that healing. You know that God not only paid for your healing, but He is currently offering it to you. He doesn't have to whip something up or do anything new for you. The work, as Christ declared, is finished. You need only receive what is already offered to you freely.

In short, you "know that you know" that total physical healing belongs to you as a Christian, and that you don't have to settle for anything less. You can boldly declare your healing before God, the devil and people alike.

If this is not what your church teaches, it does not really believe in healing. If this is not what you believe, you do not really believe in healing. Check yourself. The test is simple: Can you declare on the basis of God's unchangeable Word that you have the right to receive your healing now with no possibility that God will turn you away? You can only believe that healing is for you if you believe that healing is for all, and you can only believe that healing is for all if you believe that healing was included in Christ's atonement.

Sure, you and your church may have sporadic success getting the sick healed through God's mercy and through the gifts of healings and working of miracles and special faith talked about in 1 Corinthians 12:8-11. But you won't be very successful in the long run unless you give people something to trust other than the gifts of the Spirit. People need to know that healing is legally theirs because Christ bore their sicknesses and diseases in their place. Anything short of unqualified preaching of this part of the gospel will result in wavering, doubting and unbelief on the part of the people, which in turn will result in many people staying sick because they are improperly instructed.

I urge you to find a church that boldly and explicitly declares that Christ purchased healing for everyone of every disease and says so in its official statement of doctrine. (But beware: There are churches that have this in their official statement but don't preach it from the pulpit anymore!) Some churches resort to a watered-down statement to the effect that "divine healing operates today," but you could agree with that if you believe that God only is willing to heal in some cases, which means you don't have a solid basis for receiving healing. This may be an attempt for "unity" so that people who believe that God can heal but may not choose to do so right now can become full members of the church by agreeing to the statement of "faith." However, there will not be a real unity of the faith in that church unless the members agree that healing is paid for and available to all today.

Suffering

No one likes to talk about suffering, and this probably wasn't the first message you clicked. But it is important for you to know what the Bible says about suffering as a Christian. There is so much foolish talk out there that claims that Christian suffering includes sickness. I won't leave you hanging until the end – suffering as a Christian has nothing to do with being sick. Yes, sickness is suffering, but you don't have to be a Christian to suffer that way. Plenty of sinners suffer sickness and receive no spiritual benefit from it. Being persecuted for your faith is the suffering referred to in the New Testament. You are redeemed from suffering from sickness, but you are not redeemed from suffering persecution.

Suffering for the sake of the gospel is a good thing, not a bad thing. Paul's desire was, "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;" (Philippians 3:10). He warned Timothy, "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution" (2 Timothy 3:12). These verses are probably not on your refrigerator, but they are just as true as the ones we all like.

1 Peter 2:19-20:

For this is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully. For what glory is it, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, that is acceptable with God.

There are many verses in the Bible about suffering, but not a single one of them says that you have to suffer sickness, or even implies that you have to suffer sickness. There are sufferings in this world because Satan rules over unsaved men. They act like Satan, who is out to get you. Read Paul's lists of sufferings and you'll see that sickness is notably absent. (See the answer to the objection on Paul's thorn in the flesh if you think his thorn was an illness.)

Here are Paul's "sufferings:"

Stripes, imprisonments, tumults, labors, watchings, fastings – 2 Corinthians 6:5

In abundant labors, in stripes above measure, in prisons more often, in deaths often, beaten 39 times on five different occasions, beaten with rods three times, stoned once, shipwrecked three times, spending a day and a night in the water, on frequent trips, in danger from waters, robbers, his own countrymen, the heathen, in perils in the city and the wilderness, in the ocean and among bogus brethren, in weariness and painfulness, watching often, hungering, thirsting, fasting, being in cold and nakedness – 2 Corinthians 11:23-27

You won't find illnesses on this list, although you'll find just about everything else. (If you think painfulness is where you'll find illness, you haven't checked the word in a concordance. You may discover this word's meaning in the reply to the Paul's Thorn objection mentioned above.)

Yes, you will suffer in this world. Jesus suffered many persecutions, and the servant is not above his master. However, like Paul in one of the verses quoted above, you are to share in Christ's sufferings, not in sufferings that Christ did not suffer. Jesus never suffered sickness until His atonement, when He suffered our sicknesses. You could not possibly share in Christ's atoning sufferings for mankind. The only one of Christ's sufferings that you could suffer is persecution.

Job Explained

The book of Job presents people with plenty of problematic passages. There have been different points of view about many of these passages for a very long time. Even today's "faith teachers" and "grace teachers" offer many different and conflicting views about what the book of Job shows us. So we will look at the book of Job IN DEPTH and see what we can conclude from it.

As a young Christian, I got healed from allergies I'd had all my life after reading and believing the book of Job! The entire Bible is the "word of faith" (Romans 10:8), so it ALL must stir your FAITH if you divide it properly. God did not write 65 books of the Bible to build your faith and then write a 66th book (Job) to tear down your faith and get you into unbelief! Job settled some things for me about sickness and healing, and it should do the same for you.

The Most Important Thing about Job

Before we delve into some of the nitty-gritties about the book of Job, I want to say up front that YOU CANNOT BE ANOTHER JOB under the New Covenant. In fact, there are statements within the book of Job itself that make this clear! So if you have any fear that what happened to Job could happen to you and that it could be God's will for you to suffer like that, rest assured that it's impossible!

Satan made Job sick. Under the New Covenant, we are redeemed from Satan's kingdom (Colossians 1:13) and all the junk that it has to offer. You have authority over all of Satan's works (Luke 10:19), including all the things that he did to Job. YOU can resist Satan and make him flee (James 4:7, 1 Peter 5:8-9). Jesus was manifested to DESTROY the works of the devil (1 John 3:8), including EVERYTHING that he did to Job. Healing is an essential part of the New Covenant (as shown throughout this book). Job did not have the New Covenant. You do. What happened to Job would never have happened to him if he were under the New Covenant, and those calamities do not have to happen to YOU.

Summary of the Book of Job

Job is a long book, but it can be broken down into some essential parts. Here are the key passages that we will deal with.

Job 1:1:

There was a man in the land of Uz, whose name was Job; and that man was perfect and upright, and one that feared God, and eschewed evil.

So we see that Job was righteous as far as one could be before either the Old Covenant or the New Covenant. There is no indication of any OLD Covenant (the Law of Moses), let alone the New Covenant, in the entire book of Job, so we can safely assume that Job lived before the Law of Moses was given. There is a descendant of Issachar named Job in Genesis 46:13 (“And the sons of Issachar; Tola, and Phuvah, and Job, and Shimron.”) but that is too thin to use as evidence that Job lived at that time. After all, there are 3 different people named Ananias in the New Testament – a liar, a nasty high priest, and a godly disciple who laid hands on Saul who became Paul. Obviously the high priest and the disciple couldn’t be the same person as the liar, because the liar dropped dead before the other passages! There was even a Jesus who was called Justus (Colossians 4:11) – this was not the same Jesus who died on the cross even though he had the same name. So we can’t date Job by his name, but I think it’s safe to date him by the absence of the Law of Moses. If that Law had been given, Job could have appealed to its healing provisions as a righteous man and received immediate healing from what Satan did to him.

We know that Job considering cursing God a horrible thing:

Job 1:5:

And it was so, when the days of their feasting were gone about, that Job sent and sanctified them, and rose up early in the morning, and offered burnt offerings according to the number of them all: for Job said, It may be that my sons have sinned, and cursed God in their hearts. Thus did Job continually.

Job appeared to be a worry-wart about this issue, but it is never mentioned that his behavior was sinful. Otherwise, Job wouldn’t be the upright man that Scripture says that he was.

This passage is further confirmation that Job predated the Law of Moses, as he offered burnt offerings despite there being no indication that he was any kind of priest or that he went to any priest or tabernacle to present his burnt offerings.

Now comes an interesting conversation in heaven between God and Satan.

Job 1:6-12:

Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them.

And the LORD said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

And the LORD said unto Satan, Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil?

Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, Doth Job fear God for nought?

Hast not thou made an hedge about him, and about his house, and about all that he hath on every side? thou hast blessed the work of his hands, and his substance is increased in the land.

But put forth thine hand now, and touch all that he hath, and he will curse thee to thy face.

And the LORD said unto Satan, Behold, all that he hath is in thy power; only upon himself put not forth thine hand. So Satan went forth from the presence of the LORD.

We will return to this passage in more detail later.

Then follows a series of sudden calamities caused by Satan.

Here is God's account of Job's action after his loss of his children and livestock:

Job 1:20-22:

Then Job arose, and rent his mantle, and shaved his head, and fell down upon the ground, and worshipped,

And said, Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the LORD gave, and the LORD hath taken away; blessed be the name of the LORD.

In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly.

Satan was sure that his destructive actions would cause Job to curse God, but Job worshipped and blessed God instead. We will come back to the issue of whether what Job said was really true.

This leads to "round two" of the discussion in heaven:

Job 2:1-6:

Again there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them to present himself before the LORD.

And the LORD said unto Satan, From whence comest thou? And Satan answered the LORD, and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

And the LORD said unto Satan, Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil? and still he holdeth fast his integrity, although thou movedst me against him, to destroy him without cause.

And Satan answered the LORD, and said, Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life.

But put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse thee to thy face.

And the LORD said unto Satan, Behold, he is in thine hand; but save his life.

At this point, Satan smites Job from foot to head with "sore boils." But Satan could still not get Job to curse God. Even Job's own wife incited him to do it, but he still would not:

Job 2:9-10:

Then said his wife unto him, Dost thou still retain thine integrity? curse God, and die.

But he said unto her, Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh. What? shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil? In all this did not Job sin with his lips.

This was similar to his first response. Again, we will come back to the question about whether Job was right about receiving evil from the hand of God.

At this point, “Job’s Comforters” arrive on the scene – his friends Eliphaz, Bildad and Zophar. At first they don’t say anything, but eventually they begin to express their opinions about Job’s condition. In general, their opinions aren’t very nice. They pretty much boil down to saying that Job was not as righteous as he appeared (and actually WAS) and that God was punishing him for his sins. That was obviously NOT the case, but it didn’t stop his loquacious friends from filling up a lot of chapters with their haranguing. In between their rather discomfoting discourses, Job defends himself with some chapters of his own opinions. Job obviously has no personal knowledge of Satan’s existence, so he blames everything that happens on God – like many people today, regrettably including many Christians! Job’s statements are fully of complaints about what “the Almighty” has done to him.

During this time, these statements can be considered:

Job 3:25-26:

For the thing which I greatly feared is come upon me, and that which I was afraid of is come unto me. I was not in safety, neither had I rest, neither was I quiet; yet trouble came.

Here it is obvious that Job was EXTREMELY worried that things like the ones that he was experiencing would happen to him. Even while he was still prosperous, he did not feel safe or at rest because of his fear.

Some translations make the second of the two verses above say something like the NKJV (“I am not at ease, nor am I quiet; I have no rest, for trouble comes”). In other words, they allude to a present condition. In fact, that is the rule more than the exception. Young’s Literal Translation agrees with the old King James Version (it’s interesting how often that is the case in such circumstances): “I was not safe – not was I quiet – Nor was I at rest – and trouble cometh!”

So a look at the Hebrew verbs is in order to see what tense they are. All 3 of the verbs having to do with being in safety, having rest and being quiet, are in the “perfect” tense. This means that they describe past completed action. So we’ll have to go with the KJV and Young’s on this one and conclude that the second verse complements and emphasizes the first verse about things that Job greatly feared. He was in fear when there was no natural reason for him to be in fear.

So while Job enjoyed great material prosperity, he lived as a prisoner of fear. Why would he be so afraid of losing everything? Part of the reason well could be that Job had no covenant with God that guaranteed that he did not HAVE to lose everything. Job knew it, and Satan seemed to know it too, because Satan had complained about the hedge that God had put around Job.

We get some idea of the duration of Job’s suffering below:

Job 7:3:

So am I made to possess months of vanity, and wearisome nights are appointed to me.

So we see that Job’s trials appear to have happened over a number of months, not years.

Job then asserts that if there were only a daysman – a mediator – then his troubles would be over at once:

Job 9:32-35:

For he is not a man, as I am, that I should answer him, and we should come together in judgment.

Neither is there any daysman betwixt us, that might lay his hand upon us both.

Let him take his rod away from me, and let not his fear terrify me:

Then would I speak, and not fear him; but it is not so with me.

In all this, Job actually seems to have a glimpse of Jesus who is to come – but He hasn't come yet, so Job cannot call on Him. Consider the following amazing verse:

Job 19:25:

For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth:

As the book progresses, Job accuses God more and more of being unfair, but he never gives Satan the victory he wanted – he never curses God.

After much ranting from everyone involved, a new person named Elihu comes onto the scene in Chapter 32. He was also upset that Job did not justify God but he justified himself, and he was none too pleased with the “advice” given by Job's three friends.

Job 32:2-5:

Then was kindled the wrath of Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite, of the kindred of Ram: against Job was his wrath kindled, because he justified himself rather than God.

Also against his three friends was his wrath kindled, because they had found no answer, and yet had condemned Job.

Now Elihu had waited till Job had spoken, because they were elder than he.

When Elihu saw that there was no answer in the mouth of these three men, then his wrath was kindled.

The following passage may not seem relevant at first, but I'm including it because it does come into play in an important way later in this discussion:

Job 32:15-17:

They were amazed, they answered no more: they left off speaking.

When I had waited, (for they spake not, but stood still, and answered no more;)

I said, I will answer also my part, I also will shew mine opinion.

This next passage will become important to our discussion. It is still Elihu speaking.

Job 33:19-25:

He is chastened also with pain upon his bed, and the multitude of his bones with strong pain:
So that his life abhorreth bread, and his soul dainty meat.

His flesh is consumed away, that it cannot be seen; and his bones that were not seen stick out.
Yea, his soul draweth near unto the grave, and his life to the destroyers.

If there be a messenger with him, an interpreter, one among a thousand, to shew unto man his uprightness:

Then he is gracious unto him, and saith, Deliver him from going down to the pit: I have found a ransom.
His flesh shall be fresher than a child's: he shall return to the days of his youth:

In chapters 38 and 39, God answers Job out of a whirlwind. In this section, God basically tells Job that he is "in over his head" with his accusations. His basic challenge is, "Who are YOU to say such things about Me?" Then we read:

Job 40:1-4:

Moreover the LORD answered Job, and said,
Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty instruct him? he that reproveth God, let him answer it.

Then Job answered the LORD, and said,
Behold, I am vile; what shall I answer thee? I will lay mine hand upon my mouth.

God then speaks again out of the whirlwind for the rest of chapter 40 and all of chapter 41.

Job finally realizes that he was speaking wrong things about God, and he repents:

Job 42:3:

Who is he that hideth counsel without knowledge? therefore have I uttered that I understood not;
things too wonderful for me, which I knew not.

Job 42:6:

Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes.

Here is the result, which will be the matter of considerable commentary later:

Job 42:7-11:

And it was so, that after the LORD had spoken these words unto Job, the LORD said to Eliphaz the Temanite, My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends: for ye have not spoken of me the thing that is right, as my servant Job hath.

Therefore take unto you now seven bullocks and seven rams, and go to my servant Job, and offer up for yourselves a burnt offering; and my servant Job shall pray for you: for him will I accept: lest I deal with you after your folly, in that ye have not spoken of me the thing which is right, like my servant Job.

So Eliphaz the Temanite and Bildad the Shuhite and Zophar the Naamathite went, and did according as the LORD commanded them: the LORD also accepted Job.

And the LORD turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends: also the LORD gave Job twice as much as he had before.

Then came there unto him all his brethren, and all his sisters, and all they that had been of his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him in his house: and they bemoaned him, and comforted him over all the evil that the LORD had brought upon him: every man also gave him a piece of money, and every one an earring of gold.

The last verse above is possibly the most difficult verse in the Old Testament. We already read that Satan was the one who afflicted Job, yet this verse appears to state categorially that the LORD had brought the evil upon Job. This verse is the cause of much theological hand-wringing, and we will look at it from a number of angles to try to determine the best way to interpret that verse, which may or may not mean just taking it at face value. We'll deal with a lot of other questions first before we tackle the question about this verse, which is the hardest of them all.

Job then lived another 140 years with double what he lost (as we saw above):

Job 42:16:

After this lived Job an hundred and forty years, and saw his sons, and his sons' sons, even four generations.

The fact that Job lived 140 additional years is an additional hint that Job lived well before the Law of Moses, when lifespans tended to be much shorter. The fact that Job's friends came with burnt offerings without anything to do with any priesthood, tabernacle or altar would be additional proof that this account predates the Law of Moses.

The book of Job leaves us with some important but difficult questions to answer. But first, let's look at how YOU can use the book of Job to encourage yourself if you are sick!

Important Information from Job for the New Testament Believer

The first truth we learn is that Satan was the Sickener and God was the Healer. Satan made Job sick (though apparently after God allowed it – we'll get to that later!), and God undid everything that Satan did.

The second thing we must consider is that under the New Covenant, we have authority over Satan and his works, so we CANNOT be in Job's situation today.

Third, Job realized that if there were only a mediator between himself and God, he knew that his sicknesses would have to be taken away immediately. Under the New Covenant, 1 Timothy 2:5 tells us that we DO have such a mediator today – the Man Jesus Christ! Thus, any sickness YOU have should be gone immediately because you have the Mediator that Job could only wish that he had.

Fourth, Job knew that his Redeemer lived, and that he would stand in the latter day on the earth. Job seemed to have had a divine glimpse of Jesus who was to come – someone who was alive when Job was alive, but who would still be alive during the latter days on the earth! Today we know that this Redeemer is the Lord Jesus Christ. Job could not call on Him because he did not live in the latter days on the earth. However, we who DO live in the days after the Redeemer came can enjoy redemption! After all, that's what a Redeemer does – he redeems people. Christ has REDEEMED us from the curse of the Law (Galatians 3:13), so He clearly fits the part of the Redeemer that Job somehow saw afar off.

Fifth, Elihu also seemed to have a glimpse of this Redeemer. He knew that if someone would be a ransom, others would be delivered from going to the pit (hell), and would be physically healed as well! We know that Jesus was our ransom for sin. Isn't it interesting that even some guy in the book of Job had more insight into the fact that redemption would bring physical healing than most Christians have today?

It was based on this knowledge that I was emboldened to “believe and receive” my healing from what had been lifelong allergies. I realized that I HAD a Mediator who HAD redeemed me from going down to the pit, so I had the right to have MY flesh healed! Those allergies left and never came back! Faith came to me by hearing the Word of God – the book of Job!

I encourage you to reflect on these same themes so that you can enjoy the same results that I did, and still do!

The Tough Questions Presented by the book of Job

Now we will get into the thorny issues involved in the book of Job! You've probably considered some of the obvious questions already, probably before you started reading this book. Some of these questions affect each other. Let's list all the questions first, and then we'll tackle them one by one! We'll allow for the possibility that there may be MORE THAN ONE correct answer in certain cases! Also, some apparently correct answers might have to get changed in the light of a later question, and we may have to add a new answer that we didn't consider before, as you'll see!

Question 1: Which parts of the book of Job contain authoritative DOCTRINE?

- 1A) The entire book
- 1B) Only the parts told by the narrator and the speech attributed to God Himself.
- 1C) The narrator's parts, God's words and Elihu's words.
- 1D) The narrator's parts, God's words, and only CERTAIN parts of what everyone else said.
- 1E) The narrator's parts, God's words, Elihu's words and only CERTAIN parts of what everyone else said.

Question 2: What does the phrase "Hast thou considered my servant Job" mean?

- 2A) Knowing that you like stealing, killing and destroying, I'm pointing out Job to you as your next target.
- 2B) Have you noticed what a godly man Job is?
- 2C) Have you set your heart on targeting Job with calamities?

Question 3: Why did God tell Satan that he could afflict Job?

- 3A) It was God's will to put Job through a trial and He used His created being Satan to do it.
- 3B) Job had torn down the hedge of protection that God had put around him through his great fear.
- 3C) Satan already had the right to afflict Job, but Satan didn't realize it until God told him that he did.
- 3D) God was "showing off" Job to Satan and Satan wanted to "make a wager" that he could make Job curse God, which God went along with.
- 3E) Job had no healing covenant, so God had no choice but to give in to Satan's wishes for a season.
- 3F) It was God's way of tempting Job to sin to see if Job would give in to sin or "pass" the test.

Question 4: Did Satan actually win an argument with God?

- 4A) Yes, he persuaded God to go along with the idea of afflicting Job when God would have blessed him.
- 4B) No, because Satan told GOD to afflict him and God wouldn't do it, though he allowed Satan to do it.
- 4C) No, because Satan's argument was that Job would curse God, but he never did.

Question 5: What do the words "although thou movedst me against him, to destroy him without cause" mean?

- 5A) You successfully persuaded me to destroy Job even though there was no cause for it.
- 5B) You tried to persuade Me to destroy Job, but you tried in vain.
- 5C) You tried to get ME to do your dirty work and act like you, but your efforts were in vain.
- 5D) You got my permission to afflict Job, but you still couldn't get Job to allow his own destruction by cursing Me.
- 5E) I took down part of the hedge around Job in response to your challenge because Job has no covenant to be exempt from your actions, but he still wouldn't give up his integrity by cursing Me. Therefore, your challenge to Me was in vain.

Question 6: What happened to Job's hedge of protection that God had put around him?

- 6A) There never was one – Satan was either misinformed or lying, which would be nothing new.
- 6B) Job tore it down himself through his great fear (3B above).
- 6C) God took it down Himself, which allowed Satan to attack Job.
- 6D) God had already taken it down but Satan didn't realize it yet.
- 6E) Because there were no sacrifices that covered or washed away sin back then, the fact that Job had ANY sin in his life meant that Satan could demand that God withdraw the hedge on demand.

Question 7: Why does the Bible say that Job was not sinning when Job said that God had done the bad things to him?

- 7A) Job had no way of knowing that there was a personal devil, so God gave him a pass on that matter even though Job was wrong.
- 7B) God really WAS the one responsible for it all, so Job was completely right.
- 7C) Though Satan was responsible, God DID have some responsibility because He let Satan do those things.

Question 8: Job had to repent of his words, so how could God say in Job 42:7 that Job had spoken what was RIGHT?

- 8A) Job was wrong, but he was LESS WRONG than his three friends.
- 8B) Job did say SOME things that were right along with all the false accusations against God.
- 8C) Job was right that he needed to repent in dust and ashes, realizing that he had spoken things that were "above his pay grade."

Question 9: Why does Job 42:11 say that the Lord had brought all the evil upon Job?

- 9A) It was a bad translation in the King James Version that was fixed by other translations.
- 9B) The Hebrew only indicates that the Lord ALLOWED it, but not that He actually BROUGHT IT.
- 9C) By giving Satan permission to afflict Job, God actively DID cause Job's woes, though indirectly.
- 9D) The narrator is simply expressing the view that Job's friends had without agreeing with it.

Job through a New Testament Lens

Before we start answering these difficult questions, I will make a general observation about "faith preachers" and "grace preachers" (I'd include myself in those descriptions) when we try to resolve the inherent difficulties in the book of Job. I think that most of the time we try to read the book of Job through a New Testament lens. In others words, if Job were around today, what would things be like? But you can't rightly divide Job that way. Job did not live under the New Covenant, and he didn't even live under the Law of Moses. This is a man who did not have the protections and promises that we enjoy today.

Of course, the BIG sticking point for any “faith preacher” or “grace preacher” is that we want to make God look as good as possible (so that we can still say that He is good all the time) and pin everything on Satan. After all, if God were complicit with all this, that would tend to make us think that maybe God isn’t so good some of the time! So we shudder at the notion that God would even passively go along with anything that would steal, kill or destroy. We know from the New Testament that Satan is the one who steals, kills and destroys (John 10:10), and we have nothing in the book of Job to contradict that. But imagine the howls if someone in our church got seriously ill and we announced that “the Lord” had “allowed” Satan to do it, and you asked the congregation to console the person for “all the evil that the Lord had brought upon him.” You wouldn’t be pastoring that “faith church” or “grace church” for long! Should we just keep preaching faith and grace, cross our fingers and hope that nobody ever asks us what Job 42:11 means because we have no answer ourselves?

Keep reading – this is going to be interesting! Let’s start tackling these questions!

Question 1: Which parts of the book of Job contain authoritative DOCTRINE?

1A) The entire book

This is the “easy” answer. “The entire book of Job is inspired Scripture, so EVERYTHING in it is doctrinally right because it’s all God-breathed!” But that statement is simply not true! No, I’m not a Bible-inerrancy-denying heretic! You may be confusing the following 2 statements:

1A1) Everything in the Bible is true.

1A2) Everything anyone said in the Bible is true.

The truth is that 1A1 is true, but 1A2 is false! The Bible has plenty of passages where it says truthfully that someone stated something, but the words in the person’s statement were false. For example:

Matthew 16:21-22:

From that time forth began Jesus to shew unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day.

Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee.

The Bible is TRUE because it records that Peter made the FALSE statement that he did. He truly made it, and it was truly recorded, but certainly wasn’t true that these things would never happen to Jesus, because they all DID happen to him.

1 Samuel 17:44:

And the Philistine said to David, Come to me, and I will give thy flesh unto the fowls of the air, and to the beasts of the field.

It is TRULY RECORDED that Goliath said this to David, but Goliath’s actual words were not true – Goliath was the one that ended up dead, not David.

Thus, when we see that one of Job's statements is truly recorded, that does NOT necessarily mean that we can treat it as DOCTRINAL TRUTH. We can only know that it is the absolute truth that Job said those words. Job also said that he would return naked to his mother's womb, and there is certainly no indication that he ever did! (That would be a real miracle!) His words are recorded, but they are not true. So when we read Job's other statements, we have to be careful. We will assume for now that we should follow these guidelines for Bible interpretation (I'll refer to this as the Narrator Rule):

1. If the narrator of the book declares something himself rather than quoting someone else, that statement can be taken as absolute truth.
2. If the narrator of the book quotes someone's words, those words MAY OR MAY NOT be true, but it is definitely true that the person said those words.

If Job's three friends had spoken TRUTH, God and Elihu would not have gotten mad at them. If Job had always spoken truth, he would not have had to repent in dust and ashes in the last chapter!

Therefore, answer (1A) is a bust – we cannot take everything in the book of Job to be doctrinal truth.

1B) Only the parts told by the narrator and the speech attributed to God Himself.

Because God cannot lie (Numbers 23:19 and elsewhere), any statement God makes should be considered truth. Even then, what He says may be the truth UNLESS someone changes. For example, He had Isaiah prophesy that Hezekiah would die, but after Hezekiah's repentance, God withdrew that prophecy, which was through the mouth of Isaiah (2 Kings 20:1-7). He replaced it with a promise of 15 more years (2 Kings 20:8).

A similar thing happened at Nineveh where God predicted its destruction within 40 days :

Jonah 3:4:

And Jonah began to enter into the city a day's journey, and he cried, and said, Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown.

But when the people of Nineveh changed, God changed the outcome:

Jonah 3:10:

And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil, that he had said that he would do unto them; and he did it not.

God never puts out DOCTRINE and then retracts it or replaces it under the same covenant. But a prophesy may be retracted in some cases. There's a difference.

God wasn't prophesying things in Job chapters 38 through 41, so all statements that He made in those chapters can be taken as absolute doctrinal truth.

So this answer SO FAR seems like a good answer. The question is, are there OTHER parts of the book of Job that could be considered doctrinal truth as well? If not, we might have to void some of the Messianic foreshadowings, and we don't want to do that if we don't have to.

1C) The narrator's parts, God's words and Elihu's words.

Because God rebuked the original Three Comforters, we can safely assume that they did not speak pure truth.

This could get disappointing for faith preachers, who would like to be able to quote the following as a favorite have-what-you-say doctrinal passage. You may have come across this in a faith book at some point, where the "payoff verse" is the last one:

Job 22:21-28:

Acquaint now thyself with him, and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee.

Receive, I pray thee, the law from his mouth, and lay up his words in thine heart.

If thou return to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up, thou shalt put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles.

Then shalt thou lay up gold as dust, and the gold of Ophir as the stones of the brooks.

Yea, the Almighty shall be thy defence, and thou shalt have plenty of silver.

For then shalt thou have thy delight in the Almighty, and shalt lift up thy face unto God.

Thou shalt make thy prayer unto him, and he shall hear thee, and thou shalt pay thy vows.

Thou shalt also decree a thing, and it shall be established unto thee: and the light shall shine upon thy ways.

Now the fact that they were rebuked doesn't mean that EVERYTHING they said was wrong, but it's dangerous to make ANY doctrinal statement using a quote from one of Job's rebuked 3 comforters. That's why I didn't include the passage above in the Say What article about speaking things.

However, God never rebuked Elihu for saying anything wrong. It was Elihu who spoke the beautiful "deliver from going down to the pit; I have found a ransom" prophecy mentioned earlier. He also said, "If they obey and serve him, they shall spend their days in prosperity, and their years in pleasures" (Job 36:11). Obviously, as faith preachers, we should like Elihu! He had more of a handle on the idea of godly prosperity than the vast majority of preachers today!

Looking at ALL of Elihu's discourse from chapter 32 through chapter 37, nothing stands out as contradictory to the facts or to anything God said. In fact, toward the end, Elihu, who says that he is speaking for God, uses some of the same kinds of statements that God makes when He finally talks.

However, we must be careful about the fact that Elihu said that he was speaking for God. There were (and are) some false prophets claiming to speak for God. An enemy of Israel in Hezekiah's day came with this announcement:

2 Kings 18:25:

Am I now come up without the LORD against this place to destroy it? The LORD said to me, Go up against this land, and destroy it.

But this man was a total liar! So claiming divine backing is not the same thing as having it.

Because we assume that the narrator is always right in the Bible, we should ask this: Does the narrator of the book AGREE that Elihu was speaking for God? There is no indication that a narrator is approving or denying anything Elihu says, unless Elihu IS the narrator. But how are we going to figure out who the narrator is? How can we determine whether Elihu wrote the book of Job? First, we look within the book for any explicit authorship. Unfortunately, we end up with the same situation that we have with the book of Hebrews where the author never states his name. Elihu seems to have been there for the duration of things, so it would at least make sense that he was the author, but one could say the same thing even more forcefully about Job himself!

A POSSIBLE clue comes in that mysterious passage Job 32:15-17 above. For a brief moment, it appears that Elihu has dropped back into the mode of the narrator when he says that the other three have stopped talking and then refers to himself. I don't know that I'd consider that ABSOLUTE proof, but given the beginning of the passage, it doesn't seem like it could fit unless Elihu, the speaker, was also the narrator. If he WAS the narrator, we could take his statements as well as God's as doctrinal certainties.

Given that there is no OTHER indication of authorship, it seems that God might have tucked that in there so that those who really want to "mine" truths from the Bible instead of just skim the surface could find it. I checked many other Bible translations that agreed as far as the meaning of the first verse goes. If Elihu were only speaking and not narrating, it would seem that he might just address them as opposed to referring to them as "they."

Maybe. The debate over the authorship of Job is not new! Elihu has been proposed as the author, but so has Job and so have a few others. Some even purport that different authors wrote different sections. If the passage in question were a slam dunk, we could just point it out to the world and all scholars at all seminaries around the world would have to say, "Wow! I never saw that, but now that you pointed it out, that IS incontrovertible evidence that Elihu wrote Job!" So it seems that there must be some reason to go the other way with the argument.

And there is.

Job 32:4-6:

Now Elihu had waited till Job had spoken, because they were elder than he.

When Elihu saw that there was no answer in the mouth of these three men, then his wrath was kindled.

And Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite answered and said, I am young, and ye are very old; wherefore I was afraid, and durst not shew you mine opinion.

Personally, I think there is at least as good of an argument in the OTHER direction that if Elihu had written the book of Job, he would not have referred to himself in the third person and only switched to the first person in one passage. In other words, I expect that he would have said, "Now I had waited until Job had spoken...When I saw that there was no answer...And I, Elihu, the son of Barachel the Buzite answered and said..."

So it appears that Elihu is referred to by a narrator other than himself.

But what about the fact that Moses is considered the author of the books that tell the story of Moses? The idea of a Bible author referring to himself in the third person has a precedent.

However, what would be UNPRECEDENTED is the author switching between the first person and the third person in the SAME BOOK, let alone the SAME CHAPTER. Moses never switches and calls himself "I" in any of his narratives about himself.

So I don't think that we can give Elihu a "free pass" as the narrator so that everything he said must be true for that reason. But I think the fact that God never rebuked him is strong evidence that Elihu DID speak what was right and therefore, we should take the few doctrinal points in his discourse as God-inspired writings. That would include the important Messianic prophecy – one that I leaned on myself for a drastic healing from a fall off a ledge that I describe elsewhere in this book.

So who DID write Job? I don't know. The authorship isn't stated. The only thing we know is that God inspired the entire book. God wanted us to read all the quotes from Job and his friends even though some of them were uninspired and demonstrably wrong.

1D) The narrator's parts, God's words, and only CERTAIN parts of what everyone else said.

Can we keep our "decree a thing" passage even though it came from one of Job's friends who was rebuked? If so, we are establishing a "cafeteria" precedent used by inferior seminaries: "The parts we like are the Word of God, and the parts we don't like are just incorrect opinions." We would have to establish ourselves as "higher critics" to determine which parts are of God and which are not. That treads on some dangerous ground.

But what about Job's comments about a daysman (mediator) and a Redeemer who would stand on the earth in the latter day? Do we have to throw out these beautiful prophecies? No, because they actually came to pass! Therefore, we can consider those statements to be God-breathed, unlike many of the poetic ramblings that were fairly obviously only Job-breathed.

1E) The narrator's parts, God's words, Elihu's words and only CERTAIN parts of what everyone else said.

It seems that the proper conclusion, therefore, is answer (1E), with the restriction that the fulfilled Messianic prophecies were God-breathed, but the rest are suspect. However, this conclusion forces another conclusion that the narrator was right in Job 42:11. This means that God was responsible for bringing on the evil that Satan did to Job. That is unsettling and leaves us with the impression that we might be missing something somewhere, because the first 2 chapters are clear that SATAN brought the evil upon Job, albeit after God "allowed" it. This matter will come up again in the subsequent questions, and this is probably the pivotal issue for the entire set of questions!

Question 2: What does the phrase "Hast thou considered my servant Job" mean?

2A) Knowing that you like stealing, killing and destroying, I'm pointing out Job to you as your next target.

The first issue we have to deal with is whether GOD instigated Job's torments for some kind of greater good.

Nothing in Job states that God gave Satan the idea of afflicting Job. Satan is the one who brought it up and instigated the whole thing. That is clear from both heavenly conversations.

While we might consider the idea that Satan got God's permission to afflict Job because Job didn't have a covenant that precluded it (this will come up again later), there is no indication that God said, "I have an idea. Try to beat up Job and we'll see if he curses Me or not." So we have to throw out (2A).

2B) Have you noticed what a godly man Job is?

This seems on the surface to be the "obvious" thing that God told Satan. The potential "rub" with this is that by deliberately pointing out Job to a malevolent being whose destructive ways were obvious, AND knowing that Job had no covenant that would preclude that being from ruining his life (even temporarily), it might seem that God was "baiting" Satan and setting up the whole thing. If this explanation is right, one could picture Job, if he ever caught a glimpse of the heavenly dialogue, saying, "Thanks for nothing, God! Why couldn't You have just kept Your mouth shut? Maybe then none of this would have happened to me!"

So we should consider whether there might be a better explanation.

2C) Have you set your heart on targeting Job with calamities?

As a first impression, this seems to be a completely unreasonable way to “twist” the statement in question. But it’s not as unreasonable as it seems when we look at the Hebrew in this phrase. It turns out that the Hebrew that was translated “considered” contains a unique translation of the Hebrew word leb, which with one other exception within the book of Job, is translated heart. So the word “considered” could well mean “set your heart on” or something to that effect. So we can “consider” that maybe God was saying, “Have you set your heart on Job – with the purpose of making him your target? I can understand that, because there’s no one like him – he’s the best of the bunch! If you could take him down, you could take anyone else down too.”

This explanation provides a way around the difficulties of (2B). God could not be said to be inciting anything, directly or indirectly. Job wouldn’t be able to get upset with God if this were the explanation.

Do any translators agree with this idea? Almost everyone agrees with the King James Version translation considered. One translation says noticed (which is pretty much the same thing), but Young’s Literal Translation bucks the norm and renders the two verses very differently:

Job 1:8 (Young’s Literal Translation):

And Jehovah saith unto the Adversary, ‘Hast thou set thy heart against My servant Job because there is none like him in the land, a man perfect and upright, fearing God, and turning aside from evil?’

Job 2:3 (Young’s Literal Translation):

And Jehovah saith unto the Adversary, 'Hast thou set thy heart unto My servant Job because there is none like him in the land, a man perfect and upright, fearing God and turning aside from evil? and still he is keeping hold on his integrity, and thou dost move Me against him to swallow him up for nought!'

A footnote in the New American Standard Bible for the word “considered” says “Literally: set your heart to” – the same conclusion that Young reached.

However, if you substitute only the “set your heart against” thought into the King James text, it makes no grammatical sense. “Have you set your heart against Job, that there is none like him in the earth...” We would have to be sure that the word “that” isn’t explicit in the Hebrew to justify Young’s conclusion. (I refer to the older Young, not to myself.) So it’s time for a quick trip to a Hebrew interlinear text. And we find out some very interesting things:

1. We see the word suwm, which does mean “put”, “set”, and similar things.
2. The word that immediately follows is leb, which definitely means heart when translated elsewhere.
3. The word that follows the Hebrew name for Job is erets, which means earth. The entire phrase “that there is none like him on the earth” is translated from that single Hebrew word! That is part of what makes Hebrew so difficult – there are many general-purpose root words and many cases where a slew of English words is indicated by a single Hebrew word!

So “set your heart against” actually DOES work here as a valid translation. The word against has no Hebrew counterpart either, but it is inferred from the Hebrew, which simply says, “Have you set heart my servant Job earth.” (Don’t envy anyone who translates Hebrew for a living!)

Now we can check a few other Bible translations. Some use the word “that” and some don’t. This was a very tough verse to translate, so I can see how people would get different opinions.

However, to the probable dismay of the “King James Only” crowd, I would have to say that the literal inclusion of the Hebrew word for heart here throws this match over to Young’s Literal Translation.

Question 2 Conclusion

While a decent argument can be made for the more traditional (2B) interpretation, the idea that a good God was instigating Satan to do evil to Job when Satan hadn’t even noticed Job or intended to do anything to him would seem to be out of line with God’s character shown in the rest of the Bible. For now, we will award (2C) the win as being the most faithful to the underlying Hebrew. However, we have the thorny matter that Job 42:11 says that the LORD brought evil upon Job. This will still have to be dealt with in question 9. If that verse means what it certainly appears to mean, we may have to revert to (2B) for consistency’s sake, as (2C) indicates that Satan, not God, was the originator of the idea of doing evil to Job.

Question 3: Why did God tell Satan that he could afflict Job?

3A) It was God’s will to put Job through a trial and He used His created being Satan to do it.

This is another “God Uses Satan” spin that doesn’t make sense. If it were God’s perfect will to afflict Job, He could have just done it Himself long before Satan ever showed up. God does NOT always use Satan if He makes someone sick – for example, in the book of Revelation, God is going to make a LOT of mankind sick, and those plagues are coming from heaven, not from hell or from Satan. (For those who have been trained that God and Jesus would never make ANYONE sick, please read Sickness as Chastening and Judgment in the Old Testament and Sickness as Chastening and Judgment in the New Testament for some eye-openers!) You will even find people today who believe that “God’s Satan” afflicted Job in obedience. (I shudder even writing the term “God’s Satan” but I got it from an unbelief website that subscribed to this answer to Question 3.)

Now assuming (FALSELY) that if God wanted something bad to happen, He would have had to subcontract that work to Satan so that He could still be “good all the time” and Satan could take the rap for it, the way things played out still doesn’t make sense. GOD would have been the one promoting the idea to Satan to get Satan to go along with it instead of the other way around.

The whole idea that God “uses” Satan is debunked elsewhere:

Objection: God Has Satan on a Leash and Only Permits Him to Do Certain Things to You

It was quite obviously Satan's plan to try to get Job to curse and die. Thus, Satan would have succeeded in completely destroying Job if he had gotten his real desire.

So this explanation just doesn't hold up. We'll move on.

3B) Job had torn down the hedge of protection that God had put around him through his great fear.

Job 3:25-26 PROVES that Job lived in GREAT FEAR despite his many blessings. When things finally crumbled around him, he said that what happened is what he had greatly feared.

This "Fear Theory" is a popular explanation in certain "faith" circles to explain the "hedge" issue and "get God off the hook" for what Satan did to Job. After all, if Job didn't break down the hedge himself, the only viable alternative is that God undid most of the hedge, which would seem to make Him a guilty party in the proceedings.

It is easy to look back through a "New Testament lens" and say, "Jesus came to destroy the works of the devil. Therefore, if anything bad happened to Job, it must have been Job's fault – he must have left a door open to Satan somewhere. It can't possibly be God's fault because God would never allow something like that to happen if there were no justification for it. He's good all the time! So it must be an open door, and we've just identified it. There's no other obvious sin recorded in Job's life, so Job must have opened the door though fear!"

However, the Fear Theory has some serious issues once you start to really think about the whole story of Job.

Satan said that God had put a hedge around Job. Now Satan is not necessarily a credible source of information, but it seems reasonable that there was a hedge there. God did not correct Satan when Satan said that God had put a hedge around Job. So where had Satan been? He was walking to and fro on the earth. Why do you suppose he was doing that? Probably for the same reason that he does it today – he's seeking whom he may devour (1 Peter 5:8). If Satan could just have devoured Job, he would have done it already. Something had to be stopping him. Because Job had no personal authority over Satan, it had to be up to God to protect Job. So I think we're on safe ground assuming that there was a hedge that God put up until the events unfolded when Satan approached God.

Actually, that could be the main reason that Satan tempted GOD to ruin Job – Satan knew that there was a hedge that prevented him from ruining Job himself, so he figured that God would have to ruin Job if it was going to happen.

Job had engaged in his worry-wart behavior “continually” when it came to his sacrifices for his sons, and his worrying about calamity gave him no rest. Worrying appeared to be his habit. So if fear breaks down hedges, Job’s hedge would have been “broken down” a long time before Satan showed up because he had been fearing for a long time. He didn’t just suddenly get into a “fear fit” around the time that Satan showed up so that his hedge suddenly fell down. So Satan would not have been able to complain to God about a hedge that wasn’t still up.

Also, Job 1:1 says that Job was perfect and upright. That doesn’t mean that he was the only person other than Jesus to walk in moral perfection up until that time, but if Job’s fear was what removed his protection hedge, one wonders how he could be described as perfect and upright. Looking from a New Testament angle, we would say that his fear was sinful because it negated God’s promises, but in Job’s case, God had not made any protection or healing covenant with him.

The next problem is that Satan’s ability to “get to” Job was granted in two stages. In the first, Satan could not touch Job’s body, but in the second stage, he could. It just stretches things too far to theorize that Job’s fear took down the part of the hedge that stopped Satan from stealing his goods and his family, but not the part that protected his body, and then additional fear must have taken down the part of the hedge that pertained to his body shortly after that, but no additional fear ever took down the part of the hedge that prevented Job’s life from being taken.

So it appears that a hedge was up when Satan approached God, but FEAR was not the cause of the hedge being removed. We’ll have to look for another reason when we get to Question 4.

3C) Satan already had the right to afflict Job, but Satan didn’t realize it until God told him that he did.

Satan isn’t the brightest bulb on the tree – he decided to rebel against an almighty God who had created him in the first place. So we can’t assume that Satan knows everything that God knows. The Bible says that God’s wisdom is made known to principalities and powers through the church.

Ephesians 3:10:

To the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God,

So evil beings don’t know God’s wisdom. Could it be that Job’s hedge was down – if he ever had one – but Satan just didn’t know it? After all, God said that Job “was” in Satan’s hand – He didn’t say, “I GIVE all that Job has into your hand.” So we have to investigate this “Satan’s Epiphany Theory” (my name for it – it’s not official, though maybe it will catch on). Maybe Job was fair game all along because he didn’t have the healing and protection promises from either the Old Covenant or the New Covenant, and Satan just didn’t realize what he could do to someone on the earth because things were fairly new at that point back in the days of Genesis.

The Satan's Epiphany Theory has a strong appeal to those of us in faith and grace circles because it gives us a way to excuse God and keep Him out of the line of responsibility for what happened to Job. We really don't want to leave Him on the hook for all the bad stuff that Job suffered. It would seem to be more consistent with God as He has revealed Himself in the New Testament, though I've warned about that already.

But the Satan's Epiphany Theory has a major problem. If Satan suddenly realized that he had the right to sock it to Job and that Job had no healing or protection covenant with God, then as soon as God started to double back all of Job's blessings, Satan could have come along again and stolen all of them again! He could have just done that for the rest of Job's life so that all of his blessings would keep getting swallowed up for the next 140 years! If you don't believe that, you would have to prove that something was different the time Satan showed up as opposed to the next 140 years when Job was back in uninterrupted blessing mode.

Another problem with the Satan's Epiphany Theory is that Satan goes around looking for whom he may devour (1 Peter 5:8). How does he find out whom he may devour? He tries to devour people! So you can be pretty sure that Satan had at least tried to munch Job's lunch. He must have found that there was some reason why he couldn't do it, that is, a hedge! That could well be the reason that Satan tempted GOD Himself to afflict Job – because Satan realized that up until that point, he could not afflict Job himself because of the hedge around Job.

Yet another problem with the Satan's Epiphany Theory is that during Round 1 of the heavenly discussion, God limited Satan by not allowing Satan to touch Job's body. That would be a kind of hedge, wouldn't it? So Satan did what God said that he could do without touching Job's body. After Round 2, God said that Satan could touch Job's body but not kill him. So the hedge got moved back, though not completely removed. Satan is out to steal, kill and destroy. He would have wanted to take Job out completely, but he wasn't allowed to. He would have wanted to hurt Job physically during Round 1, but he couldn't do it. Once he got the chance to do it in Round 2, he immediately took advantage of the opportunity. It would not seem that you could chalk this up to Satan "learning" in Round 1 that he could afflict Job in non-bodily ways, but waiting until Round 2 to "learn" that he could afflict Job in bodily ways also. And of course, for 140 years after Job's trials, Satan couldn't get at him EITHER way. So it does seem that God was in charge of that hedge. This also puts down the Fear Theory even more. If Job's fear tore down the hedge (which was never completely down, as we've just seen), do we really assume that Job's fear tore down the hedge for non-bodily trouble, but then Job had "additional" fear that then tore down the bodily part of the hedge? And if fear really tears down a hedge completely, Satan would have been able to move "unhedged" against Job and just kill him.

Also, if the Satan's Epiphany Theory were true, Satan – in his constant bid to steal, kill and destroy – could have then gone and made all of Job's friends just as sick as Job! Then, realizing that he had that ability, he could have gone and made everyone in the WORLD just as sick as Job!

Finally, it hardly seems that the Satan's Epiphany Theory makes any sense when Satan had already made a career of doing terrible things to people on the earth, making things so bad that at one point, God wiped out all but eight people! Surely Satan had already figured out that he had the right to mess people up on this fallen earth.

So the Satan's Epiphany Theory looks doomed, but when we look at the other possible answers to Question 3, we have to wonder if maybe, to paraphrase Winston Churchill, the Satan's Epiphany Theory is the worst answer, except for all the other ones that have been tried from time to time! Let's keep going.

3D) God was "showing off" Job to Satan and Satan wanted to "make a wager" that he could make Job curse God, which God went along with.

As odious as this theory sounds, it is also the most "obvious" when you read Job for the first time if you have never read any commentaries on Job and have no prior opinion about the book. It is dangerous to dismiss what seems to be an obvious meaning.

Seen through a New Testament lens, this theory is completely preposterous. We know that God would never do such a thing today – He'd continue to UNDO the works of the devil. But Job didn't live today.

It doesn't seem like something God would do – allowing a clean-living man to suffer for months to win a bet with Satan that he still wouldn't curse God no matter how badly Satan whacked him. In effect, this theory seems to indicate that God was showing off Job as a trophy to Satan. Therefore, I'll refer to this as the Trophy Theory.

The Trophy Theory's first question mark would be the fact that what happened to Job was stated to be "without cause" (though we'll pick this up again later in Question 5). If the purpose was to win a bet, you MIGHT say that there WAS a cause. Then again, you can say that "without cause" only meant that Satan was to be able to attack Job without any just cause such as sin on Job's part. We'll probably have to put some of this on hold until we can answer Question 5 properly.

The biggest stumbling block to the Trophy Theory is that it WOULD give God some rather clear responsibility for Job's woes. We naturally shudder at that possibility. Shouldn't Satan or Job take all the blame while God's name is cleared? Could God really go along with hurting a righteous person who clearly didn't deserve it?

It seems based on the King James Version accounts of the heavenly conversation that He did, so this choice certainly looks consistent with what we read, though not consistent with what we'd LIKE to read.

However, when we return to the preferred Young's Literal Translation where God asks Satan if he has set his heart against Job (see Question 2 above), that no longer appears to be consistent with the Trophy Theory, as God is not really baiting Satan by saying, "Have you considered Job, the most righteous man around?" Rather than pointing out Job as a target or bragging on him as a trophy, God is simply noting that Satan "has it out" for Job. So it seems that we should look for a better explanation that is more consistent with the Hebrew text.

3E) Job had no healing covenant, so God had no choice but to give in to Satan's wishes for a season.

Job did not enjoy the protection and healing promises that Old and New Covenant people got to enjoy. Because there is no record that God had EVER made a promise to Job to heal or protect him, God was really under no technical obligation to do either. Satan surely knew that. Based on this answer, when Satan showed up, God's statement that all Job had was in Satan's hand could well have referred to a condition that already existed, not one that God created especially for Satan.

As faith and grace people, we should really, really root for this answer. It gets God off the hook, explains Satan's ability to afflict Job, and seems to make logical sense.

Until you really think about it.

There actually WAS a TEMPORARY physical protection plan for Job even though it wasn't a covenant made with him. Right in Job Chapter 1, God forbade Satan to touch Job's body! For that period, Satan was UNABLE to afflict Job's body. Then in Chapter 2, God undid that prohibition, and Satan was ABLE to afflict Job's body. So it's obvious that God DID have the say over whether or not Satan could afflict Job's body.

The next place we run aground is the same shoal where the Satan's Epiphany Theory ran aground. If God had no choice but to yield to Satan's wishes due to the lack of a covenant, and given that God made no new covenant with Job during the book of Job, Satan would have been able to keep making God give in to his wishes by attacking Job without God's opposition for the next 140 years! What would have changed? Nothing! That's the problem.

And then Satan could have made Job's friends just as sick as Job. Then, given his goal of making everyone as miserable as he can, he could have "made God give in" for everyone else in the world, and the whole world would be as sick as Job! Other people were without the Old and New Covenants just as much as Job was, after all!

Then the waves that seem to splinter our run-aground ship are the heavenly conversations between God and Satan in the first two chapters. If Satan really had carte blanche to just maul Job, he could have just gone and done it without ever having any conversations with God about it. Otherwise, we're back to the Satan's Epiphany Theory.

This answer doesn't look like it's going to work out either.

3F) It was God's way of tempting Job to sin to see if Job would give in to sin or "pass" the test.

James 1:13 seems to just plain kill this option: "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man:"

So based on this verse, (1) Satan cannot successfully tempt God to do evil and (2) God cannot tempt any man to do evil – for example, to curse God!

However, this theory has at least a last gasp in Matthew 4:1, where the Holy Spirit led Jesus into the wilderness to be tempted by the devil. While God was not doing the TEMPTING, He obviously did lead Jesus to a place where the DEVIL would tempt Him. God wasn't doing evil or tempting anyone to do evil. So based on that, just MAYBE God could have Job go through trials to be tempted by the devil.

One major difference, though, is that Jesus was not BEATEN UP by the devil to be tempted. Job was beaten up by the devil.

Another difference is that Jesus was full of the Word. Job didn't have ANY Word to read at all because it appears that his story would have occurred before the first 5 books of the Bible were written. We can see that Jesus knew better than to fall into the devil's temptations because He could quote what was written, but Job would just have been a sitting duck because he could not say "It is written" when he was tempted.

To Job's credit, the devil's only stated temptation was to try to get Job to curse God. Job passed that test with flying colors despite his lack of knowledge of what was really going on.

The answer as stated – that God was tempting Job – is clearly wrong based on the verse in James. We could rephrase it to say that God was ALLOWING Job to be tempted to see whether or not he would give in. Being omniscient, it doesn't seem very logical for God to have to do something to "prove" Job when He already knew that Job's heart was "perfect." God surely knew that if Job were tempted, he would not give in and curse Him.

Conclusion – Or Lack Thereof

Answers 3C and 3E seem the most appealing, but they have some serious issues when you think about them. Answer 3D is unappealing because it fingers God, but it seems like we might be stuck with it because it has the fewest logical issues. It seems that NONE of the six possibilities is very satisfying! We can put this question on hold for now until we have answered the other questions, at which point things might become more obvious. At least we hope they do!

Question 4: Did Satan actually win an argument with God?

4A) Yes, he persuaded God to go along with the idea of afflicting Job when God would have blessed him.

The whole idea that any created being could “win” an argument with an almighty, omniscient Creator seems rather ridiculous. But is it?

Moses got God to back off from consuming Israel in a moment (Numbers 16:21, Numbers 16:45).

Abraham argued with God and whittled Him down from 50 to 10 righteous in Sodom to avoid its destruction (Genesis 18:23-32).

Jacob WRESTLED with God – and WON (Genesis 32:24-28).

As we already saw, Hezekiah got God to change His mind about what would have been his immediate demise (2 Kings 20:1-7).

It certainly DOES appear that if it weren't for Satan's intervention, Job would have just continued to be blessed. So to that extent, it seems that Satan DID win the argument in the same sense that Moses, Abraham, Jacob and Hezekiah “won” their conflicts with God.

But Satan is the Biggest Loser in the history of the world, so claiming that he won an argument with God would seem suspect. If God “allowed” Satan to do more than He had previously allowed, it seems suspicious that an evil fallen angel “talked him into” letting bad things happen to Job. So let's consider the other answers.

4B) No, because Satan told GOD to afflict him and God wouldn't do it, though he allowed Satan to do it.

If we look closely at Round 1 and Round 2 in heaven, we notice that Satan was NOT asking for God's permission to afflict Job. Satan instead challenged God Himself to strike Job with calamities. However, God Himself did not strike Job. That is not His nature. In this sense, Satan tempted God Himself to become an evildoer like Satan who would strike Job for no reason. God did NOT give in to that temptation although Satan tried it twice. It would have reduced God to Satan's level and given Satan the right to accuse God in front of the whole universe.

It is evident that Satan did the bad things to Job, but it also seems evident that God gave him at least tacit permission to do those things, as otherwise Satan could not have done them.

We don't like the idea of “God allowed Satan to do it,” but we have to admit that God in the most general sense “allows” Satan to do everything that he's doing today as well. Man runs the planet (see the answer to the false statement that God Is In Control), so God does not have the right to “control” everything that goes on. It was MAN who gave Satan the right to be here. We wouldn't even be talking about Satan (literally, the Adversary) if Adam didn't allow Satan to be who he is today on the earth.

God's will for the earth does not include sickness and calamity, but God's will for the earth never included the fall, either, which opened the earth up to both of these things because of sin.

4C) No, because Satan's argument was that Job would curse God, but he never did.

Given that Satan's goal was to destroy Job by getting Job to curse God, it is obvious that Satan was the loser of both Round 1 and Round 2. He was sure that Job would curse God, but he was wrong. (Satan does not know everything, much as he'd like you to think that he does!)

Satan DID get to attack Job, but that was not what Satan really wanted. He wanted to DESTROY Job completely, and he NEVER got what he wanted. He wanted Job to curse God, and he NEVER got what he wanted. So it would be impossible to paint Satan as the winner of the heavenly debates in any meaningful sense.

Perhaps instead of "winning," it was just a case of Satan asserting his rights over a fallen man on a fallen planet. It would seem unfair to Satan for God to "hedge Job in" in a way that He doesn't even do today under the New Covenant – for Job's whole life – when God had made no promise to Job to stop Satan's actions.

Question 4 Conclusion

It seems to me that we could award both (4B) and (4C) the ribbon here.

At the end of the book, God healed Job and basically undid everything that Satan did – and gave Job twice what he had before. So it is clear that Satan could not be the real "winner" of anything in the book of Job. Still, this question is open for later clarifications, too.

Question 5: What do the words "although thou movedst me against him, to destroy him without cause" mean?

5A) You successfully persuaded Me to destroy Job even though there was no cause for it.

We're going to have to go back to doing a little Hebrew digging to answer this question.

We find that the Hebrew word used here for without cause is actually translated both without cause and for nought (meaning in vain) in many places in the Old Testament, so EITHER could be a legitimate translation.

We next check various other translations to see which way the majority of translators believed that the word should be translated. We make the interesting discovery that just about ALL translations use “without cause” here, a notable exception being Young’s Literal Translation, which ends the verse in question with this phrase: “and still he is keeping hold on his integrity, and thou dost move Me against him to swallow him up for nought!”

It looks like you could answer Question 5 different ways depending upon which translation you like, especially given that the word for “without cause” IS translated “for nought” in many places in the King James Version.

While Job was not COMPLETELY destroyed, the series of events certainly would qualify as “destruction” for just about any reader. If you lost all your children and possessions, wouldn’t you consider that destruction?

We can next consider the Hebrew word translated movedst. Does it REALLY mean “persuaded” as the verse seems to say? Looking up all the other places where the word (cuwth) appears, it seems that it could mean merely to incite, but there are plenty of places where persuaded fits and is actually used. So there is no secret technicality involving this word.

The big issue with answer (5A) is that it seems to imply that GOD destroyed Job. He certainly didn’t do that directly (Satan did). Can we take that to mean that God destroyed Job by allowing it? Maybe. This is going to become a major issue when we get to Question 9, so we may want to put a final decision on hold until we can answer that question.

At the least, (5A) is not very appealing because it makes it seem that Satan twisted God’s arm so that God allowed something UNFAIR (“without cause”) to happen to Job. Given God’s fairness, this seems suspect.

Unfortunately, (5A) also seems like the natural meaning of the phrase for someone reading Job for the first time without a prior bias, at least until the reader realizes that it was Satan doing the destroying, not God.

5B) You tried to persuade Me to destroy Job, but you tried in vain.

This would follow Young’s Literal Translation and the alternate meaning in the main translation, namely, “thou dost move Me against him to swallow him up for nought!” You could take this to mean, “Satan, you tried to move Me to destroy Job, but you failed. I didn’t do it.”

This seems to be a legitimate explanation of what happened.

However, we get into the “indirect blame” issue. If God gave Satan permission to afflict Job, God didn’t do anything himself, but it seems like we’re letting Him off on a technicality. If He ALLOWED Satan to do something that Satan had not been ALLOWED to do before, it would seem reasonable that God would have to bear at least some responsibility for the results. This begs Question 9 again.

However, Jesus was sent to destroy the works of the devil (1 John 3:8). In the loosest sense, these were all things that the devil did that God “allowed” – and HAD to allow because sin was in the earth. So the fact that God “allows” something on a fallen earth is NOT proof that He approves or is complicit in anything that the devil does. So we have to be careful.

We also have to be careful when we’re bucking almost every translation out there. It would seem that a LOT of professional Hebrew translators might know something that we don’t. Still, this has a certain appeal that (5A) does not have when it comes to what we want to believe about God’s character.

5C) You tried to get ME to do your dirty work and act like you, but your efforts were in vain.

This takes Young’s Literal Translation (“thou dost move Me against him to swallow him up for nought!”) to mean that Satan tried to get GOD to do bad things to Job, but Satan was unsuccessful at trying to turn God into a more powerful version of Satan.

This seems reasonable at first, but when we look back at the context that Job still held his integrity even though Satan “moved God against him,” this conclusion seems misplaced. “Job is still holding his integrity by not cursing Me, and you tried to make Me another version of you, Satan, in vain” doesn’t make much sense. What would this really be saying? It would sound like God was saying that Satan didn’t get God to do anything bad to Job, but based on what had already happened in Round 1, it seems that Satan somehow DID get permission or argued God into letting Job get trashed. The fact is that Job DID get trashed already (except for his body) before this exchange, and the natural reading of the phrase would seem to implicate God in Job’s trials. Let’s move on to the next option and see if it’s any better.

5D) You got My permission to afflict Job, but you still couldn’t get Job to allow his own destruction by cursing Me.

At least this answer pins the blame on Satan instead of God for what happened to Job, and we know that Satan is the one who killed Job’s family. Like the prior 2 answers, this one assumes the alternate meaning and Young’s Literal Translation’s rendering of “without cause” to mean “in vain” (“for nought”). The idea is, “I let you do horrible things to Job, and you said that he would curse you. But you did everything in vain.”

This explanation fits our modern concept of God under the New Covenant, except for that permission thing! The idea that Satan went to God and got His permission to whack Job still seems out of character based on how God relates to us today. Still, we realize that Job was in a very different situation due to his lack of any protective covenant.

Still, if God lowered Job’s hedge of protection in two steps, that seems in a way like granting permission.

However, when reading the conversation between God and Satan, Satan actually never ASKED for permission to afflict Job. Instead, He tempted God to afflict Job Himself, which He would not do. So saying “You got my permission” when Satan never ASKED for permission seems a little misleading.

5E) I took down part of the hedge around Job in response to your challenge because Job has no covenant to be exempt from your actions, but he still wouldn't give up his integrity by cursing Me. Therefore, your challenge to Me was in vain.

This explanation avoids making it sound like Satan asked for permission to afflict Job. Actually, Satan DIDN'T ask for permission. He did a couple things. First, he tempted GOD twice to bring calamity on Job Himself. But God is good, so He could not act contrary to His nature by afflicting a righteous man. Second, he complained that God had given Job “Access Denied” status by putting a Satan-proof hedge around him. This was a challenge to God's justice to Satan. According to this explanation, God was willing to concede that point to Satan.

This leads to the question of why God would remove the Satan-proof hedge in response to Satan's challenge. At first it sounds like Satan struck up an argument with Almighty God and WON! But an easily missed point is that Job had no covenant with God for healing or protection, so if God NEVER allowed Satan access to a sinner without a covenant, GOD'S actions would have been unfair – to Satan! God would have been extending covenant rights that did not exist at the time. Satan had the legal right to do things to Job because Job was a fallen man on a fallen earth. In fact, God's mercy stands out here because God allowed Satan to do so LITTLE to Job in the big picture (less than 1% of Job's life, from all appearances) even though Job had no covenant with God for healing and protection! No wonder Satan was upset!

Now we have to look for possible problems with this answer. Doesn't this fall into the same trap as the Satan's Epiphany Theory? Once Satan realized that he could challenge God for access to Job because Job had no covenant, what would stop Satan from successfully demanding additional whacks at Job for the next 140 years?

The only plausible answer would seem to be that if it was fair for God to hedge Job up until this point, it was fair for him to hedge Job again later. The issue with God denying access to Job would have been satisfied, as God DID allow Satan limited access for a limited time. Satan could not accuse God of being unfair in that matter anymore. Satan took his best shots and went 0-for-2. He did just about everything imaginable to Job without killing him. At that point, there apparently wasn't anything left to do to Job where Satan could go for Round 3 by saying, “Wait a minute, let me do something else (other than kill him) that You haven't let me do so far, and THEN he'll finally curse You to Your face.” Satan was allowed to take shots at Job until he had emptied his clip. God apparently considered it fair that Satan not be allowed to take any of those shots again, as they were all tried and found unsuccessful. Job had passed every test by maintaining his integrity. There was no point in allowing Job to have to keep retaking these severe tests that he had already passed.

Still, does this REALLY fit the phrase “thou movedst me against him?” I think it does, actually. It certainly seems that Satan did “persuade” (in a manner of speaking) God to allow Satan previously unauthorized access to Job’s life. When you speak to God about a matter of covenant, God will always confirm His covenant. In this case, Satan complained about being iced out of the action, and from what I can see, God had no choice but to nullify Satan’s complaint by letting him try to tempt Job to curse God.

While this looks like a good explanation, it certainly isn’t the way that most people read Job. We would have to claim that we have learned some things that hardly anyone else around has learned about the book of Job. While that doesn’t rule out the answer, it’s always seems a little unsafe if you’re the only one skating at a certain end of the pond. What might all the others who came before you know that you don’t?

Conclusion for Question 5

All the possible answers could raise issues. (5A) is the most “obvious” conclusion to a first-time reader, but it implies that God destroyed Job. If it turns out when we answer Question 9 that God DID bear active responsibility for the evil than came upon Job, (5A) will be the clear winner. Most readers of Job would conclude that God WAS responsible, albeit in a slightly indirect manner, so (5A) would seem to be the favorite. If we reach the opposite conclusion (though it’s not immediately obvious how we possibly could) and conclude that God was cleared of all active responsibility in the matter, (5E) would seem to be the best answer out of the remaining ones.

So we could consider another pivotal question at this point:

5.1) What did God mean when He said to Satan, “All that he has is in your power?”

5.1A) I am pulling back the hedge so that all Job has is in your power.

5.1B) All that Job has is, and was, in your power already, and I had nothing to do with making it so.

(5.1A) is again the “obvious” reading unless we can prove otherwise, while (5.1B) is what we would LIKE to believe so that we can clear God’s name and assert that He really is good all the time, and that He was good all the time to Job.

(5.1B)’s appeal to us as New Covenant believers is what has led to looking for any possible explanations that could support it. The only options that seem possible are the Fear Theory, the Satan’s Epiphany Theory, and one other “shot” which we’ll call the Liar Theory. If we agree that the Fear Theory and the Satan’s Epiphany Theory are untenable, there seems to be only one other possible explanation to support (5.1B), and that is that there was no hedge. Satan was either misinformed or he was lying to God. Because this is answer (6A) below, we can put the Liar Theory on hold until we get to Question 6.

If the Liar Theory is right, we can uphold (5.1B). Otherwise, we will be forced to conclude that (5.1A) is right. In other words, GOD did do something Himself that allowed Satan to access Job’s relatives, his possessions, and later his body. The “progressive” easing of the restrictions in two steps seem to make it doubly clear that this was something that God did explicitly.

But doesn't (5.1A) force us to tell the world that God is really NOT good all the time? I don't think so. The fact that God is good is why God would not cave in to Satan's temptation to Him to afflict Job directly. That isn't God's nature. However, we have to remember that Satan does have the right even today to at least try to steal, kill and destroy in a fallen world with fallen people. God "allows" it in the sense that God upholds His own Word and cannot change it once He utters it. He had already given man dominion over the earth, and He wouldn't take it back just because man sinned. That is why Satan had to get man to sin to get entrance into the earth. Unfortunately, man's sin allowed Satan access to the earth that should never have been his. But given that he legally had it, he had the right to assert his rights before God and complain if God were denying him access to anyone on the earth. God had blessed Job and put a hedge around him, but surely God knew already that Satan had the legal right to challenge that hedge, and that He would have to give Satan at least some access to Job to be fair in the world that He set up that was now in fallen man's control.

Does the fact that Satan is bad all the time TODAY, doing bad things to as many people as he can TODAY, negate the fact that God is good all the time TODAY? NO! If anything, it reinforces God's goodness, because it is not God, but Satan, doing all the dirty deeds on the earth today. God ALLOWS Satan to do things only because Satan has rights that were inevitably his after Adam allowed him access to the earth through sin. If Adam had never sinned, no one would ever have physically died on the earth, and Satan would have never been able to kill anyone! This was Adam's fault, not God's. God simply gave Adam a choice, and Adam blew it. God then had to honor his gifting of the earth to "the children of men" (Psalm 115:16) even though it meant havoc and it meant that Satan could assert certain rights to steal, kill and destroy.

Well, at least we can still declare God's goodness. Unless Question 9 undermines this whole thing when we get to it. That last question has a lot riding on it!

Question 6: What happened to Job's hedge of protection that God had put around him?

6A) There never was one – Satan was either misinformed or lying, which would be nothing new.

We know that Satan doesn't know everything. If he did, he would have tried to stop Jesus' crucifixion with any power that he could muster. He didn't know that it would be the cross that would utterly destroy him forever. We also know that Satan is a notorious liar. He told Eve that if she ate from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, she would become like God (Genesis 3:5: "For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil."). The truth was that Eve WAS like God, and after she ate, she died spiritually and became UNLIKE God.

So relying on Satan for information is dubious. Satan said that there was a hedge, but when a known liar says that there is a hedge, you would just about automatically assume the opposite. If Satan appeared to you and said, "You should invest all your money into the new Devil's Deal Hedge Fund," would you invest in it?

As our Narrator's Rule shows, the fact that Satan is quoted as SAYING something doesn't make it so. (This was obvious in the case of what he said to Eve.) So now we can examine the Liar Theory as an explanation for the hedge – there never was one and Satan lied. Then God told the truth when He implied that there was no hedge.

But you can refer back to (3B) for some good reasons to believe that there WAS a hedge – Satan could have been trying to destroy Job and he could have noticed a hedge that stopped him. God did NOT argue with Satan about there being a hedge. If there were no hedge, it seems that Satan would have already beaten up Job without having to say anything to God about the matter.

Some people have taken the fact that what Job had “was” in Satan's power to mean that it WAS already in his power without God having to change anything. (This usually goes along with the Fear Theory mentioned above.) But the restrictions God put on the damage Satan could do on two occasions would seem to indicate that God had to change something. In other words, Job's assets and family, and THEN his body, were not just “there for the picking” the whole time.

So the Liar Theory that drives this answer has some serious issues, to say the least.

6B) Job tore it down himself through his great fear (3B above).

We've already considered the Fear Theory. At least if Job realized the error of his fear, he could have kept up a new hedge after his trial. (This avoids the issues with some other answers to Question 3, which logically leave Satan able to beat up Job forever.) However, Job never repented for his fear as far as we can tell – the matter is never mentioned again. Arguments from silence are always weak.

There is a good indication that there WAS a hedge. See the answer to (3B), which was rejected above, for more about the Fear Theory. This answer doesn't look like it will work.

6C) God took it down Himself, which allowed Satan to attack Job.

This is the most obvious answer to a first-time, unbiased Job reader.

This also fits the idea that Satan could only attack Job as much as God permitted. After Round 1, one could say that PART of the hedge was removed, but a hedge still stood regarding Job's body, which Satan was not allowed to touch until Round 2.

The lack of appeal of this answer is that it seems to imply that God explicitly gave Satan permission to attack Job even though Job didn't deserve it. This is disturbing. Was God as unfair as Satan? If God gave Satan permission, wasn't this tantamount to the Lord trashing Job?

Then again, if God never let Satan do anything to Job even though he was a fallen man in a fallen world, Satan could have accused God of being unfair about the matter.

As bad as this seems, it also seems better than the previous two answers. Let's keep looking.

6D) God had already taken it down but Satan didn't realize it yet.

This answer is a cousin to the Satan's Epiphany Theory.

It begs the question of why God would have taken down the hedge before Satan ever made his appeal in heaven to have Job be ruined. Was this some arbitrary thing that He did? That doesn't seem to fit God's character. Did God take it down because of Job's fear? We dealt with the idea that Job tore the hedge down himself. It doesn't make any more sense to say that God tore down the hedge when he saw that Job was in fear. Job had been in fear for a long time – wouldn't the hedge have been gone much sooner? If it were, how could Satan complain about it when he talked to God?

The appeal of this answer is that it tries to clear God of any immediate blame. When God said twice that Job was in Satan's power, according to this, He meant that Job was ALREADY in Satan's power, not that God did something to PUT Job under Satan's power, which is the most obvious initial conclusion one would reach when reading those passages, and the one that almost everyone seems to reach. This puts the blame on Job for doing something that caused God to remove the hedge.

But what can we blame Job for when the very first verse in the book of Job declares that he was perfect and upright? The idea doesn't seem to gybe with Job 1:1.

Besides, isn't taking down the hedge around Job tantamount to agreeing to let Satan ruin him? No, not necessarily – we dealt with Satan's rights in a fallen world back when we were trying to answer Question 5.

But this answer still doesn't seem to make sense when you consider the two stages of interaction between God and Satan. To say, "Job is already in your hand, except for his body," and also, "You didn't realize it, but everything other than Job's body is already in your hand", then later to say, "Job's body is in your hand too" and also "You didn't realize it, but Job's body is already in your hand" just plain doesn't make sense.

So this answer is no good. (6C) still seems like the only answer with any chance of being the winner.

6E) Because there were no sacrifices that covered or washed away sin back then, the fact that Job had ANY sin in his life meant that Satan could demand that God withdraw the hedge on demand.

Satan did NOT present a case that God had to withdraw the hedge due to sin in Job's life, so at best this would be a very thin argument.

Once you consider it some more, you run into the same shoal that wrecked the Satan's Epiphany Theory. If Job was the best of anyone around, it meant that Satan could then demand that God withdraw the hedge from everyone else for their sin, so Satan could have afflicted the entire world, including Job's friends, and Job himself for the next 140 years.

Besides, Satan would not have made an issue about the hedge if ANY sin in Job's life could tear it down. Satan only would have had to wait for Job to sin once before he would have had the right to DEMAND that God take down the hedge again. He certainly wouldn't complain about it to God the way that he did.

This answer is a dead end.

Conclusion for Question 6

Whether we like it or not, answer (6C) seems to be the only answer where we don't have to resort to some convoluted contortions to choose the conclusion we want.

Question 7: Why does the Bible say that Job was not sinning when Job said that God had done the bad things to him?

7A) Job had no way of knowing that there was a personal devil, so God gave him a pass on that matter even though Job was wrong.

This seems fair. Given that Job took place during Genesis before the Law of Moses, Job would have had NO SCRIPTURE WHATSOEVER to read. God had not revealed Himself much back in those days. How would anyone know that there was a devil unless God revealed it? Job couldn't read the book of Job and find that out for himself!

There is a difference between being wrong and sinning. You could have invested all your money into a Ponzi scheme and lost it. That would mean that you were wrong, but you would not have committed any particular named sin in the Bible. (Even some Christian organizations have lost all their invested money that way. It pays to check things with the Holy Spirit before you do them!)

So we would seem to be on safe ground saying that Job was wrong, but he didn't sin. He didn't curse God or do anything overtly sinful. So based on our Narrator Rule, we can allow that what Job said was truly recorded but not true.

The only problem would be if it turned out that God really WAS responsible, and that's what we'll look into next.

7B) God really WAS the one responsible for it all, so Job was completely right.

We can pitch this one into the dumpster immediately because it is clear from the text that SATAN, not GOD, killed Job's family and animals and made him sick. If you protest that God was INDIRECTLY responsible based on what is becoming our most troublesome verse (Job 42:11), you've reached the next answer below.

7C) Though Satan was responsible, God DID have some responsibility because He let Satan do those things.

Did God "allow" Satan to have access to Job? We're seeing that more and more of this is going to come down to Question 9. We don't want to put God into the position of authorizing the destruction of a good man unless there is no other choice. We know from other discussions that God HAS BEEN responsible for doing bad things to bad people, and He WILL BE responsible for doing bad things to bad people in the book of Revelation. But being involved with doing bad things to a GOOD person seems like a different story.

If God explicitly ALLOWED Satan to afflict Job, we could argue that Job was right in a limited sense, and that could explain why Job did not sin with his lips.

Conclusion for Question 7

If you assume that God would have to be DIRECTLY responsible for Job's afflictions for it to count, (7A) is the correct answer. Otherwise, (7C) is the correct answer. At times, it seems like we're raising more questions that we're answering, and this seems to be getting more and more uncomfortable! Nobody said that Job is an easy book to understand! Don't worry, I WILL shut all the cans of worms I've opened before this discussion is over!

Question 8: Job had to repent of his words, so how could God say in Job 42:7 that Job had spoken what was RIGHT?

8A) Job was wrong, but he was LESS WRONG than his three friends.

God did not say that Job had spoken WRONG things that were LESS WRONG than things that other people said, so I think that we can throw this one out.

8B) Job did say SOME things that were right along with all the false accusations against God.

Job did prophesy about a coming Redeemer, after all, and his assertions of his own innocence were right while his friends' assertion of his guilt was wrong. So this explanation seems somewhat reasonable.

8C) Job was right that he needed to repent in dust and ashes, realizing that he had spoken things that were "above his pay grade."

This also seems like a reasonable explanation. His friends needed to repent and they didn't. Job needed to repent and he did.

This also solves the apparent contradiction issue. Here God said that Job had spoken what was right, but He had said before that Job had "darkened counsel by words without knowledge" (Job 38:2). Both statements could not be correct SIMULTANEOUSLY, yet both statements came from God, who can never be incorrect. This fact would seem to rule out (8B). This explanation takes care of the contradiction – Job had spoken without knowledge earlier, but he repented and changed his tune and he was "right" at that point.

Conclusion for Question 8

The clear winner here is (8C). God himself said that Job's rants about His unfairness were wrong. Now we'll take that into consideration when we tackle the final question, which is by far the most challenging question for those of us coming from a "faith" or "grace" angle.

Question 9: Why does Job 42:11 say that the Lord had brought all the evil upon Job?

This is a critical Scripture to understand. If we take it at face value, GOD did something to Job, so God could do the same thing to us because we don't have authority over God. But if Satan was really responsible, we DO have authority over him and we can run him off every time. But this verse surely seems to make God seem responsible! Let's look at our options.

9A) It was a bad translation in the King James Version that was fixed by other translations.

We shudder at the idea that a good God was responsible, even if indirectly, for doing bad things to a good person. But Job 42:11 seems to come right out and say that the Lord had done the evil things to Job. This is so different from what we see in the first 2 chapters of Job that this verse is trotted out by skeptics on the Internet as "proof" that the Bible contradicts itself. It is clear in the first 2 chapters that SATAN, not GOD, did the calamities that Job experienced.

I didn't add an answer that says "The Bible contradicts itself" because if we assume that, we might as well throw out our Bibles and throw out this book while we're at it. We are starting with the assumption that ALL Scripture, including Job 42:11, is God-breathed (2 Timothy 3:16-17).

So there must be some explanation for this mess. Our first shot at it is to see if this is some kind of King James quirk.

We find that it ISN'T. ALL translations, including Young's Literal Translation, say that GOD or Jehovah (same meaning) brought all this evil upon Job. I've never seen a translation that says otherwise.

So that was a nice try, and it was something that we needed to check out. Now we know that (9A) is a bust.

9B) The Hebrew only indicates that the Lord ALLOWED it, but not that He actually BROUGHT IT.

So this is our next try. Can we prove that the Hebrew word is passive so that it doesn't mean what it looks like it means? We look it up in the Hebrew and check the tense.

DRAT! It's a Stem Hiphil – an ACTIVE verb. The Hebrew says that the Lord BROUGHT all the evil upon Job.

Some people have claimed that Hebrew always should be interpreted as permissive when we see it relative to God's actions in the Old Testament. But it seems unfair to take His GOOD actions as active but His BAD actions as permissive when the same kinds of verbs are being used. And one would think that the narrator would know better than to use an active verb to indicate passive participation.

On the other hand, it can't be "active" in the sense that Satan's actions were active, because then the Bible would contradict itself. We would have to establish that God ALLOWING Satan to do things would be equivalent to God DOING things.

Is there some other quirk in the Hebrew? The Hebrew basically says "comforted evil Lord had brought" and I don't see any way around interpreting the phrase the way that the King James version does.

Let's see what other options we have.

9C) By giving Satan permission to afflict Job, God actively DID cause Job's woes, though indirectly.

Under this option, we assume that God DID give permission to Satan to afflict Job and that therefore God WAS responsible. Therefore, in that sense, the LORD did bring all the evil upon Job.

This finally appears to solve the contradiction problem.

It also leaves us with a “traditional” interpretation of Job! Could the traditional “obvious” reading of Job be right after all?

It doesn't seem so when we consider some other things that the Bible says about Satan and sickness. The fact that God “allowed” Satan to make people sick in Jesus' day does not mean that “the Lord” brought that evil on those people or that the evil things were His will – quite the contrary. Jesus was very clear that it was SATAN who bound people (Luke 13:16). Peter preached that Jesus healed those who were oppressed by the devil (Acts 10:38), not people who were oppressed “because God brought evil on them by allowing the devil to do those things.” So God being responsible for the devil's actions doesn't wash from a Bible perspective. He HAS TO allow Satan access to the earth during this dispensation even though He hates what Satan is doing. Satan will be duly punished for everything he has done because it has all been the OPPOSITE of God's will. Jesus did the will of the Father (John 5:19) when He UNDID Satan's works (1 John 3:8).

So blaming God even indirectly doesn't seem fair to God. But we're running out of choices. Let's check out one more option before we try to settle on a final conclusion.

9D) The narrator is simply expressing the view that Job's friends had without agreeing with it.

Some Bible commentators have gone with this answer to explain the apparent contradiction in Job.

In effect, they're saying that Job's friends showed up and said, “We're so sorry for you because of all the evil that the Lord brought upon you.” If that were the case, God is off the hook because the narrator is only (in effect) reporting the words of Job's friends without assenting to their truthfulness.

Thus, the conclusion would be that the Lord did NOT actually do anything to Job for which He could be held responsible, but Job's “comforters” were of the opinion that “the Lord” had done all the evil to Job.

We can go back to our Narrator Rule. If the narrator says it, it's truth. If the narrator says that someone else said it, it may or may not be truth.

The problem is that the narrator isn't quoting anyone. He doesn't report ANY of the words that Job's friends used. Based on our Narrator Rule, we HAVE TO ascribe the evil to God. Could the narrator be “quoting” an opinion that was wrong even though it wasn't a direct quote, which would break our Narrator Rule? We'd be on REALLY thin ice to claim that the Narrator Rule applies everywhere in the Bible except this one verse where we really, really don't want to believe that it applies. We would need another Biblical example of implying an opinion of someone who isn't directly quoted. Can we find such a case anywhere else?

I asked myself this question until one day I stumbled upon John 5:18: “Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, making himself equal with God.” The narrator asserts that Jesus had “broken the Sabbath,” but he isn’t directly quoting the Jews. Had Jesus actually broken the Sabbath? It would seem that if He actually had broken the Sabbath, He would have sinned and then He would be like the rest of us – unable to redeem us because He would need redemption Himself.

This gets very interesting. Jesus could NOT have broken the Sabbath from GOD’S perspective or He would no longer be sinless, but He could have broken the Sabbath as far as the Pharisees were concerned, because the Pharisees had invented all kinds of human additions to the Law of Moses that were not part of the Law as far as God was concerned. But if we insist that the narrator always speaks from GOD’S perspective, then he must be affirming what God says, which means that Jesus must have actually broken the Sabbath – and thus sinned!

Wow, we’ve really waded into a swamp here, haven’t we? Let’s see if we can get ourselves back out.

It’s obvious that Jesus never sinned. So can we take “broken the Sabbath” to mean that He had broken the Sabbath from the Jews’ perspective only? Not according to the Narrator Rule – that just loops us around to exactly the same place in the swamp!

Thus, we reach a jarring conclusion. The real issue is that the strict Narrator Rule itself is invalid, as proved by John 5:18! This verse proves that in a rare case, the narrator can cite the perspective of the people involved rather than God’s perspective even though no one’s words are being directly quoted!

Are there any other disproofs of the Narrator Rule? After I found John 5:18, I came across another apparent disproof in Acts 21:4, which happens to be one of the most difficult verses in the New Testament if one makes no allowance that the Narrator Rule can be broken when someone else’s perspective is implied. Here it says that people told Paul through the Spirit not to go to Jerusalem. The difficulty of this lies in the fact that Paul was sure that the Spirit had told him TO go to Jerusalem!

Acts 19:21:

After these things were ended, Paul purposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, I must also see Rome.

Acts 20:22:

And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there:

And when Paul had left Jerusalem, the Lord did not correct Paul but rather affirmed his choice:

Acts 23:11:

And the night following the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer, Paul: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome.

Were they really telling Paul “through the Spirit” not to leave for seven days but then to leave afterward? That seems like a dubious attempt to keep the Narrator Rule intact. If we can use that explanation, the Narrator Rule is still intact, but given that they didn’t tell Paul not to go to Jerusalem YET, but simply not to go to Jerusalem, I don’t think that’s the real explanation. It seems instead that we have another Implied Perspective Exception to the Narrator Rule. (These are my terms, but I think they fit and you can feel free to use them.) The disciples THOUGHT that they were telling Paul through the Spirit not to go to Jerusalem, but the Spirit was not really saying that to Paul. They almost surely “prophesied” to Paul not to go, but they missed God on the matter even though they were attempting to speak through the gifts of the Spirit.

Now that we have two other witnesses that we can have an Implied Perspective Exception to the Narrator Rule, we can also allow that Job 42:11 means, “Then came there unto him all his brethren, and all his sisters, and all they that had been of his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him in his house: and they bemoaned him, and comforted him over all the evil that they thought that the LORD had brought upon him: every man also gave him a piece of money, and every one an earring of gold.”

Now we have resolved the ALLEGED “Bible contradiction!” It WAS Satan who afflicted Job. Given the rendering above, nothing in Scripture says otherwise. We can’t blame God for what happened any more than we can blame God for what He “allows” Satan to do in this day and age in this fallen earth. If God cannot be held as the responsible party for what Satan does today, He cannot be held as the responsible party for what Satan did in the book of Job either.

Question 9 Conclusion

The only answer without a fatal flaw is (9D).

Job 42:11 no longer has to be “the verse that we’re afraid someone will bring up when we preach faith and grace!”

Now that we’ve resolved this major issue, we need to revisit some previous answers in light of this!

Extra Innings

Now we can loop back to some of the previous questions and award some clear winners, which we could not do until we straightened out Job 42:11.

Going back to Question 1 in the light of what we just learned, we realize that there is a sixth option that was not presented before, and this sixth option is the correct one:

Question 1: Which parts of the book of Job contain authoritative DOCTRINE?

1F) The narrator's parts (except when echoing someone's perspective), God's words, Elihu's words and only CERTAIN parts of what everyone else said when they are confirmed elsewhere in Scripture.

Now that we have settled Question 9, we can settle on the following answer to Question 2, which most closely matches the original Hebrew:

Question 2: What does the phrase "Hast thou considered my servant Job" mean?

2C) Have you set your heart on targeting Job with calamities?

Next, Question 3 did not really have ANY right answer in the original multiple choices, but it appears that we can alter (3E) slightly to come up with a satisfactory one:

Question 3: Why did God tell Satan that he could afflict Job?

3G) Job had no healing covenant, and God allowed Satan limited access to Job for a limited time.

This is similar to (3E) but better, because it clarifies that God limited what Satan could do to Job in two steps, and also clarifies that Satan did NOT have the right to do whatever he wanted just because there was no Old Covenant or New Covenant in effect at the time. If Satan had had his way, he would have afflicted Job continuously until Job either cursed God or died (or both). The point came where God said, "Enough is enough!" and from that point on, Job was a wealthy healthy man again and Satan was once again unable to afflict him.

If God allowed Satan to afflict Job in a limited way but He would not allow that today, does that mean that God has changed?

No, God Himself doesn't change, but He has definitely changed the way that He relates to man over the years. Once the Law of Moses came, anyone could take God up on His statement that He is the Lord Your Physician (Exodus 15:26). People before the Law, including Job, did not have that right. People today have personal authority over Satan and his works (Luke 10:19), but no one had that under the Law. Our covenant is better (Hebrews 7:22), established upon better promises than the Old Covenant (Hebrews 8:6).

You could argue all day that God should have given people a better deal in the older days, but it's not how God has chosen to deal with mankind. I don't think you'll win any more arguments with God than Satan has.

Let's at least deal with the contradiction issue. Can an INDIRECT party be considered responsible? Can both GOD and SATAN be considered "responsible" (in any sense) for the SAME actions when one was directly responsible and the other was indirectly responsible?

We actually find a parallel case in some Scriptures mentioned in this book. In 1 Chronicles 21:1, we read that Satan incited David to do a census (“And Satan stood up against Israel, and provoked David to number Israel”). But in 2 Samuel 24:1, we read that the LORD incited David to do a census (“And again the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel, and he moved David against them to say, Go, number Israel and Judah”). So we have just established that God and Satan can share responsibility for the same action when Satan does something in certain cases. Another case is the one of the “evil spirit from God” that God sent to Saul in 1 Samuel 16:14-23. However, you may have noticed in these cases that the passages referred to judgment against people at whom God was mad. God wasn’t mad at Job. Can we prove this principle in a case where God’s judgment wasn’t involved?

We can. In Matthew 8:5-13, the narrator asserts that a centurion beseeched Jesus. In Luke’s account of the same incident in Luke 7:2-10, we see that the some elders, and later some of the centurion’s friends, were intermediaries through whom the centurion actually delivered his messages. This makes it clear that from a Biblical mindset, if you send someone to do something, you did it yourself.

There is still a difference, though. The centurion actively sent the intermediaries to Jesus, while God did not actively send Satan to Job. God did allow Satan to go to Job and do awful things to him, though.

So do these examples show that Job 42:11 fingers God after all? No. We’ve established our exception to the Narrator Rule, and if we take everything above to implicate God, God would be just as implicated today for what He “allows” Satan to do on the earth. There are reasons that things are as they are today, but none of them is God’s fault. It was Adam’s choice to sin, not God’s choice for him to do that. Adam gave Satan access to the earth, and Satan still has it. Fortunately, WE today have access to the keys to the kingdom of God, so we can overturn Satan’s actions when we see them. That is still up to us, not up to God. The question now is not what God “allows” but what WE “allow” given that WE have the authority to undo Satan’s works.

While some Job commentators bring up David’s census as a parallel to Job 42:11, it doesn’t work in this case because Job was not under divine judgment for his sins.

The following explanation for Question 4 now seems slightly “off”:

Question 4: Did Satan actually win an argument with God?

4B) No, because Satan told GOD to afflict him and God wouldn’t do it, though he allowed Satan to do it.

This makes it seem too much like God was using Satan to do His dirty work just to keep His own name clear. In light of what we’ve seen, that isn’t really a fair statement of the situation, so we’ll stick with only one answer to question 4:

4C) No, because Satan’s argument was that Job would curse God, but he never did.

We left Question 5 hanging until we could answer Question 9. Now that we know that God did NOT literally bring the evil on Job even though his friends and relatives thought so, we know that answer (5A), which blames God for Job's calamities, is wrong. The statements in the first two chapters of Job that SATAN attacked Job are correct, and there is no contradiction later. Thus, it would seem that the explanation with the fewest issues, and the one that offers the most reasonable explanation, would be this one:

5E) I took down part of the hedge around Job in response to your challenge because Job has no covenant to be exempt from your actions, but he still wouldn't give up his integrity by cursing Me. Therefore, your challenge to Me was in vain.

Now what about Question 6, which didn't really seem to have any satisfying answers?

Question 6: What happened to Job's hedge of protection that God had put around him?

6C) God took it down Himself, which allowed Satan to attack Job.

It is quite obvious at face value that Satan was only able to access Job's life because God made an exception allowing limited access for a limited time. The alternatives such as the Fear Theory, the Satan's Epiphany Theory, the Liar Theory and many of the other failed tries offered as alternate answers to some of these questions, all just have a "ring" to them that we are just trying to "force" something into the text that isn't really there. The meaning that we're trying to "force" is what we WANT the text to say to make our preaching easier, but that isn't how you study and interpret Scripture!

The Cringe Factor

I know full well that many "faith" and "grace" readers will cringe at some of this and not want to accept it, even though I consider myself to be both a "faith preacher" and a "grace preacher." The biggest cringeworthy element would be, "You are painting God as unfair and unjust because you're saying that He conspired to put something on Job that he didn't deserve because he was the most upright man around." But "conspired" is not the right word. Would you be willing to say that God has conspired with Satan in all the cases of illness on the earth today just because God didn't stop Satan from doing it? I wouldn't. God and Satan are not partners and they never will be partners.

We have to come back to the point that Satan had the RIGHT to complain to God about having no access into Job's life. Job had it easier than many who followed him, with no covenant to boot! God is fair, even when it means having to be fair to Satan in this fallen world that he became the little-g "god" of.

I appreciate that modern preaching tries to make the things of God as simple as possible, but some of it has made the things of God SIMPLER than possible. It seems hard to understand that God would take down that hedge even for a short while and allow the devil to afflict Job. However, God is not the responsible party any more than He is the responsible party today when God “allows” Satan to roam the earth seeking to steal, kill and destroy. Actually, MAN is the one who “allowed” Satan the right to roam to and fro on the earth and attempt to rob, kill and destroy everyone he can. There are some “mysterious” things other than the account of Job that defy much of our modern simplified teaching about God when we try to view the story through the lens of a covenant that didn’t exist back then.

God did many other things in the Old Testament where a New Testament believer looking back might think that God was unfair. For example, God singled out the Jews for blessings. The Gentiles were not entitled to Israel’s blessings under the Old Covenant, even under Jesus’ ministry, as the story of the Syrophenician woman (Mark 7:25-30) proves. Ishmael was not entitled to share in Isaac’s blessings. Is that “fair” either? In GOD’S eyes, obviously it was. Was it “fair” to make Israel be in bondage in Egypt for centuries? Whole generations lived and died in servitude with no hope of seeing the promised land. Is it fair today that blindness has not yet been removed from Israel?

Paul never claimed that He could simplify God for the modern masses. WE are the ones who are prone to trying to do that. Paul preached just the opposite, actually:

Romans 11:33:

O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!

Some things just need to be ACCEPTED and BELIEVED because God says them. We can only serve the real God who revealed Himself in the Bible. We cannot create our own designer God who fits what we might think He should be like.

The answers to the remaining questions (7 through 9) still seem good as they stand in the light of what we have seen.

Job Explained

Job lived before the Law of Moses, but he was the most “upright” person around at the time. He walked in God’s blessings. Satan set his heart on ruining Job. One day there was a conversation in heaven in which God asked Satan if he had set his heart against Job. The obvious answer was YES, Satan wanted to destroy Job. Satan complained that God had put a hedge around Job. His argument was, “Of course Job is God-fearing because all You’ve ever done is bless him. But now afflict him and he’ll change his tune and curse you.” Thus, Satan tempted God to act like Satan and afflict Job, but it isn’t God’s nature to afflict a righteous person, so God wouldn’t do it. God did, however, let down part of the hedge He had put around Job, and He told Satan that Job, except for his body, was in Satan’s power. Satan proceeded to kill and destroy almost everything around Job, including his children. Job incorrectly attributed all these acts to God, but he did not curse God. Job had no way of knowing that there was a personal Adversary who was actually doing the afflicting. Even if he had known that, he did not live under the New Covenant, so he had no legal right to stop Satan’s actions himself. God did not charge Job with sin because Job had no way of knowing that there was an Adversary whose nature it was to steal, kill and destroy. Job could not be held accountable for things he had no way of knowing.

There was another conversation between God and Satan. God asked Satan again (rhetorically) if he had set his heart on Job. Again, the obvious answer was YES, Satan wanted to destroy him, but he had been unsuccessful so far. Satan had already asserted that if calamity came to Job, Job would curse God, but Job didn’t curse God when calamity came. So Satan told God that if things could get even worse so that Job’s body was affected, THEN Job would curse God. Satan tried again to tempt God to afflict Job, but it is not God’s nature to afflict a righteous person, so God wouldn’t do it. However, God did let down another part of the hedge so that Satan was able to afflict Job’s body, though God restricted Satan from killing Job. Satan then smote Job with all kinds of bodily problems, which Job continued to ascribe to God in his understandable ignorance.

Job and his three “comforters” had long arguments where the “comforters” assumed that Job had done bad things and that God was punishing him. Job maintained his innocence (correctly), but continued to attribute all of his suffering to God. Job was unaware that Satan even existed. However, Job started accusing God more and more of not being good to him. He didn’t know what was really going on. God Himself later bore witness that Job spoke without knowledge and that his friends didn’t know what they were talking about either.

Then a fourth person, Elihu, entered the picture and asserted that Job AND his friends were all wrong, and he spent some chapters trying to straighten them out. God never took exception to what Elihu said, and God even said some of the same kinds of things that Elihu has said. God never declared that Elihu was wrong.

Finally, God spoke out of a whirlwind and basically asked Job who he thought he was to criticize God the way he did. Job realized that he had spoken about things that were “over his head.” God continued to speak to Job along the same line. At the end of it, Job realized that his words actually WERE wrong and he repented. God healed Job when he prayed for his friends. Then Job’s siblings and acquaintances comforted Job about the evil that they ascribed to the Lord, but which the reader knows from the first two chapters was actually the work of Satan, because God Himself refused to act like Satan despite Satan’s two temptations of God to do so.

God gave Job twice the sizable fortune that he possessed before his trials, and Job lived a very blessed 140 years after his trial without ever being afflicted again by Satan as far as we know. It is obvious that God must have put the hedge back up to prevent a recurrence of the earlier events.

Along the way, we learned that Satan is the Sickener and God is the Healer. We learned that a Messiah was coming, and that when He came, He would redeem us all from hell and sickness so that in that day (ours), the Messiah’s followers could be free from the sicknesses that Job endured. We learned that if there were only a Mediator, Job’s situation could never happen again. We have that Mediator today – the Man Jesus Christ. Job knew that Jesus was already alive but He would literally stand on the earth later. While Job got only a glimpse of Jesus in the future, we now know the Mediator – the Messiah – the Lord Jesus Christ – and we have power over Satan. Because of Jesus, no one today ever has to be “another Job.”

Job Questions and Consistent Answers Summary

The following are the questions and the final answers that were consistent with one another.

Question 1: Which parts of the book of Job contain authoritative DOCTRINE?

1F) The narrator’s parts (except when echoing someone’s perspective), God’s words, Elihu’s words and only CERTAIN parts of what everyone else said when they are confirmed elsewhere in Scripture.

Question 2: What does the phrase “Hast thou considered my servant Job” mean?

2C) Have you set your heart on targeting Job with calamities?

Question 3: Why did God tell Satan that he could afflict Job?

3G) Job had no healing covenant, and God allowed Satan limited access to Job for a limited time.

Question 4: Did Satan actually win an argument with God?

4C) No, because Satan’s argument was that Job would curse God, but he never did.

Question 5: What do the words “although thou movedst me against him, to destroy him without cause” mean?

5E) I took down part of the hedge around Job in response to your challenge because Job has no covenant to be exempt from your actions, but he still wouldn’t give up his integrity by cursing Me. Therefore, your challenge to Me was in vain.

Question 6: What happened to Job’s hedge of protection that God had put around him?

6C) God took it down Himself, which allowed Satan to attack Job.

Question 7: Why does the Bible say that Job was not sinning when Job said that God had done the bad things to him?

7A) Job had no way of knowing that there was a personal devil, so God gave him a pass on that matter even though Job was wrong.

Question 8: Job had to repent of his words, so how could God say in Job 42:7 that Job had spoken what was RIGHT?

8C) Job was right that he needed to repent in dust and ashes, realizing that he had spoken things that were “above his pay grade.”

Question 9: Why does Job 42:11 say that the Lord had brought all the evil upon Job?

9D) The narrator is simply expressing the view that Job’s friends had without agreeing with it.

A Good Use for the Book of Job

Knowing that Satan afflicted Job, you can list Job’s ailments and know that they are the works of the devil, over whom New Testament believers have authority. Satan does not have the right to afflict you with any of these things: Sore boils from head to toe (Job 2:7), tossing to and fro at night (Job 7:4), broken skin (Job 7:5, Job 30:18), wearisome nights (Job 7:3), nightmares (Job 7:14), breaking in general (Job 9:17), multiplied wounds (Job 9:17), difficulty breathing (Job 9:18), emaciation (Job 10:10-11, Job 16:8, Job 19:20), biting yourself (Job 13:14), weariness (Job 7:3, Job 16:7), unnatural wrinkles (Job 16:8), dim eyesight from sorrow (Job 17:7), bad breath from your illness (Job 17:1, Job 19:17), skin worms (Job 7:5, Job 19:26), shaking from fear (Job 21:6), faintheartedness (Job 23:16), pain in the bones at night (Job 30:17), bowels boiling [probably diarrhea or something similar] (Job 30:27), blackened skin (Job 30:30), and overheating (Job 30:30). If you experience these things, you know their source, and you can take authority over him!

A Final Reminder

NONE of the answers to the questions above changes the fact that you cannot be another Job today. God will NOT let Satan have a field day with you under the New Covenant. Jesus NEVER “allowed” Satan to continue his works in the lives of anyone who came to Him to be set free from them!

Even if you take an “old school” position on Job, you have to agree that there can never be another case like Job’s case today because of the covenant under which we live. In other words, even if you think that God was bragging to Satan about Job and deliberately had Satan afflict Job to prove his character and show him off as a trophy, you must realize that there is ZERO chance of that ever happening under our New Covenant under which you are redeemed from Satan’s power (Colossians 1:13). Satan only had leverage because God had never made a healing or protection covenant with Job or anyone else at the time. If Job were even under the Law of Moses, he could have claimed exemption successfully by taking God at His Word about being our Healer.

Thus, while the book of Job makes for some interesting conversations, the issues covered in this discussion don’t change your redemption from Satan and His kingdom no matter which answers you might have given to any of the questions above. ANY Bible teacher who knows what he’s talking about will tell you that under the New Covenant, you CANNOT be “another Job!”

Healing – a Gift from God

Matthew 7:11

Good gifts come from God. Jesus said that your heavenly Father gives good gifts to them that ask Him. If you are sick, wouldn't you consider healing to be a good gift? Then you have a right to receive it from God when you ask Him for it.

You can learn something else important from this. God does not force His gifts on any man. No one has to get saved, and no one has to get healed. God's gifts are given to those that ask Him for them. This debunks the stupid idea that sickness can be a gift from God, as some say. Did you ask God for your illness? Did God offer you a choice of receiving it or not receiving it? NO. Then it was not a gift from God. That isn't how God operates.

Besides, what kind of a "gift" is it when you are told to pray for its removal in Scripture (James 5:14-16)? Surely not one of God's gifts. God wouldn't give you any gift that He doesn't want you to keep. You know this because Romans 11:29 says that the gifts and callings of God are without repentance. We usually major on the callings part of this verse in relation to people called to the ministry, but here God tells us that when He gives gifts, He doesn't change His mind and take them back. That proves that sickness is not a gift from God. He would not give you a gift and then remove it.

Sickness is not a gift from God, but healing is. God's gifts are good. Jesus said that He was the Gift of God (John 4:10) and Paul called Christ a gift (Ephesians 4:7). The Holy Spirit is called a gift (Acts 2:38). Salvation is called a gift throughout the book of Romans. Righteousness is called a gift (Romans 5:17). God is the giver of good gifts to His children. But notice that these gifts don't just come on you automatically just because they are God's will. You had to receive Christ and His righteousness. You had to receive the Holy Spirit. God was always offering the gifts, but you had to receive them. Healing is no different.

Nowhere in the Bible is sickness is called a gift. You would have to close your Bible and read modern false-comfort unbelief books to hear sickness referred to as a gift.

You Ought to be Healed

Luke 13:11-16

Jesus said that this sick woman ought to be healed because she was a daughter of Abraham. You are a child of Abraham because you in Christ (Galatians 3:7, Galatians 3:29). (For more proof, see Abraham's Blessing Is Yours.)

Therefore, if you are sick, you ought to be healed. You are just as much a child of Abraham as that woman was, and you have just as much right to healing as she had. She got her healing, so you ought to get yours, too!

The Causeless Curse

This wonderful verse helps you understand that you are not subject to witch curses (see also Numbers 23:23), so stop trying to hear what the witches are up to and start trying to hear instead what the Holy Spirit is up to and cooperate with that!

But beyond that, there is no just cause for the curse of sickness to be on a believer. God calls sickness a curse for breaking the Law in Deuteronomy 28:15-68. Jesus' blood atoned for every time you have ever broken the Law (or ever will break it). Therefore, there is no cause for the curse of sickness, so it is not to alight on you. It is just to fly off somewhere else like a flitting sparrow.

When you see the verse this way, it brings freedom. However, I have seen Christians use this verse in a way that leads to bondage instead. The bondage version sounds like something Job's "comforters" would say: "Well, we know that a curse will not alight without a cause, so therefore, your sickness shows that there must be a cause. You opened some kind of door to it by sinning somehow. You'd better find out what your sins are that opened that door to the devil so that there will be no more cause for a curse to be on you."

This version would have been popular in Galatia before Paul corrected the Galatians. Instead of bringing freedom, it puts everything back on YOU, as dead religious tradition always does. Now you (supposedly) must get introspective, go on a witch hunt for secret sin, and do this while feeling so miserable you might not want to get out of bed if you don't have to!

Here in a nutshell is what this religious mindset really says: "You DESERVE this sickness. You've gotten the curse that was coming to you, so you had best repent of whatever you were doing that brought it on!" That is hardly good news. It can't be THE "good news" because it isn't what Jesus went about teaching! I don't read about Him telling people, "You DESERVE this curse of sickness! See Me later when you figure out what your sin is and get it out of your life!" If He didn't do it then, He won't do it today. (He may warn you to sin no more, lest a worse thing come upon you, though (John 5:14)!)

The truth is that based on the Law, you DO deserve to get sick, but Jesus came and took the sickness and pain that you deserved Himself to release you from having to suffer them for your sin. There is no need for you to suffer sickness and pain for your sin when Jesus already suffered sickness and pain for your sin! THAT is the good news! The reason that the curse is causeless for you as a believer is that the ransom price has been paid, and therefore there is no more ransom left for YOU to pay in your own body!

The Temporary Curse

Take a look through the two main curse passages of the Old Testament (Deuteronomy 28:15-68 and Leviticus 26:14-39) and you will notice something very interesting – all the curses have to do with THIS LIFE!

There is not a hint of spiritual death being part of the curse, for good reason – the people these curses were addressed to were already spiritually dead! Becoming spiritually alive only became available in the New Covenant, under which people can be born again. The Law could not make them alive anyway!

There was NOTHING about the hereafter, about damnation or about eternal bliss.

Moreover, when you study the “blessing” verses that immediately precede the “curse” verses, you’ll find that every one of those blessings concerns things in this present lifetime as well! No blessing of the Law got you to heaven.

Compare this to the way most Christians think, which is that we have to slog through this life like the unbelievers, but after a just few more weary days, we’ll fly away to our mansions over the hilltop and once we all get to heaven we’ll sing and shout the victory. You can wait if you like, but I’m singing and shouting the victory in this life because I have it in this life (1 Corinthians 15:57, 2 Corinthians 2:14, 1 John 5:4-5)!

Galatians 3:13 contains the powerful statement that Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us. We are redeemed from everything in those curse verses RIGHT NOW IN THIS LIFE!

We don’t have to wait for heaven to be redeemed from the curse of sickness. In fact, you won’t need to be redeemed from sickness in heaven, because no one will cough while walking on the streets of gold and give you the flu strain described by the latest combination of letters and numbers. You certainly won’t need to be redeemed from poverty in the accommodations that await you, either. You won’t have any enemy people around who could make you into a slave and collect interest from loans they make to you.

No, what Christ redeemed you from – past tense – are the curses that applied to THIS LIFE. You do not have to be broke and sick here any more than you have to be broke and sick in heaven. Christ has already redeemed you from those things. You don’t even have to ask Him to do anything about such conditions; you need to believe that He already has done something about them on your behalf by becoming a curse for your sins. Then act on the Word by receiving your inheritance in Him!

So the good news is that you ALREADY have redemption through Christ for ALL the conditions named in those curse passages. So read them with a smile because EVERYTHING you see in them is something that does NOT belong to you as a Christian! You’re redeemed IN THIS LIFE from those curses that applied IN THIS LIFE. Hallelujah!

You're Designed to be Healthy, Not Sick

God designed your body to repel sickness. Sickness is an unnatural condition. When sickness enters your body, your body activates all kinds of defense mechanisms to get rid of it. Your body does not want to be sick!

Any doctor can tell you that medicine can relieve suffering and help your body heal itself, but that the medical profession can do little about actually healing you. The doctor can't even heal a scrape on your hand. He can simply do what he can to help your body heal itself, which God designed your body to do.

Look at all the money sinners and saints alike spend trying to get well. Think of the desperate lengths to which people go to find a cure for their illnesses. People have exhausted their life's savings, as the woman with the issue of blood did, just trying to be well again. You can't tell me it's natural to want to just accept illness as the will of God and live with it. Why don't people in the world just accept sickness as the will of God, as some Christian teachers today would have us do? Because they haven't had their minds polluted with stupid and unscriptural doctrines about sickness being the will of God to teach us things. Only silly church people embrace sickness.

Ask any sinner: If he had a choice of being sick or being well (which he does, as you can tell him), would he choose sickness? Maybe a few would because they like the attention and sympathy, but by and large, not many people would choose to be sick instead of well. It's unnatural to even want to be sick. People in general don't want to be sick. Think about this: If people really wanted to stay sick, why would whole cities show up bringing the sick on stretchers and beds to be healed by Jesus Christ, or Peter, or Paul, or healing evangelists today? The very fact that healing is such a powerful evangelistic tool demonstrates that people want to be healed. Given a choice, they want healing. They show up to be healed when someone preaches to them that they do have a choice. Saying that God wants you sick won't win many doctors to Christ. They already know better. They know that your body was designed to heal itself. And thank God, your family physician won't pray a foolish prayer to see if healing is the will of God for you in particular before he treats you. He'll do all that he can to get you well. No one blames your doctor for trying to get you well without checking the will of God first. And if you go to the doctor for relief when you think your illness is God's will, you are a hypocrite. I think it is fair to say that most unsaved doctors have a better attitude than many Christian teachers about wanting to see you get healed. They even wear a snake on a pole, which is both a symbol of healing and of Jesus Christ, whether they personally know the story or not.

Sickness Is the Power of the Devil

If you study out this verse in the Greek, you will find that the word oppressed means under the power of. (At least one popular translation words it this way.) Jesus healed those who were under the power of the devil. If there is sickness in your body, the power of the devil is at work in your body. This does not mean that there is a moral failure on your part. It does necessarily mean that you have a demon. It simply means that when there is sickness, the devil is in control of something. Sickness is his power, not God's.

According to Colossians 1:12-14, Jesus has already delivered you from the power of darkness. This is not a promise; it is a fact. You are already delivered from the power of the devil because you are now in the kingdom of God's Son. Since sickness is part of the power of the devil, you are therefore delivered from sickness. You could tell that from 1 Peter 2:24 and Matthew 8:16-17; this is just another way of proving it.

Jesus gave His disciples power over all demons and all sicknesses (Luke 9:1-2). You cannot say that you are not called to preach as they were, because the Great Commission applies to you as a believer. This commission includes the laying of hands on the sick for their recovery. You have power over the power of the devil. Greater is He that is in you, than He that is in the world (1 John 4:4)! You have already overcome him (1 John 2:13-14). It follows, then, that you do not have to put up with the power of the devil in your physical body. You have overcome him and have power over his works. The Son of God, who was manifested to destroy the works of the devil (1 John 3:8), lives in you. Since Jesus, and not Satan, rules your life, you get the things that go with Jesus (healing) instead of the things that go with Satan (sickness).

Where's Jesus?

Most Christians know that Jesus is seated at the right hand of the Father in heaven. Unfortunately, most Christians live as if that is the only place He is. Yes, He is in heaven, but He is also here on the earth in His Body. He indwells believers. If you're born again, you have "Christ in you, the hope of glory" – Colossians 1:27. Jesus said, "If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him" (John 14:23).

Believers are not nearly aware enough of the fact that Jesus Christ, the Miracle Worker, the one who "healed them all" time after time, lives in them. Jesus goes where you go! The Healer goes to any sick people you visit! Being aware of this will change your perspective on ministering healing to the sick. The Healer is inside you, desiring to work through your hands.

Jesus manifests Himself wherever believers use His name: "Again, I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them" (Matthew 18:19-20). This doesn't refer to a religious service (although by extension, you could apply it there) but rather to a case where believers are agreeing that something be done in the name of Jesus.

Jesus said that He would personally be there. He does not just stay up in heaven watching how well we get along down here. His name brings Him onto the scene. Jesus Christ Himself ministers healing to the sick when we invoke His name. He is present to heal. He is just as willing and able to heal as He was when He walked the earth in a physical body. He is not some imitation or just a religious idea. Jesus Christ, the risen Savior, the holy Son of God, manifests Himself on the scene when a demand for healing is made in His name. If you're being prayed over, He's personally ministering healing to you! That's right – Jesus Christ is ministering healing to you. The same Jesus Christ who healed the sick all over Israel during His earthly ministry. The same Jesus Christ who healed all manner of sickness and all manner of disease. Not some new, less powerful, modern Jesus. The same Jesus!

You can miss it if you get your eyes on man. That person laying hands on you will not heal you apart from Jesus. He can't. Those people agreeing with you in prayer can't heal you apart from Jesus, either. Don't look to them as the ultimate source of your healing. Look to Jesus and expect to receive healing from Him through them. If you expect Jesus to minister healing to you, His power will flow out of the people laying hands on you. It will go into your body and start working.

Our services would be different if we would stop and realize that Jesus Christ is in the midst of us. We supposedly believe that; after all, we are worshipping Him, aren't we? We're not worshipping someone far away! If we could see Jesus in the front of the sanctuary, how would that change our praise and worship? How would it change our expectations when people are prayed over? Yet Jesus is present. The Healer, the Savior, the Deliverer, the Chief Shepherd, and everything else that He is, is present in our services. He still walks in the midst of His churches today (Revelation 2:1). (He walks in the midst of the seven candlesticks, which are the churches according to Revelation 1:20.)

Peter realized this. He told Aeneas, "Jesus Christ maketh thee whole" (Acts 9:32-35). Peter knew that Jesus Christ was personally on the scene when He ministered. It was Jesus ministering healing through Peter.

If we would just be aware of His presence among us, there would be a lot more healings, to say nothing of a lot more reverence! Fewer people would come in late, leave early, gab during the message, daydream, and make potty runs during the altar call. Respect Him! He is present with us. He's not just up in heaven! Jesus Christ is present to heal today! If you're being prayed over, Jesus Christ lives both in the people praying over you and in you!

Healing and Deliverance from Poisoning

God's promise to deliver you from poisoning is further proof of His healing covenant with you.

Mark 16:15-18

One sign that Jesus said would follow believers was immunity from poisons, delivered either through a drink or through a serpent. This is not a license to drink poison to prove something; you'll only prove that Mark 16:15-18 does not work for people who deliberately ingest poison!

We can see that the statement that you would "take up serpents" refers to immunity from poisonous snakebites, as exemplified by Paul's experience on the island of Melita. A poisonous viper (snake) bit Paul while he was getting wood for a fire. Paul would normally have died, but he didn't suffer any harm at all (Acts 28:3-6). He went on to get everyone healed who was sick on the island (Acts 28:8-9).

Consider for a minute the foolishness of thinking that God would deliver you from poisons but not from sicknesses. Some poisons (such as anthrax) are actually disease organisms that multiply in your body. Also, some diseases cause your body to poison itself by "reprogramming" it to generate toxins that break down your organs. If some poisons are diseases and some diseases poison you, where will you draw the line? It seems to me that you have to be delivered from both or neither.

Consider also that some diseases can be caused by poison. Prolonged exposure to certain chemicals can cause illness. You don't want to knowingly expose yourself to danger, but if you have been exposed to poisonous chemicals and have gotten sick as a result, you should claim Mark 16:15-18. I'm not saying that you must do so to the exclusion of medical treatment, but you have a right to trust God to heal you!

If poison from a snakebite or something you drink doesn't kill you, it could at least make you sick. Thank God, deliverance from poisoning and deliverance from sickness is part of the same gospel package. You don't have to think about what caused your sickness; you have a right to be healed no matter what caused it – viruses, chemicals, even your own foolishness (Psalm 107:17-20).

If God will not allow your body to be destroyed by a poison, why would He turn around and let it be destroyed by an infection? Infections and poisons do the same thing – they destroy and kill part or all of your body. The fact that God has made protection from poisoning part of the New Covenant is further proof that healing is part of that covenant. You can be healed of anything that is caused by a poison as well as anything caused by viruses, birth defects, or anything else.

To Heal the Brokenhearted

Part of the anointing on Jesus was to heal the brokenhearted. See Luke 4:18-19. I will point out in passing that the word brokenhearted here means bruised or shattered, and it would rightfully apply to physical healing as well as emotional healing. Because Jesus is the same today, it is still part of His ministry to heal the brokenhearted. This is consistent with Psalm 147:3, where this ministry is shown to be part of what God does. God raises up those who are cast down (Psalm 145:14, Psalm 146:8).

We are majoring on physical healing here, but you should know that emotional healing is part of God's plan for you, too. You cannot "confess away" grief, but you can let God minister to you so that it does not overwhelm you. 2 Corinthians 7:10 says, "The sorrow of the world worketh death." You do not have to be crushed by tragedy in your life and have death work in you.

Grieving over the loss of a loved one is not a sin! If that kind of sorrow is sin, Jesus was a sinner. He wept before He raised Lazarus. He got alone after hearing about the execution of John the Baptist. Jesus went through emotional agony in Gethsemane. Having negative emotions is not a sin and does not mean that you are not a "faith person." Jesus was a "faith person" if anyone ever was, and He had to decide to act based on God's Word instead of what His human body wanted. Since He had that struggle, so will you.

There is actually very little you can do about your emotions. Having emotions is part of being human. You can't stop them from happening. What you can do is determine that you will not allow your emotions to dictate what you will do! You can act based on God's Word even when your emotions are running contrary to it and still get results. Having victory does not mean that you always feel victorious. It means that you don't give up even when you feel like quitting, which you will at times. Such feelings are part of life and how you respond to them determines whether you go down in defeat or press on to victory.

God comforts the downcast (2 Corinthians 7:6). He comforts you in all your tribulation (2 Corinthians 1:3-4). The Holy Spirit is called "another Comforter" (John 14:16), showing that this is part of Jesus' ministry to you as well as the Holy Spirit's ministry to you. You should note that the word used actually denotes more than mere comfort, but also advocacy, as a lawyer would do. The believers in Acts walked in the comfort of the Holy Spirit (Acts 9:31), so you can, too.

God will help you through the hard times. Since man is mortal, we will lose loved ones at various times. Expect God to comfort you and heal your broken heart. That is part of His ministry to you. Be open to it.

Because God comforts you in all your tribulation, there is no such thing as a tribulation during which God will not comfort you. No loss of a loved one, betrayal by someone close to you, divorce, financial disaster, or anything else is outside God's ability to provide you with divine consolation. Even situations that at first make you wonder if life is still worth living are included in His promises. His "everlasting arms" are always there for you (Deuteronomy 33:27).

Many physical issues are tied to emotional ones, and physical healing will sometimes not come until emotional healing comes first. It is hard to stay physically healthy when you feel crushed emotionally. Thus, allowing God to comfort you as only He can is important not only for your emotions but for your physical well-being. It's all included in the awesome salvation package the Jesus provided for you.

Anointed to Preach Deliverance

Many times, we think of Jesus being anointed to destroy yokes that bind people, and that is part of the truth. The part we sometimes miss is the fact that He was anointed to preach deliverance, preach the gospel to the poor, preach recovering of sight to the blind and preach the acceptable year of the Lord. In other words, He was not just anointed to give the blind their sight – He was anointed to preach recovery of sight to the blind, which is a completely different matter. He was anointed to preach to men what they could have in God's kingdom so that they could believe it for themselves.

Many times we major on the "power" at work in a healing minister's meetings, but God has also anointed men to preach healing – the universal availability of it. There is an anointing to do this, and every minister should endeavor to flow in the anointing while preaching the Word rather than just preaching out of his head. In Peter's terms, we should preach the gospel with the Holy Spirit sent down from heaven (1 Peter 1:12). We are anointed with the same Holy Spirit who did miracles through Jesus.

As mentioned elsewhere, some people will not get healed because they want the bondages to be broken off of them by the anointing without any effort on their part to receive the message that tells them that healing is theirs to receive. They fail to realize that there is an anointing on God's Word that could get them free if they would hear it. "He sent His Word and healed them" (Psalm 107:17-20).

Let's expect the Holy Spirit's help not only in doing miracles but also in proclaiming the truth boldly so that men will understand it, believe it, act on it, and get healed. If men get healed through special manifestations of the Spirit working through you, they will be healed only when you're around. When they hear and believe the gospel of their deliverance that you preach to them, they will be able to get healed when you're not around. When you preach the Word to them, instead of just giving them a fish, you are teaching them to fish for themselves.

Deliverance Myths

Deliverance is another area like prayer where there is a lot of weird teaching. Satan loves to fill in knowledge gaps with his fake knowledge. Because many churches won't touch this important ministry of Jesus with a ten-foot pole, people are ill-informed about it and feel like they have to turn elsewhere for training. So let's bust some common myths that just make Satan seem like he has power that he doesn't really have.

1. Deliverance Requires Special Training and Only the Trained Should Practice It

Jesus said that certain signs would follow "those who believe," and the first one He mentioned was that they would cast out demons (Mark 16:17). So who should cast out demons? ALL believers! Not just specially-trained ones. Deliverance is not so specialized or dangerous that only a select few should get involved with it! Satan would love for you to believe that it is "over your head" so that you won't help someone who needs to be delivered. This myth is also perpetuated by certain "deliverance trainers" who claim that you need their training in addition to the Bible. That is nonsense when the Bible itself says that it will equip you for every good work (2 Timothy 3:16-17). Training is only valuable inasmuch as it explains truth that is already in Scripture. Avoid anyone who gives the impression that you need some special revelation that only he has!

Despite the different ministries and manifestations given by the Holy Spirit, you will not see any office of "exorcist" in the New Testament. The seven sons of Sceva thought they were exorcists but obviously they weren't very good (Acts 19:13-17)! God may use some people more along these lines because they encounter more demonic issues where He directs them to minister. Some places have a lot more overt demonic activity than others because of what these cultures have been duped into accepting.

2. Deliverance Can Be Too Dangerous because Demons Could "Get You" When They Come Out

Jesus, contrary to this myth, stated clearly that we would tread on snakes and scorpions and over ALL the power of the enemy (this includes demons, which are definitely the main context of this passage!) and nothing shall by any means hurt you! THAT (Luke 10:19) is what should believe, not someone's scary story. I have sensed demons coming out of people, but they never did anything to me. This myth is no better than saying that when you lay hands on the sick, that sickness could land on you, which the same statement by Jesus would negate.

3. You Have to Pray and Fast against Certain Demons before They Will Come Out

Jesus said to CAST out demons, not FAST out demons, and He did not have time to pray and fast about the particular situation in Mark 9:17-29 when He encountered it. Praying and fasting are valuable things to do, but you don't have to do them "at" a particular demon. See the answer to the related question about this.

4. You Have to Get Demons to Name Themselves before You Cast Them Out

I cover elsewhere the fallacy that Jesus asked a demon for its name before He cast it out. He NEVER did that, and He cast out a lot of demons, so you don't have to do it either.

5. You Must Engage in Special Pre-Deliverance Preparation

Where do you see Jesus doing all kinds of spiritual exercises before casting a demon out? Nowhere. He didn't in Mark 9:17-29 when He found out about a certain situation. Satan would love to think that you have to be "at the top of your game" before you can cast out a demon. But the truth is that Satan has been at the bottom of his game ever since Jesus publicly defeated him and all his demons. In Paul's case, the only condition he was in before he cast out the "spirit of Python" from the fortune-telling slave girl was GREAT ANNOYANCE! He did it because he was greatly annoyed! So how much of a spiritual frenzy had he worked up when he cast out that demon? NONE! He was in Christ, so he ALREADY had all the authority that he needed to cast that thing out. YOU have that same authority. So don't let Satan con you into thinking that you aren't currently in a "spiritual enough" mode to cast out a demon – by his false scale, you're NEVER "prayed up" enough, of course. On your worst day, you have more than enough power backing you and the name of Jesus to take care of a demon. If you make prayer and fasting part of your lifestyle (not doing them "at" any particular demon), you should not have trouble with the Flesh Freakout Factor when you cast out a demon.

6. Everyone Has Demons and Needs Regular Deliverance

It is just plain weird to think that everyone has demonic pigs in his parlor that have to be cast out all the time. People who get into that nonsense get very strange, and I would not want to see you get bizarre along with them. Jesus and His followers definitely did not go around casting evil spirits out of everyone, so if you do, you've gone outside the Bible into spooky kooky stuff. This kind of teaching makes a convenient denial that you still have flesh that you have mortify. Blaming a demon is a convenient but false way to shift responsibility for your own shortcomings onto demons. Instead of casting out a spirit of pride, humble yourself in the sight of the Lord.

7. Everyone Who is Sick Has a Demon

Again, Jesus and His followers did not cast out a demon every time they encountered a sick person, and neither should you. People do a lot of damage when they try to cast demons out that aren't there, leaving the recipient of their "ministry" confused. These people cause damage when they assume that everyone with a certain condition must have a demon, too. Jesus took care of some certain conditions where demons were sometimes involved and sometimes not involved.

8. All Sin Involves Demons that Need to Be Cast Out

While demons will tempt you to sin, you do not need deliverance just because you had an impure thought, any more than Jesus needed deliverance from a suicide spirit when Satan told Him to jump to what would have been His death. I've met people with a "devil made me do it" mindset, but they didn't understand that there are such things as works of the flesh that don't directly involve demons! Adultery is a work of flesh, not proof that someone has a "spirit of adultery" that needs to be cast out (as someone who was sinning in that way once tried to convince me).

9. The Only Way to Know that a Demon is Gone Is by an Unusual Physical Manifestation

On the contrary, I have found that most demons have left without any crazy outward shows, though that CAN happen, as we see in Mark 9:17-29. I do often sense or "feel" something, but not always. We walk by faith, not by sight, and sometimes you have to know that the demon is gone because the Bible says that you can cast out demons in the name of Jesus! Sometimes the person you minister to will feel a lot more than you do. Read most of the passages where Jesus cast out demons and you won't see many outward manifestations mentioned.

10. If Someone Was Involved in the Occult, He Needs Special Deliverance Ministry after Being Saved

I just laugh at this one because I used to be involved in the occult before I was saved. I was even trying to organize a “Ouija Board party” at my dorm! Fortunately, I understood that when I received Jesus, I WAS delivered from the power of darkness (Colossians 1:13). I renounced everything I was doing in the occult, knowing that Jesus and the occult did not mix! (After all, I had asked the Ouija board if Jesus was real and it said NO! So I already understood that Jesus and Ouija boards were not on good terms with each other.) I was totally free from that stuff the day I got saved. I never had any issues with the demons I had trafficked with. I was at a conference somewhere as a young believer, and a person who found out about my occult background expressed the need to do special deliverance ministry which he supposedly had some special understanding about. I shouldn't have done it, but I indulged him and let him wave his arms over me, making frantic scissor-like motions to “cut off” the occult powers that had already been cut off when I got saved. It was amusing in a strange way to see how worked up people can get over such thing, but my amusement didn't last too long before I decided I'd had enough of someone trying to do something Jesus had already done for me.

11. When You Cast Out Demons, You Must Bind Demons from Communicating with Each Other

I've heard of an elaborate teaching where you bind the chief demon from talking to slave demons, slave demons from talking to other demons in the room, other demons in the room from talking to the chief demon, and on and on at great length. That's just corny because Jesus and His followers never had to follow any “special revelations” about doing such things. Satan always tries to make deliverance hard when it's actually very easy!

12. It Takes a Long Time to Do Deliverance Properly, So Allow a Whole Evening per Person

How long did it take Jesus? The Bible says that He cast demons out with a word, not with 7,000 words! Paul simply said, “I command you in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her” and that was quite sufficient (Acts 16:16-18)! That didn't take more than a few seconds. Therefore, you should not expect some drawn-out affair that you NEVER see in Scripture.

13. You Must “Plead the Blood” when Casting Out Demons

NO ONE in Scripture said, “I plead the blood!” while casting out demons. If the Bible people didn't have to do it to be effective, you don't have to do it either.

The Healing Anointing

Any believer can lay hands on a sick person in faith and expect him to get well. Any believer can receive healing by faith without anyone else's assistance simply by exercising Mark 11:24 along with Hebrews 10:35-36. However, there are times when healing is ministered through the tangible "healing anointing." This is not some abstract concept for theological eggheads to debate in ivy-covered halls. The healing anointing is just as much a real force as gravity or electricity. It can be felt, it affects those it touches, and it can flow from one person to another.

Let's look at some places in the Bible where the healing anointing is discussed:

Acts 10:38: God anointed Jesus with the Holy Spirit and with power. He ministered to the sick with this power.

Mark 5:25-34: A sick woman touched Jesus' clothes and power flowed out of Jesus into her and healed her. Jesus didn't even know that the woman was there. This woman simply believed that Jesus was anointed, touched Him, and received from the anointing that was on Him. Jesus said that her faith had made her whole. This is an important lesson for those attending healing crusades. Your faith will draw the anointing out of the minister and into your body. Of course, your faith is not in the man himself, but in the Holy Spirit who has anointed him for his ministry.

Matthew 14:35-36: People thronged Jesus just to touch His clothes, and all who touched his clothes were healed. The anointing was on Jesus and when people touched Him, it flowed into them and healed them.

Mark 3:10-12: Again, many crowded in on Jesus to touch Him. Jesus was not going around looking for sick people; they were coming to Him, believing that He was anointed, and the anointing flowed into them and healed them when they touched Him.

Mark 6:54-56: They laid the sick in the streets so that they could touch Jesus, and everyone who touched Him got healed. Notice that Jesus didn't touch them; they touched Him. They came to Him in faith and received.

Luke 6:17-19: Everyone in the crowd tried to touch Jesus because power went out of Him and healed them all.

Acts 5:12-16: People from all over brought the sick into the streets so that they could get healed if even Peter's shadow passed over them. Peter was anointed and the people believed it, and they received healing through his ministry.

Acts 19:11-12: Cloth items that had been in physical contact with Paul were taken to the sick and demonized, and they were healed and delivered. This shows that the anointing is a real force that can be stored and transferred.

Clearly, God anoints some ministers to bring healing to the sick. All believers have an anointing to lay hands on the sick, but God anoints certain ministers with a special grace for this. This is referred to in 1 Corinthians 12:28-30.

People will receive at healing services if they (1) believe that God wants to heal them, and (2) believe that the minister is anointed. This second condition may shock you or seem fleshly, but it is the truth. The people at Nazareth got no miracles because they did not believe that Jesus was anointed. They were offended at Him. Jesus was just as anointed to preach there as He was everywhere else, but the people would not believe that He was anointed by God, and very little happened. You need to respect God and God's servant at such meetings. It is important to maintain a reverent attitude. Remember Nazareth, where they didn't do that. If you want to sit in your chair and criticize everything the minister does and then get up for healing, you may be disappointed when the anointing does not flow into you!

With so many cases in Scripture where people were healed because they came and touched Jesus' clothes, it is unreasonable to expect that if the minister just prays long and hard enough, he'll be really anointed, even if you don't expect anything. Did Jesus pray a lot? Yes. But that couldn't break through the ice of unbelief at Nazareth where the people were not in the mood to receive. Yes, the minister should be a person of prayer, but you should be, too!

The healing anointing is a real force, not a religious fabrication. It is possible for people to fall over or otherwise react when they come in contact with it. Some people get scared and you have to reassure them that it's God's power and that it won't hurt them. Many people have never sensed the anointing and they're unfamiliar with it! Many times, it feels like electricity or heat. Do not "freak out" if you are prayed over and you feel something like this.

One more thing: Get up and receive when the altar call is given and the anointing is flowing. Do not go up to the minister after the service to request private prayer for your healing. The tangible healing anointing may not be flowing at that point, and you will miss out. You need to follow the Holy Spirit. If you need healing, go up when the preacher gives the altar call for healing! Even Peter and Paul did not always minister with a tangible healing anointing. For example, the man at Lystra was healed by his own faith after hearing the gospel (Acts 14:7-10). Do not phone the minister or pound on his door in the middle of the night! That is not being importune like the man Jesus talked about who wanted bread at midnight; it is just plain rude, and it hinders the minister from getting the sleep that he needs.

It is never any fun when you get a word of knowledge by the Holy Spirit about a certain condition that God wants to heal on the spot, only to have no one respond, which certainly makes things awkward, and gets people (possibly including you) wondering if you just missed God. Then after the service is over, a person comes and says, “You know, that was me, but I just didn’t want to get up in front of everyone and be a spectacle.” You can still pray in faith for such a person, but I always explain that there was a special manifestation earlier whereby they could have been healed, but that window of opportunity is now closed. People need to be taught to respond when the Holy Spirit is moving. If they wait until later, it will be harder to get healed because it will have to be a strict faith transaction on their part, when they could have gotten a “freebie” from the Lord if they had been obedient to the Holy Spirit earlier.

Preachers sometimes overdo humility by saying over and over that they can’t heal anyone. While we recognize that the power comes from God, and the preachers are trying to give Jesus His rightful credit, if you keep telling people you can’t heal anyone, what will they expect when they come up? The Bible says repeatedly that believers healed people. If this shocks you, read the discussion, YOU Can Do Miracles. We aren’t forgetting that without Christ, we can do nothing. But we’re not without Christ, and He gave us delegated authority to heal the sick. That is what we should be preaching. Rather than saying, “I can’t do anything,” we should be saying, “I have authority from the Lord Jesus to lay hands on you for your recovery.” Our attitude should be the same as Peter’s in the case of the healing of the crippled beggar in Acts 3:1-16: “Such as I have give I thee.” Peter did not ask God to heal the crippled man; He just gave him what he had, and he wasn’t shy about saying what he had – the right to invoke the name of Jesus in faith.

The Anointing in the New Testament

The Anointing in the New Testament

I could probably make good money if I wrote and sold books with names like, “The Secret to Getting a Stronger Anointing,” “Receive Your Double-Portion Anointing Now,” “How to Increase the Anointing in Your Life” and so on. There are so many Christians running around from meeting to meeting trying to “get a stronger anointing” that there would be a good market for such books. However, I will give you a better deal. You can read the truth about the anointing here for free, and you won’t even have to go to a meeting and get anyone to lay hands on you!

There are actually only two New Testament Scriptures that deal with the anointing as a noun, and here they are – the same Greek word chrisma is translated both unction and anointing:

1 John 2:20:

But ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things.

1 John 2:27:

But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him.

The word chrisma is not used anywhere else in the Bible. In the only 2 verses where it appears, the verses state plainly that you already HAVE it!

The same people desperately seeking the anointing are probably desperately seeking power as well, but when you’re baptized with the Holy Spirit, you already HAVE power (Acts 1:8). You are not going to get more power. Where would you get it? What is more powerful than the third member of the Trinity? You need to USE the power that you ALREADY HAVE instead of clamoring for more of it. You don’t need “more power” or for the anointing to “fall on you.” You already HAVE the anointing! The SINGLE portion you have is all you’ll ever need; you don’t need a DOUBLE portion.

God anointed Jesus with the Holy Spirit and power ONCE (Acts 10:38) – He never had to do it again. Likewise, when you are filled with the Holy Spirit, you HAVE power (Acts 1:8) – you never need to be re-baptized with the Holy Spirit to have power from that moment forward.

We tend to think that flowing in a particular gift of the Spirit is the same thing as flowing in the anointing, but it isn’t. A tangible power may well flow through you at certain moments when God uses you in the gifts of the Spirit, but you ALWAYS have the anointing. It does not come and go. It does not “leak out.” Jesus did not have to keep going back to the River Jordan for refills after the Holy Spirit came upon Him once.

Sadly, many Christians shrink back at the idea of laying hands on the sick because they don't think that they are anointed to do it. You HAVE the anointing and you CAN lay hands on the sick NOW without waiting for a special manifestation! You may or may not have a special "power gift" manifestation of the Spirit operate, but you can always let the anointing flow through you. That is what Jesus referred to in John 7:37-39. That is for "he who believes" in Jesus – which is ALL believers. If having the anointing flow through you required a special manifestation of the Holy Spirit, Jesus' words would be wrong because NOT all believers would have rivers of living water flow through them. Those rivers flow through YOU as a Spirit-baptized believer, so you HAVE the anointing.

Is Jesus anointed? Yes! The very name Christ means "anointed!" You are now part of His Body, the fullness of Him who fills all in all (Ephesians 1:23). If WE are not anointed, we would be the partiality of Him, not the fullness of Him. We now share His anointing. People could come up to us and touch us in faith if they knew that His anointing is on us and they would receive healing through Christ's anointing in us. In fact, that SHOULD happen. God's desire is for us to be conformed to the image of Christ (Romans 8:29), who had people touch Him to receive from the anointing that was on Him.

The fact that Jesus had ALL sick people come to Him and touch Him and be healed in SOME places but not others could lead you to the incorrect conclusion that the anointing would increase and decrease on Jesus at different times. The FLOW of that anointing did range from powerful to almost nonexistent based on the PEOPLE. However, He always was The Anointed One even when people were not receiving from that anointing. Jesus was in a crowd with people brushing against Him, but one woman touched Him in faith and received healing (Mark 5:25-34). He wasn't doing a service or preaching at the time; He was just walking! He was still just as much The Anointed One when He was walking around as He was in places where multitudes touched Him and received healing. The difference was the people.

What about Paul and the cloth items that were brought to him (Acts 19:11-12)? This was not a normal thing that anyone could just go out and do – it says that God did special miracles through Paul. Hence, this was a special manifestation of gifts of healings and working of miracles and not something that just "came with the package" because Paul was born again. People could call that a "special anointing," but technically it was a special way in which God used Paul in Ephesus.

I am not denying that sometimes you sense the anointing more than at other times. I love being in meetings where there is a tangible manifestation of God's presence. However, God is ALWAYS with you whether you feel like He is or not (Hebrews 13:5). He doesn't physically manifest His presence everywhere, but He is everywhere. You will sense the anointing in you when people put a demand on it.

There is another reason why you might FEEL like the anointing ebbs and flows in your life. There are times in all our lives when we yield to the flesh. When you yield to the flesh, you aren't flowing in the anointing. It's hard to flow in the anointing if you're still upset about something a relative said or if you're still mad at that driver who made you spill your drink all over your car when you had to jam on your brakes to avoid hitting him as he darted in front of you without looking. There are times when you will be in a position to have the anointing flow through you better than at other times, but that still does not take away from the fact that you HAVE the anointing.

The Healing Anointing

The Word AND the Anointing!

If we want to see people healed, we need the Word AND the anointing to go forth when we minister. One without the other will produce only partial results. We don't want to just preach the Word; we want to do so in the power of the Holy Spirit (1 Peter 1:12).

You can get anything by the Word that you can get through the anointing, but some people are not in a position to receive healing for a serious condition through the Word. They could get to that point in the future if they continue in the Word, but they have not yet developed their faith and may not have the time left that they need to do so. They will either be healed through the anointing or not at all. No one has the right to demand healing through a special manifestation of the Spirit, but God is gracious and does heal people that way, though not every time.

If we as ministers don't spend time in prayer before we speak, we will likely miss out on what the Spirit want to do in our services. It is a mistake to plan out the service and then "lean unto your own understanding" by refusing to ever deviate from your predetermined plan. What if God's power suddenly manifests when you are still singing the first song? I've had this happen. I did not blindly "plow through" the song list anyway when it was obvious that God was changing the order of the service. What will you do if someone interrupts your message crying out to be saved or delivered from a demon? I've had this happen! I made sure they got saved or delivered. I didn't tell them to be quiet and quit disrupting my carefully prepared message. Jesus dealt with interruptions, too, and He also made sure the person was delivered rather than plowing ahead. (See Mark 1:23-26 for an example.) God doesn't always show you in advance what will happen in the service, and you must be willing to "go with the flow" as the Holy Spirit leads. Like Paul, you should pray in the Spirit and with your understanding (1 Corinthians 14:15). By praying in the Spirit, you can pray out mysteries about the service and literally be in a position where you have already prayed about a "surprise" that comes up because God gave you the utterance in advance to pray about it.

Paul prayed in the Holy Spirit a lot (1 Corinthians 14:18), and I would recommend that you do so as well. If you don't pray in the Holy Spirit at all, you are praying with one hand tied behind your back! Praying in the Holy Spirit gives God the legal right to do things that are beyond your understanding – because you asked Him to do it – even though your mind was completely clueless about what you were asking! If all you do is pray with your understanding, you limit God to what you can come up with. I realize that you COULD pray, "Holy Spirit, do whatever You want to do" and He could honor that, but there is something about praying in other tongues that will get you ready for a service with a Holy Spirit flow like nothing else will.

I've learned what works for me. If I'm going to be mostly teaching, I spend a lot of time studying the Word. If I know it will be a "find out what happens when you get there" service where I'll mostly be flowing spontaneously in the Holy Spirit, I spend more time praying in tongues, because there isn't much I can pray with my understanding to really prepare for such a service. Sometimes I'll THINK I'm going to teach but end up flowing in the gifts, while at other times I'll THINK it will be a flow-in-the-gifts service but I end up teaching, but I usually have a pretty good sense in advance which way things will go. If I pray to find out what message the Lord wants me to preach and keep "hitting a brick wall," I start praying in tongues instead. That's what I do NOW – what I USED to do is think that I was somehow deficient in prayer for not coming up with a decent message, so I'd stay up way too late the night before desperately praying for a message – and still not have any better idea what I was going to preach after all that prayer than before it! As you grow in ministry, you learn how the Holy Spirit uses you and you get more comfortable with it.

On the other hand, you cannot base your ministry on manifestations of the Spirit, as some healing ministers have done to their detriment. The people may or may not get healed as the Spirit manifests Himself. What will you do as a healing minister if there is no special manifestation of the Spirit in a service? You'd better have developed your ability to preach the Word! Even if people get healed by a special manifestation, they will most likely lose their healing if they do not hear the Word concerning their salvation from sickness. The Word, not the anointing, is the foundation for healing ministry. You must always put the Word first. This will give God something to confirm and give people something solid to stand on for their healing, not only now but in the future when they need to be healed and you aren't there to minister to them with a special anointing.

In your own language, you can pray for boldness to speak the Word about our redemption from sickness despite widespread opposition to this teaching. You can pray that God will open the eyes of people's understanding so that they will be enlightened and know their inheritance in Christ, which includes healing. You can expect that as you preach the Word boldly, God will stretch forth His hand and do signs, wonders and miracles by the name of His holy child Jesus. (Of course, YOU must use this name; He isn't going to come down from heaven and use the name of Jesus for you.) You may find, as I have, that when you start praying in the Holy Spirit (tongues), the Holy Spirit will start showing you things to come, needs that will be represented in the service, specific words that need to be given, and so on.

Our generation needs to see the goodness of God manifested, and He will use His Body to display that goodness! I want YOU to be one of the people whom He uses that way!

What Mark 11:22 Really Means

Does Mark 11:22 tells us to have faith in God or to have God's faith (the faith of God, or the "God-kind of faith")? Be prepared for some interesting twists and turns in the road as we go on a quest to see what Mark 11:22 means and how it applies to us today. I think that both traditional people and "word of faith" people might find that interpreting Mark 11:22 is a lot harder than it appears as first. The answers will matter a lot. Based on what we find, we could either conclude that faith is a spiritual force that you can use without God's direct involvement because you're using His faith, or that any use of "faith" has to depend on God, toward whom your faith is directed. We'll discuss that more at the end. I could just state my conclusion, but I'd rather show you an example of the process you can go through to solve such questions yourself if you want to take the time.

There are actually four possibilities that could be declared the winner. (1) Have faith IN God (2) Have faith OF God (3) A third meaning that doesn't match either of those two (4) The text is so difficult that no firm determination is possible.

So let's start on our "road trip" to find out what Jesus was exhorting us to do.

What Does Mark 11:22 Say in Different Translations?

The King James Version has the familiar, "And Jesus answering saith unto them, Have faith in God." Almost all modern translations agree. (We'll leave aside the paraphrases, as they won't help us get to the literal meaning of the Greek. They leave us with someone else's interpretation of original words that are never known to the reader. We would not tell someone, "Thus-and-such is the definitive meaning because the Message Bible reads that way and the Message Bible is the Word of God.") Notably, Young's Literal Translation is an exception that says, "And Jesus answering saith to them, Have faith of God."

So by taking some time to read a number of different translations (which is easy to do online), we should be able to reach a conclusion. The score is overwhelmingly in favor of "Have faith in God" to the point that the exception (Young's Literal Translation) proves the rule. There seems to be little doubt that "Have faith in God" is the intended meaning of Jesus' words. Do we really need to go any farther?

Before declaring "Have faith in God" the winner right now, we should at least try to investigate the original Greek, given that it is the literal Greek translation that says "Have faith of God." How will we know for SURE that all these translations are proper based on the original Greek unless we check it out for ourselves? It's never convincing to take anyone else's word for anything. But given the preponderance of "Have faith in God" in almost all translations, it would take some serious convincing that that Greek could say otherwise.

What Does Mark 11:22 Say in the Greek?

Young's purpose was to show exactly what the literal Greek said without adding any spin to it. Was he onto something that almost all other translators missed, or is there some reason that the other translators were sure that Jesus meant "to have faith IN God" if the literal words were "have faith OF God?" Greek nuances can reveal things that the English reader might not notice. Maybe even English translators might not notice some things, given how they botched the Hebrew in Isaiah 53:4 that should say that Jesus bore our sicknesses and carried our pains.

So let's consider the actual Greek for the words "have faith in God" (or "have faith of God.")

If you just use a brute-force Concordance-based approach, you will find that the words cited are forms of words that would say "have faith God" (echo pistis theos) if you just mashed them together. This does not seem to prove either the "in" side or the "of" side – does it disprove BOTH sides? There is no Greek word for "in" but neither is there a separate Greek word for "of." We've gotten our first indication that this ride might get a little bumpier than we originally thought.

The problem is that using a concordance is not a strong enough method to resolve this kind of issue because it does not show you the precise letters used in each word. For example, the past, present and future tenses of a certain word will all show as the same Greek word when you use a concordance. (To make matters even more interesting, Greek has an Aorist tense with no English equivalent – it indicates only the occurrence of something without regard to a past, present or future tense!) One Greek word could be translated as more than one English word. Greek and English words don't map one-for-one and the order isn't always the same either. We'll have to look to the actual Greek text and the precise forms of the words used if we want more insight, and that will take some more effort.

So a trip to a Greek interlinear Bible or a copy of the original Greek text will be the next step to shed some light on this. We find that the phrase is echete pistin theou when we get precise about the Greek words. The first, echete is the present active imperative of echo, meaning "have" as a command – no big surprise there. The second, pistin, is a derivative of pistis (faith) and the third, theou is the genitive (possessive) form of theos (God). So theou means "of God," not "in God!"

Whoa. This is a bit of a shocker to anyone who isn't reading Young's Literal Translation, which I doubt many people use for bedtime reading due to its hyper-literal wording. The Greek at least appears to mean "Have faith of God" or "Have God's faith." We can at least rule out two sometimes-suggested translations, "Have the faith of God" or "Have the God-kind of faith" because the word "the" is not found in the Greek, and the word "kind" is not there either. If Jesus had said, "Have the faith of God," the Greek would have read echete pistin tou theou instead. Am I sure? Can I test my speculation on this? Yes! The King James translators actually DID translate pistin tou theou into "the faith of God" in Romans 3:3 (tou is a Greek "definite article" that we would translate as the).

However, we have at least determined two things. The word in is not found in the original Greek, and the word used for God (theou) refers to God possessing what came immediately before it, in this case, faith. The word of would be implied. So it now appears that “have faith of God” would be preferred to “have faith in God.”

We have several different ways to test our hypothesis. The first is to check the Greek for ourselves elsewhere where theou, the genitive form of “God” appears with other words and see what we find. Are other words before theou also considered “of God” or “God’s?” The second is to look at passages with a phrase translated “in God” to see whether these match the one in Mark 11:22 or contain different wording. The third is a quick sanity check with an interlinear Bible to see if its author agrees with the conclusion “have faith of God” and the fourth is another quick sanity check where we compare our findings to what other scholars and commentators have found, lest we have been found to have missed something obvious. Once we have done these, we can determine what further steps might be necessary.

How Other Passages Containing the Word Theou Are Translated

Theou appears in so many places that it would be exhausting to list them all. But at least let’s just pick some sections at random and see how the King James translated passages with a word followed by theou or tou theou. We’ll try to pick enough to see if there is a pattern and to see if there are any exceptions to the rule. (Some verses have more than one instance of theou; they are not typos below.)

Okay, that's enough...we could go on and on with this. We have seen two things here:

1. In our sample, Theou always refers to God's or of God (which mean the same thing).
2. There are no exceptions in our sample where in God could be considered the correct translation.

So far it looks like we have a conclusive case that "have faith of God" ("have God's faith") has to be the literal Greek translation, despite what almost all the English translations say. So we've done a complete "180" from our original leaning.

But what if the phrase could have been translated in God somewhere else and we just missed it? Well, let's test that. Does theou appear in any "in God" verses?

Other Places Where "in God" Appears

Here are some other places where "in God" is the English translation and the Greek words that were behind that translation:

| | |
|-------------------|----------------------|
| Matthew 27:43 | epi tou theon |
| Luke 1:47 | epi theo |
| John 3:21 | en theo |
| John 14:1 | eis theon |
| Acts 16:34 | theo |
| 2 Corinthians 1:9 | epi theo |
| 1 Timothy 5:15 | epi theon |
| Titus 3:8 | theo |
| 1 Peter 1:21 | eis theon |
| 1 Peter 1:21 | eis theon |
| 1 Peter 3:5 | epi theon |

Not once does the word theou appear when the English translation is "in God" – outside of the subject verse, Mark 11:22.

This seems to be convincing further proof that "faith of God" or "God's faith" is the preferred translation, not "faith in God."

Do Greek Interlinear Authors Agree?

It depends. A quick check shows that a certain Greek interlinear Bible quotes "Be ye having belief OF-God" in Mark 11:22. However, another Greek interlinear Bible just says "Have faith in God" because it is simply superimposing the Greek and English words without trying to get into the particular nuances of each concordance word. It is interesting that "OF-God" was at least noted in the first one. So it looks like we are still on track to declaring "Have faith of God" the clear winner.

Do Other Scholars and Commentators Agree?

Other commentaries that were written long before people were preaching “word of faith” doctrine are in general agreement that the Greek is literally “Have faith of God” or “Have God’s faith.” In light of the study on the Greek words above, it would be easy to see why that would be their conclusion. So if we’ve even got the traditional denominational scholars on our side, what could possibly stop us now from declaring “Have faith of God” to be the plain winner?

The nagging thought is that maybe all the different translators knew that the literal rendering was “Have faith of God” but for some reason unknown to us, they all agreed that “Have faith in God” was the correct English rendering of that thought, though so far it seems hard to see how they could conclude that.

Maybe it’s a case (and it wouldn’t be the only one) that the translators knew what it really said but thought, “It can’t really mean that!” so they put their own spin on it. It might be like Phebe, the deacon in Romans 16:1 where the translators couldn’t handle a woman being a deacon even though the word diakonos used of male deacons was used of her, so they translated diakonos as the English word servant.

We find in our perusing that one particular author that many others look to, the renowned Greek scholar A. T. Robertson, did not agree with the “Have faith of God” translation, even though he admits himself that the Greek is genitive (possessive) – which would lead one to believe that “Have faith of God” is literally correct.

How could he deny what seems so clear above? His take was that Mark 11:22 is an “objective possessive” where the usual possessive meaning is different. As an objective possessive, the noun is actually the OBJECT of the statement, which would mean that we should have faith in God, faith toward God, etc., as opposed to having faith belonging to God. So our first question is, “Did Robertson discover some unique order of Greek letters that identifies an “objective possessive” subform of the “possessive” form and we somehow missed it in our research above? Or did he just do what so many commentators have done with Paul’s thorn – start with their conclusion and work backward?”

Is There Really an Objective Possessive?

So we check the actual Greek letters in a Greek text and an interlinear Bible. No, there is no difference! The word theou is the word theou and there is no special “objective possessive” form as far as the Greek lettering goes. Marijuana was not legal in the day of Robertson, so we can’t assume that he was smoking weed when he came to his conclusion. So how else can we explain his “objective possessive” claim? Maybe we should at least do more study of the places in Scripture where “of God” appears and see if there is anything that could remotely hint at Robertson’s “objective possessive” argument. Given his reputation for thorough Greek scholarship, he might have checked more cases than the collection of verses above that we looked up. We owe it to ourselves to check – was he onto something we missed or was his denominational background coloring his conclusion, as so often happens with popular seminary reference books? We’ll broaden our search and find out once and for all whether Robertson saw something we missed.

We start by thinking: What could be an “of God” case where such an argument could be made? Anything physical could probably be ruled out, but what about something else intangible? What about love? We find the same genitive construction in Romans 8:35, where nothing shall separate us from the “love of Christ.” That would mean Christ’s love, so we’re still OK. Ephesians 3:19 is a prayer that we would know the “love of Christ.” That genitive construction also means Christ’s love, and we’re still OK.

Next, the phrase “fear of God” comes to mind. So we search for verses that contain the phrase “fear of God” and come across Romans 3:18, 2 Corinthians 7:1 and Ephesians 5:21. A quick concordance check shows the general words phobos theos for fear of God instead of pistis theos for faith of God, which makes it seem that we have found a fly in the ointment, as the usages seem to match. So we drill down to the actual Greek text and now we find that the actual word forms in those verses are ALSO exactly the same as the word forms in Mark 11:22. How about “fear of the Lord” in Acts 9:31? Same thing.

Uh-oh. Now we have a problem. We were on the verge of declaring “Have faith of God” the runaway winner, but it actually appears that we have found a Robertson-claimed “objective genitive” doing our own research. We were about to write a nice paragraph about how “Have faith of God” means that you should have God’s faith – the kind of faith that He uses while running the universe. But now it seems that to be consistent, we would have to add that we should have the “fear of God,” which means that we should have “God’s fear” – the kind of fear that He uses while running the universe. Yes, have the God-kind of fear! That might not go over very well, for good reason.

Maybe that’s a special outlying case. Let’s try “knowledge of God” and see what happens. We look up Colossians 1:10, 2 Peter 1:2 and 2 Corinthians 10:5 and see that the same genitive verb form in Mark 11:22 is used. But it seems a bit of a stretch to say that we should increase in God’s knowledge. It would seem that this “genitive” really means knowledge about God. This whole genitive thing is getting more complicated than we wanted, as we now have two contrary cases to “Have faith OF God” meaning to literally have God’s faith.

We could look for a long time for all the other things that could possibly be “of God,” but so that we can finish this in some reasonable amount of time, maybe we can take a shortcut and perhaps show that fear was a special case that doesn’t apply when faith is involved. (By the way, it’s the same Greek word for fear, phobos, from which we get the English word phobia, which would be used for other types of fear. While “reverential respect” can be implied, it’s a much deeper respect than people realize given the word that is used. I am NOT saying, though, that a believer should run around thinking, “Oh, no, it’s GOD! I’m AFRAID! Freddie, Jason and Chucky are probably right behind Him!”)

So let’s simplify things by restricting our search to cases where faith is involved. That would make sense because Mark 11:22 talks about faith. Let’s find other genitive constructs involving the word faith and see if we can draw the same “faith of God” conclusion we thought we had settled on in Mark 11:22.

Our first stop will be James 2:1, which tells not to have the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons. It seems dubious that “Christ’s faith” could possibly have “respect of persons” as He showed no personal favoritism when He walked the earth. So this would lean toward talking about our faith IN our Lord Jesus Christ.

Next we have Galatians 2:16, which we should look at in its entire context. “Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.” Are we justified by Jesus’ faith? No, that doesn’t seem reasonable, because everyone would be saved if it only depended upon His faith. You’re saved by grace through faith (Ephesians 2:8), but it’s your faith that receives what God’s grace has provided. The next phrase, “even as we have believed in Christ” ties back to the phrase in question. So here we have a very strong case that “faith of Jesus Christ” does refer to “faith IN Jesus Christ.” This is starting to swing the pendulum back toward a “Have faith in God” interpretation without the use of cannabis products. We’d better keep going.

Revelation 14:12 is next, where we read, “Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus.” Keeping Jesus’ faith doesn’t seem like a good explanation; it would seem once again that this refers to faith IN Jesus. Let’s keep digging.

Romans 3:22 talks about the righteousness of God that is by faith of Jesus Christ. We could think of an Old Testament Scripture (not in Greek) that the just shall live by his faith (Habakkuk 2:4). So it would seem that it would be YOUR faith in Christ that would be required to receive the righteousness of God, not Jesus’ faith. And again, if it were all up to Jesus’ faith, everyone would be righteous. So we have to consider “faith in Jesus Christ” the preferred meaning in this verse as well.

Next, Ephesians 3:12 tells us that we have boldness and access with confidence by the faith of Him (Jesus). Once again, it seems that “faith of” means “faith in” because it isn’t Jesus’ faith that gives you that access – it’s yours. (I’m not negating that Jesus is the Author and the Finisher of your faith; I’m just stressing that it is indeed your faith, not His faith, that gets the job done.)

What about Galatians 3:22, where the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe? It looks like faith IN Jesus Christ would be the preferred meaning, though someone could dispute that.

Galatians 2:20 is a little less clear, where Paul lives by “the faith of the Son of God.” Habakkuk 2:4 might again tip us toward faith IN the Son of God. Also, the word the in “the faith” doesn’t appear in the Greek, which is actually somewhat convoluted in this verse, so living “by faith of the Son of God” appears to be the intention. I suppose that you could still go either way on this verse without the word the; I wouldn’t stake my life on “by faith of the Son of God” having to mean “by faith in the Son of God.” We’ll actually “park” Galatians 2:20 until the separate discussion What Galatians 2:20 Really Means.

Romans 3:3 (where Paul asks if their unbelief will make the faith of God without effect) might be construed either way, but you’d have to strain a bit to emphasize that it would be the faith of God in YOU that could be without effect if you believe that this means God’s faith, as it would be impossible for God’s own faith to be without effect – if you can even prove that God uses faith, which I believe you’d be hard-pressed to do. (You can read my whole separate article on that issue!)

Are there any other Scriptures that might add to this discussion? Well, Acts 20:21 talks of “faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.” This is clearly faith with the Lord Jesus Christ as its object, not the faith OF the Lord Jesus Christ. Acts 26:18 has Jesus Himself referring to “them which are sanctified by faith that is in me.” So making Jesus or God the OBJECT of faith certainly can be seen in the New Testament.

Now what do make of this mess? It appears now that the only proper conclusion is that when it comes to FAITH, “Have faith in God” is the proper translation, and Robertson and all the translators were right after all. Maybe they did the same kind of studies, which would have taken a LOT longer in a pre-Internet era. There actually IS an objective possessive, and that fact has enabled us to possess an objective view of Mark 11:22.

Stand-Alone Faith or Faith in God/Jesus?

But before we declare “Have faith in God” the winner after all, let’s look at what else we can find about faith in Scripture and its relationship to God and Jesus. After all, we thought we were right a couple times before and then had to switch completely.

In the places where Jesus told people, “According to YOUR FAITH Be It Done unto You” was He talking about their great faith level in general or their faith in Him as the Anointed One?

For example, blind men came to Him asking for their sight and He asked them if they believed that He was able to do it. They said “Yes,” and they got their sight. Jesus said, “According to your faith be it unto you” (Matthew 9:29). Their faith was clearly in Jesus and in His ability to perform the miracle. It was not a general “faith.”

We can study the other stories, as they are all included in the link above. We have to reach the conclusion that their faith was in Jesus' ability to perform the miracle, it was not just "faith" in a general sense, as there is no record that they exercised faith for anything else.

Their faith was in Jesus.

This brings us to another area of research – the nature of faith itself. Is it a force like electricity or gravity, or must it always be tied in with Jesus' ability, promises or statements or God's ability, promises or statements? The implications are huge. Denominational authors, especially ones with "heresy hunter" websites, will accuse you of being occultic and UNSAVED if you suggest that faith is a force. (I have a separate article just about that topic, too.) They are always quick to claim that the Greek word for faith (pistis) refers to a trust or confidence in the Lord and not to something that you can do on your own.

If we determine that faith must always have God or Jesus as its object, we can crown "Have faith in God" the winner. Otherwise we might have to rethink our position yet again!

What is Faith?

Because the word faith only occurs 245 times in the New Testament, we'll need to look at all of the cases so that we don't fall into the same trap we did above where we piled up the references only to find out that we had missed something important with references we missed. For the sake of space (and the reader's sanity), we'll try to categorize the results of this new search.

- 6 cases where Jesus referred to no faith or little faith when the case involved trusting Him and His words or God and His words. (Matthew 6:30, Matthew 8:26, Matthew 14:31, Mark 4:40, Luke 8:25, Luke 12:28)
- 1 case where Jesus referred to no faith or little faith where the matter was not completely clear from the context (Matthew 16:8)
- 14 cases where Jesus commended someone for faith to receive a miracle from Him or where faith was declared to be related to that miracle (Matthew 8:10, Matthew 9:2, Matthew 9:22, Matthew 9:29, Matthew 15:28, Mark 2:5, Mark 5:34, Mark 10:52, Luke 5:20, Luke 7:9, Luke 7:50, Luke 8:48, Luke 17:19, Luke 18:42)
- 32 cases where faith is mentioned in connection with God, God's power, Jesus, Jesus' name or Jesus' blood (Acts 3:16 [2 cases], Acts 20:21, Acts 24:24, Acts 26:18, Romans 3:3, Romans 3:22, Romans 3:25, 1 Corinthians 2:5, Galatians 2:16 [2 cases], Galatians 2:20, Galatians 3:22, Galatians 3:26, Ephesians 1:15, Ephesians 3:12, Philippians 3:9, Colossians 1:4, Colossians 2:5, Colossians 2:12, 1 Thessalonians 1:8, 1 Timothy 1:14, 1 Timothy 3:13, 2 Timothy 1:13, 2 Timothy 3:15, Hebrews 6:1, Hebrews 12:2, James 2:1, James 5:15, 1 Peter 1:21, Revelation 2:13, Revelation 14:12)

- 14 cases where faith is connected with something that God said (Romans 4:9, Romans 4:11, Romans 4:12, Romans 4:13, Romans 4:16, Romans 4:19, Romans 4:20, Hebrews 11:8, Hebrews 11:9, Hebrews 11:11, Hebrews 11:17, Hebrews 11:28, Hebrews 11:29, Hebrews 11:30)
- 1 case where faith is connected with the gospel (Acts 14:9)
- 1 case where Jesus spoke of faith to change physical reality and mentioned a matter involving trust of Him/His words or God/God's words (Matthew 17:20)
- 3 cases where Jesus spoke of faith to change physical reality and did NOT mention His or God's involvement explicitly (Matthew 21:21, Luke 17:6, 1 Corinthians 13:2)
- 1 case where the verse is the one in question, so it will have to sit out for now (Mark 11:22)
- 18 cases of other benefits obtained by faith without specifying God or Jesus (Acts 15:9, Romans 5:1, Romans 5:2, Romans 9:30, Romans 9:32, Romans 10:6, Galatians 3:2, Galatians 3:5, Galatians 3:14, Galatians 3:24, Galatians 5:5, Ephesians 2:8, Philippians 3:9, Hebrews 6:12, Hebrews 11:7, James 2:24, 1 Peter 1:9, 1 John 5:4)
- 123 cases where faith is spoken of in a general sense (Matthew 23:23, Luke 17:5, Luke 18:8, Luke 22:32, Acts 6:5, Acts 6:8, Acts 11:24, Acts 14:27, Romans 1:8, Romans 1:12, Romans 1:17 [3 cases], Romans 3:27, Romans 3:28, Romans 3:30 [2 times], Romans 3:31, Romans 4:5, Romans 4:14, Romans 4:16, Romans 10:8, Romans 11:20, Romans 12:3, Romans 12:6, Romans 14:22, Romans 14:23 [2 cases], Romans 16:26, 1 Corinthians 13:13, 1 Corinthians 15:14, 1 Corinthians 15:17, 2 Corinthians 1:24 [2 times], 2 Corinthians 4:13, 2 Corinthians 5:7, 2 Corinthians 8:7, 2 Corinthians 10:15, Galatians 3:7, Galatians 3:8, Galatians 3:9, Galatians 3:11, Galatians 3:12, Galatians 3:23 [2 cases], Galatians 3:25, Galatians 5:6, Galatians 6:10, Ephesians 3:17, Ephesians 6:16, Ephesians 6:23, Philippians 1:25, Philippians 2:17, 1 Thessalonians 1:3, 1 Thessalonians 3:2, 1 Thessalonians 3:5, 1 Thessalonians 3:6, 1 Thessalonians 3:7, 1 Thessalonians 3:10, 1 Thessalonians 5:8, 2 Thessalonians 1:3, 2 Thessalonians 1:4, 2 Thessalonians 1:11, 2 Thessalonians 3:2, 1 Timothy 1:4, 1 Timothy 1:5, 1 Timothy 1:19 [2 cases], 1 Timothy 2:7, 1 Timothy 2:15, 1 Timothy 4:6, 1 Timothy 4:12, 1 Timothy 5:12, 1 Timothy 6:11, 1 Timothy 6:12, 2 Timothy 1:5, 2 Timothy 2:18, 2 Timothy 2:22, 2 Timothy 3:10, Titus 1:1, Titus 2:2, Philemon 1:5, Philemon 1:6, Hebrews 4:2, Hebrews 10:22, Hebrews 10:23, Hebrews 10:38, Hebrews 11:1, Hebrews 11:3, Hebrews 11:4, Hebrews 11:5, Hebrews 11:6, Hebrews 11:13, Hebrews 11:20, Hebrews 11:21, Hebrews 11:22, Hebrews 11:23, Hebrews 11:24, Hebrews 11:27, Hebrews 11:31, Hebrews 11:33, Hebrews 11:39, Hebrews 13:7, James 1:3, James 1:6, James 2:5, James 2:14 [2 cases], James 2:17, James 2:18 [3 cases], James 2:20, James 2:22 [2 cases], James 2:26, 1 Peter 1:5, 1 Peter 1:7, 2 Peter 1:1, 2 Peter 1:5, Jude 1:20, Revelation 2:19, Revelation 13:10)
- 27 cases where "faith" or "the faith" refers to Christianity in general (Acts 6:7, Acts 13:8, Acts 14:22, Acts 16:5, Romans 1:5, Romans 14:1, 1 Corinthians 16:13, 2 Corinthians 13:5, Galatians 1:23, Ephesians 4:5, Ephesians 4:13, Philippians 1:27, Colossians 1:23, Colossians 2:7, 1 Timothy 1:2, 1 Timothy 3:9, 1 Timothy 4:1, 1 Timothy 5:8, 1 Timothy 6:10, 1 Timothy 6:21, 2 Timothy 3:8, 2 Timothy 4:7, Titus 1:4, Titus 1:13, Titus 3:15, 2 Peter 5:9, Jude 1:3)
- 3 other cases (Romans 10:17, 1 Corinthians 12:9, Galatians 5:22)

The categories are somewhat arbitrary and you could probably question some individual entries, but it's enough to get a ballpark count of the verses. (In cases like Matthew 17:20, it also depends on which translation you're using, as different Greek manuscripts alter the count slightly. Different translations used different primary Greek manuscripts!) Also, most of the benefits described above without an explicit reference to Christ could not have been obtained without Christ's ratification of the New Covenant for us.

So what do we make of all this? It seems that sometimes faith is referred to as something impersonal, but at other times it is directed toward God. Is it implicit that it is directed toward God at all the other times, or do we all possess faith and have the ability to use it for God or use it to our own destruction? Romans 12:3 makes it clear that every man (not just the believer) has the measure of faith. So an unbeliever has faith, but he is not saved! He has the God-given capacity to believe unto salvation if he so chooses. (See Can an Unbeliever Exercise Faith?)

Once again, things are not as clear-cut as we would like them to be! But how about this – why don't we ask the Bible itself what faith is?

Hebrews 11:1:

Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

So is faith a substance like carbon, oxygen or gold? This verse has been used to teach that, but that's why we should check everything in a concordance before we run around preaching it! We find that the word for substance actually is translated confidence three times out of the four other times it's used in the New Testament. Thus, faith is the confidence (assurance) of something hoped for, but not a substance that you can add to your Periodic Table of the Elements or hold in your hand.

So by its most basic definition, faith is being sure of something that your five senses don't tell you, but it is not necessarily directed toward God or Jesus. That actually is obvious once you think about statements like the one Paul made to the jailer in Philippi: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and you shall be saved, you and your household." If belief in Christ were implicit in the definition of faith, no one in the Old Testament, including the "faith heroes," could have ever exercised faith, and Paul's exhortation to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ" was redundant – he could have just said "Believe!" Instead, he told the jailer where to direct his faith.

How does this affect our take on Mark 11:22? Does this contradict "Have faith in God?" No. If faith were implicitly a trust in God, Jesus could just have said, "Have faith!" and "Have faith in God" would have been implicit – and redundant when He actually said it. But He had to specify where faith should be directed – to God! Too many people, including Christians, have plenty of faith in the bad things the devil can bring their way and not enough faith in God.

But isn't unbelief (apistia, or occasionally apeitheia) simply the lack of faith (pistis)? Despite appearances, the Biblical use of the word unbelief really refers to hearing the Word but refusing to accept it and act on it. (This is proven in detail in the section What is the Difference between Unbelief and Doubt?) We can operate in misplaced faith in something that isn't of God! In that case, it isn't that we aren't believing anything; it's that we're believing the wrong thing! (If all faith were in God, there would be no need for any Scripture to specify faith in God, as faith would be enough.)

1 John 5:11-13 tells us that we can believe (the main Greek word in the concordance is pisteuo, which is obviously related to pistis, or faith) on the name of the Son of God, and I'm glad that we can! But 2 Thessalonians 2:11 tells us that God will send strong delusion so that people will believe (pisteuo) a lie! It's the same word! So your faith can be used to believe the truth or to believe a lie! So again, faith in and of itself is like electricity – you can use it to bless yourself or use it to hurt yourself. You can put faith a lie instead of in God, so God is NOT always the object of faith!

Further evidence of this is found in 1 John 4:1, where we are told not to believe (pisteuo) every spirit. If faith is only an act or an attitude directed toward God, this exhortation is meaningless and contradicts Scripture! Obviously you can believe (or have faith in) an EVIL spirit as well as God! So again we see the neutrality of faith – it can be directed in a good direction or a bad direction.

As we saw in Romans 12:3, every person has faith, including the unbeliever. So Jesus could not sensibly have been telling His hearers that they should have faith in that sense. They already had faith, which was a gift from God (Ephesians 2:8-9). What kind of faith do you think God gives as a gift – Satan's faith? Thomas's faith? No, God gives "God's faith" to everyone; there really isn't any other kind. Satan's version of "faith" is simply to take the faith that God gave you and run it in reverse to believe for what Satan wants you to have. In either case someone can believe and receive things he can't see. Ask Job about that; it was the thing that he greatly feared that came upon him (Job 3:25).

So Jesus could not have exhorted people to "have faith of God" in the sense of "have God's faith," because they already had it! That would make no sense. Where would they GET God's faith if the command were to get it? From God? From Jesus? That couldn't be so, because when the disciples asked Jesus to give them more faith, He didn't do it. Instead, He told them what even a little faith would do. (See Luke 17:5-6). Besides, Jesus said to "have faith of God," not "get faith of God." He wasn't telling them what to get; He was telling them where to direct the faith that they already had. The "greats of faith" in Hebrews 11 could exercise faith because they already had it. We know that all men had the ability to believe (exercise faith) because God punished those in the desert who did not believe and act on what He said. If they had no ability to exercise faith, God was certainly unjust in punishing them by killing them off and rewarding the two men who chose to believe God by taking Him at His word.

At Last, the Winner Is Announced!

So the winner is: "Have faith in God."

Jesus exhorted people to “Have faith in God” – to take the faith they already had and direct it toward God. As the next two verses unfold, that becomes important because Jesus’ statement in the next verse shows that you can have what you believe and say – so you’d better be believing and saying something consistent with God’s revealed will for you. Your faith in God is evident in the next verse when you believe that you receive when you pray. From whom could you possibly receive it? From God, who laid it up for you in Christ! (If it’s not something like healing that’s part of your inheritance, you have no business trying to believe that you receive it from God; you’re wasting your time.)

So despite the fact that the literal word-for-word Greek translation is “Have faith of God,” the traditional translation “Have faith in God” is the best one. Young’s Literal Translation makes no attempt to describe the doctrinal intention of any verse; its sole purpose is to transliterate the Greek words to show exactly what was written. As we have seen, there are traps involved with using only English, only a Greek concordance, or only certain verses from a literal Greek text. I hope that both the conclusion and the long process required to get it were helpful to you.

Implications

Does it really matter which way we translate this one verse? I think that it does. If you are only being exhorted to “use faith,” you can fall into the trap where you’re trying to have faith in your faith instead of faith in God. When you try to speak to a mountain, you’ll be trying to figure out if you can exercise enough “faith force” to actually move it, rather than trusting that God’s power will back your God-given authority. You don’t have the power to move a mountain, but you have the AUTHORITY to speak to it and expect God to back you as long as what you command is consistent with God’s Word.

You can end up with endless introspection (“Is my faith big enough to get this job done?”) as opposed to faith in God (“God is big enough to get this job done, and I believe that He backs His Word!”).

Now go HAVE FAITH IN GOD!

What Galatians 2:20 Really Means

What Galatians 2:20 Really Means

Galatians 2:20:

I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.

Only one phrase is unclear at first glance – what does “the faith of the Son of God” mean in this verse? There are only two choices:

Choice 1: Faith (or trust) in the Son of God

Choice 2: The Son of God’s faith

How we interpret this verse depends on which choice we make. Are we supposed to live our lives in the flesh by Jesus’ faith, or by faith IN Jesus?

The answer might have more theological implications than we first realize. So let’s start on a journey to figure out which interpretation is correct!

Mark 11:22 as Precedent

We found that trying to interpret Mark 11:22 as meaning “have faith of God” came up short despite the fact that the Greek DID use the possessive form (“have faith of God”) in that verse. (See the lengthy discussion What Mark 11:22 Really Means for a detailed analysis of Mark 11:22.) So Choice 2 is immediately suspect because it has one strike against it already. However, it has become fashionable to teach Choice 2 instead of Choice 1, especially in certain circles, so maybe some people know things that we will have to find out for ourselves in our investigation.

Jesus, the Author and Finisher of Our Faith

Given that Jesus is the Author and the Finisher of our faith (Hebrews 12:1), we might conclude at first that we live by Jesus’ faith (Choice 2). If He is the Author and the Finisher of it, wouldn’t it be HIS faith anyway? This seems reasonable, but upon further reflection, it also seems reasonable that HIS faith is perfect and ours isn’t. Therefore, HIS faith does not need finishing, but OUR faith does. So this flips us back over to Choice 1. After all, if we were handed Jesus’ already-perfect faith, He would be the Author of it but there would be no need for Him to be its Finisher. This might get complicated!

Habakkuk 2:4 and People Healed by THEIR Faith

At first, you might see the reference above and think, “The just shall live by faith!” But this particular verse actually says that the just shall live by HIS faith. This would seem to be the faith of the just, as there is no mention of God’s faith here. Furthermore, Jesus told people that it was THEIR faith that had healed them, not HIS faith. So if it’s YOUR faith, Choice 1 now seems like the only way to go. Or is it? The faith you have is a gift from God – you got it from Him (Romans 12:3, Ephesians 2:8-9). So it is really HIS faith in a certain sense, which might still allow for Choice 2.

In general, if something is solvable in English, you just use English texts. You look at the context and at similar Scriptures. If that doesn’t get the job done, sometimes scanning a lot of different translations helps. You could even use paraphrases (The Message Bible, The Passion Translation, and so on) to see if one of the paraphrasers has taken things a different way. Just realize that the paraphrase isn’t always inspired. Even a middle-of-the-road translation like the NIV can vary between a literal version and a Not Inspired Version. If that doesn’t get the job done, sometimes Young’s Literal Translation or the Amplified Bible will point out a nuance that you didn’t see. If that doesn’t get the job done, you break out a concordance and see which original-language words were used. If that doesn’t make things clear, you can then use an Reverse Interlinear text. If things are still unclear, an Interlinear text is needed to see the order of the words in the original language as well as the exact verb conjugations, single/plural distinctions and other nuances that are NOT determinable using only a concordance. We found that to be the case when we tried to “solve” Mark 11:22. You also check a number of commentaries, though you have to remember that the Bible is inspired but commentaries are not necessarily inspired. Sometimes some old commentary that you can read for free online will point out a nuance that you missed. Above all, remember that the Holy Spirit is your Teacher whose job it is to lead you into all truth (John 16:13).

Let’s start off with other Bibles and see if we can reach an easy conclusion.

Other Bibles

The King James Version says “by faith of the Son of God.” However, most other mainstream translations say “by faith in the Son of God,” so the King James Version is not the norm (this happens quite often, especially due to the Elizabethan English that it uses). A couple others follow the King James, but if we went by popularity, Choice 1 would be the easy winner. On the other hand, many Bibles uses “griefs” and “sorrows” instead of the correct “sicknesses” and “pains” in Isaiah 53:4, so the majority is not always right.

Young's Literal Translation

I brought it up, so let's see what the other Mr. Young (not the author of this book) came up with. He rendered it "in the faith I live of the Son of God." As usual, this is a word-for-word Greek transliteration other than the fact that the two instances of the are not explicit – but that would be true for many other verses. Besides, who really wants to read "in faith I live of Son of God" even if that's correct from a Greek perspective?

The only problem is that the literal transliteration of the Greek words doesn't seem like it would move anyone who was already committed to Choice 1 or Choice 2 to flip choices.

Greek Time

A look at the underlying Greek shows us that Young nailed it on the head. There is a subtle difference between "by faith of the Son of God" and "in faith of the Son of God," though. Which is right? The answer is that either COULD be right because the Greek word en does appear explicitly before pistis (faith), and en can be translated in or by. However, en is translated in over 11 times more frequently than it is translated by, so it seems more likely that we should say "in faith of the Son of God" as opposed to "by faith of the Son of God." That seems more like a Choice 1 explanation.

Because the Greek word en actually appears two other times in the same verse, it seems that we might assign a little extra weight to how it is used there. It is translated in both other times (Christ liveth in me, the life which I now live in the flesh). Are in and by interchangeable? Judge for yourself what the verse would sound like if Paul said that "Christ liveth by me" and "the life which I now live by the flesh." I think we should stick with in both times! This would seem to be a decent argument that in the third case, in faith would be preferred to by faith as the King James Version renders it.

If we assume that we have an "objective possessive" (see What Mark 11:22 Really Means for an explanation), the choice would be "in faith in the Son of God" or the KJV-like "by faith in the Son of God," which are clearly Choice 1 options. Choice 2 has to assume that this is NOT a case of an objective possessive. That's still OK for now, because most possessives are NOT "objective" (describing the object) but they rather describe the possessor.

Interlinear Logic

Looking at Galatians 2:20 in a Greek Interlinear text, we see that the original Greek word order was “in faith I live of Son of God.” (It’s actually a little wordier than that, but the basic meaning is as stated.) This shows why people don’t read Interlinear Greek Bibles as daily devotionals. If anything, this would lean us toward Choice 1 because “by faith” and “of the Son of God” are not actually together in the Greek; the verb for “I live” separates them. However, “in faith I live of the Son of God” is a marginal-at-best English statement, so it seems that reverting to the way it is translated is still OK. Greek and English word orders aren’t always the same. Thus, we haven’t really reached a conclusion based on the Greek word order. We’ll have to consider other things while keeping our Greek tools handy.

Search the Scriptures

One advantage we have over the Pharisees and the Bereans when they “searched the Scriptures” is that we can have computers search them for us! So it seems like looking for the phrase “of the Son of God” would make sense. Our search comes up with 4 finds – the verse in question and the ones below:

John 5:25:

Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live.

Ephesians 4:13:

Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ:

1 John 5:13:

These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God.

In the first and third cases, things that are “of the Son of God” are clearly things that the Son of God possesses. So these would lead to a Choice 2 definition. However, the second case is clearly a Choice 1 example. In the second case, we cannot “come into” Jesus’ knowledge. If we had Jesus’ knowledge for ourselves, we wouldn’t need to “come to” it; we’d already have it. Worse yet, it would make Paul’s statements in 1 Corinthians 13:8-12 untrue – if we had Christ’s knowledge (He knows everything), we would know fully NOW, not when the perfect comes. There would be no such thing as seeing through a glass darkly. So this clearly means the knowledge OF Christ as we would usually mean it as opposed to the knowledge that Christ possesses. This would be another “objective possessive.”

So we’re 2-1 in favor of Choice 2, but there is no clear winner of this round.

Similar Phrases within the Context

So perhaps we should broaden the search. After all, “the faith of Jesus Christ”, “the faith of Jesus” or “the faith of Christ” would be functionally equivalent to “the faith of the Son of God.” Two of these turn out to be used in the same verse, and it’s only four verses behind the verse in question:

Galatians 2:16:

Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.

Here we see the “faith of Jesus Christ” and the “faith of Christ” again. It would seem that whatever Paul meant by it here, he would also mean by it four verses later in the same chapter.

The first instance has a couple of nuances that definitely point to Choice 1. We already know that God has given EVERYONE faith (Romans 12:3), though not everyone USES it. If merely HAVING the faith of Christ saved you, ALL would be saved, and we know otherwise. So only faith that is actually directed toward Jesus (that is, it is “in Jesus”) saves anyone. There is an obvious parallel between “the faith of Jesus Christ” and “we have believed in Christ” in the next phrase. Believing is what you do with faith. It’s even clearer in Greek, where we would say that pisteuo is what you do with pistis.

The second instance, “faith of Christ,” has an interesting twist – the text says that we are justified by the faith of Jesus Christ. However, it is possible to have “dead faith” that produces nothing because there are no corresponding works (James 2:14-26). One is not justified until he places his faith (regardless of where he got that faith) IN Jesus Christ. The worst-case scenario would be claiming that we are literally saved by Jesus’ faith, as that would not explain why some are saved and some are not if it depends on His faith.

The context is BELIEVING IN Jesus Christ, not just using His faith. So faith of the Son of God would seem to mean faith in the Son of God, which is Choice 1. However, it IS a “genitive” (possessive) construct that does not have the word IN anywhere in it. While that at first seems to indicate Choice 2, the Mark 11:22 discussion shows the danger of drawing conclusions from that, as “Have faith IN God” is the preferred translation although that is also a possessive construct without the word IN.

Besides, the fairly obvious context is contrasting methods of justification – the works of the Law vs. faith in Christ. We would not contrast the works of the Law against just having Jesus’ faith, given that merely having unexercised faith (even Jesus’ faith) that is not “pointed” in any direction is not enough to save anyone. So Choice 1 is looking better all the time.

Galatians 2:16 is a brick wall for those who teach that when you get saved, you receive “the faith of Jesus Christ.” It shows that we are justified by “the faith of Jesus Christ.” So we would have to follow up with this verse, which is NOT part of the New Testament canon:

Catch 22:2:

We are justified by the faith that comes from Jesus Christ. But you cannot get the faith that comes from Jesus Christ until you are already justified. Thus, you can never get justified OR have the faith of Jesus Christ. Verily, it doth stink to be you.

So here, only four verses before the verse in question, “the faith of Jesus Christ” must mean “faith in Jesus Christ.” It would seem that four verses later, “the faith of the Son of God” should mean the same thing. That is almost a clincher for Choice 1.

Other “Faith in Christ” Verses

The one other place where we see “faith of Christ” doesn’t seem to do anything to settle the matter:

Philippians 3:9:

And be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith:

If you’ve predetermined that the verse we’re studying has a meaning of Choice 1 or Choice 2, you would just assume that same for this verse.

The one other place where we see “faith of Jesus” does seem to matter, though:

Revelation 14:12:

Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus.

I suppose that a hard-core Choice 2 advocate would still claim that this refers to Jesus’ faith, but those who “keep the faith of Jesus” would certainly seem (to me) to refer to those who continue to have faith IN Jesus as opposed to those who keep Jesus’ faith.

Have we exhausted the similar references? Let’s try “the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ.” We get one “hit:”

James 2:1:

My brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons.

This is getting even harder for the Choice 2 side. If it were Jesus’ faith, it would never play favorites. However, people who put THEIR FAITH in Jesus could still sin by playing favorites. So in this case, Choice 1 is the definite winner.

How about “faith in the Lord?” This gives us the following verse:

Ephesians 1:15:

Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints,

Here there IS a Greek word for “in” (en) when the meaning is faith IN Jesus as opposed to faith OF Jesus. This evidence would support Choice 2 because we could theorize that an explicit en in Greek is needed to support the English word in.

This leads to the idea of checking out “faith in Christ.” Aside from Acts 24:24 where “the faith” means what we believe, there are three hits:

Galatians 3:26:

For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

Colossians 1:4:

Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love which ye have to all the saints,

Colossians 2:5:

For though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the spirit, joying and beholding your order, and the stedfastness of your faith in Christ.

In each of these 3 cases, there is an explicit Greek word where faith IN Christ is the intended meaning, and there is no such word in Galatians 2:20. This is a clean 3-0 victory for the Choice 2 side. Maybe Choice 2 can mount a comeback after all.

A search for “faith in God” turns up only Mark 11:22, which is analyzed elsewhere as a Choice 1 verse.

This hard work is bordering on frustrating because just as we seem to have one side locked up, we see evidence for the other one!

Knowledge about Knowledge

We can try seeing what the Bible says about “knowledge of” Jesus, Christ, the Lord Jesus Christ, and so on.

This yields some interesting results.

Ephesians 1:17:

That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him:

Here knowledge of him would not seem to mean the knowledge that God possesses. If you had that, you wouldn't need any more wisdom or revelation because you'd already know everything.

There are some other fairly inexplicit verses, but these last 2 stand out:

2 Peter 2:20:

For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning.

You don't get saved by knowing what Jesus knows – you get saved by knowing Jesus! So the “knowledge of the Lord” here is talking about knowing the Lord, not knowing that the Lord knows. The same could be said below:

2 Peter 3:18:

But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.

This last verse clinches a Choice 1 interpretation of the possessive “knowledge of our Lord...” phrase. If you already had the knowledge that Jesus has, you could not grow in knowledge. So in this case where something is “of our Lord” it means that the Lord is the object of the knowledge (Choice 1), not the owner of it (Choice 2). Granted, we're talking about knowledge instead of faith here, but it's good to see how other things that are “of the Lord” work.

This reminds us of the possessive “fear of the Lord” that we looked at in the Mark 11:22 discussion. This is not the fear that God has, the fear with which God runs the universe, and so on, so trying to apply the same “objective possessive” construction in Greek fails. This clearly refers to fear whose object, not owner or source is the Lord. When it comes to knowledge and fear that are “of” the Lord, it means knowledge or fear with the Lord as its object. So it would make equal sense to say that faith of the Lord would refer to faith with the Lord as its object, not its owner or source. This seems to be another VERY good case for Choice 1.

Faith of...

Let's do a search for “faith of...” and see what else we find. Here are some highlights:

Romans 3:22

Even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference:

This is similar to Galatians 2:16 earlier where “faith of Jesus Christ” was linked to those who believe. How could the faith “of” (the possession of) Jesus Christ get you to be righteous? If you have to become righteous before you can have the faith of Jesus Christ, and the faith of Jesus Christ is needed to become righteous, see verse Catch 22:2 above! This verse only “works” if Paul meant “the righteousness of God which is by faith IN Jesus Christ.” This is a clear Choice 1 argument.

Galatians 3:22:

But the scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe.

Those who believe have “the faith of Jesus Christ” in that they believe in Him, so this looks like another reasonable Choice 1 verse. Four verses later, Paul said, “For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.” This seems to continue a theme of receiving things through faith IN Christ. Besides, the only alternative just doesn’t work:

Catch 22:3:

The promise by Jesus Christ’s faith is given to those who believe. However, by definition you cannot be one of “those who believe” if you do not have Jesus Christ’s faith. Thus, you can never believe and you can never have Jesus Christ’s faith. Thou art paddlelessly up a creek.

The remaining verse is:

Ephesians 3:12:

In whom we have boldness and access with confidence by the faith of him.

People could argue this one either way, although I would side with Choice 1 on this one too.

Colossians 2:12:

Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead.

This is another “possessive” construction in the Greek that is the same as what we find in Galatians 2:20. Clearly, this indicates faith in the operation of God, not faith belonging to the operation of God. Saying “the operation of God”’s faith would be meaningless, as operations do not have faith. Thus, we have precedent to say that faith of the Son of God means faith IN the Son of God, which is Choice 1.

Other Considerations

Let’s take a step back and see if any other Scriptural elements could influence our decision.

We can see from Scripture that although we all receive the measure of faith, someone’s faith can increase (2 Corinthians 10:15), grow exceedingly (2 Thessalonians 1:3), be weak (Romans 4:19, Romans 14:1), be little (Matthew 6:30, Matthew 8:26, Matthew 14:31, Matthew 16:8, Luke 12:28), be great (Matthew 8:10, Matthew 15:28, Luke 7:9), be strong (Romans 4:20), be vain (1 Corinthians 15:14, 1 Corinthians 15:17), be dead (James 2:17, James 2:20, James 2:26), be lacking (1 Thessalonians 3:10) or fail (Luke 22:32).

It would seem that the “faith of Jesus” would never be weak, be dead, be little or fail. His faith never fell into any of these categories during His earthly life. YOUR faith could do that, but if you are literally living by (or in) HIS faith, these faith categories would seem to be impossible. Chalk up more points for Choice 1.

Acts 26:18:

To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me.

This verse is interesting because it refers to faith IN Jesus as being what sanctifies people, as opposed to the faith OF Jesus. This would lend further credence to Choice 1.

1 Thessalonians 3:10:

Night and day praying exceedingly that we might see your face, and might perfect that which is lacking in your faith?

We never see anything lacking in Jesus’ faith, but we saw things lacking in certain other people’s faith in Scripture. This would bolster Choice 1 still more.

Back to Basics

Let’s take a big step back and try to see the whole picture. If we want to interpret Galatians 2:20 using Choice 2, we have to define what Jesus Christ’s faith (“the faith of the Son of God”) actually is. Choice 1 doesn’t present that problem – in that case, Paul lived by faith IN Christ, so the faith “of” Christ never comes into play.

Can Jesus Christ’s faith mean the faith that He walked in on the earth? We have to remember that He emptied Himself (Philippians 2:7) and lived according to the rules that were common to man. That means that He had to live with the “measure of faith” that the rest of us were given. That means that there was nothing special about His faith that set it apart from Paul’s faith or your faith, other than the fact that He USED it more. So really, Paul couldn’t have meant that he lived by Jesus’ faith, as that would be no different than walking in his own faith based on this definition.

So we have to look for another meaning. The only other one that comes to mind is that this is a special measure of faith IN ADDITION TO the faith that “is a gift of God” than everyone has received. In other words, Paul walked in normal faith that all men have, but when he got saved, he received Jesus’ faith on top of it. But we’ve already seen from the “catch” verses above that we are born again through “the faith of Jesus,” so that explanation cannot be true either. Otherwise no one could get Jesus’ faith OR be born again.

This leaves one more possible explanation, which is that the “measure of faith” that all men have IS “Jesus Christ’s faith” (the faith of the Son of God). Thus all men, including sinners, would have to have “Jesus Christ’s faith.” This would be consistent with some of those other “catch” verses – you could be unsaved, exercise Jesus Christ’s faith to be justified and become saved. At least this final explanation clears that up. This might not be totally farfetched, as Jesus created everything that there is, so that could be taken to include your faith. Thus, Paul could live by the faith OF Jesus Christ.

Maybe, but there’s a problem here. Ephesians 2:8-9 says that your faith is the gift of God. That brings up two difficulties. The first is that it says that your faith is the gift of God, not the gift of Jesus Christ. The second is that when something is given to you as a gift, it is now YOURS, not the other person’s. So the faith Paul walked in would have been Paul’s faith, not the faith of God OR the faith of the Son of God. It would be his to do with as he wanted as opposed to Jesus’ faith being a “software-as-a-service” model where He keeps it in heaven but you just get to log in and use it.

Paul obviously saw things that way. He did not tell the Thessalonians that the faith of Jesus Christ grew exceedingly (how could that be anyway?) – he said that THEIR faith grew exceedingly (2 Thessalonians 1:3). He referred to “your faith” throughout his writings. Here are some examples – there are more but these should be enough to make my point:

Ephesians 1:15:

Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints,

Note that this was “your faith IN the Lord Jesus” as opposed to the senseless “your faith Jesus’ faith.” The same applies in the next verse.

Colossians 1:4:

Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love which ye have to all the saints,

Colossians 2:5:

For though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the spirit, joying and beholding your order, and the stedfastness of your faith in Christ.

1 Thessalonians 3:10:

Night and day praying exceedingly that we might see your face, and might perfect that which is lacking in your faith?

2 Peter 1:5:

And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge;

I could go on, but let’s consider one more thing. We have already proved through the “catch” verses above that “Jesus’ faith” cannot be something that you get when you are born again. Thus, Jesus’ faith must BE the measure of faith. But Jesus repeatedly told people, “YOUR FAITH has made you well,” not “MY faith has made you well.”

Then consider the normal way that anyone would communicate. When you receive something, it's now yours. It no longer belongs to the person who gave it to you. Imagine if someone said this, "I need to go get some of the bank's bills so that I can put my employer's money into the department store's envelope with the postal service's stamp to make a payment on the car dealer's car. But I will get a drink of the grocery store's soda out of the appliance store's refrigerator before I leave the previous owner's house." That would make no sense, but neither would saying that you are using God's faith or Jesus' faith rather than your own faith that God gave you as a gift.

And the Winner Is...

I have to conclude that "by the faith of the Son of God" in Galatians 2:20 means "by faith in the Son of God" as opposed to "by the Son of God's faith." Choice 1 is the winner. It seemed to have the edge all along, and the more we delved into it, the more obvious it became that it was the better choice.

Implication

Living by faith IN Jesus means that you trust JESUS, not your own faith, to get the job done. You believe that He will back you when you take authority in His name. You are not just living by abstract faith; you are living by faith in a PERSON who will manifest Himself when you invoke His name. This Person paid the price to ensure that every need that you will ever have is met. You trust JESUS to make good on the Word rather than trusting in your own ability to use Jesus' faith.

Is Your Favorite Teacher's Theology Ruined?

At this point you may think, "Nuts! My favorite teacher said that Paul lived by Jesus' faith, and that means that I can live by Jesus' faith too, so I can do the works that Jesus did!" However, all is not lost! The truth is that Paul lived by faith IN Jesus – in Him and His covenant and in all that He purchased for all of us. Part of this covenant is being able to do the works that He did (John 14:12). Faith in Jesus would include faith that His words are true, including the ones about doing His works. The fact is that Jesus was given the same measure of faith that you got. So the fact that He did exploits through HIS faith shows you that you can do the same exploits through YOUR faith! I probably just got to the same destination as your favorite faith teacher, but by a separate route.

Healing and the Holy Spirit

1. The Work of the Holy Spirit in Helping You Receive Healing

Part of the Holy Spirit's job is to guide you into all truth (John 16:13). You have not been left to figure out healing on your own! As you may have seen in these discussions, there can be many reasons that people don't receive healing other than simple lack of faith. The Holy Spirit knows which, if any, is a problem for you. If you're having difficulty receiving your healing, ask the Holy Spirit to help you! After all, God send Him to show you the things that God has freely given you (1 Corinthians 2:12).

He can show you what, if anything, you're doing wrong. Perhaps He will lead you to go and make things right with an offended relative or church member. Perhaps He will deal with you about attitudes that need to change. If you're embracing an attitude that rots your bones according to Scripture, it will be hard to receive healing for bone trouble if you don't drop that attitude. Perhaps He will point out an area in which you're being disobedient to the known will of God. It is hard to receive the Holy Spirit's ministry in the area of healing for your body while you are resisting Him in other areas of your life. In effect, you would be saying, "Will of God, be done!" in one area while simultaneously saying, "Will of God, don't be done!" in another area.

He can also show you the parts of Scripture that you need to understand better. Only He really knows what you need to hear. Trust Him to open up the Scriptures to you. Ask Him to give you revelation knowledge of God's Word concerning healing. He may lead you to certain verses that will give you the insight you need to receive your healing. He will make the Bible come alive to you.

You have a Helper on the inside. Let Him do His job and help you. The Holy Spirit wants you to get healed! He will help you if you ask Him to, so ask! Jesus said that those who ask receive, those who seek find, and those who knock get it opened to them (Matthew 7:7, Luke 11:9). God said to call on Him and He will show you great and mighty things that you don't know (Jeremiah 33:3). Take God up on His promises!

You have a Strengthener, an Advocate on the inside. Avail yourself of His services. He wants you help you get your healing.

Since it was the Spirit Himself who anointed Jesus of Nazareth to heal the sick (Acts 10:38), and God now promises to pour out of His Spirit on all flesh (Acts 2:17), it makes sense that the same healing, life-giving Spirit will help you receive healing from God!

2. The Work of the Holy Spirit in Helping You Minister Healing to Others

If you are baptized with the Holy Spirit, you have the SAME Holy Spirit working through you who worked through Jesus. His work in confirming the gospel with signs following is so important to Jesus that He insisted that His disciples remain in Jerusalem until they “were endued with power from on high” – baptized with the Holy Spirit (Luke 24:49). Before the Holy Spirit descended upon Jesus, Jesus performed no miracles. He was divine but had to walk the earth as a man. If He could not do miracles as a man without the Holy Spirit, neither should you expect to do so. But once you’re baptized with the Holy Spirit, you should expect to minister healing as Jesus, your example, did – as a man anointed by the Holy Spirit.

We see plainly in Scripture that Jesus ministered healing and performed miracles and cast out demons by the Holy Spirit, whom He referred to as the “finger of God.” Notice that Jesus did not say, “I cast out demons by my own innate divine power,” but rather, “...I with the finger of God cast out devils...” (Luke 11:20). If Jesus ministered as deity, there would be no hope for you to “do the works that He did and greater” (John 14:12), but because He ministered by the same Holy Spirit whom you now have, you can do what He did.

We then see plainly in Scripture that the Spirit-baptized believers in the book of Acts did in fact go out and do miracles and perform healings in the name of Jesus.

So the Holy Spirit wanted to heal people in Jesus’ ministry, and the Holy Spirit wanted to heal people during the Church Age, as recorded in Acts. By what reasoning could we conclude that the Holy Spirit has now CHANGED and no longer wants to do miracles? He was called the Spirit of MIGHT long before Jesus came (Isaiah 11:2). He performed miracles before Jesus came, so why would He stop wanting to do miracles under a better covenant that was established upon better promises (Hebrews 8:6)?

Has the great Miracle-Worker gone into eternal retirement or something?

That isn’t a possibility, given that Jesus said that signs would follow them who believe (Mark 16:17-18), and there are plenty of people still around who believe. Acts 2:39 makes it clear that the Spirit baptism, which enables the believer to receive power, would be for as many as the Lord our God would call. (“For the promise [of the Holy Spirit] is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.”)

Why would God want to baptize us with the Holy Spirit today if there would be no benefit? If, as some claim, we don’t need tongues, Spirit manifestations or miracles today, why would the promise of the Holy Spirit be for as many as are saved? That “reasoning” isn’t reasonable! By what authority do we segregate the Church Age into a powerful Early Church Age and a powerless Late Church Age when no such division in the Church Age exists in Scripture?

The same Holy Spirit who was pleased to move through Jesus and the early church will be pleased to move through you in the same way. You just need to know that He wants to do that, and the yield yourself to do His pleasure.

Most churchgoers today are familiar with who God (the first person of the Trinity) is, who Jesus (the second person of the Trinity) is, but they know practically nothing about the person and work of the Holy Spirit (the third person of the Trinity)! Yet He was sent here to continue the works that Jesus did when He walked the earth. It is VITAL to be aware of the present-day ministry of the Holy Spirit if you want to be a conduit of God's blessing to others, as He is the One primarily at work on the earth now! Jesus ascended to the Father's right hand, but He sent the Holy Spirit, who descended to the earth and is still here now. So it would behoove us to learn more about Him! It would certainly help if all churches would yield to His promptings; most services give the impression that God is up in heaven somewhere and we're sort of doing our own thing down here with Him watching. The Holy Spirit wants to be in control of what we are doing here – it's the only way that the works of Jesus will be replicated in us. Jesus utterly depended on the Holy Spirit, and so must we. We must allow the Holy Spirit to move in our midst. He wants to manifest Himself in many ways, some of which are listed in 1 Corinthians 12:8-11, but He can't do that if we don't make room for Him. If we're just going to plow through our "order of worship" without regard to any instructions He might have during the service, we'll have only ourselves to thank for our bone-dry services that leave people with the sense that there must be something more, but they're not sure what.

Jesus said of "him who believes" (not just the "early church" believers) that rivers of living water would flow out of his belly (John 7:37-39), speaking of the Holy Spirit. Therefore, you should expect and allow the Holy Spirit to flow out of you like rivers. That's rivers in the plural, not just a single river, and a RIVER is not some nice little babbling mountain creek or a roadside drainage ditch. The Amazon, Nile, and Mississippi are rivers! You should expect a huge gush of the Holy Spirit to flow out of you and into others.

Many believers don't believe Jesus' words, so they never dare to act on them. Others intellectually acknowledge His words but never do anything with them. But those who believe and act on His words can still enjoy seeing the Holy Spirit GUSH out of them into others to bless humanity. You should expect no less.

What I believe stops many believers is that they never "feel" like they are full of the Holy Spirit, and until they get some kind of "feeling" that they are anointed, they will not budge. You could waste the rest of your life waiting to "feel" like you're anointed! I don't feel like I'm anointed every single time I lay hands on the sick! I lay hands on the sick and see results not because I feel like I'm going to see results, but because I believe and act on the Word of God in the matter regardless of feelings or the lack thereof. Remember that the just shall live by FAITH (Habakkuk 2:4, Romans 1:17, Galatians 3:11, Hebrews 10:38), so you cannot wait for feelings of great cosmic power to shake you on the inside and convince you that you should let that power minister to someone else who needs it. Faith is at its purest when you have no feelings at all and you are just acting on the Word of God!

Instead, believers waste countless hours begging God to “send the old-time power,” asking and singing, “Let the power of the Holy Ghost fall on me!” God already sent the power in the person of the Holy Spirit. What “power” do you suppose God has that is more powerful than the Holy Spirit, who is a divine Person Himself? What “revival” needs to be sent from heaven that will be more powerful than the Holy Spirit whom He already SENT from heaven to anoint you to work miracles and be in you forever? You don’t need power to fall ON you that is already IN you. You only need to cooperate with the Holy Spirit.

There are times when you will sense His presence “upon” you to do a particular thing, and that can be wonderful. For some things, like raising the dead, you would need a special unction from the Holy Spirit. You can often sense His presence “upon you” as He is letting you know that He wants to use you in tongues, interpretation of tongues, prophecy, the word of wisdom, the word of knowledge, discerning of spirits, gifts of healings, working of miracles and (special) faith. I’ve sensed His presence so powerfully in such cases that I’ve occasionally bawled like a baby or just screamed because the power was so heavy “on” me.

But what will you do when a sick person is before you and you don’t feel any power? What if you feel like you’d like to just go back to bed yourself and chill out for the rest of the day? You can act on your feelings or you can act on the Word. In my experience, I often feel a special manifestation of “gifts of healings” kick in AFTER, not BEFORE, I put my hands on someone in raw faith. If you wait to “feel something,” you could wait a long time!

I see no accounts in Acts where the disciples had to “feel something” before they performed miracles. Rather than “waiting on God” until they “felt the power,” they boldly exercised the power that they already had in the Person of the Holy Spirit.

I’m as human as you are, so if it were up to me, I would feel a mighty rush of heavenly power every time before I laid hands on any sick people. I like it better when I feel something, and I’m sure you would like it better too. It’s nice to have a physical sensation that confirms that God is with you. Sometimes God will let you feel something. But feelings are never to lead us – only our faith should be directing our steps.

I’m aware that some preachers have made it their policy that they will never get into the pulpit until they sense the anointing. With all due respect to them, I don’t see a requirement to do that in the Bible. There were some great men who did great things and walked in all the revelation they had at the time, and God honored it. But I’m glad we’ve learned a thing or two since then. One famous healing evangelist would pray, “Lord, rebuke the devil,” and I would hope that even a regular member of a good faith-preaching church today would know better than to pray that. At least we can take heart in the fact that if we walk in the revelation that we have, God will honor that.

I know that some people who have had success have (or had) an “army of intercessors” to “pray the power down” or whatever, but so far in my experience I have never had to recruit an army of intercessors to see results, though we do have people who pray for our ministry. But they don’t try to “open heaven” or anything like that because Jesus opened heaven once and for all. I fail to see in Scripture where Jesus or His disciples required an entourage of intercessors to get anything done, though I’ll be the first to tell you that you need to do your own praying and that you DO need to pray just as Jesus did to hear from God and “see” what He is doing so that you can cooperate with His plan for a meeting.

It is also a mistake to think that you’re not “good enough” to have the Holy Spirit use you. He is the Spirit of Holiness (Romans 1:4). The day you got saved, you got “good enough” for the Holy Spirit to use you as far as God is concerned! Paul showed that it was possible to have mountain-moving faith without walking in love at all (1 Corinthians 13:2), but he definitely didn’t recommend the practice, stating the faith should work by love (Galatians 5:6). In fact, Jesus said that UNSAVED people could even do miracles in His name although He never knew them (Matthew 7:22-23). You don’t have to be “spiritual” – you just have to be available. How spiritual do you think that Judas Iscariot was? He filched from the till, yet he was one of the 12 original apostles who ALL did miracles and cast out demons! God can use completely unspiritual people, but He would prefer that you also grow up in areas other than faith while you’re at it, particularly in your love walk.

I think the devil has twisted “faith which worketh by love” (Galatians 5:6) to convince some believers that their love walk just isn’t good enough to qualify them to act in faith, so they shouldn’t bother trying. But the fact that you can have NO love and do miracles proves that “faith works by love” does NOT mean that you can only do works of faith if you have an adequate love walk, however that is supposed to be measured! I’m not excusing walking out of love. We should always try to walk in love. But if you fail, it doesn’t disqualify you from being used to bless others, which is an act of love in itself!

You don’t have to pray to make the Holy Spirit more powerful! He has all the power you will ever need to accomplish anything you will ever need to do. All He needs is your availability to cooperate with Him. Yield yourself AS YOU ARE to Him and let Him gush through you as rivers of living water!

God Uses Real People

The devil would love to convince you that the only people whom the Holy Spirit can use POWERFULLY are those who have all day to read the Bible, pray in the Holy Spirit and sit in God's presence. In other words, He can only use some "super-spiritual" person who doesn't have a family, doesn't have a secular job, doesn't spend time volunteering at church, doesn't have to shop for food or cook or do laundry or take out trash or fill out tax forms or pay bills or spend an inordinate amount of time getting a car registration sticker in a place with long lines. In short, He certainly couldn't use YOU.

But Mark 16:17-18 says that BELIEVERS will cast out demons and lay hands on sick people and see them recover. John 14:12 says that whoever BELIEVES on Jesus will do the works that He did and greater. Jesus said that rivers of living water would gush out of the one who "BELIEVES on Him" (John 7:37-39). Don't you think that He knew when He said these things that most believers would have secular jobs and families? So as always, the devil is a liar. He's just out to rob you of the joy you can have when you allow the Holy Spirit to minister through you to bless others. The Holy Spirit can use YOU and He can use all the other REAL people out there who make themselves available to Him. You SHOULD pray and you SHOULD read your Bible and you SHOULD listen to what the Holy Spirit has to say to you, but you don't have to set aside the entire all day for such things! Jesus said that His yoke is easy and His burden is light (Matthew 11:30). He is not going to stress you out and wear you out just so that you can do His will!

I was bivocational the entire time that I pastored in Maine – and most Maine pastors were bivocational as well or had a wife who worked. Maine was 3% Christian and I was in a small town in a sparsely populated county. It was unrealistic to expect that our congregation would pay me a full-time salary while paying the other church expenses. So I worked. There would be times when I had to put in a lot of extra hours at work to meet urgent deadlines. It was my own business the whole time, but even with my own business, if I didn't keep a customer happy, he could have become someone else's customer.

During such crunch times, I still had to preach the Word to the flock. God didn't abandon me and say, "Sorry, I set you up with an impossible situation. You obviously don't have enough time to be a REAL pastor even though I called you to be one. Get up there and fail Sunday morning without a decent message because you don't have enough time to prepare one." To compound matters, I kept my resolve to NEVER, EVER preach a message that I just got out of a book or off the Internet. (I have still never done that in my entire life. People deserve to have a message tailored to them by the Holy Spirit.) I would take what little time I had Saturday night to seek God, and sometimes He would just "download" a whole message to me as quickly as I could write down notes. Within 20 minutes I could be ready to go the next morning. I would often spend less time preparing than I spent actually delivering the message. And they were really good messages!

Some pastors might smirk and think, "I spend 10-20 hours a week on 'sermon prep' so there's no way you could preach a decent message if you were that time-constrained." But God is fair! There were even weeks when He said, "I'll just give you what to say when you get up there," and the message would end up being one of my best ones even though it was basically all done as a 45-minute prophecy! (I had enough Word in me so that I would not get up and say kooky things that disagreed with the Bible.) God understood my situation. He is merciful. He isn't unfair!

Now if I DID have more time to prepare, I didn't operate in presumption by just getting up and winging it. I believe in preparation to be able to "rightly divide" the Word, and normally that was my mode. But one week I had to spend almost the whole night before the message in the Emergency Room with a parishioner in dire straits. God was merciful again. (I did have a long nap after I got home from church!)

What I want you to see is that God isn't unreasonable! If He called you to do something, He will GRACE you to do it! He won't wear you out by giving you an assignment that you can't possibly do because you don't have enough time.

Now, you might not have enough time to do what God said AND frivolous activities like clicking through endless Internet biographies of classic rock bands. You might not have enough time to do what God said AND a number of nice-sounding Christian things that God DIDN'T tell you to do. But God is fair, so you ALWAYS have enough time to do what He called you to do without burning out! His grace is sufficient for you (2 Corinthians 12:9)!

Healing and God's Glory

Dead, stinking tradition says that God wants to be glorified through your patient suffering of sickness. The Bible has something completely different to say about how God is glorified in your body. Let's look at some places where God's glory is mentioned regarding healing and see exactly what gives God glory among men:

Matthew 9:2-8 tells us that when Jesus forgave and healed a paralyzed man, the multitudes "glorified God, which had given such power unto men." So the fact that God's healing power can flow through one man into another gives God glory. Mark describes the same incident and concurs that glory was given to God because of it (Mark 2:2-12). Luke also describes the incident (Luke 5:17-26) and adds that the man who was healed glorified God as he departed to his house.

Matthew 15:30-31 tells of the great healing miracles Jesus did. The result was that the multitudes "glorified the God of Israel." Again, God received glory from the healing of the sick.

Luke 7:12-16 says that the people glorified God after Jesus raised the widow's son back to life.

Luke 13:11-16 tells of a crippled woman who was healed on the Sabbath day. She glorified God over her healing. There is no mention that she ever glorified God for the privilege of staying sick for 18 years, bound by Satan.

Luke 17:12-19 tells of ten lepers who were healed, one of whom came back and with a loud voice glorified God for his healing. God is glorified through the healing of incurable illnesses!

Luke 18:35-43 tells us that when Jesus gave a blind man his sight, the blind man followed him, glorifying God, and all the people, when they saw it, gave praise to God.

In Acts 4:21, "All men glorified God for that which was done [the healing of the crippled beggar at the gate]." They weren't glorifying God for the man's endurance of his handicap before then.

Rescuing the afflicted glorifies God. "Ye that fear the LORD, praise him; all ye the seed of Jacob, glorify him; and fear him, all ye the seed of Israel. For he hath not despised nor abhorred the affliction of the afflicted; neither hath he hid his face from him; but when he cried unto him, he heard" (Psalm 22:23-24). "And call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me" (Psalm 50:15).

Romans 15:9 says that the Gentiles should glorify God for His mercy. A quick tour through the Psalms should convince you that His mercy endures forever. This is different from trying to glorify God despite His lack of mercy to you. God wants His mercy and willingness to heal to be known, not His supposed unwillingness to heal.

God's glory and His goodness are inseparable. When Moses asked to see God's glory, God showed him His goodness. Thus, God Himself relates the two. "And he [Moses] said, I beseech thee, shew me thy glory. And he said, I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; and will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy" (Exodus 33:18-19). We see in Exodus 34:5-7 that the "name of the Lord" that God Himself declared was "The LORD, The LORD God, merciful and gracious, longsuffering, and abundant in grace and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, unto the third and to the fourth generation." Remember that this was the answer to Moses' request to see God's glory.

Jesus' miracle in John 2:11 was said to manifest His glory: "This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him." He equated seeing Lazarus raised from the dead with seeing the glory of God (John 11:40, read John 11:1-44 for the full account).

Want to get more radical? Read John 14:12-14. The Father is glorified in the Son when you ask for something to be done in the name of Jesus and Jesus does it! God gets glory when you believe His promises and receive what He promised you: "For all the promises of God in Him are yea, and Amen, unto the glory of God by us" – 2 Corinthians 1:20. (Religious types don't like the by us part at the end, but it's there anyway.)

Now consider these words and see what God says about His glory filling the earth in the last days:

"But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the LORD." – Numbers 14:21.

"And blessed be his glorious name for ever: and let the whole earth be filled with his glory." – Psalm 72:19.

"And the glory of the LORD shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it." – Isaiah 40:5.

"Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the LORD is risen upon thee. For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people: but the LORD shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee." – Isaiah 60:1-2.

"For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea." – Habakkuk 2:14.

"The desire of all nations [Christ] shall come: and I will fill this house with glory, saith the LORD of hosts" – Haggai 2:7.

"The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former" – Haggai 2:9.

“But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not stedfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away: How shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory.” – 2 Corinthians 3:7-9.

This much is clear – the glory of God should manifest more under our new covenant than it did under the old. There were great miracles and signs under the Old Covenant, but these should pale in comparison to what we have under the New Covenant. If God’s glory will overrun the earth, we should expect God’s healing mercy to overrun the earth. We should expect signs, wonders and miracles now.

One thing is conspicuously absent in all of Scripture. Nowhere was God was said to receive glory from someone failing to receive healing and patiently enduring his sickness. If this glorified God, He should have received great glory at Nazareth, where most people stayed sick because of their unbelief. Yet He got no glory there. You won’t find one place where it is written, “The man patiently endured his sickness, being kind to others as the incurable cancer slowly destroyed his body and made him a burden to all those around him, and the multitudes glorified the God of Israel because of this man’s sickness.”

I am not saying that healing is the only way that God receives glory. He was glorified for many other reasons in the Bible, but never because someone remained sick.

No, if you want to hear that patiently remaining sick is the way that God wants to be glorified, you will have to look somewhere other than the Bible. However, you won’t have to look too far – there are plenty of crummy books out there that teach this, which are often #1 “Christian” bestsellers due to the ignorance of the Word that is rampant today. Better Christian bookstores don’t carry them, but crummier Christian bookstores have big displays of them that are impossible to miss when you walk in.

Healing and the Lord's Supper

When I pastored, it was notable how many healings and miracles we had on days when we partook of the Lord's Supper. Aside from the fact that this act honors and obeys Jesus, who commanded it to be done in remembrance of Him (Luke 22:19, 1 Corinthians 11:23-25), it also points to His body that was broken for us so that we could be healed. So it makes sense that when we participate in an act that proclaims the Lord's death – and His bodily suffering before His death – people are reminded of what He did and they more readily receive the benefit of what He did for them.

Most Christians think only about the cross when they think of Jesus' sufferings. But when Isaiah and Peter spoke of physical healing being secured for us, they said that it was by His stripes (Isaiah 53:5, 1 Peter 2:24), NOT by His bloodshed. We too often forget that Jesus' agony did not start when the Romans nailed Him to the cross – He was scourged by the Romans first. He started to carry His own cross (John 19:17) – it was apparently the custom at the time to force a criminal to do that – but it seems that He was unable to carry it the whole way, as someone else had to be forced to carry it for Him (Matthew 27:32, Mark 15:21, Luke 23:26). We would assume, though it is not explicitly stated, that the reason that He could not carry His cross the whole way was because the Romans had broken His body too much and He was too weak and sick to do it Himself. And something far worse was going on – God had to lay our sicknesses on Him as part of the punishment for our sins.

Here is a fact you might never have considered before. Jesus was TORTURED on the cross, but He was not WOUNDED there or BRUISED there aside from having nails driven through Him. He was already wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities before He got to the cross! The wounds and bruising took place when the Romans whipped Him. Historians say that the Roman whips were barbed with sharp objects to inflict a maximum of pain, suffering and tearing on the victim. This punishment, says Isaiah, brought shalom (peace, healing, prosperity, well-being in every area) to us, and with His stripes (the result of His cruel whipping) we are healed (Isaiah 53:5). He shed His blood to pay for our sins, but His lashing at the hands of the Romans paid for our healing.

And so when we celebrate the Lord's Supper, we celebrate BOTH His blood that ratified the New Covenant AND His body that was broken for our healing (per both Isaiah and Peter). This act of "proclaiming" (preaching) His suffering and death is a message that He is glad to confirm with healings and miracles.

Contrary to what some teach today, Jesus never specified how often people should partake of the Lord's Supper. If you want to do it once a month or once every hour, I'm sure it's fine with Him. But as often as you do it (He doesn't say how often), you are to do it in remembrance of Him.

Sooner or later, you may encounter someone who just got the “new” (it isn’t) “Daily Communion Revelation” from “the Lord” based on Acts 2:46: “And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart.” The idea is that the disciples in Acts had daily communion while they were enjoying revival, so if we want revival, we should all have daily communion, too. There are at least 6 problems with this teaching. Keep in mind that if you want to have daily (or more frequent) communion, that’s fine with God, but these 6 problems arise if you try to enforce your preference on everyone else:

Problem #1: Although the church may have practiced it daily, the Lord certainly never commanded that.

Problem #2: We aren’t sure the people in Acts 2 had daily communion anyway. It says that they were in the temple daily, but it doesn’t explicitly say that they broke bread daily.

Problem #3: We aren’t even sure that what they did was the Lord’s Supper. It doesn’t say that they celebrated the Lord’s Supper; it says that they broke bread together. This may simply mean that they ate meals together. After all, it doesn’t say that they broke bread AND drank the fruit of the vine together.

Problem #4: Acts 20:7 says, “And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight.” Again, this may or may not have been the Lord’s Supper as opposed to believers just getting together to eat, as the fruit of the vine was not mentioned.

Many Christians today go out to eat after church without celebrating the Lord’s Supper. (And many servers HATE taking that shift because Christians are such notoriously bad tippers, which is a horrible witness, by the way. I always make sure I leave a tip of the kind that a blessed, generous Christian would leave.) Even if this WAS the Lord’s Supper, it was only practiced once a week and there is no indication that there was anything wrong with that.

Problem #5: The people who say that we have to copy the Early Church in Acts 2:46 would need to copy the Early Church in Acts 2:44-45 to be consistent! If what they did was for all today, we would have to follow this example, too: “And all that believed were together, and had all things common; And sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.” I don’t see the Daily Communion Revelation people doing that, nor should they, for the reason below.

Problem #6: We can prove that the actions of the church in Acts 2 are NOT required of the whole church forever because they were never even required in Acts 2. When Ananias and Sapphira lied and died, Peter pointed out to Ananias that the money was his own to do with as he wished (Acts 5:4): “Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.” It was his own, so he was NOT required to give ANY of it to support the community, even though believers in Acts 2 did so. If we admit, as we should, that Acts 2:44-45 was never a requirement, we should be consistent and admit that the very next verse, Acts 2:46 (the alleged daily communion proof verse) was never a requirement either.

Also, if you want to have daily communion, don't do it because you think it will give you some special inside track that hardly anyone else has because a certain famous minister did it or a famous preacher today does it, and that it will be your ticket to sudden phenomenal power and international stardom. Do it to remind yourself of what Jesus did for you. Don't get in bondage to it by thinking that if you miss a day, you won't be as anointed or spiritual. Leave yourself the option to stop if it becomes just a routine. Sometimes seemingly good things, like having a "prayer list" of 35 people to pray for every day, can become a bore and a chore and be more of a drag than a blessing when they become "works" things that you force yourself to do.

Where you can celebrate the Lord's Supper? Anywhere you want; the Bible places no restrictions on it. The general idea is to "come together" to proclaim the Lord's death together, but there is no prohibition against taking it yourself, though that shouldn't be the only way you do it.

Because the Lord's Supper is so useful to remind you of the healing Jesus purchased, should you partake every time your church does, or should you "examine yourself" and only partake of it if you pass your self-examination? Well, Paul said to examine yourself, but only with the idea that you aren't partaking of it in a manner that hurts the Body of Christ, for example, by hogging the elements as some Corinthians did so that there was nothing left for others. He did not teach that you have to engage in some kind of drastic soul-searching for sin and then partake only if you prove to be "worthy" after your self-examination! That kind of wrong thinking has kept many away from partaking who should be partaking. They get scared of taking something that should be a blessing, lest they be "unworthy" when they partake and bring judgment down on themselves and possibly die.

Let me tell you two things about that – first, JESUS has made you "worthy" to come to the communion table by His blood! It has nothing to do with your works or how good a Christian you think you've been lately. In fact, if you've been a poor excuse for a Christian, you're probably the first one who should partake so that you can be reminded of what the Lord did for you by His grace. Second, being "worthy" or "unworthy" has NOTHING to do with what Paul talked about anyway! You don't have to worry that an unbeliever will "eat and drink damnation to himself" by partaking while "unworthy" because he is unsaved. You don't need special Communion Cops to make sure that only truly saved people partake. That's because the warning is not about partaking while unworthy – it's about partaking in an unworthy manner (unworthily), which is a completely different matter.

The issue Paul had with the Corinthians was that they were partaking in a selfish way that pretty much made fun of what they were doing – seeing the communion elements solely as food to be wolfed down and guzzled. That kind of blatant disrespect for holy things is downright dangerous. It is one of the few ways in the Bible that a New Testament believer can fall under judgment. Paul warned that the Lord (not Satan, by the way) would judge people who acted like that, and that MANY in Corinth were SICK and PREMATURELY DEAD because of this very thing. It was not a good thing for the Corinthians to make light of something that celebrated their healing and salvation! But it was the unworthy manner that was the issue, NOT a state of unworthiness, which you aren't in as a Christian anyway! After all, you are celebrating the blood that was shed for you to make you worthy in God's sight!

Lest you cringe at the notion that a God who is “good all the time” could actually PUT sickness on someone, the Lord’s Supper reminds us of the biggest time in history when God PUT sickness on someone – His own Son when He carried your sins! Isaiah 53:10 (as pointed out elsewhere) literally says that God made Him sick. Why? To punish Him for our sins! The Bible does NOT say that God “allowed Satan” to make Jesus sick! This sickness as punishment came directly from God Himself. (If you’ve taught that God never made anyone sick, there are some other Scriptures in both the Old Testament and the New Testament as well as this one about Christ at Calvary that prove you wrong.) It was God, not Satan, who took vengeance on your sins when Christ bore them. (God says that vengeance is His (Psalm 94:1, Romans 12:19, Hebrews 10:30), not Satan’s. He has not subcontracted vengeance to Satan.) In the curse of the law, it was God who would bring disease on you as punishment. The good news is that YOU don’t have to worry about being made sick for your sins when Christ was already made sick for them. He paid your bill for sin. Once a bill is paid, it doesn’t have to be paid again.

In case you’re wondering, when Jesus commanded the Lord’s Supper before He died, He said that the bread and wine were His body and blood. Obviously that was not true in a LITERAL sense, and it isn’t today, either. The elements don’t literally become His body and blood at some point before you partake of them. So you don’t have to get caught up in having a separate disposal area for unused elements (as some churches do) for fear of washing the holy body and blood of Jesus down the public sewer! (Some people actually worship the elements believing that they ARE Jesus. I’m not sure how amused God is when people who don’t know better worship a bunch of food! At least He knows their hearts.)

Now let’s discuss why Paul said that many were sick and prematurely dead because they weren’t “discerning the Lord’s body.” There are a couple possible applications of this. One is that because of their flippant attitude toward the bread, they were not considering the fact that Jesus’ body was broken for them, and failure to recognize that fact resulted in sickness and death. That may be a minor part of things, but it certainly wasn’t the main issue. The other application, and the one that is Paul’s REAL point, is that they were not discerning the body of Christ (the church) when they robbed each other of the elements. By mistreating their fellow believers, they opened themselves up for judgment.

It is traditionally taught in “faith circles” that the Corinthians were getting sick and dying simply because they did not realize that the Lord’s body was broken for their healing. But simple ignorance of the meaning of the breaking of Christ’s body doesn’t fit the context at all!

1 Corinthians 11:28-31:

But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body.

For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.

For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.

This cannot refer to Christians who simply don't know that Jesus' body was broken for their healing and get sick and die in their ignorance of that fact! (I hope you don't get upset that I've just contradicted your favorite faith teacher. I'm aware that people love it if you say you're going to barbeque sacred cows – until you put THEIR sacred cow on the grill!) In the context, you eat and drink damnation (judgment) on yourself when you don't discern the Lord's body! Just being unaware that Jesus' stripes healed you does NOT being divine judgment down on you! And right after Paul says that for "this cause" many are sick and dead, He warns that if we judge ourselves, we won't be judged. So their sickness and death were directly related to judgment, not ignorance. You'll have to agree if you read the passage above carefully. God does not judge ignorance in the way described in this passage! If He did, most Christians today would be sick and prematurely dead!

But as long as you're not mistreating the Body of Christ around the communion table, you don't have to worry about this kind of judgment falling on you.

We used to have people actually BREAK bread from loaves when we had the Lord's Supper at our church so that they could SEE the symbol of the Lord's body being broken for them. I like the imagery. Perhaps others would be concerned for the sanitary issue of handing bread around and would prefer to have "pre-broken" bread served by the ushers. I don't think that it dishonors the Lord either way; it's a matter of preference – as long as you're doing it in remembrance of Jesus.

People can fight long wars over whether we should serve alcoholic wine or non-alcoholic grape juice, but I don't think the Lord is offended at the use of either kind of "the fruit of the vine." In some places where they don't have grapes they might even have to substitute something else, which is still OK when they honor Jesus as being OUR substitute! I personally used non-alcoholic juice because I didn't want to present a stumbling block either to Christians who would actually think we were making them sin by drinking (though simply drinking without getting drunk is not a sin) or to alcoholics or former alcoholics who might stumble because we were making them "drink." We want to avoid making people stumble – that's another theme in First Corinthians! That's why I don't drink at all. It's not that I couldn't have wine with dinner or a beer after a golf round (if I liked beer), but I would never want someone to see me drink and then end up with an alcohol problem after they think, "Hey, if it's good enough for him, it's good enough for me – I'll drink all I want!"

One of my main concerns about the Lord's Supper is how mechanical we can make it. In the original context in the early church days, people apparently gathered for a meal and partaking of the bread and the wine. We did this one time as a church, though it can be impractical to always do it that way given people's schedules. People had time to really reflect on the Lord's death and what it bought them. When we set up a "1-2-3-go" atmosphere where everything is really fast, people don't have that kind of time to stop and think. This is actually why I favor NOT having communion every week; it's too easy to rush through it because we "have to" get through it. I'd rather take a larger part of a service less often to do it justice. But if you're comfortable doing it every week, that's fine, too – it's another matter of preference.

In Acts 2:42, we see that the people continued steadfastly in breaking of bread together, which may or may not have referred to the Lord's Supper. However, the time element involved with "steadfastly" is not defined.

Regardless of how often we partake, we should be sure to explain to people what the bread and wine (or juice) represent so that they don't just see it as a ritual. It is very valuable to reflect on Jesus' sacrifice for us. That fosters an environment of receiving healing because people focus on the very act that paid for their healing.

It certainly wouldn't hurt you to take time to serve yourself communion daily and remind yourself of the salvation and healing that Jesus paid for you to have, especially if you're battling sickness. There is no Biblical prohibition against serving yourself communion, although there is no case ever mentioned in Scripture where anyone did that or commanded anyone else to do it – the setting in Scripture was always corporate. If you want to tell others the benefits you've experienced doing it, that's fine too, as long as you don't cross the line and tell people that the Bible commands daily communion, which it doesn't.

Healing and Citizenship

I want to share with you something that I think will help you when you are laying hands on the sick.

Your citizenship is in heaven. Philippians 3:20 in the King James Version says that our “conversation” is in heaven, but almost every other translation renders that word “citizenship.”

John 17:14-16:

I have given them thy word; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil.

They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

Though you are in the world, you as Jesus’ disciple do not operate under the “world system.” Your needs are not provided by your employer, Wall Street, the government, or anyone else, even if God uses them as intermediaries. GOD is your source as a believer. You are not to operate in financial fear and greed as the world does. Your supply is now from HEAVEN, not from THIS WORLD, even when it is still “men” who “give unto your bosom” when you’re a giver (Luke 6:38). You are an ambassador for Christ, and we all know that an ambassador’s supply comes from the home country, not the host country.

You are a set-apart one. That’s what “saint” literally means! You are one of God’s own special people. The world has been crucified to you and you to it (Galatians 6:14)!

You are DEAD as far as this world is concerned! You are risen with Christ as a new creature, exempt from the devil’s dominion and the world’s power over you.

Most Christians live in the flesh and see themselves as simply forgiven sinners. That mindset will really hinder you from laying hands on the sick! Even some “faith people” live carnal lives (as they did in Corinth) that are hard to distinguish from the world because they don’t have a revelation of who they REALLY are.

You must see yourself as part of God’s kingdom, which rules over all!

Psalm 103:19:

The LORD hath prepared his throne in the heavens; and his kingdom ruleth over all.

The things you SEE are subject to change, but the Word is NOT subject to change. That which is not subject to change can change that which IS subject to change!

Romans 8:29 tells us that our destiny is to be conformed to Jesus' image! Jesus was not a sinner who wallowed around bemoaning how dirty and rotten He was. You are not "a beggar telling another beggar where to get bread" – you are more than a conqueror. You are no longer identified as a sinner but as a saint. Your destiny is to look like Jesus to this world! If you are not convinced of that, please read Conformed to Christ's Image. We should represent Jesus accurately to the world, offering healing in His name just as He offered healing to all.

The church is "the fullness of Him who fills all in all" (Ephesians 1:23). For us to be His fullness on the earth, we need to do what He did. Otherwise we are not His fullness and it was NOT to our advantage that He went away and sent the Holy Spirit, as He said that it would be (John 16:7).

It helps if you remember these things when you lay hands on the sick. You are operating in a realm that controls the natural realm. You are a duly authorized distributor of Holy Spirit power. You are not just some miserable sinner saved by grace. You were created in God's image in true righteousness and holiness (Ephesians 4:24). Christ left you an example that you should follow in His steps (1 Peter 2:21). (While that refers primarily to how you handle persecution, truly following in His steps would go beyond that.)

So realize that you are operating in a superior realm as you lay hands on a sick person. You are causing something in the natural realm to bow to the more powerful supernatural realm – something Jesus gave you the authority to do in His name.

Remember that you are an ambassador – a representative of heaven, which is now your true native country if you are a Christian. (If you are not a Christian, heaven does not allow illegal immigration – you need to come through the door, which is Jesus.) You are duly authorized to act on behalf of your home country (heaven).

Maybe that will help you and maybe it won't, but I know it's helped me!

Free Access to the Throne!

Only one thing gives you access to God. The shed blood of Jesus Christ guarantees you an immediate audience with God. No work that you can do gives you access to God. Thank God, you don't need to work for it. Jesus gave it to you as part of your redemption.

Hebrews 10:19:

Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus,

Ephesians 2:13:

But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ.

Ephesians 2:18:

For through him [Christ] we both [Gentiles and Israelites] have access by one Spirit unto the Father.

Your righteousness in Christ gives you the ability to approach God at any time, for any reason. There is no veil between you and God as there was under the Old Covenant. In fact, the presence of God Himself, once reserved for the Holy of Holies, is now inside believers, including you! Furthermore, you are seated in heavenly places with Christ (Ephesians 2:6). It should be clear that no barrier between you and God would stop God from hearing you. You do not have to "bombard the gates of heaven" or tire God's ear with the same request over and over.

The Outer Court/Inner Court/Holy of Holies Fallacy

A common, but unscriptural, notion of approaching God holds that you must first enter into His "outer courts" by giving thanks, and then into His "inner courts" by praising, and finally into the "holy of holies" by worshipping. That is simply not true. This notion is generally propagated by music ministers who would like to see themselves as tour guides to the holy of holies instead of the helps ministers (like ushers) that they actually are. It is not New Covenant theology.

In fact, it was never true under the Old Covenant, either. If you weren't the designated priest and you went into the holy of holies, you would be struck dead on the spot, worship or no worship. You never got to go there.

This whole teaching is based on a misinterpretation of Psalm 100:4: “Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise.” This means simply that when you enter the courts of the Lord, do so with thanksgiving and praise. (The gates went into the courts; like most Hebrew poetry, this is phrasing the same thought two ways.) It never meant that thanksgiving got you into the outer court and praise took you into the inner court. No one in the Old Testament ever started thanking God and suddenly said, “Oh, look, I’m in the outer court now! How’d I get here?” then started praising God and said, “Oh, look, I’m suddenly in the inner court. My praise must have taken me here!” The Psalmist didn’t say to enter His gates by thanksgiving – he said to enter them with thanksgiving. See the difference? You can just start fellowshiping with God right now without having to work up thanksgiving and praise first.

Your praise and worship and thanksgiving are important, but you’d better not think for a minute that they give you access to God. It is strictly the blood of Jesus that gives you free access to the throne. The New Testament definitely teaches that you should praise and worship and thank God, but it does not teach that these actions get you an audience with God. They just help you get your flesh under and make you more conscious of what is already yours.

I have nothing against musicians; I am one. I just don’t like bad theology that overinflates the importance of music ministers. You don’t need praise, worship or music to approach God – the blood of Jesus is your “season ticket” to the Holy of Holies.

What to Do in Your Time of Need

If you are sick, you are in need. It is your “time of need.” What should you do in your time of need? Hebrews 4:16 says, “Let us therefore [because we have a great high priest] come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.” Because Jesus Christ’s blood gives you access to the throne, you are supposed to go there and get what you need! If you are sick, you should go and receive the mercy of healing that you need! Notice that the mercy and grace to help are there and you can “obtain” them. God will not withhold them from you.

I remember one time that I was driving and a car was moving in on me from one side and forcing me to the other side of the road, where there was a “butt-end” steel guardrail directly in front of me. (That was before they tapered them up from the ground to avoid having those dangerous butt-ends.) I did not have time to get into God’s outer court through thanksgiving. I did not have time to work my way into God’s inner court with praise. I did not have time to enter God’s holy of holies with worship. I only had time to pray one word: JESUS! That was all I needed. Though I was alone in the car, someone grabbed my steering wheel, got me up on two wheels briefly, and got me away from that situation. I couldn’t have executed that maneuver to save my life, but God did it for me. I had instant access to His throne and got timely help in my time of need. You can do that too. Let’s not complicate what God made easy!

Preparing to Minister Healing

What is the best way to get ready to preach healing, especially in a public gathering? Well, there really ISN'T "a" best way to do it. I don't have a quick little formula or a simple secret to offer, just some observations that I hope will help you.

God may have you prepare differently for different meetings! For me, I know that sometimes I'm going to be teaching (or at least I think I am!), and so my main preparation consists of studying the Word and seeking God as to what in particular to teach. There are only so many topics in the Bible, although there are a lot of them, so I may end up preaching on a subject that I've covered before somewhere else. The Lord may even have me preach a similar message many times in a row in different places. But in no case do I just "take Sermon #52 off the shelf" and preach it – I don't want to have a dry-as-toast meeting. I always seek the Lord for what specifically I should share from the Word for the group of people that will be before me in the upcoming service. I don't think I've ever preached the same message in the same way twice! That's because the Lord knows the needs that are present, and you'll never encounter two different crowds who have exactly the same needs.

I can't stand the idea of "ripping a sermon off the Internet" to make preparation easier. I'm sure it's easier, but it isn't more effective, and I have NEVER done it. You need to preach YOUR message that comes from YOUR heart, not someone else's message from someone else's heart. You can't be someone else, so you should not expect to copy anyone else when you preach, no matter how good he is. You are the #1 authority in the world at being you, and you should be you when you preach. Don't try to be someone else whom you admire.

So even when you're teaching, you need to find out what the Holy Spirit wants to emphasize in that service. Sometimes it will be combination of things you have preached to different groups in the past.

Also, even in a teaching service, you'll often minister to the sick after the message, so you should pray about what specific instructions God might have for that time. He might not give you any such instructions up front (He seldom does with me), and then you just have to follow His leading on the fly. On the other hand, He might show you someone with a specific condition who needs to come up and receive through the gifts of healings and the laying on of hands. You don't have to necessarily spend hours on your face seeking such leadings, but at least "check in with headquarters" so that if the Holy Spirit does have something specific to say, you're listening and you can act on His instructions.

But then there are times when I know in advance that the service won't be a teaching service. In such cases, my whole mode of preparation changes, and I do almost all my praying in the Holy Spirit. I pray out mysteries. I still often don't know anything that will happen until I get there, but at least I will have prayed out the situation before anything happens.

If you flow in the prophet's office, you may find that most of your preparation time is spent praying in the Spirit. Still, any prophet needs to be a teacher of the Word, as you can't just get up and prophesy all night every service. So you still need to pray out messages and stay grounded in the Word so that you don't come up with some outrageous prophecy that you realize later couldn't have really been from the Lord. Also, faith comes by hearing the Word (Romans 10:17), not by hearing prophecies, so you have to make sure that you are putting out the Word so that people can latch onto it.

Should you have dedicated intercessors with you who will pray throughout the service? I hope this doesn't shock you too badly, but Jesus didn't need any "intercession teams" and neither did the apostles. Yes, I've heard about Father Nash who went to places before Charles Finney got there just to pray. But I DO NOT see any command in Scripture to have "intercessors" who "back you up" when you preach. Nor do I see "advance teams" of intercessors going somewhere to "prepare the ground" before Jesus or the apostles taught there.

We DO have people who pray for our ministry and we certainly appreciate them! Jesus even asked for prayer in the garden, and Paul asked people to pray for him on many occasions (among them Ephesians 6:18-19, Philippians 1:19, Colossians 4:3, 1 Thessalonians 5:25 and 2 Thessalonians 3:1-2). I'm not greater than they are, so I want people to pray for me. But it's possible to get carried away and think that if you don't have someone interceding, Jesus won't heal the sick the way He wants to. We do not see that taught anywhere in Scripture. (There are even some "intercessors" who will take the credit for anything that happens in your meeting because they think that they "prayed it out," but I consider that obnoxious. Let's just give Jesus the credit and do the works that He said that we could do in His name.)

When Jesus said that we would do the works that He did and greater (John 14:12), lay hands on the sick (Mark 16:18), have other signs follow us (Mark 16:17-18), and so on, He never said that it was contingent upon having "intercessors" pray everything through. By the way, there is no ministry office of intercessor, lest people who pray get carried away with their own importance. We should ALL pray. The first person who should pray for your ministry is YOU. If you "farm out" praying for your ministry to "intercessors," you are missing God in a horrible way. You will probably end up falling, and you wouldn't be the first one to do so for that reason. Do not fob your prayer life onto anyone else! If you think that you can just listen to secular music all day and show up and improvise or just preach a "canned" message, you will probably fall the way one such acquaintance did – it's only a matter of time. The people used mightily in the Bible had to pray, and so do you.

On the other hand, I used to unwittingly let the devil kick me around in my thought life because he would always tell me that I hadn't prayed or prepared "enough" for a service. In his book, no amount of prayer or preparation is ever enough! You can get duped, as I used to be, into thinking that success in the service requires you to get everything just right and be mega-"prayed up" and be at the pinnacle of your Christian walk. The devil WISHES that this were true! But he knows – and so should you – that the Holy Spirit in you is greater than any tough situation, and that He can and does use imperfect, ordinary people like YOU in imperfect situations!

You can prepare for a service and have unexpected car trouble on the way over or hit an unexpected traffic jam. Or once you get there, there can be weird sound system issues like a 60-cycle A/C “hum” that just doesn’t seem to want to go away no matter what you plug in where, and you don’t want to endanger people and equipment by “lifting the grounds” to get rid of the hum. Or you find out after much effort that a microphone cable is busted and needs to be replaced. None of these things will stop the Holy Spirit from moving! They might annoy or even frazzle you somewhat, but they will not frazzle the Holy Spirit.

If at all possible, you want to be at a service plenty early and do a sound check – especially if you’re the person who has to set up the sound system! You don’t want to be working out sound problems such as excessive feedback due to misplacement of microphones and/or monitors five minutes before you’re supposed to get up there and flow in the Holy Spirit.

But despite your most careful and diligent preparation, something can happen right before a service that throws off your routine. Maybe someone you know calls with a sudden emergency and wants prayer. Maybe some flaky person on the worship team is causing trouble and needs to be dealt with. In other words, you are faced with an unpredictable-in-advance, less-than-perfect situation. Does that mean that the flow of the Holy Spirit will be hindered? It will only be hindered if you let these things “get to you” so that you get into the flesh and aren’t stop led by the Holy Spirit. We can see in the Bible that the Holy Spirit is perfectly able to flow in tough circumstances! Don’t you suppose it was a little tough for Jesus and Paul when they preached in places where some people wanted them dead? Do you suppose it was easy for them when unbelieving Jewish religious leaders were doing their best to spew their unbelief all over the place to undermine their ministry? I don’t see where Jesus, Paul or the others EVER had it “easy!” And they did everything without sound systems or worship teams who traveled with them! Thank God, the Holy Spirit is greater than all adverse circumstances!

The Bible tells us to be instant in season and out of season (2 Timothy 4:2: “Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine”). So the Bible predicts that there will be “out of season” times when everything doesn’t seem to line up right, and it’s still the time to be quick to preach the Word!

What about binding the devil? Should you “bind the devil” so that he can’t mess with your service? This might shock you too, but I don’t see where the disciples were ever taught, “Bind the devil and THEN heal the sick.” Actually, when you heal the sick, that IS where you are binding the devil – you’re binding his works and thus stopping him from working! The devil manifested himself through demons when Jesus ministered on many occasions. Is this because Jesus was unaware that you could “bind the devil” to stop him or his demons from manifesting in a service? I don’t think so! I don’t see any “bind the devil from the service” verse in the New Testament, despite the fact that this is a very common prayer you hear before services. I can testify that the sick can be healed quite nicely without such a prayer. In fact, maybe they can be healed more easily, because a different mindset is involved on the preacher’s part – “The devil’s on the loose! I’d better bind him or in his great might, he’ll ruin the service,” vs. “The devil is already defeated anyway, so I don’t have to pray to defeat him. Jesus and I are just going to go destroy his works and there isn’t anything the devil can do to stop us!”

If a demon manifests openly, we can stop it and cast it out. But what about demons that just influence people’s thinking? Can we just “bind” them? If so, we have a greater revelation than Jesus had, because right in His very presence, Satan influenced Peter’s thinking to try to get Peter to try to talk Jesus out of going to the cross! If there was a “we bind you Satan” prayer, surely Jesus would have known about it and demonstrated it so that Satan could not influence anyone in His presence! Then He could have repeated that prayer when Satan entered Judas in His presence after the Passover meal.

That is where the weapons of our warfare come in. We speak the WORD, and the WORD will destroy strongholds in people’s minds. It is light that dispels darkness, not saying “we come against any darkness here in Jesus’ name.”

As mentioned elsewhere in this book, we most certainly do not have to bind “ruling spirits”, “principalities,” “powers,” and so on over geographic areas before we preach – no one ever did that in the Bible. They are powerless to stop you, so they will have to just stay where they are and sulk while you advance the kingdom of God.

Can we “bind every human spirit” in a service (as some Pentecostals have prayed)? No, you do not have one whit of authority over any other person’s spirit, so you are completely wasting your time and demonstrating ignorance through such a prayer. Your prayers can never override anyone else’s free will. If someone gets mad and storms out, God won’t stop him. (I can vouch for that many times over!)

I like to meditate on healing and authority Scriptures before a service when I know I’ll be ministering healing. That’s just my preference; you don’t have to do that.

I believe that God gave us the ability to fantasize for reasons other than sinning by thinking lustfully about someone of the opposite sex. I enjoy fantasizing about raising up seriously sick people. I’ve seen it in real life, but I like to build into my thinking the idea that nothing is too hard of a case for God. I think that it is useful to picture yourself laying hands on the blind and having them see, laying hands on the deaf and having them hear, and so on! Not all “imaginings” need to be cast down – some should be encouraged! God does not require you to crucify your imagination when you get saved!

At this point, some anti-healing people will probably cite me for practicing “New Age visualization techniques” or some such thing. In fact, fear of such may be why most Christians DON’T picture themselves healing the sick or even getting healed themselves. They’re afraid that any use of their imagination is ungodly. Perhaps up until now a lot of their use of their imagination HAS been ungodly. But that is by choice. GOD does not make anyone use his imagination to fantasize about having a beautiful woman’s spouse die and his own spouse die so that he can end up with the beautiful woman. GOD gave you an imagination – it isn’t the devil’s invention. It is up to YOU to use it for godly thoughts or devilish thoughts.

I would dare to say that EVERYONE reading this book uses his imagination constantly – for good or for bad! Either you see yourself healed and able to function normally, or you see yourself suffering and popping pills while “grinding out” the disease until its natural end. You see yourself as a success going somewhere to happen or as a failure going somewhere to happen. You see yourself happily married, or you see yourself unhappily married, or happily or unhappily single. You have pictures in your mind of what your future holds – but if they don’t line up with the Word, you need to renew your mind with the Word so that those pictures match what God says.

I am not the first to suggest using your imagination with the Word. It is what God told Joshua to do – he was supposed to meditate on the Word day and night (Joshua 1:7-8). The righteous person in Psalm 1:1-3 is supposed to do the same. So constantly thinking on the Word is a Bible concept, not a New Age concept. There is little question that the woman with the issue of blood “saw” something on the inside as she kept saying, “If I can only touch His clothes, I’ll be healed!” (Mark 5:25-34). (The Greek word translated said in the King James Version is the “imperfect” verb form, which means that she kept saying something rather than only saying it once.)

Do we have to FAST before we minister? Jesus said that in the days when He was gone, His disciples would fast, so fasting should be part of our lives, absent a medical reason that wouldn’t allow it for now. I personally have never gone on a total fast (water only) for more than 4 days. I’ve met at least 3 people at this writing who’ve gone 40 days, but I have no plans to do that. ONE of them has had quite a bit of success at this writing, but another one almost lost his mind, his ministry and his life. Personally, I like to fast a meal before ministering to help me stay “sharp,” but that’s my personal preference, not something that I preach as doctrine, because there is no Scripture commanding it. You have to find what works for you – everyone’s different. Fasting and prayer will help eliminate the Flesh Freakout Factor, which is a good thing.

Can we mingle with people before we minister? I don't see why not, as long as they're not trying to hit you for pastoral advice that they should not be coming to you for anyway, or trying to pile on prayer requests or tell you their horrid life stories. Some ministers like to be kept separate from people, and there are people I'd like to be separate from as well, but this again is a preference matter. Back when I thought I had to be "hyper-spiritual" before a service, I would not want to be around people, lest my anointing "leak," but I've outgrown that! I had to realize that it is JESUS, through His NAME, that is the source of people's healing – not my superlative preparation! If it were due to some special preparation formula, I could start taking credit for things, at least in my thought life. I try to be all prepared long before I show up somewhere so that I'm not in last-minute "cram before the exam" mode. I don't want to flip through my Bible during worship, thus setting an example for everyone else that they can "tune out" during worship too and just flip through their own Bibles. (I always hated it when guest speakers did that!)

I am also convinced that one of the most spiritual things you can do before and during a series of services is to get plenty of rest. I try to do that. Things come up, but not everything is an emergency that just can't wait. You can flow better in the Holy Spirit when you're not feeling drained physically.

One final thought about preparation. We are all different, so God relates to different people in different ways. Someone might have God-given dreams, another visions, another divine visitations, and MOST OF US none of the above! Joseph (Mary's husband) seemed to get spoken to in dreams, but others were spoken to in other ways. God knows how to relate to YOU in a way that YOU can "get." Don't think that you have to pray and prepare the same way that someone else does just because that other person is getting good results. You can "be you" around God. Let Him speak to you as He wishes.

If you're looking for a preparation formula, here's my advice – there isn't any preparation formula! There is a PERSON, the Lord Jesus Christ! He heals people through His Body. Formulas do not heal people. Your results will be based on the life in the Vine flowing through you, the branch. Without Him you can do nothing (John 15:5). So commune with Him and enjoy the preparation process. Rest in the knowledge that He will work with you and back you with signs following when you preach His Word, even if the conditions are not completely perfect!

BEING Anointed vs. FEELING Anointed

Wouldn't it be nice to have a healing ministry and feel a "whoosh" of the Holy Spirit's power every service when you lay hands on sick people? I'd certainly like that, and I already have a healing ministry! I don't feel a "power shower" every time I lay hands on the sick, and neither does anyone else. There are times when I feel absolutely nothing even while the person I'm ministering to struggles to stay vertical. At other times, no one feels anything! I saw a man with a busted back and a blind eye get healed when NO ONE felt anything – my friend who laid hands on him, the man, me, or anyone else. No one involved even felt anything for the rest of the service when it came to this man. But he came back the next night healed!

I am not against healing ministers putting out "highlight reels" of dramatic miracles, and in many of the cases in these collections of great moments, the minister might have felt the power of God in a dramatic way. However, that is not daily reality in the healing ministry. The potential drawback with such collages of notable healings is that they can leave the impression that the minister sees such manifestations every single service. I can relate to that because I can remember watching some "greatest hits" videos from healing ministers and just assuming that those ministers had tapped into some far greater anointing than I could ever hope to have. Then I asked myself what was wrong with me and sort of kicked myself for not having figured out their secret to always being God's man of power for the hour, operating constantly in jaw-dropping manifestations of the Spirit. I didn't know then what I know now – those ministers DON'T operate that way every service! I can understand not putting out a special "underwhelming moments" video collection from the local Nazareths where they preached and hardly anything happened. That would be very boring and uninspiring to watch. But remember, the greatest preacher ever – Jesus – did no mighty works in Nazareth. He also told His disciples how to handle cases where people in a city rejected His gospel. He didn't say, "Fast and pray harder and longer until you've broken all the demonic strongholds over that city so that you can have miracles after all. When you're God's man of power for the hour, you can always have incredible miracles everywhere you go every service!" His instructions were much simpler – leave and preach somewhere else!

Luke 10:10-11:

But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say,

Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

So you can see that Jesus did NOT guarantee healings, miracles and success everywhere even for the original 12 apostles of the Lamb! So you will kick yourself unnecessarily if you think that YOU should have amazing rushes of Holy Spirit power going through you everywhere you go when it's time to lay hands on the sick.

In fact, the apostles in the book of Acts did not have universal “success” in getting people saved! There was usually an angry mob of Jews around who rejected the gospel. Even Paul, who wrote many New Testament books, didn’t manage to convince everyone:

Acts 28:23-24:

And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him into his lodging; to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening.

And some believed the things which were spoken, and some believed not.

You are not greater than Jesus, Paul and the Apostles of the Lamb, so don’t lay unrealistic expectations upon yourself. God only holds you responsible for preaching His Word. You are not responsible for the response!

One trap to avoid, especially after watching dramatic video clips, is to assume that the Holy Spirit is only able to move in power on occasions when you feel like electricity is going through you. If you make this mistake, you’ll back off when it comes to laying hands on sick people when you DON’T feel anointed. You can assume that laying hands on the sick won’t work on that occasion, taking sides with your feelings against God’s Word, which says that you WILL do the things Jesus did and greater (John 14:12) and that you WILL lay hands on the sick and they will recover (Mark 16:18).

If you are baptized with the Holy Spirit, you HAVE received power (Acts 1:8) – the same dumamis power that Jesus had after the Holy Spirit descended upon Him. However, Jesus never promised, “You shall always FEEL like you have power after I baptize you with the Holy Spirit.” Sometimes your flesh might not even feel like getting out of bed, let alone laying hands on a bunch of people. You do not have to FEEL anointed to BE anointed. You ARE anointed if you are Spirit-baptized. You HAVE power. You can go ahead by faith and lay hands on sick people in the name of Jesus without feeling a thing.

Jesus didn’t feel like going to the cross, but He went anyway. His followers are not to be led by their feelings any more than He was. You cannot avoid having feelings as a human being, but you CAN avoid being LED by them! If you decide not to lay hands on someone because you don’t feel anointed, you have just put your feelings in front of God’s Word, which is a sure formula for failure. FEELING anointed is not the same thing as BEING anointed. Good feelings and dramatic senses of voltage going through you will not happen all the time no matter who you are. But the anointing still abides in you anyway (1 John 2:20, 1 John 2:27). You HAVE the anointing! The Holy Spirit, who did Jesus’ miracles, abides in you forever (John 14:16). He is not in you one minute and gone the next, even if your feelings tell you otherwise.

Let’s face it – you don’t always “feel” saved, do you? Salvation is a fact for the Christian, not a feeling. Think how miserable things would be if you always had to “feel” the Lord’s presence with you or “feel” that you are saved to know that you are really saved. It is no different with your Christ-given authority to minister to the sick. The just shall not live by feelings – they shall live by faith (Habakkuk 2:4, Romans 1:17, Galatians 3:11, Hebrews 10:38).

Some would say, "I'm TRYING to believe all this." But believing is a CHOICE. If it were not your choice to believe God's Word or not, God would be unjust to punish you if you failed to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and escape hell. Your eternal destiny depends upon your choice. But your results laying hands on the sick (or backing away from it) depend on your choice, too. Once you know what God has said on the matter of laying hands on the sick, it is now your CHOICE to act on the Word. You cannot blame your feelings if your feelings are contrary. You don't lay hands on the sick because you FEEL LIKE it works; you do it because you are acting on God's Word, which is always the right thing to do.

I'm sure that there are readers out there who are where I used to be with these things. I thought that I needed to FEEL something, and if I didn't, something was wrong. So I would strive vigorously to get "prayed up enough" to feel something, and when I didn't, I assumed that I needed to get "prayed up" even more. Looking back, what I "felt" was probably more me trying to work myself into an emotional frenzy than anything really having to do with the Holy Spirit. I am glad that those days are behind me! I now realize that Jesus never said that I would have power after I received the Holy Spirit only when I FELT like it and when I was prayed up enough. The devil will always define "enough" as the amount of time you can actually pray plus a little bit more. Don't get on that treadmill. Does the Word of God work or doesn't it? Does it require you to be "prayed up" to work effectually in those who believe? Are you going to trust the Word to work, or trust your "prayed up" state to get the job done?

Please understand that I am not minimizing the need to pray. Jesus needed to pray, and so do you! But when Jesus encountered the demonized child in Mark 9:17-29, He didn't have time to go get "prayed up" for a few hours before He could minister deliverance. You won't always have time to pray right at the moment, either. I know from experience that sometimes a demon will manifest when you don't expect it, and you have to just deal with it at the moment rather than coming back another time when you feel like you are more "prayed up."

Even Jesus had to put His feelings aside. He wanted some "space" after He found out that His cousin John had been murdered. Wouldn't you want some "alone time" if your cousin just got killed? I doubt that He "felt like" healing a lot more sick people just then. But here's what happened:

Matthew 14:13-14:

When Jesus heard of it, he departed thence by ship into a desert place apart: and when the people had heard thereof, they followed him on foot out of the cities.

And Jesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, and was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick.

Jesus put His mission before His feelings.

Even in a service when you lay hands on the sick, sometimes you need to "shut your head off" and FLOW with the Holy Spirit. Let your sole objective be acting on the Word, not reasoning everything out. Reason will tell you that you have no business laying hands on obviously serious conditions. The devil will try to tell you, "It isn't going to work THIS time!" You can reason your way out of seeing really jarring miracles. No one is going to get a miracle if you chicken out when it's time to lay hands on the sick.

I used to think, “If only I could be like my friend who has conducted large crusades in Africa – it would be nice to lay hands on the sick without any contrary nagging thoughts going through my head! Surely he doesn’t deal with that at this stage of his ministry when dozens of blind or deaf people have gotten healed in single services!” Then I talked to him about this one day and found out that he had the same nagging thoughts I did while he was in the middle of a prayer line – he just had to press through them and act on the Word just as the rest of us do.

Jesus said that out of your belly (when you’re baptized with the Spirit) shall FLOW rivers of living water (John 7:37-39). He did not say that you would have to PUMP OUT rivers of living water by turning the prayer crank enough until you’re prayed up and something can happen. His intention is that living water should FLOW out of you the way that water FLOWS in a mighty river without anyone having to get behind the water and shove it downstream!

You are in Christ Jesus. The word Christ means Anointed or by extension “The Anointed One.” You are in Anointed Jesus! Let that sink in. You can exercise authority in the name of Jesus the Anointed One. The same Spirit of the Lord who was upon Anointed Jesus is now upon YOU. If the Holy Spirit isn’t anointed, I don’t know who is! YOU HAVE THE ANOINTING. It will help you to confess that out loud – “I have the anointing!”

Let me tell you, there is a WONDERFUL sense of freedom when you get past putting the burden on yourself to be sufficiently prayed up and you just go act on the Word no matter how you feel! You lay hands on the sick in FAITH alone – not based on your feelings or anything to do with YOU. The devil always wants you to get introspective and find some reason why YOU supposedly fall short of being able to do what Jesus plainly said that you could do. With the devil, it’s all about YOU! Let it be all about JESUS instead! Rather than waiting for thrilling goosebumps, just act on the Word and have confidence that God will hasten His Word to perform it (Jeremiah 1:12).

The Flesh Freakout Factor

Jesus repeatedly emphasized that VERY small faith could accomplish literally anything. Man puts a premium on having “big faith,” but I don’t think that you can read the gospels and conclude that our problem is needing bigger faith. Jesus said that if you had faith like a mustard seed – minuscule – you could command a mountain to move and it would obey you – and NOTHING would be impossible to you (Matthew 17:20, Matthew 21:21, Mark 11:23). He also said that if you had faith like a mustard seed, you could command a tree to be uprooted and planted into the sea it would obey you (Luke 17:5-6). In that second passage, Jesus’ answer was a response to His disciples who asked Him to give them more faith. He didn’t do it, but instead told them to USE their faith. So “big faith” does not seem to be the issue but rather using it.

This leads us to conclude that the issue when you encounter what seems in the natural to be a difficult situation is not an issue of having faith, but rather an issue of exercising faith. So when a “serious” issue confronts you, something could stop you from exercising faith that would not stop you if the issue were more minor. What could that something be? I call it the Flesh Freakout Factor.

If someone needs a minor shoulder pain healed, you usually can’t even see any evidence of the problem. No sense knowledge bombards your flesh, telling it that this situation is too much to handle. Now suppose someone in the hospital is dying of cancer. The person reeks, he looks hideous, the doctors and nurses are discussing how to “keep him comfortable” before his imminent and inevitable death, and you are surrounded by pre-grieving relatives who just know that this is the end for him. Now your flesh is bombarded from all sides with natural sensory evidence that this man is not going to make it.

Now from God’s perspective and from the perspective of your anointing to minister to the sick, it is no harder to heal that cancer case than the minor shoulder pain case. Jesus did not put limits on how sick the sick could be when you lay hands on them for healing in His name! He simply said that the sick will recover (Mark 16:18). His promise applies to someone sick with a shoulder pain or sick with terminal cancer or sick with AIDS or sick with anything else.

But two things can fight against you – your mind, to the extent that it is unrenewed with the Word, and your flesh. A minor issue won’t stir your flesh, but your flesh can freak out when a situation is really bad. That’s when you’ll find out if your mind responds naturally with what the Word says or with what your flesh says. That will depend on how much you have renewed your mind with the Word – or failed to pick up a Bible lately because you’re too busy watching secular TV shows and trading social media posts.

I believe that the disciples’ failure to deliver the demonized boy was a case of the Flesh Freakout Factor. This demon was a nasty one that didn’t mind showing off in front of people to try to get them into the flesh (and thus, into unbelief).

We also see this principle at work in Nazareth, where a few people got healed but no major miracles occurred. We forget sometimes that their unbelief wasn't absolute – Jesus DID get some probably minor cases healed. But He was NOT able to get the unbelieving crowd to go along with Him when notable miracles were needed, so no notable miracles happened there. (Someone objected that there just must not have been anyone in the crowd who needed a big miracle, but that argument is easily debunked – the lack of miracles was because of their unbelief (Mark 6:1-6) – not because of their lack of people who needed miracles.

So while all things are possible to us who believe (Mark 9:23), we can reach a practical barrier when our flesh screams doubt at us and we haven't trained our flesh to stay under well enough to offset its protests. This is why Jesus talked about prayer and fasting when it came to harder demon cases (Matthew 17:21) – these disciplines help keep us flesh from dominating us and thus enable us to handle more difficult circumstances.

We see this on the Sea of Galilee when Peter got out of boat and walked on the water during a storm (Matthew 14:28-31). I don't know if the storm suddenly gusted harder or what, but Peter got his attention on the storm instead of Jesus' word and he started to sink. Now, is it harder to walk on water when the wind is blowing 60 miles an hour than when it's only blowing 25 miles an hour? Logically, it would not seem so – walking on water under ANY conditions (when it isn't frozen) is a major act of faith! But it DID matter in a practical sense to Peter. Apparently he was OK at first, but when he noticed that the wind and waves were really boisterous, the Flesh Freakout Factor kicked in. His senses were bombarded with information that indicated that he had to go down and he would not make it to Jesus.

As long as you live on this earth, you will have to deal with the Flesh Freakout Factor. Your flesh is unspiritual and never will be spiritual in this lifetime. You can't get rid of it and stay on the earth. So your only hope is to keep it under. The more you walk in the Spirit, the less you will gratify your flesh (Galatians 5:16). The more you fast, the more your flesh will fall in line and stop fighting you every step of the way. I don't do long fasts; I've never found that I have to fast a long time before my flesh will stop screaming at me, trying to dominate me. So don't go overboard and think that you need to pray 4 hours a day and go on a 40-day fast to ever make it in life. But if you don't want to get stopped by the Flesh Freakout Factor when you really need to believe God for a miracle, you need to train your flesh to stay under.

Sometimes you can prepare for an event, like a crusade, when you know you will need to have your flesh in line, but at other times, a situation like the one with the demonized boy can appear out of nowhere. At that point, you've either trained your flesh not to dominate you or you haven't. When you keep your flesh under as a lifestyle, you will be ready for any unexpected situation that requires a miracle.

Preaching the Name of Jesus Christ

Acts 8:12:

But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.

Philip preached the name of Jesus Christ and proceeded to see miracles of sufficient quality and quantity that the atmosphere of the city was changed – there was great joy in that city!

We, like Philip, should preach that name. Preach that there is forgiveness in the name of Jesus Christ! Preach that there is healing in the name of Jesus Christ! Preach that there is deliverance in the name of Jesus Christ! Preach that there is the meeting of EVERY need in the name of Jesus Christ!

You can preach on a lot of topics, but if you want to see miracles as Philip did at Samaria, you need to preach the name of Jesus Christ so that people can call on that name and be saved. And you need to preach the fullness of what is available in that name – not just “fire insurance” so that people can avoid hell. Avoiding hell is part of the gospel, but there is a lot more to the New Covenant than that!

If you only preach that you can call on the name of Jesus to be saved from hell, people will be saved from hell but not healed. But if you also preach that you can call on the name of Jesus to be saved from sickness, people will be saved from sickness. Faith comes by hearing the Word (Romans 10:17)! Let everyone know ALL the benefits that are available in His name so that you can see miracles as Philip did!

Healing and Prosperity

If there were no specific promise in the whole Bible saying that healing is yours, it could be proved simply by citing the scriptures that promise financial abundance to the child of God. You can't prosper financially while stuck in bed with a splitting headache for three days. You can't enjoy success in life and reign as a king while on a morphine pump.

God told Joshua to continually meditate (dwell on and mutter) the commands of God so that he would do them and prosper:

Joshua 1:8:

This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success.

Being laid up in the hospital is not the road to prosperity, unless we're talking about the prosperity of your medical specialists! Being incapacitated is not having good success. Therefore, if you learn and obey the Word of God, you should not be sick. You should be successful. If cancer cuts you down in mid-life, you are not successful inasmuch as you lose your chance to succeed in later years.

It is NOT God's will for you now any more than it was back then for you to spend all your money on physicians but not improve but rather grow worse. The woman in Mark 5:25-34 was hemorrhaging money while she was hemorrhaging blood. It was God's will to heal her and stop BOTH kinds of bleeding. He and His will do not change, so you KNOW what His will is today.

Part of the "curse of the law" from which we are redeemed is poverty and lack. If you're unable to work and lacking so that you can't go do anything, you are experiencing something that God calls a curse.

The Biblical concept of prosperity goes beyond financial wealth and includes well-being in every area of your life. (Some opponents of faith are usually quick to point this out, but they may want to back off when they see that this works against them when opposing healing.) Being sick is not being well. As in 3 John 2, healing and prosperity go together, just as poverty and sickness go together in the terrible "curse of the law" found in Deuteronomy 28:15-68 and elsewhere.

Prosperity also has a role in furthering the preaching of the gospel. It takes money to go preach the new birth and divine healing. You may be a fine moral Christian, but you are not in a much of a position to back the preaching of the gospel financially if your current address is the Sisters of Nice Mercy Home for the Indigent. If Christians everywhere would wake up to God's will being prosperity, there would be a lot more money available to send preachers everywhere to proclaim the full gospel that includes healing.

Abraham's Blessing Is Yours

If you are in Christ, you already have something called "the blessing of Abraham." You do not need to get it. You already have it now. You don't receive it by your works. You received it when you were saved. Whether you ever walk in the light of it or not, Abraham's blessing is yours already!

Let's prove this in Galatians 3:

"Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham. And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed. So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham." – Galatians 3:7-9

"Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree: that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles, through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith." – Galatians 3:13-14

"Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." – Galatians 3:16.

"And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." – Galatians 3:29

You are a partaker of the blessing of Abraham because you are in Christ. It has nothing to do with your works.

One of the conspicuous blessings Abraham had was great wealth. This is why you should not run around acting and talking like the devil is keeping money away from you. If you say that, he'll be happy to mess with your money, thus fulfilling what you're believing with your heart and saying with your mouth. But the truth is, he can't keep it from you because you already have the blessing of Abraham. You're not trying to get it. You have it now. You just need to act and talk in agreement with that.

What does this have to do with healing, and why is this included in a discussion of healing? Abraham enjoyed good health. Isaac was born to him when he was a hundred years old. Years later he was able to climb a mountain to offer Isaac as a sacrifice. This guy was definitely in good shape for that age. And that's not all! When Sarah died, Abraham remarried – and had six more kids by his second wife (Genesis 25:1-2)! In all, Abraham lived 165 years (Genesis 25:7-8). Long life was one way that God blessed him.

Yeah, but can we really think that health is part of the blessing of Abraham? You can think what you want, but what Jesus thought is in Luke 13:11-16. Jesus said that the woman "ought to be healed" because she was a daughter of Abraham. It appears that Jesus considered good health to be part of the blessing of Abraham, which you now have. Therefore, you should enjoy this part of the blessing. Remember, this blessing is already yours. You're not trying to get it – you already have it! Act and talk in a way that reflects that fact.

Priests Should Not Be Sick, and You're a Priest

Leviticus 21:16-23

Priests with physical deformities were not allowed into the Holy of Holies under the Old Covenant. God said that entering His sanctuary with a physical deformity would profane it. God did not want sickness or deformity in His holy presence.

If God did not want His priests who served Him to have physical deformities under the Old Covenant, why would He want His priests under the New Covenant to be sick or deformed? You are a priest (Revelation 1:6, Revelation 5:10, 1 Peter 2:9) under the New Covenant!

That doesn't mean that you can't approach God if you're sick or have a birth defect! The blood of Jesus has permanently opened the Holy of Holies to you. In fact, you should go to God! God healed the sick under the Old Covenant, too. The point I am making is that God did not want sickness in His presence under the Old Covenant. Why should He want it in His presence, which now dwells within believers, under our New Covenant? If He didn't want it in His Old Covenant temple (a tent), why should He want it in His New Covenant temple (your body)? What landlord would want his property to be a mess?

This is yet another proof that God is against sickness, not in favor of it. He is FOR you (Romans 8:31). What He is against is you having to endure sickness.

Don't Get Sick When You Get Old

God's desire that you be in health (3 John 2) has no age limit. As long as you are on this earth, God wants you well. "By whose stripes you were healed" (1 Peter 2:24) applies in old age, too! Therefore, you do not have to be afflicted with the diseases that often come on older people. You are still redeemed from every sickness, and you can still flourish.

Psalm 92:13-14:

Those that be planted in the house of the LORD shall flourish in the courts of our God.
They shall still bring forth fruit in old age; they shall be fat and flourishing.

It is the devil's lie that you have to become senile and decrepit and have to utterly depend on others in some facility to care for you when you get old. God says that you can flourish in old age. Look at Moses, who lived to be 120, yet "his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated" (Deuteronomy 34:7), or Caleb, who was still as strong and ready to slay giants at 85 as he was at 40 (Joshua 14:10-12). If those Old Covenant men of God were able to do that, surely a New Covenant believer must be able to do it! So I'm not going to sing about a coming day when my strength is failing and confess that I'm weak and poor. (I wish people paid more attention to the words of the songs they decide to use.)

You do not have to get sick to die. You can choose to go home to be with the Lord when you are satisfied. Paul said that he had a choice to depart and be with Christ or to stay on the earth, which was more needful for the people (Philippians 1:22-23). It was Paul's choice, not the devil's choice through sickness.

You don't have to age the same way the world does. Satan, not God, was the one who put premature wrinkles on Job (Job 16:8). This does not mean that you are under God's judgment if you get wrinkles; Job blamed everything that the devil was doing on God. Also, there's no condemnation if you get some wrinkles when you get older, but Satan is the one who wants you to age prematurely.

God concludes Psalm 91 by saying that He will satisfy you with long life and show you His salvation. Long life is not satisfying if it is spent wasting away in pain or debility in a nursing home (or assisted living center, or whatever euphemism is currently in vogue for a place that cares for those who can't care for themselves). God doesn't want to torture you with long life. He doesn't want you to spend your later years wishing you could die. He wants your long life to be satisfying, and He wants to show you His salvation, including healing, throughout your long, satisfying life!

Jesus never once refused to heal someone because of the person's age. You won't find anywhere in the gospels where He said, "You're too OLD, and besides, God wants to use that disease to call you home because it's your FINAL ILLNESS, so I won't heal you." If Jesus never said it then, He'll never say it today. He healed ALL kinds of diseases, and this would include what we consider old-age illnesses. He hasn't changed (Hebrews 13:8), so He is just as willing to heal all your diseases, including "old-age" diseases, as He ever was.

Don't even joke about having "senior moments" – unless you want to build into your thinking the idea that you have to start mentally "losing it" when you get older. Likewise, don't blame sickness on your age, as if to say that you HAVE to have a certain condition because you're getting older. Don't get a "Wait until you get to be my age, you young whipper-snapper!" attitude as some do when you preach these things! What that says is that you accept sickness as part of aging, which it is clear from Scripture that you should not do!

Instead of believing that your body has to break down, believe that God renews your youth like the eagle's (Psalm 103:5). Instead of making "old man grunts," thank God that you are fit and flourishing even in old age. Rather than saying to everyone, "I'm getting too old for this!" it would be better to say, "I'm NOT too old for this!" Surely if Caleb and Moses could keep their strength under an inferior covenant, we should not expect to fall apart physically and be beset with ailments with various medical names that describe body parts that stop functioning correctly! Be sure that Jesus' words are right – you WILL have what you say and believe with your heart! So it would behoove you to make sure that what you're saying and believing about yourself is the same thing that the BIBLE says about you!

I had a grandmother who told me from the time I was a child that she was getting old and someday she'd have to be put away in a home. She said it and believed it, and that's what happened. Don't make her mistake. That doesn't have to happen to you!

Until you're ready to go home to your eternal reward, healing belongs to you, so believe God and stay healthy! Don't ever accept any illness because you think you're so old that you have to put up with it. You don't have to put up with ANY form of disease no matter how old you are!

For more on this topic, see the answer to the Objection: If You Could Always Get Healed, You Would Live Forever.

Quit Worrying about Your Health!

Worry is a sin. If you're worrying about anything, you're out of the will of God, you're sinning and you need to repent! You can worry yourself sick or even to death. You can make yourself sick worrying when you were perfectly healthy to begin with!

A major obstacle for some people to overcome is the "My daddy had it, my daddy's daddy had it..." syndrome. It does not matter if the last 40 generations in your family had it, you don't have to have it. Even if you are "genetically predisposed" to it, God's healing covenant covers whatever it is. You do not have to suffer the same fate your ancestors did. Even if getting sick is a family tradition, you've been redeemed from the aimless conduct handed down in your family (1 Peter 1:18)! Let your covenant, not your chromosomes, determine what happens to you.

The absolute last thing you should do is to keep saying, "It's only a matter of time until I get it. It runs in the family. I should enjoy my health now while I still have it, because I know what's coming." God says that death and life are in the power of your tongue (Proverbs 18:21), and that if you speak something and believe it in your heart, it will be yours (Mark 11:23). So if you believe you're going to get it and say you're going to get it, you are going to get it, even if you wouldn't have gotten it otherwise. This applies to both health and sickness. The same principle works for either – which do you want to expect and say?

Study God's healing covenant until thoughts of healing crowd out the thoughts of getting and staying sick. This is not mind control; this is mind renewal (Romans 12:2)! You will never quit worrying just by trying harder not to worry. You won't stop any sin by trying harder not to sin. You overcome sin by filling yourself with God's Word until you think and act on God's Word instead of sinning.

You don't have to worry about your health. Faith will drive worry out, so concentrate on building your faith in what God says about healing. When thoughts of worry come (and they will), speak God's Word the same way Jesus did to Satan when He was tempted.

You don't have to worry that you'll get sick and God won't heal you. God is perfectly willing to heal you of anything you get, since He already paid the price for it when He sent Jesus to be punished in your place. Do not worry that you will get senile. God's healing covenant covers senility. Do not worry that you will be confined to a "home" as an invalid who wets his pants and can't feed himself. God's healing covenant covers lameness, incontinence and all forms of being crippled. You can't come down with anything that God won't heal and hasn't already made the provision to heal, so quit worrying about it. Quit seeing yourself getting sick. The more you visualize it, the more you'll speak it and ensure that it will happen. Besides, no one likes being around someone who's always talking about how sick he will be in the future and how much of a burden he will become in his advancing old age. Quit talking trash and start speaking God's Word out of your mouth. Stop worrying and start believing.

Let God be True and Every Man a Liar

Romans 3:3-4:

For what if some did not believe? shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect?

God forbid: yea, let God be true, but every man a liar; as it is written, That thou mightest be justified in thy sayings, and mightest overcome when thou art judged.

Someone else's unbelief cannot make the faith of God without effect when you are in faith, but you need to believe what God says over what anyone else says.

When the doctor tells you that there is nothing he can do to help you, you must let God be true and count the doctor as a liar. He is not evil and he is not lying on purpose; he is just doing his job. He is giving you accurate physical information, but you have accurate spiritual information that can override his accurate physical information! The outcome God promises is guaranteed; the outcome the doctor promises can be changed by God's Word.

When your friends tell you that you are in a faith cult and that divine healing is a doctrine of devils, you must count God as true and them as liars. When your family members tell you how bad things are looking, you must count God as true and them as liars. When the doctor says that the test results are even grimmer than he thought, you must count God as true and the doctor as a liar. It's very simple – you must continue to believe the Word of God no matter what. Until you are prepared to do this, you are not ready to pray the prayer of faith. You might as well know it now – the devil will see to it that you have plenty of opposition when you start walking in faith! You must be determined to walk by faith and not by sight (2 Corinthians 5:7).

Their unbelief will not make your faith without effect unless you let it! If you want to be justified in your sayings and overcome, you must stick with what God said. Decide that ahead of time! Let God be true and every man a liar!

You're Dead!

No, that's not a bad confession. That's what the Bible says!

"For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God" – Colossians 3:3.

"For if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him" – 2 Timothy 2:11.

"We, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness..." – 1 Peter 2:24.

"I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me..." – Galatians 2:20.

Your identification with the death and resurrection of Christ is one of the most important themes in the entire Bible. Surprisingly, few Christians even begin to understand this. If they did, they would not run around saying that they are sinners saved by grace. If you are saved by grace, you are no longer a sinner by nature! You were created in God's image in righteousness and true holiness (Ephesians 4:24). You are not some unworthy little worm. Never talk about yourself that way. You'll drain away all your boldness to approach God by wallowing in that old religious stuff. You have the same right standing with God that Jesus Christ Himself does. For some reason, this offends some people, but if you don't understand it, you may need to get saved! As a believer, you are the righteousness of God in Christ (2 Corinthians 5:21) and are completely worthy in His eyes to receive anything you need. If you don't understand that, you need to go back and grasp the total significance of what Jesus did for you at Calvary. Read Romans! Paul said in Romans 10:10 that you have believed unto righteousness – you are righteous right now!

I won't include the entire book of Romans here, but a key passage is Romans 6:1-14. Think about what this says. You are dead and buried with Christ. You're dead to sin. Sin has no power over you. You are to walk in newness of life. You don't just live a crucified life; you live a resurrected life!

Romans 6:1-14:

What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?

God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?

Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?

Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.

For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection:

Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin.

For he that is dead is freed from sin.

Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him:

Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him.

For in that he died, he died unto sin once: but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God.

Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof.

Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God.

For sin shall have no dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace.

Jesus took on your sins and died, but when He rose, there were no more sins on Him. That is what you are to identify with. Your old sinful nature was killed when you were born again, and your new nature is free from the stains of sin. You are a righteous and holy new creation in Christ.

It is essential that you recognize your righteousness. It is part of your armor in Ephesians 6:10-18 that you use to stop the devil's attacks. At some point, you have probably had the thought that you deserve to be sick because you didn't walk in love or because you sinned some other way. If you're in sin, just repent! You already have forgiveness of sins as a believer (Ephesians 1:7 and many other passages). If you sit around condemning yourself, you are doing the devil's work for him. It is not right for you to bear the punishment for sin because Jesus already did that for you. Now you deserve God's best because you are blood-washed. You are right with Him. God forgets your sins. God does not hold your sins against you. The blood of Jesus Christ has cleansed you from sin. Nothing that is a result of sin belongs in your life. That includes sickness.

Sin has no claim over you, and therefore Satan has no claim on you. His claims on mankind are based on sin. You are delivered from sin and from Satan's kingdom. You are in the kingdom of God's dear Son (Colossians 1:13). What you deserve to get in life is no longer based on what you did; it is based on what Christ did.

Jesus Christ never got sick until He willingly yielded His body to take your sicknesses and pains during His atonement. Of course, He could be tired, weak, hungry, and other things that we experience as part of life, but He was not sick. You are as righteous before God as He is, and you have every bit as much right to walk in health as He did. It doesn't make sense to claim that although Christ's physical body was not sick when He walked the earth, now His current physical Body on the earth (the Church) should be sick. If we are sick, we are not representing to the world the way Jesus was when He walked on the earth.

The Story of Bad Carl

To illustrate what it means to be "dead with Christ," I offer you one of my silly stories.

Bad Carl was one of many habitual jaywalkers in his city who made the local drivers slam on the brakes to avoid an accident, practically daring them to hit him so that he could sue them, despite the fact that there were crosswalks everywhere. (You might have even encountered him.) His serious drug habit led him to break in and steal things any time that he could. He also had a habit of public drunkenness and was prone to starting fights at different bars. One night he got really drunk and angry. He killed a woman who yelled at him to stop jaywalking. A crowd rushed him and someone in that crowd killed Bad Carl before the police could break up the melee. Over came the local Crime Scene Investigators, who all wished that they could be like the ones on TV shows because their real-life jobs were so routine and unexciting and involved so much boring paperwork. (I realize that if I produced a true-to-life new show “Miami Investi-Gators DCEP (Detectives Completing Endless Paperwork)” where you watched the police fill out reports, it would probably get ratings lower than a competitive food show where chefs try to avoid being the next one cut by coming up with the best recipe for ice cubes.) The investigators found a stash of illegal drugs in Bad Carl’s coat as well as an item of jewelry stolen from a local store.

After his death, the court convened and tried to determine the punishment that would be meted out to Bad Carl. The judge decided that he would be assigned 40 hours of community service for his jaywalking, then 12 months of probation for possession of controlled substances, then 1 month in jail for public intoxication, then 1 year in jail for breaking and entering, and finally 10 years in prison without parole for murder.

Of course, it was ridiculous for the judge to hand out sentences to a dead man, and it is just as ridiculous for sentences to be handed out to you for your sins, because as a believer you’re considered a dead man, too! You can’t stick a “dead man” with sentences for crimes he committed!

You Don’t Deserve to be Sick

If you don’t believe that you are just as righteous as Jesus Christ in God’s eyes, you need to do some serious studying and find out just how righteous the blood of Jesus Christ has made you! You have received His righteousness as a gift (Romans 5:17). The “old man” who deserved sickness, poverty, destruction and death is dead. You are a new man in Christ. You are now a child of the light instead of a child of wrath. The old has passed away and all things have become new (2 Corinthians 5:17). The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made you free from the law of sin and death (Romans 8:2). You should now walk in newness of life (Romans 6:4). You are right with God and you don’t deserve sickness. Nothing you have in Christ is based on what you did; it’s all based on what He did for you. See yourself as God sees you – as someone who was buried with Christ and now lives with Him in the power of His resurrection!

Healing and Evangelism

Healing has always played a central role in God's evangelistic plan. Attempting to win the lost without demonstrating healing to the unsaved is like trying to type on your computer with one hand tied behind your back. You can get poorer results with the same effort or the same results with more effort.

Jesus and the apostles did not need to put up placards or pay the local town crier to announce that they were going to have meetings. The healings and miracles were the advertising. It is no sin to let people know where you will be preaching, but God's method of advertising is surely more effective than anything a public relations firm could invent.

Let's look at the results in Scripture of healings and miracles:

Matthew 4:23-24 states that Jesus' fame went all over Syria after He healed all diseases among the people in Galilee.

Matthew 14:35-36 shows that the people sought out the sick so that they could bring them to Jesus for healing. (We would see more sick people healed in our services if people would bring more sick people!) Other passages state the same thing.

Healing resulted in the entire city showing up at one house in Mark 1:32-34!

John 6:2 says that many followed Jesus because of the miracles that He did on the diseased.

In Acts 5:12-16, many sick were brought for healing, just as in the ministry of Jesus.

In Acts 8:5-8, the people listened to Philip because of the miracles that He did.

In Acts 9:32-35, Peter ministered healing to a paralyzed man. The result was, "All that dwelt in Lydda and Saron saw him, and turned to the Lord."

In Acts 9:36-42, Peter raised a woman from the dead. The result was, "It was known throughout all Joppa, and many believed in the Lord."

In Acts 28:8-9, when Publius's father was healed through Paul's ministry, all the other sick people on the island showed up and got healed!

In Romans 15:18-19, Paul attributes signs and wonders and Holy Ghost power to being part of what made the Gentiles obedient.

In 1 Corinthians 2:4-5, Paul says that the demonstration of the Spirit and of power was used instead of logical arguments so that men would trust in the power of God instead of man's wisdom.

In Mark 16:20 and Hebrews 2:3-4, we read that God bore witness to the message preached by His servants with signs, wonders, miracles, and gifts of the Holy Spirit.

Signs and wonders do not save anyone. Believing the preaching of the Word is what saves people. If you are preaching Christ, you cannot afford to major on signs and wonders at the expense of your preaching ministry. Men are saved when they believe your preaching. God's pattern is to confirm the preaching of the Word with signs and wonders. If you can't preach a decent sermon, there is nothing for God to confirm! Work on your preaching, and expect signs and wonders to follow it!

It Might Only Take One

You could start what man today calls a revival in your city. Praying in faith for one single person's healing could lead to an entire city being saved. It happened in the New Testament. It can happen today. It won't happen everywhere; some places receive the Word and some don't, just as in Bible days.

Healing brought an entire city to one house in Mark 1:32-34.

In Mark 1:40-45 and Luke 5:12-15, one leper's healing resulted in people coming to Jesus "from every quarter" to "hear and be healed."

In Mark 5:2-20, "All men did marvel" in Decapolis when one former demoniac went around giving his testimony.

In Luke 18:35-43, one blind man's healing resulted in "all the people" giving praise to God.

In Acts 9:32-35, the healing of Aeneas resulted in the conversion of two cities.

In Acts 9:36-42, the raising of Tabitha from the dead caused many in Joppa to believe in the Lord.

In Acts 28:8-9, a shipwreck had left Paul on an island that he had never planned to visit. Once Publius was healed through the laying on of Paul's hands, all the other sick people on the island came and got healed, too.

Your city could wake up to the Lord if the people saw a lot of miracles. But it might only take one. And you could be the one God uses to do it.

Don't Preach a D- Gospel

When you were in school, an “F” meant that you flunked the class, but a “D” meant that you “met minimum requirements.” A “D-” would be as close as you could get to the precipice of flunking without actually flunking. Many people today preach a “D-” gospel that gives people enough to “meet minimum requirements” to enter heaven – the knowledge that they must receive Jesus as Lord. Sadly, some preachers who know about the power of God have gone “seeker-friendly” in an effort to lure more hearers, reasoning that it is better to preach almost nothing to a large crowd than to preach everything to a small crowd. Why would anyone who knows the power of God do such a thing? Let us consider the case of evangelist Dennis Myness of Safer County for some insights.

He heard a man say that the key to power was getting all the churches together in unity. To his knowledge, such a thing had never happened in Safer County, and he was excited about putting on a county-wide evangelistic crusade with at least the vast majority most of the real churches participating. (He realized that fake churches like the local Unitarian Universalist house of deception didn't count.) He found a field he could use free of charge thanks to a local farmer's generosity and he tentatively scheduled a 3-day crusade for Labor Day weekend.

His first contact was the pastor of First Denominational Church in his town. The FDC pastor, himself a born-again believer, was delighted at the prospect of a county-wide revival meeting. He did have one concern, though. “You aren't going to preach anything peculiar to one denomination, are you?” he asked. Rev. Myness thought a minute. That seemed like a good point. If he preached anything peculiar to one denomination, he would alienate all the other churches and lose their support. “No,” said Rev. Myness, “I promise we will not preach any denomination-specific doctrine. We will only preach the plan of salvation and exalt Jesus.” “Sign me up!” said the pastor.

His next stop was Central Community Church, which was non-denominational, though it was basically a “hip” version of First Denominational that featured loud music with live rock musicians to appeal to a younger crowd while preaching the same doctrine using language preferred by twentysomethings. Rev. Myness explained his intentions again. “Sounds great,” said the CCC pastor. “One thing, though, you know we aren't good with that tongues stuff, right? You won't be having people speak in tongues, will you?” Rev. Myness thought again. Most churches in the county thought that tongues had been done away with, or worse, were of the devil. He would lose the support of almost everyone if he had people speaking in tongues. But, he reasoned, you don't need to speak in tongues to get people saved, and people don't need to speak in tongues to be saved. These meetings were all about getting people saved. The “advanced” stuff could wait until later. So Rev. Myness conceded, “OK, I will make sure that we don't allow speaking in tongues in this crusade.”

On he went to Contemporary Gospel Mission, a charismatic church where tongues were welcome. The CGM pastor was actually disappointed that tongues would not be allowed at the meetings, but he understood the argument that the concession was necessary to promote unity in the body of Christ. "I'm OK with what you're doing," he said, "but just one thing. You know we aren't good with this faith and healing stuff that we see on TV. You aren't intending to have those prayer lines with people waiting to catch people who fall over, are you?" Rev. Myness swallowed hard. He knew that Jesus had given believers authority to heal the sick. He had actually looked forward to signs and wonders as the sick were ministered to, and after all, wasn't that the whole point of unity – that it would produce powerful signs and wonders? But now he knew he'd lose the supporter closest to his theology if he had healing lines. Then he had a thought. If unity produces signs and wonders, God should perform those signs and wonders without human intervention, right? So there would not actually be a need for healing lines or the preaching of faith and healing. God would just supernaturally inhabit the united worship, heal people, and no one could complain because it wouldn't be the preacher's preaching or laying hands on anyone that caused the miracles. "OK," he said, "I promise we won't have any healing lines, and I won't preach faith or healing – only the new birth." "I'm in!" said the CGM pastor.

The pastor of Old Rugged Cross Tabernacle had an interesting question. "Where will you send the new believers?" Rev. Myness thought for a minute that the best place would be a Spirit-filled church like Contemporary Gospel Mission, but he couldn't send everyone there because the other pastors wouldn't support him if he did. "We'll just send people to whatever church is closest to them," he said, "so ALL the churches can get new members." This pleased the ORCT pastor, who signed up to participate. Rev. Myness thought to himself, "Well, at least SOME people will go to a church that believes in miracles, and if the price of that is putting some live chicks under dead hens, so be it."

Rev. Myness then emailed the pastor of the recently-popular Kingdom Xpress Speed Church to tell him about his plans for Spirit-less county-wide evangelistic services. Kingdom Xpress had exploded with its popular model of rushing through a once-a-week quick rock concert followed by a life-changing sermonette, ensuring that people were out the door quickly so that they could do what they REALLY wanted to do on Sunday, which apparently was not worshiping the Lord Jesus Christ. People enjoyed the low expectations; members were told that they could just watch the worship, live or online, as opposed to participating. The pastor wrote back and promised to mention the services on social media. (Time was too precious during the accelerated services to announce the meetings live.) There was no issue with the meetings being without a Holy Spirit manifestation, as there was a 0% chance of ever seeing one at Kingdom Xpress anyway.

Rev. Myness continued covering the county and got similar reactions. He ended up with 35 churches supporting his meeting. To his knowledge, that was many times the number of churches that had ever gotten together for anything in Safer County. (That was mainly due to the fact that the majority of new churches in Safer County were founded by disgruntled members of other churches in Safer County who had split off to form their own new "church plants" and no longer associated with the churches that they were responsible for splitting.)

So out went the flyers, “Find out how to have new life in Christ! Come hear the preaching of Rev. D. Myness under the big tent at the Jones Farm this Labor Day Weekend.” Of course, the flyers could not refer to miracles or other such controversial topics.

Labor Day Weekend came and the meetings went on. Rev. Myness carefully laid out the plan of escaping hell (though not any other aspects of what the Bible calls salvation) in a direct, yet witty manner complete with a fast-moving multimedia presentation that enthralled the video game generation attendees. And he had altar calls, and a few people actually came forward and received Jesus! However, most unbelievers who were there shrugged off the message and refused to take Rev. Myness seriously.

There were no signs and wonders. Apparently no one was expecting them. Of course, nothing was preached that would have encouraged faith for miracles, because such preaching was taboo. But at least there was unity for a change! Rev. Myness did have to conclude that he was wrong about the idea that unity among the churches would cause miracles to happen spontaneously without man’s involvement and without the preaching of anything that would build people’s faith for miracles. Faith still has to come by hearing the Word (Romans 10:17).

Some of the new converts fell away after a while. Some actually bought into concepts from eastern religions. You see, healing was not preached in the churches nearest them where they were sent, so if the people wanted to be healed and they were “prayed for” without result (or people “thought” their prayer requests at God during Unspoken Prayer Request Time), they sought out the services of the new Yogareiki Total Holistic Wellness Healing Center downtown, one of many such places that had sprung up like weeds in the area because the supernatural was mostly unknown in church services. They even encouraged fellow church members to go and experience “real” results at this place. Down at First Denominational, where they actually knew better than to go to the eastern demonic healers, some new converts just got disillusioned with God as the preacher assured them that all the people dying did so because “the Lord took them” as part of His “perfect plan” for their lives. Deciding they didn’t want to serve a God who was “taking” some of their relatives in mid-life, and fearing being “taken” themselves, they just lost interest in attending after a while.

Now here’s a question. Was Rev. Myness wrong to do what he did? The Biblical answer: ABSOLUTELY!

Jesus never told anyone to preach without signs and wonders. When He sent people out, He commanded them to heal the sick (Matthew 10:8, Luke 9:2, Luke 10:9). In fact, He ordered His followers NOT to go out until they were baptized with the Holy Spirit (Luke 24:49)! If the Holy Spirit weren't important, Jesus would have told everyone to leave Jerusalem immediately and start preaching. Jesus preached with signs and wonders. The Twelve preached with signs and wonders. The Seventy preached with signs and wonders. The apostles preached with signs and wonders. Stephen and Philip, who weren't apostles, preached with signs and wonders. Believers were ordered: "Quench not the Spirit" (1 Thessalonians 5:19) and "Forbid not to speak with tongues" (1 Corinthians 14:39). Signs, including the healing of the sick, were to follow the preaching of the gospel to everyone (Mark 16:15-18). Anyone shutting out the Holy Spirit or forbidding tongues is disobeying direct New Testament commands! Anyone who preaches without first being baptized with the Holy Spirit is also out of line with the New Testament. Yes, this means that most preachers (in some countries at least) are out of touch with God's real plan for their ministries. God has not told His church to preach a D- gospel for the sake of unity. Real unity – the "unity of the Spirit" (Ephesians 4:3) is not obtained by locking out the Spirit! How can you have unity of the Spirit without the Spirit?

Obviously, the Lord did not think that the masses would be reached without signs and wonders. Do we think the unsaved masses are any different today than they were back then? Why would He expect us to preach a powerless gospel today where we depend on the wisdom of men and their slick presentations? Do people not need to see the supernatural demonstrated through the church anymore? Why would we be expected to use the inferior methods of man's imperfect medicine instead of a superior method? Are we so slick that our persuasive speech will accomplish what only signs and wonders used to accomplish? Are we wiser than Paul, who preached "not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power" (1 Corinthians 2:4)? Is it worth squelching the supernatural for the sake of unity? Are we now to reverse the Biblical pattern by preaching only slick multimedia-enhanced messages by man's wisdom and NOT demonstrating the Spirit and power?

Rev. Myness got a decent crowd, but he got poor results. He blamed the unbelief of the people who attended, but there was another reason people didn't believe his message. Jesus said in John 10:37, "If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not." In his efforts to please men, Rev. Myness did NOT do the works of the Father, and the people believed him not!

Granted, preaching with signs following can and will lose you the support of most churches. I believe that the Lord wants us to be bold and preach the gospel His way regardless of what men (even churchmen) think. How can we change how preaching is done in our area when our preaching is powerless and blends in with everyone else's powerless preaching? Those of us who know better have an obligation to be able to say with Paul, "I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare unto you the whole counsel of God" (Acts 20:26-27) and "I kept back nothing that was profitable" (Acts 20:20). Those of us who have more revelation along the lines of faith and healing are responsible to share what we know with others. We are not to preach a partial gospel or hold back anything that could be profitable to the hearers.

Some side issues are nonessential for divine healing, and it is unnecessary to raise a ruckus about them at meetings supported by multiple churches.

We must also realize that faith comes by hearing the gospel. The man in Acts 14:7-10 got faith to be healed listening to what Paul called “the gospel.” This could not have been a modern D- gospel because it produced in the man “faith to be healed.” If we preach the full gospel, we’ll get full results. If we preach something watered-down, we’ll see watered-down results or no results. It’s not enough to just hope for a sprinkling of manifestations of the Spirit in a collective worship setting. Now that can and does happen and I’ve been around it, but you can also have such a setting with no miracles. You can see a LOT more people healed when you preach the Word about healing than you will if you just base your ministry on manifestations of the Spirit. We should preach healing AND expect the Spirit to manifest Himself. That is the New Testament pattern, per Mark 16:20.

Now if you pastor a church and a non-Spirit-filled preacher wants to organize a crusade in your town, I’m not telling you that it’s wrong to support such a meeting along with other non-Spirit-filled churches. The preacher may be a good exhorter and manage to lead some people to Christ, and that is better than having no one come to Christ. I would rather that someone hear a watered-down gospel and go to heaven rather than hear no gospel and go to hell. If that other man is reaching people you aren’t reaching, that’s a positive thing for your town. I have supported ministries that take the gospel overseas that don’t preach healing as I do because these ministries are reaching unreached people groups, and I have no issue if you do so. I would rather than someone be saved hearing part of the gospel than have him go to hell because no one preached the full gospel to him.

But if YOU are the preacher for a crusade, and you hold back what you know is profitable about healing, you’re in effect robbing the people of part of what Christ said to preach. That doesn’t mean that every message has to be about healing, but I would want to give the sick a chance to be healed by having hands laid on them in the name of Jesus. Such a meeting should ultimately produce far more results, including new births, than meetings where natural advertising is all there is, as opposed to God’s supernatural advertising.

You can preach to please men or you can preach to please God. I would rather please God if I have to choose between the two.

The SAVED Test

Many cases of confusion and questioning about healing can be resolved using the SAVED Test. Since healing is part of salvation, simply substitute SAVED (in the sense of being able to go to heaven instead of hell) for HEALED in someone's question or argument, and the matter almost resolves itself. Whatever answer would apply to the SAVED question, you can then apply back to the HEALED question and you then have your answer. Here are some examples:

"If God wants everyone healed, why doesn't He heal everyone?"

now becomes

"If God wants everyone saved, why doesn't He save everyone?"

You should be able to answer that second question easily. God has clearly PROVIDED for everyone's salvation in light of 1 John 2:2 and many other Scriptures, but not everyone receives it. So the answer to the first question is that God has PROVIDED for everyone's healing, but not everyone receives it.

"Someone asked for healing, but God told him NO."

now becomes

"Someone asked for salvation, but God told him NO."

You would know that the second statement can't be right, because Jesus said that whoever came to Him He would by no means cast out (John 6:37). So the first statement can't be right, either, no matter who says it or how often you hear it. (See Objection: Sometimes God Says, "Yes," Sometimes He Says, "No," and Sometimes He says, "Wait" When You Ask for Healing.)

"God won't heal you until it is His predetermined time to do so."

now becomes

"God won't save you until it is His predetermined time to do so."

You would know that the second statement can't be right, because 2 Corinthians 6:2 tells you that NOW is the accepted time; NOW is the day of salvation. Therefore, the first statement is wrong also – NOW is the day of healing.

"You should ask God to heal you IF IT BE HIS WILL"

now becomes

"You should ask God to save you IF IT BE HIS WILL"

You know that the second statement must be false because 1 Timothy 2:3-4 and 2 Peter 3:9 say that God wants everyone to be saved. Likewise, God wants everyone to be HEALED, so you don't have to question His will in that matter either.

“Just go up to the altar, and if God wants to heal you, He will, and if He doesn’t, He won’t. His will be done.”

now becomes

“Just go up to the altar, and if God wants to save you, He will, and if He doesn’t, He won’t. His will be done.”

I hope no one would ever give the second version’s “altar call from hell” because we KNOW God’s will concerning people’s salvation. God wouldn’t have sent Jesus to bear the sins of the entire world if He didn’t want the entire world to be saved. Likewise, God wouldn’t have put all “our” sicknesses and “our” pains on Jesus if He didn’t want the entire world to be healed.

“Not everyone got healed at the miracle service, so it must not be God’s will to heal all.”

now becomes

“Not everyone got saved at the evangelistic service, so it must not be God’s will to save all.”

You can see the folly of getting doctrine from experience plainly enough in the second version; we would never question God’s will to save ALL just because some people did not receive salvation that night. Likewise, we would never question God’s will to heal ALL just because some people did not receive healing that night. We ALWAYS get our doctrine from the Word of God, NEVER from experience.

“Because God is sovereign, He has the right to make exceptions in certain cases and withhold healing.”

now becomes

“Because God is sovereign, He has the right to make exceptions in certain cases and withhold salvation.”

We’ve already established based on John 6:37 that salvation will never be withheld from anyone who wants it. Therefore, healing will never be withheld from anyone who wants it.

“Being healed might not be the best thing for you at this time, and God knows that.”

now becomes

“Being saved might not be the best thing for you at this time, and God knows that.”

God commands everyone to be saved, so it is never the best thing for you at this time to remain a hell-bound child of the devil. Likewise, healing is oppression of the devil (Acts 10:38), so it is never the best thing for you at this time to remain in bondage to the sickness, which is the devil’s invention.

“Sickness is just a cross we must bear.”

now becomes

“Being lost is just a cross we must bear.”

Why would Jesus, who died for you so that you could have abundant life, want you to bear a cross of perdition? Obviously, He wouldn’t. Nor would He want you to bear sickness a cross of sickness.

“We need to get everyone in the church praying around the clock until God decides to grant this person healing.”

now becomes

“We need to get everyone in the church praying around the clock until God decides to grant this person salvation.”

Can you see how silly this is when you apply it to the new birth? The sinner needs to hear the Word and act on it to be saved. The sick person needs to hear the Word and act on it to be healed. God is not making individual decisions about things He said are for everyone in His Word! God made His decisions long before you or the sick person were ever born!

“If divine healing really works, we should go empty out the local nursing home.”

now becomes

“If the new birth really works, we should go empty out the local strip club.”

There is more to it than whether or not something works. It depends whether the people who hear the good news receive it or not, and that is their choice – we can't override anyone's free will and force him to believe anything.

“Sometimes God wants you to get very sick so that you can witness to your hospital roommate.”

now becomes

“Sometimes God wants you to sin very badly so that you can witness to your prison cellmate.”

This same kind of logic will probably serve you well if you hear other similar arguments against divine healing.

The SAME Test

One easy test can dispense with a large number of objections to divine healing. Hebrews 13:8 tells us that Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever. So this test is simple: Did Jesus ever do or teach something in the Bible? If He didn't, whatever it is should be considered suspect immediately.

Companion Scriptures for this test are John 14:9, where Jesus said that if you've seen Him, you've seen the Father, John 8:29, where Jesus said that He always did things that pleased the Father, and John 6:38, where Jesus said that He came to do the will of Him who sent Him.

So however Jesus acted in the Bible is how He does act today, and what He did was always the will of God, and thus still is the will of God today.

Let's take a few objections, some of which are handled in more detail elsewhere, and see how easy it should be to see through them using this test.

“God says Yes, No, or Wait to our prayers for healing.”

Jesus never told people NO and He never told them to WAIT when they wanted healing. Therefore He will not do so today, and neither will God the Father.

“God won't heal you of your FINAL ILLNESS that He's using to 'take you home.'”

If this were true, at least one person would have been refused, as Jesus would have to have said that the illness was God's tool to take a person home and refused to heal the person. He NEVER said that, and He NEVER will say it. He NEVER refused to heal anyone for any reason. As long as you're on the earth, God wants you to be in health.

“God uses sickness to teach you things and build your character.”

Jesus never thought that ANY illness was supposedly sent by God to teach or edify. If He had, He would have had to refuse to heal it so that the sick person would receive the full benefit of the sickness before being healed. In fact, if this objection were true, He should have been going about doing bad, and sickening all those who weren't oppressed by the devil so that they could also share in such a wonderful character-building learning experience.

“Like David, we should say that it is GOOD for us to be afflicted.”

If it's so good, why did Jesus eradicate afflictions? Jesus obviously did not think it was good that the masses were afflicted with sicknesses, given the number of times that He “healed them all.” God can't think it's good either, since Jesus demonstrated His Father's will when He made healing available to everyone.

“We glorify God by patiently enduring sickness.”

The hideous conclusion would be that Jesus was taking away opportunities for God to be glorified every chance He got! He never told anyone to patiently endure sickness for God's glory, and He will certainly never do so today.

“Sickness may be your cross to bear.”

Jesus never told anyone that he had to remain sick because it was his cross to bear, and He never will.

“God heals when it’s His time.”

Apparently God’s time was always NOW in Jesus’ ministry, as He never made anyone wait to be healed. Therefore, NOW must always be His perfect time today.

“You should peacefully accept your sickness rather than struggling to be healed.”

Jesus never told anyone to peacefully accept sickness, so He never will today.

“Sometimes God wants you sick so that you can witness to your roommate in the hospital.”

Jesus never told anyone that he had to stay sick to witness to someone else at the Pool of Bethesda or any other infirmary, so He never will say that today. He doesn’t want you to be sick for any reason, period!

“Being sick helps you identify with sick people better so that you can minister to them better in the future.”

If this were so, Jesus would have told at least someone to stay sick because God was trying to improve that person’s future ministry to the sick. Since Jesus never did that, He would never want someone to stay sick to minister better in the future today.

“We must pray IF IT BE THY WILL when requesting healing.”

The leper had this idea, and Jesus refuted it by assuring the leper that it WAS His will to heal him. Jesus taught that you believe that you receive when you pray; He never taught people to pray modern time-wasting IF IT BE THY WILL prayers.

“We need to pray first and ask God if it’s His will to heal a certain person before we attempt to minister healing to that person.”

Jesus never did that, so neither should we!

“God won’t heal something that is supposed to be your FINAL ILLNESS that takes you home.”

Jesus never refused to heal anyone on the basis that the disease was supposed to be a FINAL ILLNESS, so He will never refuse to do so today!

Healing and Effort

“I’m discouraged! I know that the Bible says I’m healed, but I prayed to receive my healing and nothing happened, and I don’t understand why. I don’t have much time to get into Scripture, but healing is free so it shouldn’t depend on how much I read my Bible. My understanding is that my life should be changing effortlessly as a Christian. So I shouldn’t have to put forth any effort to take what’s free anyway. What’s wrong?”

What’s wrong is your assumption that everything in your Christian life should be effortless!

Healing is not received based on your merits or your efforts to be godly. But that does not mean that you will not have to exercise any effort to walk in divine health.

You want to get to the place of rest, but sometimes you need to strive to enter that rest – where rest is the lack of strife! Isn’t that a contradiction? No, it’s the Bible, and the Bible doesn’t contradict itself.

Healing is free, but faith for healing comes by hearing the Word (Romans 10:17). If you are too busy to hear the Word, you are too busy to build your faith in the area of healing, or any other area for that matter. You will struggle until you stop being “too busy” to hear the Word.

People might think that they needn’t put forth any effort because they’ve heard that there is teaching about “effortless change,” but I think many people misunderstand how that works because they’ve never really listened to those who teach that. If you will meditate in the Word, you will change for the better – possibly without feeling that you exerted effort to change in certain areas. But you have to put forth the effort to study the Word! That does take effort and diligence on your part. The good news is that if you abide in Jesus and His words abide in you, you will ask what you will and it will be done for you. Unfortunately, many Christians do not have His words abiding in them. They’re saved but they don’t know much about God’s Word, and so they miss out on a lot the benefits that are legally theirs.

If you think that your whole Christian life should be “effortless” in the sense that you will never have to exert any effort of any kind, consider that Paul urged us to run in such a way as to win the race. That’s talking about putting forth plenty of effort, not just “coasting” through life.

Consider that Paul pressed toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus (Philippians 3:13-14). Pressing involves effort!

Consider that Paul had to keep his flesh under so that he himself would not be a castaway after preaching the gospel to others (1 Corinthians 9:27). Keeping your flesh under definitely takes effort, though the correct effort for that is to walk in the Spirit so that you don’t indulge the flesh (Galatians 5:16).

Consider that Paul urged Christians to be constant in prayer (1 Thessalonians 5:17). Prayer takes effort too!

The multitudes healed in Jesus' ministry (and later Peter's ministry) were not healed effortlessly! They had to travel to wherever Jesus (or Peter) was, and in many cases they carried the sick on beds or stretchers whatever distance they had to. They didn't have vehicles with internal combustion engines back then! Don't you suppose that carrying these people took some effort? The people who were healed on the island of Melita still had to make the effort to go to where Paul was; Paul didn't go around making "house calls" any more than Peter and Jesus made it their custom.

Consider what God told Joshua in Joshua 1:7-8. It takes effort to meditate in the Word day and night. Yet that was the way that Joshua was supposed to make his way prosperous.

Consider that God told all of us in Psalm 1:1-3. You're blessed when you meditate in the Word day and night – everything you do will prosper. But that takes effort! You have to be serious about studying your Bible!

Consider that you are told to resist the devil (James 4:7, 1 Peter 5:8-9). That takes effort! You can't just sit there and let Satan yack at you all day and not run him off and then expect things to go well. You are supposed to stand your ground with your armor on (Ephesians 6:10-18). You are supposed to fight the good fight of faith (1 Timothy 6:12). This is a fight that you WIN when you're in faith, but it is still a fight, nonetheless, and any fight takes effort. When your body is screaming at you, "You're SICK! You're SICK! You're SICK!" it takes effort to walk by faith and not by sight and keep agreeing with the Word that says that you were healed and that no sickness has the right to lodge in your body, which is the temple of the Holy Spirit (1 Corinthians 6:19).

You should see a theme here. The prosperous, successful Christian life is far from effortless. If you think that everything is just going to be fall on you like snow in Alaska, you are in for a rude awakening. You have an adversary who will do anything he can to talk you out of everything Jesus paid for you to have. Unless you can respond, "It is written" and know what is written, you will not have the success that Jesus did.

We live in a culture where many people want other people to exert effort and then hand over the fruits of those efforts to those who exert no effort. But that is not a Christian mindset, except that you get every blessing handed to you through the efforts of Jesus. But you can't live off the faith of people who DO read their Bibles and expect them to get the job done for you every time you're sick. Grace provided everything for you, but YOUR faith needs to receive what grace gave you. "For by faith we have access into this grace" (Romans 5:2). Don't freeload off others. Develop your own faith by studying your own Bible. If you're young in the Lord, by all means get those who are more mature to stand with you in agreement. But don't stay a baby. Aim to be one of the more mature believers who can in turn help younger believers.

The good news is that when you put forth the needed effort, you'll see things change without feeling that it took a lot of effort! In fact, you'll see that things like receiving healing when you need to do it seem to take less effort if you've already made the effort to fill yourself with the Word. It can become just as natural to believe and receive healing as it used to be to just resign yourself to being sick. You'll surprise yourself sometimes when your reaction to a situation is very different than it would have been years ago. It may seem that your new reaction was automatic and effortless! But you only got to that point because you exerted some effort to grow as a believer.

Please understand that I am not trying to put you into bondage by making you introspective, thinking that everything depends on your efforts. You don't have to move God (He's fine the way He is) or change His mind about anything, and you certainly don't have to waste your time nagging Him for what's already yours. Most Christians' prayer efforts are a waste of time because they don't understand that God's grace has already provided everything they'll ever need. Effort and progress are not always synonymous! Many Christians who don't know the Word put forth a lot of effort but make no progress.

Your effort is not to make something happen or to move God; it is to walk in the revelation of what is already yours. You should now read Crossing the Bridge from Head Knowledge to Revelation Knowledge for some more thoughts on this matter.

Healing and Giving

Being generous promotes healing:

In Psalm 41:1-3, God says that He will help you when you are sick if you remember the poor! That's a good deal.

In Isaiah 58:6-11, we see that your health can spring forth speedily when you have compassion on the poor.

In Exodus 30:11-16, people were required to give a financial offering to prevent plagues from coming on them! The finances given represented an atonement in this context, but the clear implication was that if the people did not obey God in their giving regarding this offering, they would get sick as a result of their disobedience in giving.

Being stingy can make you sick!

Ecclesiastes 5:13-17:

There is a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt.

But those riches perish by evil travail: and he begetteth a son, and there is nothing in his hand.

As he came forth of his mother's womb, naked shall he return to go as he came, and shall take nothing of his labour, which he may carry away in his hand.

And this also is a sore evil, that in all points as he came, so shall he go: and what profit hath he that hath laboured for the wind?

All the days also he eateth in darkness, and he hath much sorrow and wrath with his sickness.

However, you cannot "buy" your healing, because Jesus already bought your healing. It cost Him His life, but it's free to you. You do not "plant a seed" toward your healing by giving money to somebody, even if some misguided minister sends you a mail piece encouraging you to do so. You don't have to pay for what's already free! The Bible way to plant a seed for your healing is to hear the Word of God on the subject.

Unfaithfulness in finances can hinder you in other areas of your Christians walk. Jesus asked, "If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon [money], who will commit to your trust the true riches?" (Luke 16:11). This proves that mishandling money can block your ability to receive the more important things of God. Healing is still legally yours, but you want to avoid a situation where you're telling God YES about your healing but NO about your money at the same time. It's just hard to be both open and closed to God at the same time.

Failure to obey God in one area of your life can lead to difficulty when trying to receive in another area of your life. If God leads you to give to a certain ministry and you don't do it, it will be hard for you to receive the will of God in your body while resisting the will of God in your job and your finances. Some people get healed after they consecrate another area of their lives to God. If you're holding out in obeying God with your money, reading all the healing Scriptures in the Bible may not help you; only obedience will get you in a position to receive. Disobedience puts you on the devil's playing field, which is where sickness is.

Generosity puts you in a place to receive from God. Note that story in Luke 7:2-10 of the Gentile who gave to Israel, building a synagogue because he loved their nation. This man had so much faith that Jesus didn't even need to go to his house – his son was healed of a fatal illness through words alone. I think it entirely reasonable that the Gentile man's favor with God was tied to his generosity in giving. Also consider that Cornelius, the man at whose house the gospel was first preached to the Gentiles, was a giver even though he was not saved. His giving "came up for a memorial before God" (see Acts 10:1-4) and God chose to use this generous man to host an outpouring that changed history.

If you are a giver, it is a good sign that you know how to trust God with your money and act based on His Word rather than what your senses tell you. Your flesh wants to hoard, not give. Your flesh wants you to get into financial fear. So if you know how to give, you already have experience trusting God and mortifying the flesh. This skill will come in handy when you need to receive healing.

Finally, an observation. I am convinced that many times the power of God is hindered in crusade-style meetings because people are stingy with the offerings and "tune out" when the bucket is passed. I believe that when financial respect is shown to the man of God, there is a greater flow of the anointing. This is not because you are the man's exclusive source, and it is certainly not a case of buying your healing. However, Scripture teaches that preachers should be able to make their living from the gospel (1 Corinthians 9:14). When the people hold back, it shows a lack of appreciation for the ministry gift. Perhaps the minister just feels freer when he doesn't have to be concerned about the budget, but it does seem that the power of God flows better when the budget is met than when the minister knows he will be leaving town trying to believe for money to cover the debts he racked up that the offerings would not cover. I know from that side of things that you can push through the frustration when a love offering has "more love than offering," but it does make things more challenging! I also know that if the people just don't have much to give and put in their "widow's mites" anyway, God will still honor that and His power will still flow in a way that it probably wouldn't if the low offering were due to the stinginess of the local millionaires in the crowd.

I am not excusing extravagant crusade expenses. I've seen what I considered some outrageous excesses coupled with long and sometimes manipulative offering times. But the minister should not have to eat peanut butter sandwiches between services because he has no money. If you're going to invite a minister in, you need to be prepared to take care of his basic needs for food and shelter even if you won't be giving him an offering that could buy him an airplane.

I will also note in passing that Jesus and the apostles never received offerings as we think of them. Jesus' expenses were paid for by His partners, not by the sick people in the crowds or the others that He ministered to. I personally like that model better because I prefer not to interrupt services with offerings if I'm putting on the meetings myself.

When I've had control of such matters as the pastor, I've always made sure that our guest speakers are well taken care of in every way. We've seen some wonderful miracles, and I believe this been helped by respecting God by respecting the people He sends.

Bodily Exercise Profiteth Little

1 Timothy 4:7-8:

But refuse profane and old wives' fables, and exercise thyself rather unto godliness.

For bodily exercise profiteth little: but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

God does not say that exercise is useless. He says that it profits a little. Therefore, it is certainly no sin to exercise. God expects us to be good stewards of what He has given us. If you eat wrong, don't exercise, and don't take care of yourself, you will end up having to believe for healing when you shouldn't have to. Natural laws do not cease to operate when you get saved.

On the other hand, you are an idolater if you spend lots of time working out at the gym but say you don't have time to pray and fellowship with God and read your Bible. To many today, physical fitness is an idol. If it means more to you than God, your life is out of balance. Jesus didn't go around telling people to exercise and change their diets, but He told them to exercise faith. The only dietary advice He ever gave was to eat His flesh and drink His blood (John 6:54-56)!

In perspective, bodily exercise profits a little, but godliness profits a lot. Bodily exercise may make your body less vulnerable to certain illnesses, but it won't get rid of some pesky viruses that go around. On the other hand, the Word of God can get rid of those things that physical fitness by itself can't get rid of. If you really want to stay well, spend more time "working out" spiritually than you do physically. God's word is health and life to all your flesh (Proverbs 4:20-22). Think what spiritual giants some people would be if they were as serious about their spiritual health as their physical health!

How do you exercise yourself unto godliness? Spend time talking with God. Read your Bible regularly, and make a point of reading all of it, not just the parts you like. (Because you are under the New Covenant, you would want to major on the New Testament, particularly the epistles.) Speak the Word out of your mouth. Pray in the Holy Spirit. Intercede for others. Pray for people in authority.

It is amazing that some people refuse to "exercise themselves unto godliness" and then complain, "This faith stuff doesn't work." That would be like me going to the gym and complaining that I can't bench-press 200 pounds when the most I ever did all year was 30 pounds at one of those mini-health clubs at a hotel. In both the spiritual and the natural, if you don't exercise yourself, you'll get out of shape!

Healing and Music

In 1 Samuel 16:14-23 we see that Saul was delivered from an evil spirit, “refreshed” and “made well” when David ministered to him on the harp. We don’t even know for sure if David sang anything; there’s no evidence that he did anything other than play at the time. This raises a couple of interesting questions, namely, why would David’s music cause Saul to be healed, and can we expect music to have such a part in healing ministry today under a better covenant than David had?

It is obvious that harp music in and of itself does not heal people. Otherwise, what few harp players there are (it’s not a particularly “in vogue” instrument) would make big money playing the harp to heal the sick. It is clear that the anointing on David made the difference. Although David was not king yet, he had already been anointed by Samuel and he had a strong anointing operating in his life. Thus, God used anointed music, played by an anointed musician, to minister healing to Saul.

There were singing prophets in the Old Testament, and when they sang, the anointing fell on Saul. Here is the account in 1 Samuel 10:5-6: “After that thou shalt come to the hill of God, where is the garrison of the Philistines: and it shall come to pass, when thou art come thither to the city, that thou shalt meet a company of prophets coming down from the high place with a psaltery, and a tabret, and a pipe, and a harp, before them: and they shall prophesy: And the Spirit of the LORD will come upon thee, and thou shalt prophesy with them, and shalt be turned into another man.” This came to pass in verse 10 of that chapter: “And when they came thither to the hill, behold, a company of prophets met him; and the Spirit of God came upon him, and he prophesied among them.”

Music was instrumental in bringing other manifestations of God as well as healing. Jehoshaphat’s praisers went before the army and defeated the enemy just by praising God.

2 Chronicles 20:21-23:

And when he had consulted with the people, he appointed singers unto the LORD, and that should praise the beauty of holiness, as they went out before the army, and to say, Praise the LORD; for his mercy endureth for ever.

And when they began to sing and to praise, the LORD set ambushments against the children of Ammon, Moab, and mount Seir, which were come against Judah; and they were smitten.

For the children of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy them: and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped to destroy another.

Then in Solomon’s temple, when the musicians played in one accord, the “glory cloud” came in and at first the ministers could not stand up. Later they could even make their way into the room because the anointing was so strong. That should provoke you to expect great things from anointed music today, given that our new covenant has been declared more glorious than the old covenant (see 2 Corinthians 3:7-11)!

However, no Scripture in the New Testament directly links music and healing. Jesus did not bring a worship team or even a special-music singer with Him, and He got along just fine, as did Peter, Paul, Philip, and others who had no musicians with them. It's the anointing, not music, that destroys the yoke of bondage in people's lives. Good music is a real blessing, no music still works and bad music is a real hindrance – especially if you're trying to preach faith after someone else gets up and croons that his clothes are not new, he doesn't have much money, he's content with a cottage below, he's spending just a few more weary days until he flies away, God gives and takes away, he'll take pain and rain instead of pleasure and sunshine if that's what it takes for his will to break, his trials come to make him strong, he's only human, he's just a man, he's weak and poor, he's so unworthy, so undeserving, etc. ad nauseam).

I'm a musician myself and I don't want you to develop a doctrine on my experience, but I have seen people healed when I was just singing and playing the piano, or even just playing the piano. I usually wasn't expecting it at the time; it just happened. Why did the anointing get on people like that through the music? I don't know, but I'm not complaining! I would say that God will use whatever you have to offer Him for His honor and glory, and that includes musical talent. Other ministers out there have had similar experiences when they ministered in music. It is not the music itself, but rather the anointing on the musician, that makes the difference.

Now some musicians get swelled heads and think they're the main people God uses today and that they're actually more important than the preacher. Just remember that Jesus and His followers got all their results without any music! You don't need music to have miracles. The early church preachers did not have music ministries, synchronized laser shows that flash to the beat, fog machines, altar calls as we know them, church buildings and building funds, Sunday School classes, greeters, and many other modern church trappings. When it comes down to it, it's the anointing that matters. If you have everything else without the anointing, people will still not be set free. So above all, expect the anointing to manifest, and be ready to flow whichever way the Holy Spirit wants to move in that particular service.

If you are in a position to play music at a healing service, you should be aware of some things. One minister put it well: "Half of flowing in the anointing is paying attention!" That should be self-explanatory. Don't get off in the ozone with God on the platform; you are ministering to the people as well as to the Lord. What songs should you play? Whatever the minister asks for! Some like fast songs, some like worshipful songs, some like run-the-aisles-and-swing-from-the-rafters music and some like soft instrumental music. Some prefer their own music, and some don't even like to have any music at all because they find it distracting or they've had bad experiences with people getting up and singing that their trials only come to make them strong after the preacher just preached faith. If you cooperate with the minister, you will make him more comfortable and thus more able to flow in his anointing. No songs are right or wrong as long as they're Christian and not flaky or anything. Don't get personally offended about song choices. You're there to serve! Come ready to "go with the flow." The only sure way to learn these things is to do them and learn from others, as well as from your own mistakes. Also, as you work with different ministers, you get used to what they like and don't like, and it gets easier. There is no one way to do things; different preachers like very different things and God is OK with all kinds of different styles of music.

(I don't believe that any particular kind of music is "of the devil," but some lyrics certainly are, including the ones to certain "Christian" songs!)

The goal is to lead people (not lecture them or browbeat them) into worship and have a reverent atmosphere where the Lord is glorified. This will make it easier for the gifts of the Spirit to flow, because the gifts of the Spirit exalt Jesus (if they're genuine manifestations). If everyone is already exalting Jesus, you won't have to change gears to have the gifts of the Spirit operate. You'll just transition from one way of exalting Jesus to another.

The best ways to flow effectively in music are to (1) practice and (2) live a lifestyle of praise and worship when you're not in a service. Then it can come from your heart instead of being a big show that you put on at church. The anointing will not leave just because you hit a wrong note. Actually, it won't leave by itself if you hit a whole lot of wrong notes, but what happens is that the people get distracted and they stop hooking up with the music, and the flow stops – hence the need to practice! However, it's possible to be such a technical perfectionist that you go to pieces if you flub a note – you need to avoid being like that. This is not a TV talent show with judges looking for every possible blemish in your performance so that they can eliminate you instead of the next contestant.

Having said that, I know musicians including myself and my wife who used to be just plain awful singers, but we both gave what we had to the Lord because we sensed that He wanted us to sing. God multiplied our talent as things went along and I found that I could hit notes I never used to be able to hit, both higher and lower. I ended up leading worship at regional campmeetings. I used to travel with a man whose neck injury led the doctors to say that he would never speak above a whisper again, but he sang for the Lord and ended up selling albums featuring his big booming voice. My wife sang high notes painfully flat, but she doesn't do that anymore even though no one (other than maybe God) gave her voice lessons. God is good at multiplying what you give Him – consider what He was able to do on a couple occasions with a few loaves and fishes!

Music done well can be a tremendous blessing to a speaker who is unsure about which way to go in a service. As happened with Elisha, as the musician plays, the power of God can come on the minister and he can get clear direction. (See 2 Kings 3:14-15.) You should expect this sort of thing to happen. On the other hand, music poorly done is the shortcut to ruining an entire service. I've seen both. Another purely natural benefit of music is that it can keep the flow of the service going while the minister takes a mini time-out to seek God about what to do next (or in one case, an emergency run to the bathroom). I've provided this service for other speakers over the years.

Just as another general remark, if Christian singers would get into the habit of actually saying something in their music, such as the facts that Jesus took our sicknesses and that we're healed by His stripes, it would help people get healed, because a lot of Christians listen to Christian music. Too much Christian music is based on the premise that you can maximize music sales by not offending anyone of any denomination when you only say, "God is a really cool Dad, Yeah, Yeah" or "God brought me through the rain," (in the apparently-mandatory Verse-Chorus-Verse-Chorus-Bridge-Chorus format). You can sell out arenas on your tour promoting your new album "I'm Your Friend, I Won't Offend," featuring positive, uplifting, tunes to play on the local "positive" music station, such as "God is Neat," "The Christian Life Is a Party," "Everything is Wonderful," "God's Touchy-Feely Love," "Non-Stop Elation," and "Jesus, I Love You because You Make Me Feel Good," while sneaking in only one or two serious songs (with hard-hitting warnings against jaywalking and littering) along with some "crossover" songs, that is, songs where talking about the cross is over and it's impossible to tell if you're addressing God or your latest heartthrob.

In short, music can really enhance the anointing and keep the right atmosphere in the service or it can destroy the service. But the gifts of the Spirit can operate without it, so don't blow it out of proportion.

What Romans 8:11 Really Means

The true meaning of Romans 8:11 has been debated for centuries, with Greek-skilled commentators taking two different sides, neither of which is the preferred “side” in faith circles! Being good Berean types who study for ourselves to find out what’s really true, we can see that some serious CSI (Critical Scripture Interpretation) work is ahead!

Here’s the verse, along with the one before it and the two after it:

Romans 8:10-13:

And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness. But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh. For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live.

If there were an “obvious” meaning that leaps off the page, there would be no debate about Romans 8:11. It seems that one could legitimately take this verse in 3 different ways – and possibly a COMBINATION of them:

Meaning #1: When Jesus comes back, He will give you a new spiritually alive body to replace the unspiritual body you have today.

Meaning #2: In this life, the work of the Holy Spirit in your unspiritual body will enable you to overcome sin so that you don’t have to be a debtor to the flesh.

Meaning #3: In this life, the Holy Spirit will impart divine life into your subject-to-physical-death (and spiritually dead) body, bringing physical healing when needed.

This road will be fraught with some peril, as it would be all too easy to come up with dead-end conclusions such as, “God will raise something from the dead that isn’t dead” or “Because Jesus is coming back, you don’t have to live in the flesh today.” You’ll see what I mean as we delve deeper. Let’s get started!

The Key to It All

After giving this a little thought, we can determine that the phrase “quicken your mortal bodies” is the key to the whole thing. The three competing interpretations each have a different slant on what “quicken your mortal bodies” means. If we figure that out, we’ve “cracked” the verse.

We'll look at it in English, which is usually a good place to start! There is no need to delve into concordances and Greek manuscripts if something obvious stares us in the face in English. The word quicken would seem to mean "raise from the dead" and the word mortal would seem to mean "subject to death, though not dead yet." So "obviously" this verse means that God will raise something from the dead that isn't dead— your body.

So we've encountered our first bump in the road, because it makes no sense for something to be raised from the dead that isn't dead. If Paul had said, "quicken your dead bodies," the investigation would already be over and we could celebrate our conclusion that this verse refers to the final resurrection – the day when our bodies will all be changed and we will receive new immortal spiritual bodies that aren't dead to the things of God. But now that option seems to be all but ruled out. If God imparts life to our mortal but not dead bodies, that "life" must refer to something other than the raising of the dead. It would make more sense that the life of God would bring healing to our current subject-to-death bodies.

But what about just meaning that our flesh will be given God's "life" throughout this life so that we don't have to sin? This seems to be a problem, too, because the next verse declares that we are not debtors to the flesh, but not that the ongoing work of the Holy Spirit continually stops us from being debtors to the flesh. We also remember reading elsewhere in Romans that we must reckon ourselves (already) dead to sin (Romans 6:11). Therefore, if the question is whether you're already dead to sin, the correct answer is "I reckon!" rather than "No, the Holy Spirit is continually doing a work in me that strengthens me to get individual victories over individual sins."

Armed with this reasoning, it appears that we should crown Meaning #3 the winner and be done with it.

So we check various public-domain commentaries online as a sanity check.

But as we do, we notice that just about ALL of them conclude that either Meaning #1 or Meaning #2 must be the real meaning. Meaning #3 is the extreme underdog.

How could that be? Have they noticed something in the Greek that we need to see? Well, any Christian doctrine can be backed up by the Greek, so we shouldn't be afraid to do some checking just to be sure.

Time to Be Greek Geeks

The commentators point out that this verse has a particular issue that most verses don't – the "original Greek" is slightly different depending on whether you use the Textus Receptus or the Morphological Greek New Testament as your basis for study. The commentators highlight the issue that you could read the verse "by His Spirit" or "because of His Spirit" depending on which you choose. Does this throw a wrinkle into things?

Mulling over all three meanings, there doesn't really seem to be anything that stands or falls on that issue. Whether God does things BY the Spirit who lives in you or BECAUSE OF the Spirit who lives in you seems like an overly picky point; if He does things BECAUSE OF the Spirit who is you, it would make sense that He does things BY the Spirit who is in you. Some commentators differ on that matter, but it would be hard to imagine God letting an important doctrinal point hinge on which manuscript you're reading.

Besides, it's obvious that "quicken your mortal body" is still the key here, not the words that follow that phrase.

So a good next step would be to dissect the Greek. We have only 4 words to deal with ("quicken your mortal body"), so this shouldn't be too bad. A quick check with the concordance and the Greek text shows that the word "your" (hymon) has its obvious English meaning. So there are only 3 words left of any consequence – quicken, mortal and body.

The word quicken is the Greek word zoopoieo. We determine that this means "to raise from the dead" at least most of the time where it appears in the New Testament. Hmm. If that's the preferred meaning, maybe we've missed something about that word mortal. If we're really talking about raising the dead, you will only get an "alive" body when Christ returns, and Meaning #1 is actually the correct one after all! God would be promising to take your current mortal body and change it into an immortal one. As that IS promised in other verses when Jesus returns, that would be consistent with the New Testament. So let's look at that word mortal.

Death Match: "Mortal" vs. "Dead"

The word mortal in Romans 8:11 is the Greek word thnetos. The word dead in both cases where it appears in Romans 8:11 is the Greek word nekros, a different word entirely. It is unreasonable to assume that Paul mixed up his Greek words in the middle of the same verse. So let's see what happens if we substitute the word dead for the word mortal in the 5 other verses where thnetos appears in the Bible. If this works, we'll actually have to go with Meaning #1. If not, Meaning #1 is probably toast.

"Let not sin therefore reign in your dead body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof." – Romans 6:12. This seems to be almost a knockout punch to the idea that thnetos could refer to something dead, as this revised verse doesn't seem to make sense. MAYBE we can try to "shoehorn" Meaning #1 by pointing out that your body IS "spiritually" dead, so Paul meant not to let sin reign in your SPIRITUALLY dead body. Let's keep going.

“For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this dead must put on immortality.” – 1 Corinthians 15:53. This is probably a bigger problem still, because if you took one of those annoying timed multiple-choice pre-college aptitude tests (I’m glad I’m long done with them!), what word would you say fit “Corruptible is to incorruption as _____ is to immortality? The answer is obviously “mortal” and just as obviously not “dead.” “Dead” just doesn’t look like it fits the context here. You’d be straining to claim that Paul meant that your spiritually dead body would put on immortality.

“So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this dead shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory.” – 1 Corinthians 15:54. This has exactly the same problem as the preceding verse.

“For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that death might be swallowed up of life.” – 2 Corinthians 5:4. Given that Paul wasn’t dead when he wrote this, replacing mortality with death really doesn’t work either.

“For we which live are always delivered unto death for Jesus’ sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our dead flesh.” – 2 Corinthians 4:11. This isn’t getting any better, is it? This actually could be a wildly popular interpretation today, as we could conclude that Paul actually DID die when he was stoned at Lystra and that he conducted the rest of his ministry as a zombie! You could combine a biography of Paul’s life with a zombie movie and make a lot of money.

This last verse seems to blow away any doubt on the subject. Paul was not physically dead – he would not have written the verse if he were! So the last gasp is that Paul meant that the life of Jesus would be manifested in his spiritually dead flesh.

A final check of the Greek word thnetos shows that it is translated mortal 6 times out of 6. It is NEVER translated dead. The word nekros is used to describe something that is dead as opposed to still alive but subject to death. In Romans 8:10 Paul used the word nekros in a way that WOULD describe the spiritual condition of his body. However, mortal could not describe the spiritual condition of his body – it was already dead (nekros), not subject to death. It would seem that if Paul were talking about your “dead” body in the next verse, he would also use nekros instead of thnetos.

So we’ve reached a definite conclusion that the word thnetos definitely means “mortal” – that is, “subject to death,” but not “dead.” So Paul can’t refer to a future resurrection of his DEAD body. He must be talking about the body that he has now.

Raising the Dead Issue

So now, if the word zoopoieo must mean “raise from the dead,” Romans 8:11 states that God will raise from the dead something that isn’t dead – your body. That would be good fodder for those “Bible Contradiction” websites, but not good fodder for our doctrine. You can’t raise something from the dead until it’s dead first, and our bodies aren’t dead yet.

So now we need to look at where else zoopoieo is used in the New Testament. Does it always refer to raising the dead, and if not, what DOES it mean in those other cases?

“For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will.” – John 5:21. This is a clear reference to raising the DEAD.

“It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.” – John 6:63. This appears to be breathing divine life into something but not necessarily raising the dead. One could argue this either way.

“(As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations,) before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were.” – Romans 4:17. This is another clear reference to raising the DEAD.

“For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.” – 1 Corinthians 15:22. Score another one for raising the DEAD in this context.

“Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickeneth, except it die:” – 1 Corinthians 15:36. Score yet another one for raising the DEAD.

“And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickeneth spirit.” – 1 Corinthians 15:45. This is a little less clear. Jesus could be a “life-giving” spirit without raising everything from the dead all the time, which He does not actually do.

“Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.” – 2 Corinthians 3:6. This could go either way, too – you could say that the letter kills people but then the Spirit raises them from the dead, or you could say that the Spirit breathes life into people without it necessarily meaning that they’re being resurrected. Take your pick.

“Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law.” – Galatians 3:21. This at least appears to refer to a spiritual raising from the DEAD, as the hearers of the Law were all physically alive already.

“I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession;” – 1 Timothy 6:13. This one doesn’t read well as “raises all things from the dead,” as it is clear that He does NOT raise everything from the dead! There would be no dead people, animals or plants if that were the case. So this appears to be more along the idea of breathing life into things, but not raising everything from the dead.

“For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickeneth by the Spirit:” – 1 Peter 3:18. This looks like another straightforward “raise the dead” meaning.

So MOST of the time zoopoieo refers to raising the dead, though it CAN mean “infusing life into” in the minority of cases.

This almost puts us between a rock and a hard place, because we know that “God raises your dead bodies that aren’t dead” is an indefensible rendering. Given that “mortal” CANNOT mean “dead,” the word that has to “give” here is zoopoieo, and it seems that we would have to conclude that the verse says that God imparts life (God’s life) into our mortal bodies during this lifetime when we still have mortal bodies.

If the true meaning were that the Spirit would quicken their mortal bodies with resurrection life so that their bodies became like Jesus’ resurrected body – spiritually raised from the dead – that is tantamount to saying that every reader of his letter would be alive at the time when Christ returned in the clouds! Otherwise, they’d all have dead bodies at that point! And obviously there was no “rapture” event in any of their lifetimes. So the Spirit did NOT physically “raise from the dead” their mortal bodies.

Within Romans 8:11 itself, Paul uses the word egeiro twice to describe how God raised up Jesus from the dead and raised up Christ from the dead, and the word dead is the Greek word nekros in both cases. If Paul’s point were that God would “also raise up your dead bodies,” he could have used the words egeiro and nekros a third time – but he didn’t. He used the different words zoopoieo (quicken) and thnetos (mortal) instead.

How else can we be reasonably sure that Paul would NOT use those words to describe the “rapture” at which dead bodies will be raised up? Let’s look at 1 Corinthians 15:51-52, where Paul DID talk about the raising up of dead bodies of believers. He used the words egeiro (raised up) and nekros (dead) – the same words he used in Romans 8:11 when he meant a dead body being raised up! These are NOT the words he used in Romans 8:11 about quickening a mortal but still living body. If he really meant the raising of dead bodies, he would have used the words egeiro and nekros in 1 Corinthians 15:51-52 to state what would happen to us, not the words he used for quickening living but mortal bodies in Romans 8:11.

The Greek has spoken. Meaning #1, time for you to go! There are now two survivors.

And Then There Were Two

So the conclusion that God imparts life to our mortal bodies in this lifetime proves Meaning #3, right? After all, we have dismissed Meaning #1, which refers to a future resurrection. This knocks out a lot of commentaries, but actually our Calvinist friends would agree with our conclusion. I base that statement on the combination of two facts: (1) John Calvin said that Romans 8:11 refers to this life, not the resurrection and (2) John Calvin was a Calvinist. Actually it's interesting to see how sometimes other respected preachers of old support ideas that we think are new. Take, for example, this quote: "One of the Bible's greatest truths is that Christ died to take away all our sins –not just part of them, but all of them: past, present and future." You might suspect that I took this from a hot new bestseller, "My Brand-New Sensational Hyper-Grace Revelation." But it's actually a direct quote from 2004 – from Billy Graham!

What Does the Spirit Do in This Life?

We aren't as "done" as we'd like to be at this point, because we still could argue that the Spirit infuses life into our flesh to help us overcome sin or that the Spirit infuses life into our bodies to promote health. That first remaining option (Option 2) is not as hard to dismiss as you might think at first. If you look at the verses around verse 11 back at the head of this discussion, there isn't any talk about healing, but there is plenty of talk about sin and the flesh. So within the wider context, it would actually appear that Meaning #2 is preferred and that Meaning #3 might be trying to stretch the context to put something there that Paul never meant.

I never said that this was going to be easy.

Can Physical Healing Really Relate to Life-Giving?

So let's consider whether there is ANY precedent that "life-giving" could relate to physical bodies. If not, the investigation is over and Meaning #2 can be declared the clear winner. But after looking around, we find this passage that speaks of divine life being imparted to mortal bodies that are having physical trouble – in this case, ones that kept getting beaten for the gospel's sake.

2 Corinthians 4:8-11:

We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair;

Persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed;

Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body.

For we which live are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh.

One could try to argue from verse 10 above that Paul spoke of the day when he and his fellow workers would get new immortal bodies, but that falls apart immediately in the next verse where the life of Jesus was manifested in their mortal (thnetos) flesh – we’ve been down that road already! This HAS to be about this life. Thus, we have successfully found precedent for divine life being imparted into our mortal bodies to strengthen and heal them. If Paul didn’t keep getting healed, how far would his ministry have gotten after his all-too-frequent physical abuse? He would never have made it out of Lystra!

So we seem to have backing from other verses for BOTH Meaning #2 and Meaning #3, so we have to keep going.

Life, Death, Body and Flesh

Perhaps we’re missing something more basic here. It’s easy to gloss over terms like life, death, body and flesh and not think about whether a physical or a spiritual meaning is intended. You have to see the context to know whether “life” and “death” are physical or spiritual. For example, God told Adam that the day that he ate the forbidden fruit, he would surely die. But Adam didn’t die physically for a long time! God obviously meant spiritual death in that context, because a “physical” meaning would make the Bible contradict itself.

Meaning #2 assumes that the “life-giving” has to do with the flesh. Meaning #3 assumes that it has to do with the body. So at least we’ve established a final test to allow the remaining two meanings to duke it out. Can we prove that Romans 8:11 is or is not talking about the flesh as opposed to the body?

Before we can perform this test, though, we have to prove that body and flesh really are two separate words. Otherwise, if the same Greek word is used for both, we have no final test after all! If they’re different, we need to find out what they mean.

This one is very easy to figure out – we find immediately that the word body is a translation of the Greek word soma and the word flesh is a translation of the different Greek word sarx, unless you’re using the NIV where sarx is mistranslated as sinful nature all over the place. That is why I never recommend that Christians use the NIV, especially for reading Paul’s epistles. The NIV might be easier to read than the King James Version and it shows you enough to get saved, but if you believe the NIV, you’ll go around thinking you have a sinful nature after you’re born again, which you don’t! Because the NIV’s insistence on the mistranslation sinful nature really irks me, I’m going to take a detour for a page or so while we’re on that topic. I wonder how many believers right now mistakenly think that they still have a sinful nature because they have NIV Bibles!

If the New International Version (NIV) is correct that sarx should be translated “sinful nature,” then to be consistent we must accept the following translation of 1 John 4:2-3 where the word sarx is used: “Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the sinful nature is of God: And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the sinful nature is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world.” The NIV’s sarx definition means that John warned again in 2 John 7 that deceivers have come who confess not that Jesus Christ has come in the sinful nature. This would corroborate the NIV-sarx version of John 1:14: “And the Word was made sinful nature, and dwelt among us...” Christ’s NIV-specific sinful nature would also be specified by this rendering of sarx in Matthew 26:41 and elsewhere: “Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing, but the sinful nature is weak.” The NIV sinful nature would fail to disappear after His resurrection, as the NIV sarx rendering of Luke 24:39 would be “Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not sinful nature and bones, as ye see me have.” Perhaps the NIV fan should forbid marriage, too, as NIV-style sarx in Matthew 19:5 and elsewhere would tell us, “And said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one sinful nature.” John 6:51-52 would have to read, “I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is my sinful nature, which I will give for the life of the world. The Jews therefore strove among themselves, saying, How can this man give us his sinful nature to eat?” And that would have been a very good question!

It doesn’t get any better – but as you go through these, it should give you better insight of what sarx is and isn’t. It certainly ISN’T “sinful nature!” If it were, we could go on and describe how Jesus’ NIV sarx (sinful nature) would rest in hope, according to the sinful nature God raised up Jesus to sit on David’s throne, His sinful nature did not see corruption, He was made of the seed of David according to the sinful nature, the rewrite of Romans 8:3 would refer to “sinful sinful nature,” beasts, fishes and birds would have different kinds of sinful natures, Paul’s sinful nature would have had no rest, which is no surprise because he had a thorn in the sinful nature, though the life he lived in the sinful nature he lived by faith of the Son of God, preaching at first in Galatia through infirmity of his sinful nature. I guess that’s because he taught (based on the NIV rendering of sarx in the epistles) that Christ abolished “the enmity” in His sinful nature, suffering for us in His sinful nature, and we are members of His body, of His sinful nature and of His bones now that He reconciled us in the body of His sinful nature through death, through the veil, that is, His sinful nature, after He took part of the sinful nature and blood as God manifested in the sinful nature in the days of His sinful nature. These are all actual verses mashed together; I won’t pepper you with the references but you can do a cross-reference on sarx and find all of them and quite a few more! This highlights the problem with paraphrase and semi-paraphrase versions – you get what the author THINKS things mean, but not what they actually say in the original language. This makes them dangerous for use as serious study Bibles. So the NIV completely mangles the Greek word sarx! The fact that there are so many places where it CANNOT mean “sinful nature” (unless you’re a heretic and you actually believe all the ridiculous rewritten Scriptures above) should prove to anyone with any sense that the word sarx should NEVER be translated “sinful nature!”

A look at the uses of the word soma doesn't turn up any surprises, the Greek word soma and the English word body correlate consistently to each other.

So we should realize that body and flesh are distinct, but are more similar than it appears at first, and that flesh does not have to refer to something sinful. If you are in Christ, you no longer have a sinful nature. (I'd like to make every NIV reader write that 100 times on a chalkboard!) So your problem is not an "old man" hanging around! You do not have two natures inside you! The new has come and the old is gone (2 Corinthians 5:17). What you have is a physical flesh body that is not born again; it is spiritually dead. Your body wants pleasure and doesn't distinguish between a right and wrong way to get it because it has no conscience or moral compass. It's not a sinful nature; it's just an unspiritual nature, and it's up to the real you – the hidden man of the heart – to keep it in check.

So now let's go back through our passage and see what new insights we can glean. In verse 10, we see that "the body is dead (nekros) because of sin." This leads us to two conclusions.

First, this MUST refer to spiritual death – being unresponsive to God – as your body is still physically alive. Ever since Adam's fall, man has had bodies that were not subject to God, the only exception being Jesus, and that is why He HAD to be born of a virgin to not participate in that sin nature. Even Jesus said that His body was weak – it surely did not relish the idea of being tortured to death.

Second, Paul knew how to distinguish a dead body from a mortal one, as he used different words.

Now we come to Romans 8:11 and the statement that God raised up Jesus from the dead. Was this from the physically dead or from the spiritually dead, or both? Within the context of Romans 8:11, the reference is clearly being raised from physical death because "He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies." There is NOTHING stated about Him quickening your spirit here, nor could there be – Paul was writing to believers, and they were already spiritually alive (quicken)! The moment you were born again, your spirit became as ALIVE as it will ever be through all eternity – your spirit has eternal life NOW. So Paul could not have meant, "He who raised Christ's spirit from the dead will quicken your spirit too." If you don't believe that Jesus rose BODILY, you can't even be saved (Romans 10:9-10). It is an old heresy that only His spirit rose. Paul explicitly said "your mortal bodies." So Paul is talking about God doing something to YOUR body that He already did to CHRIST'S body.

By the way, it is still consistent with this to believe that Acts 13:33's statement "Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee" refers to His resurrection (as is clear from the context) and not to His incarnation. I'm just saying that Romans 8:11 is about Christ's physical resurrection being tied to something God wants to do for the believer today.

We know that what He does to our mortal bodies can't refer to the total change in Christ's body, as in this life we will not be able to just show up somewhere at will at yet still eat fish and honey. We also saw that Paul knew how to distinguish mortal bodies from dead bodies. So whatever the Spirit is doing, it must be something BODILY in this life other than the complete change that is coming at Christ's return.

Note the use of the word also in Romans 8:11 – “he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies.” Just as Jesus’ body was raised up healthy after it was sick and weak to the point where Jesus couldn’t even carry His own cross before He died, we should expect God to impart health to OUR bodies through His Spirit.

What does this leave as a possibility? Meaning #3. We can crown it the winner as long as it can withstand the arguments that are advanced for Meaning #2, which could qualify as objections against Meaning #3. Let’s see what these arguments are and whether they’re any good.

Do “Meaning #2” Arguments Hold Up?

Those who believe that Paul meant that God’s resurrection power will get into our fleshly bodies to help us overcome sin could argue that healing isn’t discussed in this part of Romans 8 at all. That certainly IS a true statement, but there are plenty of other promises in Scripture that seem to pop up even though they aren’t the main focus of the chapter they’re in. After all, the many commentators who back Meaning #1 have no problem taking verse 11 as a parenthetical insert in a chapter that isn’t about the rapture of the church. So that wouldn’t be quite enough to disqualify the bodily health angle.

Then an objector could argue that the “Therefore” at the beginning of verse 12 ties not living after the flesh to whatever this quickening of our mortal bodies is. In fact, any time you see “Therefore,” it’s there for a reason! So we have to take that seriously.

The question becomes whether “Therefore” ties back to verse 11 or to the whole previous section. By default we would assume verse 11 because it’s the previous verse, though Paul was known for writing convoluted sentences with a lot of parenthetical thoughts. (Paul did not figure that because it was “news,” he had to dumb down everything so that people who flunked sixth grade could get it. Unfortunately, even Peter had trouble understanding some of what Paul wrote, so you wouldn’t be the first to wonder what he meant sometimes.) It actually seems, though, that “Therefore” is intended as a wrap-up to the previous 11 verses rather than just verse 11. Verse 11 doesn’t seem to fit as well. Maybe looking at verses 12 and 13 would help.

There we see that we don’t have to live after the flesh and die. We can through the Spirit mortify the deeds of the body and live. Whoa, wait a minute! In this case, “the flesh” and “deeds of the body” are equated to each other. We didn’t quite notice that before. Given what we just saw, we may have just lost our right to make a distinction between Greek and English words for body and flesh. Living after the flesh is doing the deeds of the body.

Did Meaning #2 just pull victory from the jaws of defeat?

If we can no longer make a distinction, verse 11's statement about your "body" could be made equally well about your "flesh!" Thus, Paul could be talking about the Spirit empowering your flesh as "flesh" is understood everywhere else, not giving physical life to it. It could just mean that your flesh receives some kind of spiritual power to not sin as much. In other words, your body/flesh receives spiritual "life" by the Spirit, and THAT is why "therefore" you are not a debtor to the flesh to live after the flesh.

The Final Round of Reasoning and the Announcement of the Winner

The whole reason you have trouble with your flesh is that your body is unspiritual – not alive to God. Isn't that our permanent lot in this life? Isn't there a verse somewhere about a carnal mind NOT BEING ABLE to be subject to the law of God? Let's find it. Wow, it's Romans 8:7, 4 verses before Romans 8:11, and it says that "the carnal [fleshly] mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be."

AHA! A light bulb just went on here!

Because the carnal mind CANNOT be subject to the law of God, what you would consider "the mind of the flesh" CANNOT be made to act spiritually. Thus, Meaning #2 cannot be right because your flesh cannot – even by the Spirit – be made spiritual and submissive to God's will. NOTHING other than a new body will solve that problem. Nothing in Scripture even hints that you can receive spiritual life in your dead flesh so that it will stop acting like spiritually dead flesh! If it even got a little spiritual "quickenings," it would no longer be spiritually dead.

We remember that verse 11's word for "quicken" would mean "raise from the dead" or "impart God's life." But your mortal body will NEVER be spiritually raised from the dead in this lifetime. In fact, Romans 8:10 just told us that the body is (spiritually) DEAD because of sin. Now we're getting on a roll! If ANY of the "resurrection life" or "life of God" could get into your FLESH as Meaning #2 would imply, Romans 8:10 would be instantly false! If you had any of God's spiritual life in your "flesh," your flesh would cease to be dead. If a person in an emergency room had ANY sign of life in him at all, he would still be "alive" and no doctor would write a death certificate.

So it certainly appears that your "flesh" as understood in the surrounding verses cannot be what your "mortal body" means. It's all coming together now! Suddenly we see something we overlooked all along in verse 13 that wipes out Meaning #2. We see that YOU mortify the deeds of THE BODY through the SPIRIT. The SPIRIT does not mortify the body's deeds for you! In fact, your body must be just as spiritually dead as it ever was. Otherwise you would have no need to mortify its deeds! It is up to YOU to walk in the Spirit and not fulfill the lusts of the flesh (Galatians 5:16). You CANNOT get the Spirit (or "life") into your flesh so that it stops having unspiritual desires.

We can now briefly consider what else we know from the New Testament about the flesh, and we realize that there is NO teaching about ANYTHING that will stop your flesh from wanting to do its own thing short of Jesus' return, which is not an available solution at the moment. (You wouldn't still be reading this if Jesus had just returned!) Paul had to put HIS BODY under (1 Corinthians 9:27) – He didn't find some way to get "life" into his body so that he didn't have to keep it under. So no spiritual power to avoid sin can ever lodge in your flesh (or in your mortal body), so Meaning #2 has faded off into the sunset, leaving Meaning #3 as the champion!

We do not expect that our bodies will become like Christ's resurrected body in this lifetime. But we do have the "firstfruits" of the Spirit now. We can't have sickness-proof, death-proof bodies now, but we can enjoy God's "life" that drives out sickness today. Just as all the sicknesses that Jesus' body had to bear were GONE when He rose from the dead, we can enjoy that same resurrection power at work in our mortal bodies to cause our sicknesses to be GONE!

What Every Elder Is Commanded to Believe

James 5:14-15

Every elder in a church must be prepared to pray the prayer of faith for the sick. If you are incapable of doing this, you cannot fulfill the command to do so in James 5:14-15. It is “the prayer of faith” offered by the elders that causes the Lord to raise up the sick person. If you cannot pray the prayer of faith, you should not be installed as an elder.

Most churches subscribe to the unscriptural practice of choosing elders based on their financial or business skills, or even their age. In Acts, even those entrusted with the distribution of food had to be full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom (Acts 6:3). (YOU try being in charge where there are big responsibilities and complainers and see if you don’t agree that you need the Holy Spirit and wisdom!) There are moral qualifications as well, as Paul’s letters to Timothy and Titus make clear. You must be prepared to fulfill this solemn responsibility in the name of the Lord. James’s instructions are commands for the church.

It is a tragedy that most churches ignore this command of the Lord, which is just as binding on the Church as the commands to walk in love, be baptized or partake of the Lord’s Supper. In many churches, you would get nothing but “the prayer of unbelief” from the elders, or even from the pastor. It should not be that way! You would do yourself a disservice by asking such men to come and pray for you. They will talk you out of any faith that you might have. They will blame God for it all and ask God to comfort you and give you peace, instead of praying the prayer of faith as they are supposed to. If this is the case for you, you would be better off finding a church that believes the Bible about healing, go there, and having its elders come when you need them.

I am not saying that some of these elders are not fine Christians in the moral sense. I am saying that they will do you more harm than good if they do not believe that the Lord will raise you up when they anoint you with oil in His name (if they even do that). It’s nice that they believe in walking in love and morality, but you do not need someone to pray that you will walk in love and be moral when you are laid up – you need someone who believes that you will be raised up in answer to prayer!

If you don't know of any believing elders who can come, take consolation in this: The woman with the issue of blood, blind Bartimaeus and others had no support or encouragement and received their healing anyway with their own faith. Their faith made them whole, and your faith can make you whole. Remember how the very people who should have been encouraging Bartimaeus told him to shut up (Mark 10:46-52)? Sometimes the very people who should be helping you will pour cold water on your faith in the same way. Even if they do, you can still get your healing. It is wiser, though, not to let unbelieving people pray over you. Two can't walk together unless they agree (Amos 3:3). If you're expecting to be healed and they're expecting "a touch from God," "a blessing," "peace," "comfort," "just a few mercy drops from heaven," etc., instead of healing, you are not in agreement anyway and the prayer is a waste of time and it will hurt you more than help you. It is of no benefit to have someone come and wail over you, "Oh, God, somehow, some way, let this be the day. Touch him now, if it be Thy will, for Jesus' sake!"

If you are a church elder, do not think that you can ignore the command in James 5:14-15. If you are called for, you must go and pray the prayer of faith and expect the Lord to raise up the sick person because you have obeyed His command. Remember that in this case, even if the person has sinned in some way, the Lord will forgive him, so that cannot prevent his healing from coming, even if you think he doesn't deserve it! NOBODY deserves it from a fleshly perspective, including you, so thank God for grace!

You should also be prepared to explain how healing was provided in Christ's atonement and is available to all on a gift basis. You need to be able to speak words that will put faith into the person who needs the healing. This is better than just running it and slapping hands on someone.

The Works He Did You Can Do: Here's How

John 6:28-29:

Then said they unto him, What shall we do, that we might work the works of God?

Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent.

You don't have to puzzle over how to do the works of God. Jesus told you how. You're going to do them by faith. You're going to believe the words of Jesus, whom God sent.

John 14:12-14

Jesus said that if you believe in Him, you will do the works that He did. What were His works? There is no record of him helping old ladies across the street so that they wouldn't get run over by chariots. There is no record that He volunteered two nights at a local food bank. There is no record that He helped plan a party at the local orphanage. Those would all be worthy causes, and certainly Christians today would be serving Jesus by doing these things, but those kinds of things are not what Jesus was talking about in the passage above, as there is no record that He did them. He had to be talking about the things of which there is a record. Jesus' works were preaching, teaching, healing the sick and casting out demons. Since those were His works, you can do those works if you believe in Him. That doesn't mean not to do the other kinds of things; it means that you can do Jesus' works as well as those other things. (If you do those other things to the least of people, you do them to Him, according to Jesus, and you'll get your reward. There is a lot more to Christian ministry than healing, but this book majors on the healing part. That doesn't make other ministries unimportant.)

Jesus did not leave you in the dark about how you would do these things. You do them in His name. You lay hands on the sick in Jesus' name and they recover.

You cannot get this power and authority by attending a Bible school or training center. You cannot get this power by showing up faithfully every time the doors open at your church and serving in the helps ministry. Those are good things to do, but you cannot do anything to earn or deserve the right to have God use you. Jesus has already made you worthy to be used by His blood. He has already given you the power and authority to do His works. Whether you ever act on this fact or not, it is still true. You could lay hands on the sick even if you are not currently doing so. There is nothing you can do to get this power if you are already baptized with the Holy Spirit. You already have it. Bible school can't give it to you; the school can only train you to use what you have already been given as a Christian. It is a tragedy that so few of us take advantage of what we Christians are able to do.

Salvation is not a feeling; it is a fact. You do not always “feel” saved. You will not always “feel” like you have the authority to lay hands on the sick in the name of Jesus and see them recover, but you do have that authority. If you wait until you feel some kind of power on the inside, you will probably never do the works of Jesus. There are exceptional times when you feel the anointing come on you to minister in the gifts of healings. But ordinarily, you will not feel like anything will happen when you lay hands on a sick person. You can either act based on your feelings or based on the facts. It is a fact that you are authorized to minister healing to others in the name of Jesus. I have found that when supernatural manifestations kick in, it is usually after I have already done my part to start praying in faith without having sensed any special anointing. I did my part, then God did His.

Also, it is mistake to think that healing is only happening if you feel something happening, or if the person shakes uncontrollably, falls over, or whatever. I remember a series of meetings a friend and I did on a certain Caribbean island; he laid hands on a man with a blind eye who had just gotten saved at the altar. NO ONE felt anything – I didn’t, my friend didn’t, and the man didn’t. Based on experience, it didn’t work. He just walked away from the altar normally, left the service still blind in that eye, but at least before he left he was exhorted to keep his stand of faith that he believed that he received when he prayed. Based on what we saw and felt, he didn’t get any healing, though.

However, he woke up the next morning screaming, “I can see! I can see!” His blind eye was completely healed when he woke up. His mother came and got saved that night as a result. You can’t go by what you see at the moment. (Or DON’T see, if you’re blind!)

You don’t have to wait until you feel a special “unction” (anointing) to pray. You should let the Holy Spirit lead you, but He has already told you through Jesus’ words that you can do Jesus’ works. You have just as much right to lay hands on the sick as you would if Jesus appeared to you personally and said, “You have power over all sicknesses and all diseases and all demons. I authorize you to be a vessel of divine healing. Go and lay hands on the sick in My name and they will recover!” Any statement Jesus made in the Bible carries as much weight as it would if He appeared to you in person and said it to you One-on-one.

Usually, you feel the power of God move through you after you have started laying hands on the person. Even then, you may not feel anything. What do you do then? You believe in the words of the Son of God, who said that you can lay hands on the sick in His name and they shall recover. You ignore your feelings that it isn’t working. You ignore the devil’s taunts that you are just embarrassing yourself and that you’ll look like a fool when nothing happens. You have to just hit the “mute” button on your thoughts sometimes and go with your spirit man! Jesus did not promise that either you or the person you lay hands on would feel something when you prayed. You are supposed to believe Mark 16:15-18 instead of relying on your feelings.

Jesus was moved with compassion. It will help you minister healing if you have compassion on people. You have to be sensitive to people's feelings. For example, it is not a good idea to tell the grieving relatives at a funeral, "If he had just been in faith, he wouldn't have died." That will not bless anyone. Nor will it help anyone to say, "Jesus healed you 2,000 years ago, and if you don't receive it, it's your own fault!" Although these may be true statements, you are supposed to speak the truth in love (Ephesians 4:15).

Don't stop laying hands on the sick even if someone doesn't receive. There are reasons why people don't receive, but it is always right and proper to offer to lay hands on sick people. What if you lay hands on someone and he dies the next day? Keep going; don't let a failure discourage you. (Besides, as one famous healing preacher said, everyone you lay hands on is going to die someday!) Did you stop riding a bicycle forever after the first time you fell off when you were learning how to do it? Do you stop believing that sin shall have no dominion over you just because you got mad and yelled at your spouse this morning? No, you keep working at it. The same goes for laying hands on the sick.

Even if you "blow it," don't let that stop you. I was in a service they were recording on video, and I was laying hands on a woman's head, and all of sudden I started getting all these mortified looks, and I couldn't figure out why. I just kept going and the looks got more and more dire. She was moving around some but I sort of held on, and what I didn't realize until it was too late is that I had a bulldog grip on her wig and I was doing a good job of pulling it off her head! I can laugh about it now but it was definitely not funny at the time, especially since this was going on video! I had no idea that her hair was fake – I wasn't even considering the possibility – but I sure found out! Sometimes you just have to learn from your mistakes, keep going, and do things a little differently next time!

You Are Christ on the Earth

It would be a shame to write a perfectly good book on healing without giving the pro-unbelief folks at least one statement to yank out of context and berate me for. So I figure this will get their attention. This title is not a gimmick; it is the absolute truth!

The Church is called the Body of Christ. We are Christ's body, the fullness of Him who fills all in all (Ephesians 1:23). So we, being many, are one body in Christ (Romans 12:5). "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular" (1 Corinthians 12:27). Jesus is the Head of the body (Colossians 1:18). When Saul of Tarsus persecuted the Church, he persecuted Jesus Christ Himself (Acts 9:3-9) – the Lord told him so when He appeared to him on the way to Damascus.

Before I get written up in the latest anti-cult literature, let me point out that I am not saying that YOU are Jesus Christ. That should be obvious. But if you are a Christian, you have been baptized into Christ. You are part of Christ's body on the earth. Jesus sat down at the right hand of the Father, so the only physical presence of Christ in this earth today is His Body!

To me, you need no further proof that healing and laying hands on the sick are for today. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever (Hebrews 13:8). What He did in His ministry on earth in the Bible is what He wants to do today. He wants the gospel to be preached and the sick to be healed.

We are ambassadors of Christ. We represent Him in front of the whole world. We are literally the only Jesus that they can see with their physical eyes. How pathetic it is to think that we should be sick! Does that accurately reflect Jesus Christ, who never suffered a single sickness of His own? NO! We represent Jesus Christ accurately when we lay hands on the sick and see them recover as He did. How can we represent our Master without doing the works He did, as He promised us that we would? How can it possibly be God's will for the Body of Christ to live a lower life than Christ Himself did? IT ISN'T.

Jesus Christ is not physically on the earth in the way that He was during His ministry, but His name is still on the earth. Sicknesses of all kinds must bow their knees at the name of Jesus just as they would do before Jesus Himself (Philippians 2:9-11). That is because Jesus' name carries all of His power and authority because He backs it Himself – whatever we ask in His name, He will do it (John 14:14)! We are to cast out devils and lay hands on the sick in His name (Mark 16:17-18). We are the only ones who can use that name. He is seated in heaven with God. He does not come down and use His own name. He authorized His Body to use His name. The use of His name by the believer, the member of the Body of Christ, brings Jesus Christ Himself onto the scene to do what needs to be done.

This does not mean that you should use the phrase "in the name of Jesus" as a "lucky rabbit's foot." (Of course, a rabbit's foot can't actually be lucky because the rabbit had four of them and look where they got him!) The phrase "in the name of Jesus" is also not a code for "end of prayer." (Nor is "Amen," by the way.) The name of Jesus did nothing for the sons of Sceva, who had no faith in that name. It did everything for the beggar at the Beautiful gate, of whom it was said that Jesus' name, through faith in His name, made him whole (Acts 3:16).

Can you see how silly it is to think that Christ Himself, who “nourisheth and cherisheth” His body the Church (Ephesians 5:28-32), should be portrayed as the sickener and destroyer of His very own Body on the earth? It would be just as ridiculous as it would be if you said that it was your will for your head to be whole but for your third finger on your left hand to endure sickness. Besides, you know full well that you go to a doctor or take medicine to try to relieve your suffering when you are sick, which makes you a hypocrite if you really think sickness is God’s plan for you. You know it isn’t your will for any part of your body to be sick. Why do you think it could be God’s will for part of His Body to be sick?

If sickness is such a blessing, why did God set in the Church gifts of healings instead of gifts of sickenings? Jesus did not go around giving out sickness to His own followers, and we misrepresent Him (and slander His character) when we say that He does. The gifts of the Spirit, which draw attention to Jesus and exalt Him, include gifts of healings and working of miracles (1 Corinthians 12:8-11, 1 Corinthians 12:28-30). Jesus is exalted by the healing of the sick, not by the sickening of the well!

Let’s face it – the only way that you can represent Jesus Christ is to live as He did and do what He did. To do otherwise is to fail to represent Christ accurately to the world. That means that you should be well and actively involved in laying hands on the sick for their recovery. If you are not doing this, you are living beneath your privileges in Christ, and missing out on a lot of fun!

Why Are You Here?

Why are you still on the earth right now, given that departing and being with Christ is far better? What do you hope to accomplish here? As part of the Body of Christ on the earth, you are an ambassador of Christ and a minister of reconciliation. So one of your major purposes in life is to glorify God and be a shining light that draws others to Jesus Christ.

Sure, God is interested in your well-being and in giving you things richly to enjoy (1 Timothy 6:17). But if you want things to enjoy, there will be a lot more of them in heaven! You aren't here just to see what you can get out of life (and out of God). Your life is not your own! You died and now Christ lives in you. You are Christ's servant for the rest of your days on Planet Earth. God wants you to bear fruit for Him. The old "you" died! (See You're Dead for more on this topic.)

Once you understand why you are here, you will understand how ludicrous it is that God would want you to be sick and unable to care for yourself. He could use members of His Body in a greater way when they are well than when they are sick. You can't "go into all the world" from a bed in a home. You can't go out and do the works of Christ when you are in a hospital needing the works of Christ to be done to you!

Since Jesus' main reason for coming was to save sinners, it needs to be a major priority to us, too. Jesus sought that which was lost, and so should we. This is a major reason why God wishes above all things that you prosper and be in health, even as your soul prospers (3 John 2). Jesus needs you to be able to work to advance His kingdom!

I am not suggesting that you ignore your family and become a workaholic for Jesus. Some people do that (and sometimes lose their families in the process), but even Jesus told His disciples to rest a while (Mark 6:31). Sometimes getting some rest is the most spiritual thing you can do. This is a marathon, not a sprint. If you want to be around for a long time, you have to take care of yourself and not have an insane schedule. I know a couple ministers personally who almost died because they pushed themselves way too hard booking back-to-back services for multiple weeks. I've always thought that the best mistakes to learn from are other people's mistakes, and I've learned some things from them about what happens if you push yourself too hard – it's downright scary. Besides, if you're a wreck, how many people will want to become a Christian like you? That isn't much of a witness.

On the other hand, we do not have the luxury of living for ourselves anymore (2 Corinthians 5:15). Everyone whose name is not written in the Lamb's book of life will be thrown into the lake of fire which is the second death (Revelation 20:14-15). What about all the people Christ died to save who are still heading toward that never-ending torment? At the end of your life, you will not look back and say, "I wished I'd played a few more of those shoot-everything-that-moves video games," but you might say, "I wish I had told more people about Jesus." You're still here, so you still have the chance to make Jesus' priorities your priorities. This doesn't mean that you have no recreational time for yourself, but it means that you must seek first the kingdom of God, not your own kingdom and pleasures.

Having said all this, please understand that your MAIN purpose in life is not ministry. If God put man here mostly for ministry, why did He put Adam and Eve somewhere where there were no sinners to reach and no sick people to lay hands on? So God above all else wants to love you and have you enjoy fellowship with Him. That's easy to forget in our fast-paced society with all the need out there for ministry. In fact, it's all too easy to forget what I think is our most important ministry – ministering to the Lord with thanksgiving, praise and worship. You'll still be doing that in heaven long after there is no need for healing ministries. If you go to the extreme that some evangelists do that your SOLE usefulness is reaching souls while you're here, you will spend eternity not being "useful" by your own definition!

Conformed to Christ's Image

Romans 8:29:

For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren.

You are supposed to resemble Jesus Christ on this earth. He is your elder brother, and you should bear a family resemblance! When people see you, they should see Jesus.

1 John 2:6:

He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.

Jesus Christ was not sick until He took your sins. He walked the earth in divine health. You are supposed to be conformed to His image. Therefore, you should walk in divine health, too.

No one who looks at someone suffering some terrible illness will see an accurate image of Jesus Christ on the earth. Jesus Christ walked in authority over sickness and gave His disciples the same authority. Being well is part of being conformed to Christ's image.

Another part is doing the works of Jesus. If we are truly conformed to His image, we will minister to the sick and see them recover. Otherwise we really don't resemble Him. We are to do His works and greater in His name (John 14:12-14).

Once you understand that your destiny is supposed to be conformity to His image, it will change the way you read a lot of Bible accounts. Here are a couple of examples:

We often try to identify with the woman with the issue of blood in Mark 5:25-34, whose faith made her whole. But conformity to Christ would mean identifying with the One who had the anointed clothing that others were touching. It's one thing to touch the Lord and receive healing, but it's another to be the one out of the street where people are trying to get your shadow to pass over them so that they'll be healed – as happened with Peter (Acts 5:12-16). He wasn't Jesus, but he was continuing to do the kind of thing Jesus did. Our goal should be to live as the one with the anointing, not just as someone who can receive from someone with the anointing.

Peter walked on water when Jesus told him to come, though he began to sink. We try to identify with Peter and say that we'd be the one out of twelve that would at least get out of the boat during a raging storm, expecting to walk on water. But identifying with Christ means identifying with the One who walked a long way across a big lake during a bad storm, and then caught Peter when he began to sink! That shows quite a different level of faith!

Most Christians think, “But that was JESUS doing that. God gave Him Super Faith, while He only gave the rest of us Regular Faith.” But if God gave Jesus the ability to have more faith than you can have, He cheated and Jesus was NOT truly a man as we are. If He was truly the Son of Man, a man like us, He had to walk in the same human limitations as the rest of us. He had to have the same measure of faith we have. Otherwise, His life was rigged and unfair.

Someone will probably chime in at this point, “No, that’s not rigged – when it came to the Spirit, the Bible says that God gave Jesus the Spirit without measure, while the rest of us have the Spirit in only a measure. Perhaps collectively the Body has the same measure of the Spirit that Jesus had, but we certainly do not have that individually. That’s even what my favorite faith teacher taught, and John 3:34 proves it!”

But the very verse cited to prove that point really proves the opposite:

John 3:34:

For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.

The problem here is that the words “unto him” are not in the original Greek text – they are italicized in the King James Version to show that they were added by the translators but not part of the original text. (At least they were transparent about admitting when they did this so that those with no access to the underlying Greek text would know.) The NKJV fixes this by omitting unto him to make the text conform with the original Greek. Just about every other translation out there also omits unto him because there is no linguistic reason to add words that aren’t there.

The actual text only says that God doesn’t give the Spirit by measure.

So this verse actually MAKES the point that God doesn’t hold back part of the Holy Spirit from anybody! You have every bit as much access to the Holy Spirit as Jesus did! That has to be the case; otherwise, you could not do the works that He did, because He did His works by the Holy Spirit. That should be evident because Jesus did no miracles for the first 90% or so of His life before the Holy Spirit came upon Him.

(For a little more on this subject, see Objection: We Cannot Heal as Jesus Did Because He Had the Spirit without Measure, While We Have the Spirit Given by Measure.)

Probably the biggest lie that gets in people’s way of being conformed to Christ is the worn-out falsely humble assertion, “I’m just a sinner saved by grace; I’m just like you except that I’m forgiven.”

If you're a believer, you're an ex-sinner – the Bible calls you a saint. You are identified with righteousness now, not with sin. You are a new creation and the old man is dead (2 Corinthians 5:17)! You should expect to walk in newness of life (Romans 6:4), not like some old sinner. A sinner doesn't have a chance of living the way Christ did, but for you as a saint, it's your very nature to act like Jesus! Jesus doesn't just see you as a trainee – He sees you as His brother or sister (Hebrews 2:11)! You aren't somewhere way down in the pecking order; you are a joint heir with Christ (Romans 8:17). Spiritually, you're "cut from the same cloth" as Jesus (Hebrews 2:11). As a born-again person, you have the same level of righteousness before God that Jesus Himself has. (In fact, you can't grow in righteousness – you will not be any more righteous for all eternity on the new earth than you are right now! You already have perfect righteousness, upon which it is impossible to improve.) Spiritually, you no more resemble a sinner than white resembles black.)

People have told me that my two brothers look a lot like me. Some have commented that you can definitely tell that all three of us all came from the same place. Jesus is the firstborn among many brothers (Romans 8:29). If someone had a spiritual scope of some kind, he could look at you and say, "I can sure tell that person and Jesus came from the same place. They're obviously siblings." That's God's destiny for us – for people to see followers of Christ who act, talk and look like their older brother Jesus in every way.

Looking like Jesus also applies to your love walk. When Jesus was reviled, He didn't revile back. 1 Peter 2:20-23 says, "For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps: Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: Who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously:"

God is love, and we are supposed to be imitators of God (Ephesians 5:1). (The word followers in the King James Version might better be translated imitators, as it is used in that context elsewhere. Most modern translations use the word imitators here.)

Paul said that it was no longer he who lived, but Christ lived in him (Galatians 2:20). God's desire is for Christ to live through us. Paul "travailed" in prayer for Christ to be formed in believers (Galatians 4:19). We should reflect Jesus. This is true in the area of being good to others, which most Christians would affirm. But it is also true in the area of ministering with His power, which is not that something most Christians consider. Some people wear items that ask, "What Would Jesus Do?" When I see that, I think, "Jesus would heal the sick and cast out demons as well as walk in love and share the gospel with others."

You don't have to have a prominent full-time healing ministry as Jesus did in the last part of His life. Most people are not called to full-time ministry of that type, but we are ALL ministers of reconciliation (2 Corinthians 5:18). ALL of us can do the works Jesus did, because Jesus said that believers would do what He did. It would not be only a select few "ministers" who would do what He did. Believers, not just apostles or other ministry gifts, are to cast out demons and lay hands on the sick and see them get well (Mark 16:17-18).

This is God's vision for His church on the earth – believers everywhere acting like their older brother. May we all catch this vision for ourselves!

Laying Hands on the Sick

Mark 16:20

Laying on of hands is one of the six fundamental doctrines of Christ found in Hebrews 6:1-2. As the body of Christ, we are so much the worse for emphasizing the other fundamental doctrines in that list and ignoring laying on of hands. If there were as much teaching on laying on of hands as there is on eternal judgment, there would probably be as much faith in laying on of hands as there is in eternal judgment. People for the most part believe only what they're taught; few are diligent enough to study the Scriptures for themselves.

We know that Jesus laid hands on the sick (Mark 6:5, Mark 8:22-25, Luke 4:40-41). They asked him to lay hands on someone (Mark 7:32-37), so we know that He did it a lot. He said that we would do the works that He did (John 14:12), so we should lay hands on the sick and see them recover as well, as He explicitly promised (Mark 16:18).

Laying hands on the sick is not difficult. Don't make it hard! You find a sick person and lay your hands on him in the name of Jesus, and Jesus, in response to His name being legally used in this manner, heals the person. You don't have to "feel" as if it works. You don't have to "feel" power on the inside of you flowing into the person. (You might and you might not.) What matters is not what you or the other person feels, but that you are following Jesus' instructions for dealing with sick people, and that Jesus acts when you invoke His name on the earth.

Jesus did not say, "They will lay hands on the sick, and nothing will happen," so that should not be your expectation! Don't let the devil talk you out of doing it for fear that you will look silly when nothing happens.

Two people's faith is involved here – your faith and the sick person's faith. That is why you probably don't want to just waltz in and lay hands on him. Faith comes by hearing God's Word (Romans 10:17). If the other person has no idea what's going on, he isn't in much of a condition to hook up with you. If you have the time, you may not even want to lay hands on him at all, preferring to instruct the person about healing and leaving the actual laying on of hands for a future visit when the person has had a chance to understand what you want to do.

What do you say while you're laying hands on a sick person? Let me tell you a few things not to say. "Oh God, please heal him!" "Touch him, Lord!" "God, in your mercy, please take away this disease." "Lord, you KNOW how much he's hurting. Do something!" I've heard enough of this junk to last a lifetime. When you lay hands on a sick person, you are not asking or begging God to do anything. You are following a Bible ordinance and you have a right to expect God to honor it without having to badger Him or plead with Him. Whiny, pleady prayers done in many churches actually prove that there is no faith involved in the process and it's no wonder that nothing happens. These signs follow them that believe, not them that doubt or whine.

Probably the best approach is to speak to the condition in the name of Jesus and command it to leave. We use the term “praying for the sick,” in the church world, but you’ll have to change your thinking if you want to see results. You are not praying for the sick person. (You might be praying OVER the sick person, but there is a big difference!) You are commanding the disease to go by the authority you have in Christ. If you want to throw in a few prayers for the person while you’re at it, that’s fine, but the bottom line is that you are exercising Christ’s authority in the earth. You are doing the work in His name. Jesus did not pray for the sick. Why should you do it differently than the Person whose name you’re using? That’s right, Jesus did not pray for the sick. He was anointed to heal the sick and He healed them. You can’t find any place when He stopped and “prayed for” the person and did any of the things that are common today among church people. Jesus believed that He was anointed to do what He did and He acted on that fact. He has in turn anointed you to do His works. It’s now up to you to believe that you are anointed to do those works and to act on that fact.

Ministering to the Sick

It amazes me that the primary way we think we should minister to the sick is to pray for their healing in their absence, whether they know anything about it or not. There is no reason that healing, the physical side of salvation, should be ministered in any different way than the spiritual side of salvation.

If we ministered the new birth the way we typically “minister” healing, we would gather people around in a service to pray that the new birth would fall on Mr. X. We would pray that God would make Mr. X a new creation in Christ right there where he is (probably at the strip club; that is how he got the name Mr. X). We would “claim” his salvation “by faith” for him. Would this work? NO!!!

What would you pray for Mr. X? Scripturally, you would pray that he would see the light of the glorious gospel. You would pray for laborers to go into the harvest and tell Mr. X how to be saved. Someone would share the gospel with Mr. X, faith would arise in his heart, and he would receive something that was already bought for him through his own faith.

It makes sense that if you want someone to be healed, you would pray that laborers would go into the harvest to share the good news of healing with him. You would consider going yourself. If the gospel is not preached to the sick person, there will be no basis for faith. Even if the healing anointing “falls” on the person, he won’t know what it is or how to cooperate with it. He will probably lose whatever he gets in short order. The sick person needs to hear the good news about healing before he can have a basis for faith. If he has no basis for faith, he cannot pray in agreement with you for his healing. God may show him mercy, but to stay healed, the man needs to be able to stand on the Bible on his own.

Probably the #1 difficult type of prayer request I have received in my experience has been people wanting prayer for Aunt Glarda in Montana who is sick and has never heard the gospel. The requester wants healing to fall out of the sky so that Aunt Glarda will be instantly healed. That isn’t usually how it works! If I could make that work, I would. Usually, I ask if anyone is going to share the gospel with Aunt Glarda, and in almost every case, no one is going to even attempt to tell her about Jesus, let alone divine healing. (Aunt Glarda is a mean old bat and no one wants to talk to her about anything. So everyone hopes there will be a way to get her healed without actually talking to her.) Then I encourage the person to share the gospel with Aunt Glarda or find someone else who can do so. Many times, when people find out that boldness and some time commitment may be involved, they back off, because they wanted a quick fix with no effort on their part. Ministry involves sacrifice and love, not just faith and power!

Then someone will say, “Well, we can pray the prayer of agreement here for Aunt Glarda. Let’s agree for her healing now!” If you can make that work, please follow it up with a prayer of agreement for Aunt Glarda to get saved without anyone talking to her. Good luck. The prayer of agreement in ministry situations is great – as long as the person with the need is one of the people in agreement! Otherwise, don’t count on any results. Aunt Glarda might not want to be healed. She might be afraid she’d have nothing to complain about, and she might hate the idea that she might have to actually work instead of collecting disability payments if she is healed. You won’t do healing ministry too long before you start to encounter those types of people! If they don’t want to get healed, there is literally nothing you can do for them until they have a change of heart on the matter. I remember refusing to pray for a man who asked if I would pray that he’d be healed enough to not be in pain but not healed enough to lose his disability check. (Yes, someone really did ask that. And I really did refuse, and you should too in a case like that!)

Since we’re on that subject, there is a saying that people don’t care how much you know until they know how much you care. Ministering to a seriously ill person may involve some serious time commitment and no small amount of patience, since people usually don’t “get it” the first time around. If their head is cloudy from drugs, it’s even more of a challenge. If you simply come in and blast away with your Scripture shotgun, the person may reject your message because he feels that you are just there to preach Bible verses at him. Jesus was moved with compassion, and unless you demonstrate the compassion of God as well as His power, the person may not want to hear from you at all.

You may not be there to discuss the weather or what sports teams are winning, but you may have to engage in some small talk before the person is comfortable with you. You need to prove that you care, and that you are not just looking for a great look-how-God-used-me-glory-to-me testimony on Sunday morning. You will turn people off if you get preachy. It will not help to simply tell the person how sorry you feel for him, but it is not wrong to show sympathy for his condition. You don’t have to encourage self-pity, but you can let the person know that you understand that his situation is difficult for him. Of course, you don’t have to listen to senseless rambling all night, either, as some people’s mouths don’t seem to be equipped with “off” buttons.

Beware of anything smacking of a critical attitude. No one will want to listen to you if you come across as saying, “Healing is yours in Christ – why can’t you get that through your head, stupid?” You probably didn’t get it the first time, either. Also remember that drugs can mess up people’s minds and make it harder for them to understand what you are saying, although the Holy Spirit can and does break through that at times. We have seen cases where someone seemed “fogged in” until his spirit man kicked in, and suddenly the person was able to talk about the things of God with us.

Don’t give up. The person may suddenly get a revelation of what you’re talking about just as you’re ready to give up in exasperation. If the person is open to listen to you, keep planting the Word in him. If he doesn’t want to hear any more, you are out of line trying to force anything on him. As discussed in one of questions in the Questions section, some people just decide to die and there is absolutely nothing you can do about it once they make up their minds that they want to go.

I think the biggest thing people need to know is that it is definitely God's will for them to be well. So many people think that God is punishing them or teaching them something, and people have to have their minds renewed to the truth before they will be able to receive anything. It doesn't take much to prove this point. You can point to the miracles in Jesus' ministry and then show that Jesus is the same today (Hebrews 13:8). You can show that Jesus healed those who were oppressed by the devil (Acts 10:38). As long as the person thinks that sickness might be a good thing after all, he is in no condition to receive healing. There is no basis for faith until you know what God wants to do. Otherwise, your prayer is mere wishful thinking and hoping, not faith.

You can point out that Jesus took our sicknesses and pains as punishment for our sins (Isaiah 53:4). It is probably better to just say that than to open to Isaiah and whip out your laptop computer, open this book, and prove that the Hebrew word used for griefs in the King James Version of Isaiah 53:4 means sicknesses elsewhere in the Old Testament.

You can point out that sicknesses were part of the curse of the Law (Deuteronomy 28:61), and Jesus has redeemed us from them (Galatians 3:13). You can show that disease is a penalty for sin, and we are redeemed from sin by the blood of Jesus. Stress that Jesus bore our punishment, including sickness, in our place. He took a physical beating to redeem us from having to bear physical punishment for our sins.

If you can, give the sick person some good literature about healing. The person isn't going to get well watching people run a ball up and down a field between beer commercials. He needs the seed of the Word to be planted in his heart to produce a harvest of healing.

You can turn to Mark 16:17-18 and tell how Jesus' followers can lay hands on the sick for their recovery, and offer to do so. I would suggest that you wait until after you have shared the Word before doing this. This gives the person an opportunity to hook up with you in faith. If you will have multiple opportunities to see the person, you might not want to pray at all the first few times unless he says that he is ready. The best way to minister healing is to minister the Word so that faith can arise in the sick person's heart. As much as you might want to, you cannot permanently receive a healing for someone else. They may get supernatural relief as a result of your prayers, but unless the person is able to stand in faith on his own, the devil may try to swipe his healing from him.

I'm not saying not to pray; the person may be very encouraged by how God answers your prayer. However, you must be prepared to help the person stand on his own two feet, spiritually speaking. What good will you do if you get a hundred people healed when you pray, and they all get sick again? If anything, they can be very hard to reach next time. Ministering to the sick is not a hit-and-run affair. It will require time and patience on your part. Are you willing to spend the time to help the other person understand what you understand?

A really good way to hook up with someone who does not like Bible verses is to share your own testimony of healing. The best kind of testimony is how you believed you received when you prayed and got healed, because the other person is able to do the same thing. If you just share about being healed through the gifts of the Spirit in a church service, a person who is not in good shape to go to a church service may not be able to see himself in your shoes, receiving healing the way that you did. And there is no guarantee that anyone in particular will receive healing through special manifestations of the Holy Spirit.

Faith comes from hearing the Word, not from testimonies, but I have found that I can mix the Word with my testimony. I explain that I believed what Mark 11:24 says. (I don't usually cite the reference; I just say that Jesus said that.) I have been amazed at how quickly some people have latched on to this and "gotten it" themselves after I shared how I got healed.

Don't allow yourself to consider yourself a success or a failure based on what happens, or think that you must keep going back endlessly until the person is healed because you are solely responsible for seeing that person healed. You'll know in your heart when the effort is paying dividends and when it isn't. Sometimes you can be disappointed to learn that really deep down, the person just wants to go be with Jesus. That's legitimate; people can choose that, and it doesn't mean that you failed.

Finally, ministering healing is a great way to find out how much you really believe in your heart, and how much is just head knowledge to you. When the sick person starts asking you questions about healing, you'll find out in a hurry what you really believe!

Boldness to Minister Healing

The bolder you are about healing, the better results you will get, for multiple reasons. I am not talking about a boldness that you work up, though – I’m talking about a Holy Spirit-given boldness that you can pray for.

When the apostles were first persecuted, they did not pray for more anointing (whether a double portion, triple portion, or whatever). They realized that they didn’t need more anointing – they needed more boldness, and so they prayed for boldness. God honored this prayer and they went out boldly proclaiming the Word. God did signs and wonders through them as they did this (Acts 4:29-33).

The first reason boldness is important is that it will stop you for shying away from presenting the fullness of the gospel, which includes healing, in the first place. This was the primary issue above. They were being threatened and ordered to cease teaching in the name of Jesus (Acts 4:18). It would be a “natural” fleshly reaction to say, “This is getting very uncomfortable. Our freedom and maybe even our lives are at risk because we’re doing this. Maybe we should adopt a more subtle approach and spare ourselves the risk and aggravation.” But if they had yielded to that mindset of compromise, the signs and wonders would never have happened and the gospel would have been hindered. We need this kind of boldness that we will present Christ in His fullness no matter what men say or do and no matter what the cost. I’ve been fortunate to only have a small number of instances where I was threatened for preaching the gospel, and I’m glad that I never backed down. In my case, no one ever made good on a threat. Satan just wanted to shoo me away with cheap words. Not many people REALLY want to risk prison time by making good on a threat, and they might not realize that they can go to jail for “criminal threatening” even if they don’t make good on their threats. (You can inform them of this!) My mindset was that if I ever DID get beaten for sharing the gospel, I wouldn’t be the first, and my life is not my own anyway. I wouldn’t let it stop me. I had a friend who was beaten multiple times for sharing the gospel, and he kept going back out there anyway. I’ve been where drug pushers and pimps hung out, but they are sinners in need of Jesus like so many other people. You’d be surprised – some of them can be more polite to you than some church people. You have what they need, and deep down they know it. I even preached one tent meeting in an area where the assassins whom the drug pushers hire live, but I did not get assassinated. God can really use people who realize that their lives are not their own; they’re crucified with Christ and they only live to please Him now, no matter what the cost. This kind of boldness is essential so that Satan does not hinder your efforts with his cheap threats.

The second reason boldness is important is that it lets people know that you really believe in what you’re doing. It will inspire confidence in your hearers. If you act like you’re not really sure that the name of Jesus really works against diseases, other people will be unsure too! Just remember that we are talking about Holy Spirit boldness, not a boldness you work up in the natural as any public speaker might try to do. The Word does not say, “And the disciples really tried extra hard to be bold after they were threatened.” They were strong in the Lord, not in themselves. People recognized their unusual boldness.

The third reason boldness is important comes into play if you are one of the people that God uses in gifts of healings, working of miracles and the gift of faith. Not everyone has a special anointing in these areas, but if you do, be bold to let people know that God uses you this way. I remember one faith teacher who made a point every time he did a healing service to talk about the special anointing Jesus had given him to heal the sick. I can understand why the Lord told him to share that everywhere he went. It let people know that God used him that way so that people could expect to receive from that anointing.

I have found in practice myself that when I'm dealing with someone who knows little or nothing about divine healing, it is helpful to let that person know that God uses me along these lines. That will help them expect something when I lay hands on them. Now if God hasn't given you a ministry along these lines, don't fake a claim that He does just to get someone excited! You might give the most accurate prophecies around but never flow in the "power gifts" and that's fine. God wants to use EVERYONE in some manner or another in the gifts of the Spirit (1 Corinthians 12:7), but He does not use everyone the same way. But if He uses you along the lines of healing, I think you SHOULD let people know that. The gift God put in me is for other people's benefit anyway, not for my own benefit!

Some people shy away from saying anything about their giftings because they fear that it will attract glory and attention to themselves and away from Jesus, but that is an unfounded fear. It is the Holy Spirit who graces you a certain way, and acting like you're hiding His giftings is false humility. Remember that Peter said, "Look on us" (Acts 3:4) instead of "Look only to Jesus; only He can help you!" The latter might sound more "humble" but it does not deny Jesus glory to let people know that He uses you in a special way to lay hands on the sick. Remember that people glorified God who had given such power to men (Luke 5:17-26). If they would do that then, they would do it today. I have yet to have anyone try to worship me because I laid hands on a sick person and he was healed. I did have one experience where they were looking to me as if it were my power, and I had to make it clear that it was Jesus' power flowing through me. The apostles did have an encounter like that once, but they dealt with it and people didn't sacrifice to them after all.

Whether or not you ever “feel bold” is beside the point – you need to trust in the Holy Spirit’s boldness. You do not have to “feel bold” to BE bold! I had issues with shyness and felt like I was the last person God should ever send out on the street in front of strangers. Yet He told me to write, print and hand out original gospel tracts in Knox County and Lincoln County, Maine when I lived there. I figured that only a few people would take any, but after a few hundred people took them, I realized that I was mistaken about that. But I was still shy and felt uncomfortable about approaching strangers with the gospel even after that. Well, before I left Maine, I had personally handed out more tracts in those two counties than the combined populations of those counties! (I handed out over 84,000 tracts and the combined population of those counties was less than 75,000. And that was all hand-to-hand deliveries, not any of those annoying cheap practices of leaving them as litter in bathrooms and stuck in people’s windshield wipers.) And you know what? Even after all that, I STILL find it personally uncomfortable to approach strangers with the gospel! I suppose I’m not quite as uncomfortable as I was at first, but I never got to the point where I felt it was “natural” for me. I could never trust in my own boldness. But I can tell you, there was a Holy Spirit boldness that would come on me once I got out there! People were saved and several suicides were prevented because I was willing to put my own discomfort on the shelf. I realized that a little temporary discomfort for my flesh could spare others eternal discomfort. It was easier to go out when I had that perspective. Even if I didn’t feel bold, I had a “track record” going with the Lord and I knew that He would supply the needed boldness once I got out there and needed it.

Because boldness is so important, it is important to know how to become bolder. There are four main ways.

First, it is Biblical to pray for boldness. If the disciples could pray for boldness, so can you. And you should! I do. Pray that a Holy Spirit boldness will come upon you. Then don’t be surprised when it does, sometimes when you least expect it.

Second, spend time thinking about what the Word says. The more of the Word that you have in you, the more certain you will be that Jesus offers healing freely to everyone and that you have authority over disease in His name. You can’t minister boldly if you are theologically unsettled on the issue of divine healing. When you are SURE about what the Word says about healing, you will be much bolder about it!

Third, get out and ACT on the Word! Don’t wait for “feelings” of boldness, which might never come before you act. The more you lay hands on the sick, the more natural it will become for you. My knees were shaking (and probably the rest of me too) the first time I offered to lay hands on a sick sinner. But now it’s easier because I’ve gotten used to it. The more you go out and use the authority that Jesus has given you as a believer, the easier it gets. If it’s tough at first, don’t quit. I became a concert-grade pianist and gave my own recitals as well as soloing with a symphony orchestra twice. But I didn’t get there the first time I sat down to play the piano! I had a natural gift for it that I know was from God, but 12 years of lessons and practice definitely helped me get to the point where eventually people were willing to buy tickets to listen to me play classical music for an hour in a rented auditorium. The more I played and practiced, the easier it got. Laying hands on the sick is like that too – the more you do it, the easier it gets.

Fourth, believe and act on Proverbs 28:1 – because you're the righteous, you should be bold as a lion!

Speaking to Mountains, Trees, and Diseases

You can speak to a mountain and command it to be removed. You can speak to a tree and command it to be removed. You can speak to a disease in your body and command it to be removed.

Jesus said explicitly in Mark 11:23-24, Matthew 17:20 and Matthew 21:18-22 that you can speak to a mountain in faith and it will be cast into the sea. Of course, there is little practical value in speaking to a literal mountain. These days, some lawyer would probably file a class-action lawsuit against you on behalf of the owners of coastal property and boats that were destroyed when the mountain crashed into the sea. Jesus was showing what power faith-filled words have – power that literally could throw an entire mountain into the sea. There is no point in trying to water down what Jesus said. It's nothing in comparison to what God did, anyway. He spoke and all the mountains and everything else came into existence in the first place. When you have heaven backing your words, everything is possible.

However, at this writing I've had one practical application of this. There was a "mountain" of clouds named Bonnie that was headed to make a direct hit on the Caribbean island where I was doing a series of healing services. It was still a tropical storm at that time, though it became a major hurricane later. I was quite upset by the forecast and the warnings from the U.S. Hurricane Center in Miami that everyone should stay home and hunker down because widespread damage was predicted. How could God have moved me to do those services on those particular dates on that particular island, only to have the last services wiped out by a storm? I told God that He had to do something about it. He told me, "No, YOU have to do something about it." I thought, "Yes, I'm a faith preacher, I'm supposed to know that." So I spoke to Bonnie and commanded it to go out to sea and miss that island as well as the next one up in the chain. I still have a tracking chart somewhere showing a strange sudden right-angle change of course as Bonnie was heading my way, then another right-angle change where it proceeded in the original direction after missing the island I was on and the other one that I named. Bonnie lied over the ocean and never came ashore. Thus, I had commanded a "mountain" (of clouds) to be cast into the sea, or at least in this case, to be cast out to sea. The "fun" part was that I told everyone in the next service that the storm was NOT going to hit and the meetings were NOT going to be canceled (they weren't), BEFORE there was any evidence that the storm had changed course and the Hurricane Center could change its forecast! When you have the spirit of faith, you believe and therefore you speak (2 Corinthians 4:13). Anyone could make up something after the fact, but it was interesting publicly contradicting what forecasters in Miami were predicting before there was any known course change.

I knew I was "on assignment" on that island for that particular time, so that storm had to go. However, I have never told any storm to go elsewhere since then, as I've never had the direct "mandate" from God at stake like that. However, if I ever had a tornado coming at my house, I would definitely speak to it. I have a friend who DID have a tornado head straight for his house. He commanded it to go back up in the name of Jesus and it did. He doesn't go around moving tornadoes all the time, either, but he's a tither (as I am) and the devourer is rebuked for his sake, so that storm had no business trying to devour his house.

Jesus said explicitly in Luke 17:5-6 and Matthew 21:18-22 that you can speak to a tree. Jesus did so Himself and the disciples saw the results of Jesus' faith-filled words spoken to an object. While Jesus mentioned only a mountain in Mark's gospel, the conversation was triggered by what Jesus had said to a fig tree and the later visible results.

I have yet to have an actual need to speak to a tree in my experience, but it is nice to know that if a tree were falling or coming at me for some reason in a storm, I could speak to it and change its course.

Don't freak out because Jesus said that you can speak to objects that are not sentient beings. He said you can and He demonstrated it. It's futile to argue with the Son of God about something. He spoke to the wind and waves, and they obeyed Him. Wind and waves don't have ears to hear you any more than trees and mountains do. (I've heard of mountaineers, but they're something different.) Yet Jesus spoke to such things and got results! You don't have to understand how it can work; you just have to believe it!

If you can speak to a mountain and you can speak to a tree, you can speak to disease in your body or someone else's body. This is of far more practical use than in telling a sycamine tree to be uprooted and cast into the sea, especially in many locations where you might expose and twist underground cables and get in trouble with the local Dig Safe people as well as with the local fishermen near where it lands. If you can command a great big lump of rock and earth to be gone, it's a far smaller thing to command a lump of cancer to be gone. If you can command a tree to be yanked up by its roots and removed, it's a far smaller thing to command arthritis to be yanked up by its roots and removed.

I've had a LOT of cases where I spoke to a disease and it left. That is usually how I see people get healed, though I'm also usually laying hands on them as well when I do it. At this point, I've lost count of "stage four" cancer cases that I've seen healed by taking authority over the cancer in the name of Jesus. It is helpful to remember that death and life are in the power of the tongue (Proverbs 18:21) because sometimes you will need to speak death to cancer and other diseases just as Jesus spoke death to the fig tree.

It should follow from the statements that Jesus made that you can speak to diseases just as you would speak to mountains or trees. In fact, Jesus demonstrated this fact explicitly. He rebuked the fever in Peter's mother-in-law in Luke 4:38-39. In Mark 7:32-37, Jesus spoke to a deaf ear and commanded it to be opened, and it was. This is not the only way to minister to a sick person; you can simply lay hands on the person in obedience to Mark 16:15-18. Even when you do this, you should do so with the understanding that you are exercising your authority over the sickness that is in the person's body.

The fact that you have the right to speak to diseases is a neglected key to ministering to the sick. It is right to pray for the sick inasmuch as we should pray that the sick get a revelation of God's healing covenant. However, it is not right to "pray for the sick" if that means that we should ask God to heal the sick. No one in the New Testament ever asked God to heal a sick person! Instead, Jesus and His followers took authority over sickness and taught the truth about healing. Instead of "praying for the sick" in the modern sense, they preached the gospel (which includes healing) and healed the sick in the name of Jesus. (Paul prayed before he laid his hands on Publius, but Luke did not say that Paul prayed for Publius's healing in Acts 28:8-9.) You will see better results when you quit "praying for the sick" and start speaking to sickness, exercising your authority over it in the name of Jesus. Don't ask God to do something that He has already delegated authority to you to do. The key is the realization that God has put the ball in your court, so to speak, by giving you that delegated authority.

Take authority over that disease that is in your body. Don't ask God to heal you because you are out of agreement with His Word if you do that. God says that you were healed by the stripes of Jesus (1 Peter 2:24). Agree with that instead and thank God for it. Command disease to leave your body in the name of Jesus. Remember that Jesus backs His name when you use it. When you ask anything in His name, He will do it. Similarly, when you command a disease to leave your body in the name of Jesus, Jesus Himself personally backs His name and Jesus Himself forces the disease out and heals your body.

When it comes to other peoples' bodies, you need their consent and cooperation. If the person is an unbeliever or a young Christian, he must at least allow you to speak to his body and his condition in the name of Jesus. You should explain what you are doing first, of course, so that the other person can agree to the best of his ability. Also, if you don't explain yourself, the person may misinterpret you if you say "I command you to die in the name of Jesus!" or "I command you to leave in the name of Jesus, you foul thing!" With more mature believers, you are really praying the prayer of agreement together with them, uniting your faith against the disease as you speak to it.

Jesus said something that will help give you confidence when you speak to mountains, trees and diseases. He said, "Have faith in God" (Mark 11:22). Your confidence is NOT in your own "spiritual power" to relocate something. Your trust should be in God's faithfulness to back your words because you're speaking in accordance with His word and His will. (If you're not sure that what you want to speak is God's will, you need to take a step back and find out from Scripture if you have the right to speak it before you start speaking. Otherwise you will have no confidence that what you say will come to pass, and you won't really believe it in your heart.) Speaking is the easy part, and that's all you have to do. God will back your words. You are to have faith that He will do it. God set up everything with HIS words, and now you have a lot of control over your destiny with YOUR words. God gave YOU the authority to shape your destiny with your words. He will honor your right to do it.

This doesn't mean that you can control the actions of others or that you can stop all unforeseen storms from popping up in your life. Life sometimes throws curveballs. You're not living in a Christmas romance movie where everything is predictable from start to finish. (By happenstance, an attractive girl meets an attractive boy who has a lot of money. At first they do not hit it off. Then circumstances cause them to have to be together and they discover that they misunderstood each other at first and they really like each other a lot. Then a disagreement pops up that looks like it will surely scotch their relationship. Another suitor gets involved in the situation, who is probably the person that one of them was engaged to but not married to at the beginning of the movie. Now things really look hopeless. The other one sees this situation and gets very discouraged, but a friend says the line that is the hallmark of such movies, "It's Christmas, so anything is possible." At the last minute, the other suitor's unsuitability is unmasked and the two get together for keeps just in time for Christmas. While I realize that I might have just given away the plot to the next four dozen Christmas romance movies you'll watch, I hope you realize that real life doesn't go that predictably.)

You can't always control what happens to you, but you can control how you respond. If you continue to speak in agreement with God's Word, He will bring you out the other side of your trial. Look at Paul's life. If anyone had constant, horrible trials, he did. Many were the afflictions of Paul, but the Lord delivered him from them all! He will deliver you just as much if you'll trust Him.

Proverbs 12:6:

The words of the wicked are to lie in wait for blood: but the mouth of the upright shall deliver them.

You need to understand that MAN, not GOD, has authority over the earth (Genesis 1:26-28, Psalm 115:16). God has given us more latitude than most people realize. Satan, who has no real spiritual power over you, wants to get you to speak HIS thoughts so that you can reap HIS results. You have the legal right, though not the moral right, to speak words of unbelief and have them come to pass. Satan has the right to enforce negative words that come out of your mouth. If you say, "I just know I'm going to die young," you're authorizing it to happen. It won't be God making you die young, but it will still happen if you say it with your mouth and believe it with your heart.

God's angels get involved with your situation when you speak God's Word (Psalm 103:20). All of heaven will back you. But if you just sit there passively in the midst of a trial and don't say anything, life will just run you over like a steamroller. If anything in your life is going contrary to God's Word, you need to speak to that situation in the name of Jesus and move that mountain!

Too often someone will say, "I'm just trusting in the Lord." But no one will move a mountain, tree or disease just by saying that he trusts God. You need to speak TO that mountain, tree or disease and MOVE it!

Healing and Personal Perfection

2 Chronicles 30:18-20

While it is important to live a life consecrated to God and to His service, healing is not just a matter of works. You can forfeit healing by resisting God's working in your life by deliberately clinging to known sin, as explained in the section Mistake: Disobedience. However, you do not have to live in sinless perfection for God to heal you. God is more interested in your heart than He is in finer points of the Law. Jesus made this clear to the Pharisees, whose hearts were corrupt even though they scrupulously tithed on the herbs in their gardens (Matthew 23:23). God desires mercy more than He desires sacrifice, as Jesus taught (Matthew 9:13 and Matthew 12:7, quoting Hosea 6:6).

We see this even under the Law in the passage above. The people had not kept the Passover (symbolic of Christ) for a long time. King Hezekiah decreed that the Passover should be re-instituted, but it was on short notice. The people did not have time to get themselves ready and did not really understand this ordinance, not having done it before. Thus, some of the people partook of the Passover contrary to the requirements of the Law. This was done in ignorance, not in an attempt to defy God.

Look what God did. Hezekiah prayed that the Lord would pardon those who "prepared their hearts to seek God" even though they were not cleansed properly. God did, and He healed the people who partook of this symbol of Jesus Christ. God looked at the hearts of them that sought Him, and overlooked the minor technical violations of cleansing rituals. (You can read the account in the passage at the beginning of this discussion.)

If God could overlook sins when people's hearts were right toward Him under the Old Covenant, surely He can do so under our new and better covenant. "For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ" – John 1:17. We are under grace and truth today. We are not under the Law of Moses.

Technically, the lepers and the woman with the issue of blood who came to Jesus could have been stoned to death for going out in public contrary to the Law of Moses. However, Jesus did not pick up any rocks but instead healed these people. He looked past the legal violations and saw their faith.

God does not condone sin, but He is not a nitpicker, either. God was able to use Peter despite his faults, which are documented for all to see. Peter wasn't perfect, but he sought God and God honored him for it. The same can certainly be said about King David. God has used men in healing ministry who were proud, alcoholic, short-tempered, jealous, vindictive, greedy, and more. Although many were judged eventually because they would not judge themselves, God still did mighty miracles through them for a season. They weren't perfect; but they were available.

The devil is a legalistic nitpicker. He's the kind who would walk out through a front door at a superstore that has a sign, "Do Not Enter" and say that he was OK because he was exiting, not entering. (This would be after he informed the cashier that "20 items or less" is grammatically incorrect and should be "20 items or fewer.") He will always find something to accuse you of, hence his title, "The Accuser of the Brethren" (Revelation 12:10). That's why the cross nullified his nitpicking by providing complete forgiveness for you (Ephesians 1:7 and many other verses), leaving nothing left that he can legally "get" you for.

If your idea of God is that He searches the Bible looking for technical violations in your life, you don't know Him very well. God loves you and is for you (Romans 8:31). He wants you to enjoy His blessings. He expects consecration, but He will overlook your current imperfections if you are seeking Him. You don't need to be perfect to get healed. If you had to have all the sin out of your life before you could get healed, nobody on earth would ever get healed! Yet a LOT of people got healed in the Bible, imperfections and all!

Healing and Correct Doctrine

God does not require doctrinal perfection from you before you can be healed any more than He requires moral perfection before you can be healed. If God waited until we all had 100% correct doctrine, nobody would ever get healed. So people with differing views on a number of difficult theological issues can still be healed no matter which side they stand on. To be healed, the only part of doctrine that you need a decent grasp on is the fact that Jesus paid the price for you to be healed, and that it's based 100% on God's grace and not on your worldly track record.

Do you believe in eternal security ("Once saved, always saved?") You can be healed either way as long as you recognize Jesus as your Healer.

Do you believe that Jesus went to hell between the cross and the resurrection? That debate has been around since the early days of the church, yet people can receive healing if they cite the Apostles' Creed with or without the "He descended into hell" part as long as they believe that God really does heal ALL their diseases.

Do you know which "spirits in prison" Jesus preached to and when He did it? Even if not, you can be healed and set free from the physical prison of sickness as long as you believe that Jesus' will for healing is always YES and AMEN as it was when He walked the earth.

Do you believe that there will be a rapture of the church before a 7-year tribulation, in the middle of it, at the end of it, or that there is some other arrangement? You can still receive your healing BEFORE the rapture, whenever it is, as long as you believe that Jesus redeemed you from the curse of the law, which includes every sickness there is.

Do you believe that Jesus died spiritually when He "became sin" for us and had to be born again? You can be healed no matter which way you believe on that issue as long as you believe that you're healed by Jesus' stripes.

Do you believe that every church must have an apostle over it? You can be healed either way as long as you believe that you have authority over all the works of the devil, including sickness.

Do you believe that Mark 11:22 says to have faith in God or to have the God-kind of faith? As long as you exercise faith to be healed, you can be healed either way.

Do you believe that 1 John 1:9 really teaches that you have to confess individual sins before you receive forgiveness for them? You can be healed either way as long as you confess Jesus as your Healer.

Do you believe that we have to engage in the type of "spiritual warfare" where we "tear down" principalities over cities? You can be healed in ANY city with ANY principality over it as long as you believe and act on the Word of God.

I have my own convictions on some issues like these, and I haven't been shy about expressing them in this book. (You can always write your own book and state your side of things if you think I'm wrong.) But if you disagree with me on any of these issues, it doesn't make either of us an infidel or a preacher of "another gospel." There are plenty of strong, mature Christians who stand on opposite sides of these issues. I will also say that if I am preaching in a church and I know that the pastor stands on the opposite side of the fence on one of these issues, I won't touch it with a ten-foot pole in that pulpit, as I am here to try to educate the Body of Christ, not to cause division in local churches. In fact, there are some topics above that I'd just avoid anyway in church services unless I knew for sure in advance where the pastor stood. I can and do preach divine healing in places where we would disagree on some subjects, and I had preachers in when I was a pastor who didn't agree with me on some subjects. The important thing is that we agreed on divine healing. (If a pastor insists on taking an "if it be thy will" approach to healing, that pastor and I would not be a good match as far as doing meetings.) If a pastor and a visiting minister had to agree on everything, no visiting ministers would ever preach anywhere! Of course, if you put on your own meetings, you can say what you like, but you'll also have to pay for the venue.

While these issues are fascinating to study out, knowing the right position to take on them is not a prerequisite for divine healing. I know that opponents of divine healing make a fuss about some of these issues and leave the impression that if you don't take their side on a particular issue, you must be a heretic and your healing doctrine must be false as well. But that isn't the case. You can be wrong about one thing and right about another.

Healing and Dead Works

Part of the foundational doctrine of Christ is repentance from dead works. (So if your church doesn't preach repentance, it's failed to preach 1 of out 6 of the basic doctrines of Christ found in Hebrews 6:1-2.) While sins like lying, fornication and worrying are dead works, I believe that there is a whole class of "religious dead works" that should be included in "dead works." These are human efforts to achieve what only Christ could pay for.

Let's take a look at some of them and see if you're involved with any of them!

Bargaining with God to Get Healed

"God, if you'll just heal me (my spouse, my child, etc.), I promise you that I will do this, that and the other thing for you!"

You don't have to bargain with God. Instead, you should be receiving a bargain from God. He offers you healing for free because it was prepaid by His Son when He suffered in your place.

Besides, you're showing your carnality if you promise God that you'll be more consecrated to Him only after He does something for you. Why not be more consecrated RIGHT NOW? If you won't be more consecrated RIGHT NOW, don't kid yourself into thinking that you will be more consecrated LATER! It may or may not be true that there are no atheists in foxholes, but "foxhole faith" is notorious for disappearing in a puff of smoke after God delivers someone. I've seen tragic cases where people were "gung ho" for God when they needed to be healed of an incurable disease, then after they came and actually received their healing, they backslid and went back to what they were doing before, sometimes not even bothering to come back and glorify God for their miracle, as was the case with 9 out of 10 lepers that Jesus ministered to on one occasion (Luke 17:12-19).

A former friend was "all out" for Jesus when he was believing God to buy a house for the first time in his life. Once he got his house, he became a troublemaker at church, backslid and ended up losing his house. So beware – if you are using God as a means to an end, you need to repent now. God should BE your end, not the means to something you want more than you want Him.

Prayers and Novenas to Deceased Saints to Get Healed

Attempting to pray to or with deceased saints is a total waste of time. The denomination that is most known for this attempts to justify the practice based on the idea that “the whole family in heaven and earth” in Ephesians 3:15 can pray for one another. They miss the point that in order to have someone agree with you in prayer legally, he has to be on the earth (Matthew 18:18-20)! Thus, novenas (praying for the same thing nine days in a row – in other words, vain repetitions that Jesus warned against – by enlisting the help of a deceased saint) are a total waste of time. This turns into what is essentially a version of Greek mythology where instead of numerous “gods” you have numerous “patron saints” in charge of different things on the earth. For example, if you were lacking finances, you might go to a night meeting held in your church building and pray to the patron saint of Bingo. Okay, I’m being a TINY bit facetious. There is no patron saint of Bingo. So you would have to appeal to Saint Cayetano, the patron saint of gamblers, unless you do it too much, in which case Saint Bernadine, the patron saint of compulsive gamblers would have to help you with the mess Saint Cayetano got you into because Saint Christopher, the patron saint of luck, was having an off-day. Maybe instead of gambling you should get into the business of selling playing cards, as there are THREE official patron saints of playing card manufacturers – Balthasar, Caspar and Melchior. I’m not making these examples up! Some people out there actually believe this stuff! You can go onto the Internet and find official information about these “patron saints” from the folks who DO make this stuff up and then teach it to the gullible.

If you want to actually receive something, receive it from the Lord directly without the involvement of any deceased saint by faith when you pray ONCE.

Other Repetitive Prayers

Don’t be like the heathen and think that God will hear you if you pray for something 100 times. Doing so is in bad taste because it insinuates that either God didn’t pay attention to you the first 99 times, or He didn’t care the first 99 times. If you don’t pray in faith, God could hear your prayer 9,999 times and not answer it, but He’ll answer it the first time you pray in faith. Once you’ve received your healing by faith, there is no need to pray to receive it even a second time – just thank God for what you’ve already received whether you feel better yet or not! That’s what real faith does.

Sacrifices and Good Deeds to Get Healed

Any attempt to BUY something that’s free is an insult to grace. Giving a special offering, doing extra Christian labor, giving away something you like, etc., is an affront to the good news that Jesus WAS the sacrifice that was needed to provide what you need. You don’t have to pay for something that Jesus already paid for. Just receive it!

Fasting to Get Healed

Fasting done properly is an excellent way to keep your flesh under and get more in tune spiritually. But fasting because you want something is anti-faith. Fasting to make God feel sorry for you is a waste of time. He already has COMPASSION on you, which is far better than just feeling sorry for you because His compassion moved Him to send Jesus to purchase your healing. Fasting as a form of protest because God hasn't done something yet is merely a hunger strike that God will ignore. Fasting to prove your consecration is useless because you don't get healed because of your consecration, but rather by Jesus' consecration to let God's will be done when He suffered physically for your sins to buy your healing.

Hop on It!

One lesson I've learned the hard way at times is that the first symptom is the time to "hop on" a sickness, extend your faith and get rid of it. It's easier to get rid of a cold at the first scratch in your throat than to wait until you get home from work and then realize you're completely miserable.

Here is the principle. Sin and sickness are both works of the devil. We are to resist the devil, not just let him mess with us and get around to dealing with his works later when it's more convenient. We should be just as quick to put a stop to sickness as we are to put a stop to temptation to sin. What would you do if you were at work and the devil whispered, "Why don't you sneak peeks at that new administrative assistant all you can – you know she's prettier than your wife, and who'll know you're looking anyway if you're discreet about it?" I would hope your response would be, "It is written – I have made a covenant with my eyes not to look lustfully at a young woman!" (If not, I feel sorry for you and even sorrier for your wife.) Many fine, upstanding, moral believers would not tolerate sinful thoughts like that for a second, because Job 31:1 would immediately come to mind. Yet so many of us put up with thoughts like, "Oh, no, that scratchy throat – here we go, I'll be sick for two weeks just like that lady who sneezed next to me in the elevator yesterday" without resisting them and casting them down as vain imaginations.

Jesus came to destroy the works of the devil (1 John 3:8) – both sin AND sickness. We should want them destroyed in our lives and be just as passionately against the works of darkness as Jesus is. However, WE are told to give no place (opportunity) to the devil (Ephesians 4:27). So it is not up to GOD to do something about the devil and his works – He already did something! It is up to us to enforce our victory. If we just lie down or neglect things, Satan's will gets done instead of God's will. Jesus REBUKED illness just as He REBUKED demons. He hates illness because He loves people. He hates what sickness does to them. You should share His intense hatred of Satan's works. If sickness rears its ugly head, hop on it immediately!

The most drastic case of NOT hopping on it that I've encountered personally was a cancer-ridden woman who said that she would not start believing she was healed until the last minute when all hope seemed to be gone, and then it would be such a miracle that it would blow the county wide open for the gospel. I tried to dissuade her, but to no avail – she just had this spiritually proud idea in her head. Well, the cancer progressed until she was in no condition to do much of anything or even know what was going on around her. She went home to be with Jesus. She did the opposite of "hopping on it." Don't make that mistake! I for one would rather stay healthy by dealing with things right away rather than letting the devil have his way for a while before I do anything about his works.

Get Away from Unbelief

Jesus could do no mighty work at Nazareth because of community unbelief. If you want to minister to a sick person, a good place not to do it is where there are people around watching who do not believe in divine healing (in any meaningful sense of the phrase). If Jesus could not get much accomplished in an atmosphere of unbelief, neither will you. It would nice if God would do something dramatic to show the naysayers a thing or two, but that isn't how He works.

Jesus took a blind man out of town before ministering healing to him in Mark 8:22-25. Jesus ministered to two blind men who were in faith for their healing in a house instead of in public (Matthew 9:27-30) even though the men were following Him. In Mark 7:32-37, Jesus pulled a deaf man aside from the multitude. In Luke 8:41-56, Jesus put the weeping wailers and everyone else out of the room except the parents, Peter, James and John before raising Jairus' daughter from the dead. In Acts 9:36-42, Peter followed his Lord's example and put the weeping widows out of the room before raising a woman from the dead.

If Jesus and His disciples did this, it is good idea for you to do it, too. It will not help you or the sick person in a hospital bed if there are unbelieving people (especially unbelieving Christians) around! It will not help you minister the good news that the person is healed by Jesus' stripes if there is someone else around begging and pleading with God to heal the person. You will have to run the risk that some people will think you are rude. Jesus walked in love; He was not rude. He was just doing what He had to do.

If you are the sick person yourself, especially if you are in the hospital, you may have to establish some boundaries concerning who can visit you and when. You are not there to socialize with your relatives. You are there to get healed. If someone, even someone close to you, continues to sob over you and tell you that it looks as if you're going to die, you poor thing, you don't need that person around. It is not that you want to be rude; you just want to be healed!

If you read Scripture and healing books, the nurses will think you are strange. They are used to people lying there watching carnal soap operas and game shows and violent crime dramas. The doctor may think you're a nut. That's fine; after you get healed, he probably won't think that anymore. Your roommate may not appreciate your stand of faith or the believers who come in and stand with you. Too bad. You are crucified with Christ anyway, and it should not matter to you what anyone else thinks about your stand for God.

This would not be a good time to listen to the local half-faith, half-unbelief "Christian" radio station where one guy says you can be healed and another guy says that healing isn't for today and faith people are in a cult. If you've got a decent station around, fine. Otherwise, don't listen to anyone who would rob you of your faith for healing. You don't need the latest "God, I Love You Even if You Never Heal Me" song going through your head.

It is not wrong to listen to the doctor's report, He is just reporting physical facts that are subject to change. He doesn't have a secret pact with the devil to discourage you. Don't give the doctor a hard time about it. Just realize that his word is not final, but God's word is.

Dealing with Two Types of Ignorance

I can see two kinds of ignorance in the Bible. The first is a simple lack of knowledge. For example, someone doesn't know that Jesus paid for his healing, so he can't act on what he doesn't know. The second is willful ignorance, which requires first hearing the truth and then deliberately ignoring it.

The issue of simple ignorance is mentioned in Romans 10:14. People who don't know the Word need someone to tell them the Word. The nice thing about ministering to people who are in simple ignorance is that many times you'll see God meet them at least halfway. If you can at least get them into "neutral" and give you permission to curse their sickness in the name of Jesus, God can honor your faith.

The issue of willful ignorance is mentioned in Hosea 4:6. These were not people who were perishing with sickness because they'd never heard of God's healing covenant! They'd heard it and deliberately rejected it and forgotten it. God's take was to just let them wallow in their willful ignorance without helping them. The people in 2 Peter 3:5-7 were willfully ignorant of the great flood and were heading toward judgment themselves.

Paul talked about people who had no excuse because they could see the truth but they deliberately ignored it. The result was that God just "gave them up to uncleanness."

Romans 1:18-24:

For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness;

Because that which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God hath shewed it unto them.

For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse:

Because that, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened.

Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools,

And changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and fourfooted beasts, and creeping things.

Wherefore God also gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonour their own bodies between themselves:

Jesus Himself told His disciples to wipe the dust off their feet and go elsewhere when a city rejected them (Matthew 10:14, Mark 6:11, Luke 9:5). He didn't say to stay around and try to "come against" the spirit of unbelief over that city until the stronghold of unbelief came down. He didn't tell them that they had to keep banging their heads into a brick wall trying to reach them in the name of "never giving up on anyone." (We saw above that even God can just give someone over to his own ignorance if he rejects the Word enough.) Jesus Himself just went to other villages with His teaching when most of the people in Nazareth rejected Him (Mark 6:6). Paul and Silas just shook the dust off their feet when they were rejected in Pisidian Antioch (Acts 13:51).

So when we minister, there are different ways of handling simple ignorance and willful ignorance.

A certain woman came to a church where I was preaching a special service one night. She had been given up to die by the doctors. They had tried to kill her cancer with radiation to no avail. They tried to cut it out of her, but it had spread. They tried chemotherapy but even that didn't work. Then they told her that she would be dead soon and nothing further could be done. She had never set foot in a church in her entire life – and she was an older woman. But she thought to herself, “Why not try Jesus? If He doesn't work, I'm going to die anyway, so there's no downside potential. But maybe there's something to this Jesus stuff and I can get healed.”

She knew just about nothing about the Bible. I asked her if she would give me permission to command that cancer to die in the name of Jesus. She agreed. So I pointed at her body and said, “Cancer, I command you to die in the name of Jesus!” (If you take this approach, make sure that the person knows that you are speaking to the cancer. Simply pointing at a person and saying, “I command you to die in the name of Jesus” could be taken the wrong way.) I didn't have to get long-winded or hysterical about it, though I'll admit that I'm just about always excited when I minister healing because I love watching God heal people. Several months later she got the best Christmas present money CAN'T buy – a clean bill of health from her doctor stating that she was cancer-free!

On the other hand, I had tried presenting the gospel to certain people in a certain town. They did read the salvation message on my tracts, but they were upset and didn't want Jesus. I continued to try to reach them, but the day came when I just stopped. Why should I try to reach them another time when there were plenty of people around who had yet to hear the gospel for the first time? When you're dealing with people who just harden themselves, there comes a point when you should just dust off your feet and go elsewhere looking for more receptive people. It is a better use of your limited time on the earth.

Why Some People Will Never Get Healed

It has been well said, “All sickness is curable, but not all sick people are curable.” Some people will never receive their healing even though they go around to healing crusades seeking it. Probably the hardest truth I’ve had to learn in the ministry is that there are some people whom you just cannot help no matter what you do. You want to help everyone, but you can’t.

Some people do not have any faith built up in the area of finances, and they fear losing their government disability payments if they get healed. Such people will not get healed.

Some people just like to complain about their ailments. Such people will not get healed. I actually challenged one such person, “Let’s talk about something other than your pills and your pains,” and the person actually told me, “I guess I don’t have anything to talk about, then.”

Other people want someone to lay hands on them and make their sickness go away, but they do not want to take the time to study the Word for themselves. They do not even want to hear preaching at a healing crusade. They just want to get down front and get prayed over. They want the gifts of the Spirit to operate for them, but they ignore the fact that God “sent His Word and healed them” (Psalm 107:20). They forget that God’s Word is “health to all their flesh” (Proverbs 4:20-22). They want the preacher to do all the work for them. When you lay hands on them, you can see “Make it happen, preacher!” written all over their faces.

Every now and then you’ll even get someone who comes in just to prove to himself that the whole healing business is fake. He isn’t there to receive; he’s there to criticize, and like his counterparts in Luke 5:17-26, when “the power of the Lord is present to heal them” he will most likely get nothing. (On rare occasions, the Lord may heal such a person as a sign, but you have no guarantee that He will do that.)

Ignoring God’s Word and just looking for a special manifestation is no different from getting a doctor’s prescription but refusing to take it because you want an operation instead.

These people will be prayed over and will receive nothing, which means that they receive exactly what they were truly expecting. Then they will complain that the healing minister has no anointing, because if he did, surely they would have gotten something. Yet even when they complain, they will be back every service and they’ll get in line again. They will express their problems (if allowed to) the same way every time, like a broken record. Although they get no results, they will not change what they are doing. They will just get more upset with the minister for not waving a magic wand and making something happen. The minister will think to himself, “Oh, no, it’s that person again, the one with whom it’s like laying hands on a brick wall.” He’ll probably have to pray something to be polite and move on as quickly as he can to someone who is ready to receive.

If you're the pastor, you may find it useful to give some people "homework assignments" (this could be reading Scripture or a book, listening to a CD, etc.) and then see if they do them. If someone never does anything you say, you're obviously wasting your time.

Some people are nothing more than sympathy seekers, whose "I want help" really means "I want attention." You cannot help people like that. And they'll probably blame you and say that you're mean because you won't pray for them once you realize the futility of doing so. Solving people's loneliness and boredom issues is not your job. People do this to secular hospitals too; I knew people who would call the ambulance and go to the hospital when they felt lonely and wanted attention even though nothing was seriously wrong with them. The hospitals have a hard time trying to turn these people down, but they know who the "frequent flyers" are. (The local hospital started making it a habit of making one of these people wait hours to be treated, but it finally got so ridiculous that the ambulance crew refused to pick up that person anymore!) Likewise, there are prayer line "frequent flyers" who run around to various meetings "looking for the anointing."

There are lonely single people who just want a physical touch from someone of the opposite sex and their honest main reason for being in the healing line is to get that. They aren't really there for healing to begin with. One woman was making the rounds with the ministry team, trying to get someone to hop in bed with her for "spiritual" reasons that "God gave her." You can't get cynical but you do have to be careful; not everyone in your audience will have pure motives. I even had one lady try to grab my hand and put it where it shouldn't be. That's why if you're ministering to someone of the opposite sex, your hand shouldn't be anywhere near such locations!

Then there are thrill seekers who just want to feel the power of God and/or fall over because it feels nice. I'm sure it does, but such people are a hindrance in a healing line because they short-circuit the power that is manifesting to heal people, not provide them with a spiritual thrill ride.

You can't do a thing for a person who will not reverence the Word of God and give it first place. There will be spiritual butterflies who flit and float from meeting to meeting and never get anything. Like the poor, they will always be with us. In my experience, miracle services also seem to draw out flakes who don't even attend a church with a real pastor. Such people usually have issues that a quick prayer from the healing minister will not fix.

Jesus is the Word made flesh. If you do not reverence the written Word of God, you do not reverence Jesus Himself. If you say that you love Jesus but you do not love God's Word, you lie. Some people say that Jesus means a lot to them, but when you try to get them to hear the Word, they sit there and stare into space, pass notes, tune you out, literally fall asleep, or even worse, have sneaky text conversations on their cell phones without turning off the little notification beeps, at least before the ushers intervene (you hope!). Sleepers usually like to sit in the first few rows so that you can't miss them. (I have never figured out why this is, but it's been a long-standing pattern. Maybe the devil just likes to try to annoy preachers by putting snoozers down front.) You can't help these people. You have to press through the distraction and help the people whom you can help who will hear the Word of God.

I suppose that you could resort to preacher tricks such as yelling, running around the room, stopping every two minutes to tell people to say something to each other (which is often preacher code for “Wake up, for crying out loud!”), asking for shows of hands for things all the time (see previous comment), and so on. (I would avoid deliberately misquoting Scripture to see if anyone is awake enough to correct you. This will backfire if no one is actually paying attention, and besides, they won’t be able to trust you after that. They’ll think you’re out to trick them, which I guess would be true at that point. Some might even believe that your fake Scripture is the real thing.) Unlike one preacher I’ve seen, I don’t kick the sleepers and shock them awake. If they have no more sense than that, I can’t help them, but I don’t want to come across as mean to the rest of the people, some of whom may have very receptive hearts. Ultimately, you can lead a Christian to living water but you can’t make him drink! If anyone gets anything, it will be because he wanted to get something. If he doesn’t get anything, it will be because he really wasn’t expecting anything anyway and he had a ho-hum attitude toward the service. Anyone who thinks it’s up to the preacher should read the accounts of Jesus at Nazareth and the stories of others elsewhere who were healed by their faith, which you can find elsewhere in this book.

Some places have people with the attitude, “I’ve heard all the best preachers, so I don’t think you are going to tell me anything I don’t already know.” I’ve challenged people sometimes that if they already know everything about divine healing, why aren’t they already in perfect health? Faith comes by hearing the Word, so if such people really knew the Word at all, they’d be happy to hear its principles again. Maybe they’ll pick up things that they missed the first time.

Some churches encourage people to have a cavalier attitude, openly inviting people to go get themselves a coffee in the middle of the service whenever they want, in an attempt to be trendy and “casual.” To me, all this does is train people to be disrespectful to the things of God. If you saw Jesus in the flesh at the podium, would you tell him you’ll be right back to hear Him some more after you get a cappuccino to sip on? Well, He walks in the midst of His churches (Revelation 1:20 and Revelation 2:1), so don’t you think He’s there?

I have seen people healed in places where you would never believe that anyone could get anything, because someone chose to hear and believe the Word while the others were nodding off. At Nazareth, at least Jesus healed a few people who didn’t need dramatic miracles. But as the Nazareth incident shows, if people don’t respect the minister, not very much will happen no matter how good a preacher you are. Jesus was a good preacher, and you can’t expect greater results than He got in similar circumstances.

If your self-esteem is based on whether or not people get healed when you minister, you will probably have very low self-esteem after going some places. Remember, do your best, and what people do with it is between them and God, not between you and God. You get credit for putting the Word out there, not for with what people do with it. Keep sowing the Word even though it falls onto different kinds of ground! Some people are ground similar to an expressway and they’ll never get healed, but one person just might get healed and then bring a dozen people to Christ and add them to the church because of his testimony.

Perilous Pastoral Pushback

If you pastor a church, it is virtually certain that at some point, someone you minister healing to will stay sick and then get in your face and demand to know why he isn't healed. And someone you minister to will die and the family will demand to know why divine healing "didn't work" for the deceased person.

This places you in the position of Perilous Pastoral Pushback. How you respond will determine your future effectiveness in ministering healing.

The ONLY correct option is to side with the Word against any notion that God was unwilling to heal that person or that God had NOT provided healing through Jesus Christ's completed actions. Pastors often back down because things can get ugly, especially if the loss of a loved one is involved. The family can be mad at God, and because they see you as God's representative, they can transfer that anger to you.

NO ONE seems to want to face the prospect that the person could have been healed and failed to receive it. Someone may well get in your face and say, "If ANYONE knew how to believe God, it was So-and-So! You can't tell me there was anything wrong with his faith!"

You have every right to state – correctly – that you do not know why the person stayed sick or died. (In rarer cases, you DO know, but you are not at liberty to divulge what you know.) However, if people try to get you to side in with unbelief, you can state that you DO know that Christ provided healing for everyone, and you don't know why the person did not receive it.

Quite a few of the healing objections handled in this book are lame attempts by pressured pastors to offer false comfort. But this false comfort RUINS any chance of others receiving healing through their ministry in the future, which then devolves from teaching faith to spouting unbelief along with so many other pastors who have been down that road.

Blaming God and His will is so much easier. It takes all the pressure away from both the sick person and the preacher who ministered to the sick person. If God didn't want it, no one fell short, no one failed to believe, and no one did anything wrong. That's what makes people comfortable, so it's what they'd like to hear and believe.

But the TRUTH is still that healing WAS available to that person and it WAS God's will for that person to receive what Jesus paid for him to have, even though the person did not receive it. You just don't know why.

On a practical note, saying that the person "did not receive it" will probably be considered less stinging and offensive than saying that the person "failed to receive it." Most people don't like to think of themselves or their relatives as "failures."

I presented the concept of the new birth to tens of thousands of people on the street in Maine. Few received it. Does that mean that the message of the new birth is defective? Does it mean that it was not God's will for those people to be saved? Does it mean that God did not really provide salvation for all when Jesus died for the sins of the world? No, we know better when it comes to being saved from hell. It is no different with healing. Jesus provided it but not everyone receives it.

Now a relative of someone that I evangelized could come to me and demand to know why that person did not get saved. Was it my fault for presenting the gospel poorly? If not, it had to be that person's fault. WHY did that person fail to receive new life? I honestly don't know, and I would have no problem saying, "I don't know." But I would NEVER back down from the truth that the person COULD HAVE been saved even if the person died and went to hell without Jesus, and that it would be his lack of receiving that was the issue. There was certainly nothing wrong on the sending end (God's end), and there's only one other end that could be the problem – the receiving end. As to WHY, I may never know, any more than I will ever know WHY some people did not receive healing even though it was offered to them.

GOD is never to blame when someone doesn't receive the healing that He provided. He did all that He needed to do. The problem HAS TO BE on man's end – either with the person doing the ministry, the person receiving it, or both.

While apologizing for your lack of faith is one way to deflect anger, I don't recommend that approach for reasons I state in my answer to the question, If I Lay Hands on Someone and Nothing Happens, Should I Apologize to That Person for My Lack of Faith?

You probably realize that this still leaves only the possibility of failure to receive on the sick person's end of things. Given that the person could have received based on his own faith even if yours was deficient, the issue MUST come down to the person who did not receive. And while that's an uncomfortable position to maintain, it's infinitely better than the alternative, which is discussed in Descent into Stupidity.

Descent into Stupidity

The following account is a guided tour into the Grand Canyon of Stupidity. Man's religious mental reasoning will be our tour guide. Notice that the whole descent starts with one bad foundation – experience, which is then coupled with a well-meaning desire to comfort people. This should show you the danger of using anything but the Word as a foundation for doctrine as well as the danger of compromising what you believe to give false comfort to the bereaved or avoid criticism. And now, let the ignorance begin!

--- START HERE --->

Joe and Lisa just lost their little girl Carla to leukemia. They are fine Christians who attend a “faith church.” Joe and Lisa are shook up and don't know why this happened to them. Now they are angry at God and at the preacher who told them that Christ provided healing for everyone. The pastor wants to console them and have them not be angry at God. So he makes them feel better by telling them it must be a rare exceptional case where it was God's perfect plan in His sovereignty to take their little girl. He has to blame the results on God because the alternative – that any failure had to be at man's end – is too painful to contemplate, especially because the pastor had laid hands on Carla for healing himself. Either he would look bad or he would be putting the “blame” on Joe and Lisa, which could get them really upset, which could cause them to leave the church. Joe and Lisa are still grieving, but at least all of them find “comfort” in the idea that this was all due to a decision that Heaven made. However, the pastor has just established that everything they were teaching about faith doesn't necessarily work every time, just most of the time, so no one can ever be totally sure about healing anymore. The pastor compromised the Word to please man, and we'll see that this takes things down a slippery slope in a hurry.

<----CONTINUE----

So the church no longer teaches that God forgives all your sins and heals all your diseases (Psalm 103:3). Instead, they basically say that God forgives all your sins and heals almost all of your diseases, and it's usually His will to do it, but He makes exceptions in His sovereignty because He's God. They still say as a church that they “believe that divine healing is for today” because they believe that God does heal today in some cases. That ambiguous “faith” statement keeps the faith hard-liners happy for now.

Now Ned the Carpenter comes down with a serious heart condition. Ned would like to be healed, but he can't be totally sure that God wants to heal him because there is always that slight chance he could be an exception like Carla, so he might have to stay sovereignly sick. Ned is not feeling any better after having hands laid on him, and he quickly concludes that he, too, is one of the exceptions. He stays sick and continues to worsen.

---THIS WAY DOWN--->

The pastor can't make Ned feel bad either, and he doesn't want to make himself feel bad, since after all he prayed for Ned in front of everybody last week. So he reasons that Ned was another sovereign exception. Obviously, he needs a nice pastoral answer to Ned that won't make him feel bad for lacking faith. So the solution must be to lower people's expectations. If they expect nothing, they'll never be disappointed! Now he has some pesky verses that he will have to explain away, for example, the ones in James 5:14-15 about praying the prayer of faith for the sick. The trouble is that you can only pray the prayer of faith when you know the will of God with 100% certainty, because faith is being certain of what you don't see. It is the assurance, not the hope-so, of things unseen (Hebrews 11:1). Now that the church has established that God can make exceptions in His sovereignty, the elders cannot pray the prayer of faith for ANY sick person, because there's always that chance that the person could be a sovereign exception. The elders start playing it safe and praying for "endurance" rather than healing, and praying for God to guide the surgeons' hands, and so on, just so that no one gets disappointed. They cheer up the sick with small talk and watch game shows or reality shows or possibly some lewd comedies (that one wonders how a Christian could watch) with them for a while before they leave. They now do everything except what God said to do – anoint them with oil in the name of the Lord and pray the prayer of faith so that the Lord raises them up! So what do they do with what is stated as an explicit command in James? They reason that James's instruction was only intended for the "early church" (whatever that is, since there is no "early church dispensation" supportable by Scripture) before the gifts of healings "passed away with the last apostle." They had some help on that one – it was easy to find people who supported that view on the Internet.

<---CAUTION: STEEP GRADE AHEAD---

Now Doreen is having issues with her eyes, and she would like to believe that she can receive her healing when she prays. But she knows that God made sovereign exceptions for Carla and Ned, so she cannot be sure that God doesn't have a mysterious reason for her to lose her eyesight. She would like to believe, but she can't muster up a full assurance of her healing. And wouldn't you know it, Doreen doesn't get healed either. Her testimony is that she still loves God even though God won't heal her. She takes solace in Christian songs and articles in which others sing and write about loving God when He doesn't heal, too. Now she feels comforted even though she can't work anymore because she can barely see.

No one at the church believes he receives when he prays anymore. They reason that they can't do that unless it's God's will, and since they can no longer be 100% sure that healing is God's will for them, they figure that they will have to pray and ask God for a direct revelation that it is His will to heal a specific person before proceeding. And they never get such a direct revelation apart from the Word.

So now Garrett wants to be healed of a worsening asthma condition, so everyone prays to get a direct revelation of whether Garrett should be healed or Garrett should stay sovereignly sick. Trouble is, God doesn't give out direct words like that because He gave us His general words in the Bible that apply to everyone. So there is no answer to the prayer for God's input regarding Garrett (except for what is already settled in heaven in God's Word). In the absence of a direct word, no one is sure what God wants for Garrett, so no one prays in faith. Garrett just trusts in God's loving sovereignty and believes that He will "permit" whatever is best for him, though He wishes God would decide to heal him because he's spending a fortune on puffers. Garrett stays sick, and the only comfort he gets comes from borrowing Doreen's Christian CD's and magazines that talk about loving God when He doesn't heal.

---DANGER: SHIFTING SAND ON TRAIL--->

Now Lucy isn't getting healed of anemia and Jack isn't getting healed of tinnitus and partial deafness. It appears that God's "sovereign exceptions" occur more often than they thought. It seems that healing is the exception and staying sovereignly sick is the standard. There aren't many people getting healed supernaturally anymore at the "faith church" – most of the people get prayed over and then have to go the hospital anyway and suffer difficult treatments and operations just like the sinners. So they reason that maybe these days God is more interested in giving surgeons wisdom than healing the sick directly. After all, God invented medicine, didn't He? In ancient Israel, He had to cut them some breaks because that was before modern hospitals and before nationalized health care plans could take care of everything. So now miracles are taught as exceptional and sickness as normal, but they still "believe in miracles" because God could choose to do them. In fact, these days sin is pretty normal at the church, too, so maybe that's the sovereign will of God. Oops, no, they know better than to judge God's will on sin by the experience of those around them! Sin is wrong, but sickness is different – they know God's will based on the experience of those around them.

<---CLIMATE CHANGE ZONE---

Ned dies and the preacher has to come up with a way to comfort the grieving family. So he tells people that God "took" Ned because He knew that some people would get saved at the funeral as a result of the tragedy. Obviously, they reason, it wasn't God's will to heal Ned, because if He had wanted to, He could have done it, being God Almighty.

Now Harold contracts Lyme disease. Not only does Harold not know any way to be sure that God isn't making a sovereign exception for him, but now he fears that the God preached in that "faith church" might "call him home" next so that even more people can get saved at his funeral! Harold isn't happy with the church or with God at this point, and his walk with the Lord starts to cool off. After all, it's hard to get excited about Him anymore now that He doesn't seem like He's willing to help us all the time and because He's now sacrificing Christians so that others can get saved. Gee, didn't the Mayans do something like that? It was more exciting thinking that He loved us enough to heal us. Being sovereignly sick is a drag. But maybe they should condemn themselves when they want to be healed, since that is so selfish and me-oriented. What makes them think they're better than Carla and Ned, who both loved the Lord a lot? Why should God heal Harold when Garrett is now confined to his bed and Doreen needs a service dog that occasionally gets into fights with the non-service dogs that people brazenly bring in to the big-box stores? After all, Garrett and Doreen have been Christians a lot longer and have served faithfully in the church for years.

---ROCKY BOTTOM---

No one at that church has any guarantee of divine healing anymore. After a while, they think cynically that most of those healing crusade guys are probably charlatans and frauds anyway. They're glad they know better than to go to a healing crusade and expect healing in their bodies! When God doesn't heal, they follow the advice of one writer and "bow before His mystery and majesty," reverently worshiping The God Who Doesn't Always Heal. They now know better than to accept that "simplified" gospel at the crusade that declares that healing is for everybody. That's just insensitive – just think how that makes Joe, Lisa, Ned's family, Doreen, Garrett, Lucy, Jack, and the rest of them feel! If God isn't making sovereign exceptions, the failure has to be on man's end. That's an uncomfortable thought, and after all, they're still trying to find some way to comfort all these people!

----ONE WAY OUT---->

The only way that church will ever get out of this canyon of unbelief is if the pastor will start reading and meditating on healing Scriptures rather than basing his theology on people's experiences, and preach the Word instead of giving people false comfort that contradicts the Word. The people must find out what the Bible standard is and move up in that direction rather than settling for making their lives sad copies of someone else's bad experience. If there is even ONE person God would make an exception for, NOBODY can pray the prayer of faith for healing. We're not unsympathetic to people's experiences, but you always base doctrine on the Bible, never on experiences, and never in an attempt to make someone feel better. That is, unless you like where this trail went.

Just to Be Sure

I'd guess that anyone who's done healing ministry for very long has encountered what I consider one of the most annoying outcomes. A person is supernaturally healed of cancer and gets a testimony from his doctor that he is now cancer-free! The doctor doesn't know what to make of this "impossible" situation, and then he decides that a further procedure is needed "just to be sure" that the cancer is gone. Possibly other specialists and the person's family gang up and insist that the procedure be done. They go ahead with it, and the procedure itself kills the person, who lamentably, really WAS cancer-free. Then, skeptics can wave their fingers and say, "You know that fellow whose 'testimony' was shared publicly by XYZ Ministries? He's DEAD! I knew you couldn't believe those faith healers." It's really no fun, but it's bound to happen to you sooner or later, and you can't let it discourage you from continuing to be bold when you minister to the sick.

I lost my best friend many years ago to that scenario. Then, when I pastored, I heard a testimony of someone who received complete healing of terminal cancer through our ministry. He had been bedridden and at death's door, and he suddenly got out of bed healed and started driving all over the place in his truck, enjoying his healing. The doctors didn't know what to make of it, so they wanted to do something "just to be sure" that the cancer was really gone. The next thing we knew, HE was really gone. I know that doctors try their best and they aren't out to kill people, but human medicine is imperfect and it's practiced through imperfect people. All surgery involves risk, and you have to consider that when you make your decisions.

So let me implore you – if you have been supernaturally healed of some dread disease and you have medical tests that prove that you don't have it anymore (as these folks did), beware of any extra procedure or test that is being recommended "just to be sure" you're healed. This can be because the doctor doesn't believe in divine healing and has no idea what to make of your "impossible" recovery, so he's trying to resort to what he knows. It's your life and you'll have to do what makes you comfortable, but please at least consider that if tests prove you don't have something, going through risky procedures could be the route with more downside. You could try to strike a bargain with the doctor that he can keep an eye on you and do a non-risky test in a little while to make sure that you still don't have the condition rather than embarking on some procedure with known substantial risk. Or you could just tell him that the sick need a physician (Matthew 9:12, Mark 2:17, Luke 5:31), and you're not sick anymore, and move on.

Things the New Testament DOES NOT SAY about Healing

You will not find any of the following in the New Testament. I dare you to look for yourself and try to prove me wrong.

1. A case where God gave a believer a sickness to teach him a spiritual lesson.
2. A case where God gave a believer a sickness to build character, endurance and patience in him.
3. A case where God refused to heal someone who came to Him for healing. (See the section on Paul's Thorn if you have been fed the lie that it was a sickness that God would not heal.)
4. A case where God said WAIT instead of YES in response to a request for healing.
5. A case where God told an elderly person that he had to get sick in order to die at the appropriate time from his "final illness."
6. A case where sickness is referred to as a "blessing in disguise," a "friend," or something good.
7. A case where God wanted someone to stay sick because in His "sovereignty" He had a secret reason for it.
8. The phrase, "You never know what God's gonna do" or anything remotely similar. (You can know through His Word exactly what He will do when it comes to healing!)
9. A case where the Lord used sickness as the means to "take someone home" at the end of his race.
10. A case where the Lord killed someone so that others could get saved at his funeral.

Given that none of these things is in the New Testament, isn't it strange that they are preached as gospel in so many churches today?

It Works!

There are plenty of objectors to divine healing out there saying that it's too hard and that this stuff doesn't work. If you want to hear what they are saying (with responses), refer to the Objections Overruled! section.

However, the fact is that healing works! The "gospel of healing" is producing fruit all over the world right now. People are receiving "faith to be healed" by hearing the gospel (like the man at Lystra in Acts 14:7-10) and rising up healed. The Lord is still healing the blind, the deaf and the crippled. Thousands at once get healed in large crusades. Undeniable miracles are happening now. There have been crusades in Africa where dozens of blind or deaf people were healed in a single service! (I know a man personally who preached services where that happened!) You really have to deliberately stick your head in the sand to believe that faith for healing doesn't work or it's too hard. If it's too hard, how are these people getting healed? Why are there testimonies everywhere of people being healed by the power of God when Jesus Christ is preached? Don't let anyone talk you out of it – divine healing works! I can testify to this from experience, and it's too late to convince me or anyone else who's been healed this way that it doesn't work! People in churches all over the world are believing they receive healing when they pray and getting it!

Don't just assume without trying anything that your neck of the woods is too "hard" to have miracles. People tell me almost everywhere I go that their particular spot is the hardest place in the world to preach! In the Caribbean they claim their islands are hard because of all the voodoo. In California they say it's hard because of all the New Age adherents and politically liberal people. In Massachusetts it's hard because of a "spirit of intellectualism." In Northern New England, people have too much of a "Yankee independent spirit" to want to submit to Jesus or anyone else. In Florida the retirees just want to take it easy. But somehow all this doesn't stop God from doing astounding miracles in these places. The Word works anywhere where someone dares to believe it! Don't let anyone talk you out of it!

People tell me that big principalities where they are make it hard for God to move. That's hogwash; those principalities are all defeated. Which of them did Jesus fail to make a show of openly, triumphing over them in the cross (Colossians 2:15)? Are they more powerful than the Word, which IS the power of God (Romans 1:16)?

I preached for years in one of the most unchurched areas in the United States and saw some of the types of miracles you hear about in Africa. In fact, the best service I ever preached in my life at this writing – the service most like the book of Acts – was in what I was told is the most unchurched COUNTY in the United States! I was presenting the gospel to people who had never heard it before, and God confirmed His Word with signs following!

If you need healing, go where healing is going on! You won't be in much shape to receive healing if you listen to anti-healing radio programs and read anti-healing books. Get around people of like precious faith (2 Peter 1:1) who will encourage you to stand your ground. Get around people who have their own testimonies of how they got healed; they can probably help you get your healing! Get around people who know that divine healing through faith in Christ's atonement works. Go where they preach healing, not unbelief. Read books on healing. Listen to audio recordings about healing. Immerse yourself in healing scriptures until faith rises up and unbelief is snuffed out. It may not happen overnight, but if you keep at it, faith for healing will rise up within you in a big way.

If you go places where you can see people's faith for healing working, it will be a tremendous encouragement to your own faith. If you stay in some dead, dry church that doesn't believe that the power of God is for this age, you'll be dragged down with their unbelief. (Unbelief, like faith, comes by hearing preaching!) Just because it doesn't work there is no proof that it doesn't work anymore than the fact that it didn't work at Nazareth proves that it didn't work anywhere else.

One quick note to those of you attending Deadville Community Church because "God told you" that you will be His instrument to bring a great revival to that church: You are the umpteenth person deceived in that manner. You will not "wake up" a church where the pastor does not want healing taught, and you're out of order if you try to subvert that pastor's teaching behind his back. You ought to go somewhere that's already "revived" rather than thinking that you will bring revival to a place that can't or won't teach faith properly. I've been saved since 1979 and I have NEVER seen that "bring revival to the dead church" thing work. But I've seen a lot of people waste valuable years of their lives doing it, sometimes even giving tithes to support a tool of the devil in the pulpit who won't even preach the new birth!

Found: The Cure for AIDS!

The cure for AIDS has been found! It does not require expensive drugs or treatments with unknown or undesirable side effects. The cure is Jesus Christ, the Healer! Surely this should be headline news. Surely this message is worth spending money to propagate. If we can spend money on organizations looking for a cure for AIDS, it is certainly worth spending money on organizations that have already found the cure for AIDS so that they can get the word out!

AIDS has no special power against the Word of God; it is just one more disease that you are redeemed from by the atonement of Christ. If God heals ALL your diseases, He heals AIDS. If God takes away from you ALL sickness, He takes AIDS away from you. No footnote to Mark 16 says that we shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover, unless they have AIDS, in which case they won't recover. With God NOTHING, including curing AIDS, is impossible (Luke 1:37).

A man was sent to a nursing home to die of AIDS that he contracted by making immoral choices. I watched him get out of his wheelchair and walk and subsequently get kicked out of that home because Jesus had healed him and he tested HIV-negative! My wife knows the founder/operator of an orphanage in Thailand where they take in babies with HIV that no one else wants, and they've seen many of these "AIDS babies" get healed and subsequently get adopted.

Those suffering from AIDS or any other (supposedly) incurable illness would surely want to know that the cure has been found. They may reject it, but at least they should have the chance to receive it or reject it. We know that God hates sin, but His mercy extends even to fools who are sick because of the very sins they committed (Psalm 107:17-20). Of course, you need to repent of the sin you are in if it lends itself to contracting AIDS; it is a slap in God's face to continue in immoral relationships while asking God to heal you of the consequences of them.

I am not against contributing money to research institutes that look for medical cures for diseases. If it were not for natural means of treating the sick, some people would not have lived to hear the gospel. I am one of those people. My life was saved by medical science when I was eight years old. If it were not for medicine and doctors, this book would not be on your computer screen right now.

However, think of what an investment it is to contribute money to a local church that preaches that Jesus Christ has defeated AIDS! In fact, you could even use that as "bait" with people who ask whom you support. You can truthfully tell them that you support an organization that has found the cure for AIDS!

God Does Not Play Favorites

God does not give one person preferential treatment over another. In other words, He does not play favorites. He is not a “respector of persons” (to use the Bible term), though He is a respector of faith. If one person comes to Him in faith and receives his healing, and another does not come in faith, only the first person receives his healing even though it is available equally to both of them.

Acts 10:34:

Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respector of persons:

Romans 2:11:

For there is no respect of persons with God.

Ephesians 6:9:

And, ye masters, do the same things unto them, forbearing threatening: knowing that your Master also is in heaven; neither is there respect of persons with him.

Colossians 3:25:

But he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and there is no respect of persons.

1 Peter 1:17:

And if he call on the Father, who without respect of persons judgeth according to every man's work, pass the time of your sojourning here in fear:

No Personal Favoritism

God does not have something against you that causes Him to heal everyone else, but not you. Yet the devil loves to torment believers with that idea. You are NOT some special case that God has singled out for worse treatment. If you will believe, you can receive the same things as anyone else who believes.

No Racial Favoritism

God does not favor one skin color or race over another. Yet we see absurd statements from time to time alleging things such as God giving a special anointing to people of color. Baloney! That might pander to people of color and get you a nice audience with them, but the idea contradicts all the verses above. Nor does God give a special grace or a special place in revival to native people, as has been claimed. That might make you popular with native people, but God is not singling out groups of people for special anointings to “make it up to them” for past enslavement, oppression, or whatever. Everyone gets equal treatment.

God will move wherever people believe His Word and welcome His Spirit. We've seen some dramatic miracles on a certain native reservation. In one such meeting, they were going to the local nursing home and wheeling people in to be ministered to while we were preaching. We kept laying hands on sick people for two hours as they kept going out and fetching more sick people to have hands laid on them. It reminded me of the Book of Acts. But this did not happen because God moves in a special way if you're on a reservation. All you need is preachers who believe and preach the Word coupled with hungry, receptive people. We had that combination, and it was explosive. However, as in Jesus' day, the very same preachers can go to another place where people have a ho-hum, so-what attitude toward the things of God and very little will happen. Jesus did a lot of notable miracles at Capernaum but none in Nazareth. The issue wasn't Him, it was the receptivity (or lack thereof) of the people. Certainly God was just as willing to do miracles at Nazareth if the people were open to Him; unfortunately they were too busy being skeptical.

No Cultural Favoritism

God does not favor people of any cultural heritage over others. Despite what people will sometimes tell you, God grants no special status to so-called Messianic Jews. Spiritually, there is no such thing as a Messianic Jew – the Bible is clear that in Christ there is no Jew or Gentile (Galatians 3:28, Colossians 3:11). You could use the term simply to indicate someone's cultural background, but from a spiritual standpoint it is incorrect to call a converted Jew a Messianic Jew. The Biblically correct name for a Jew who receives Jesus is a Christian. Yes, that is exactly the same term for a Gentile who receives Jesus. God has made us one, having broken down the wall of division that was between Jews and Gentiles (Ephesians 2:11-18). Our background makes no difference today, as that passage in Ephesians makes absolutely clear. We all have the same right to healing and everything else that God provided in Christ.

No Geographic Favoritism

God does not give any special breaks to people in Africa just because they are in Africa. If He is not a "respector of persons" (favorites-player), He can't treat someone in one country differently than someone in another country. I've heard it suggested that God does special miracles in some places because medicine is not available or affordable there. The implication, if you think about it, is that God would force you to use an inferior, more expensive, more time-consuming method with frequent adverse side-effects that does not always work if you live in an advanced country, but use a superior method that will work on any ailment with no adverse side-effects in poorer nations. Fortunately, God's provision for supernatural healing is available because of what Christ did for us, not because of where we live. Jesus made the same great provision for every person in the world.

I have observed as a practical matter that where good medical treatment is not available, people are more receptive to divine healing. If your choice were “believe or die,” you would be highly motivated to receive divine healing, too! I’ve been one place where people used to depend on going to healing services, but then a modern new hospital opened up. It might have been the worst thing that could have happened from a divine healing perspective. Flesh is lazy, and people tend to look for the easiest way out of things. Going to the hospital occasionally probably seems easier than keeping yourself full of the Word. The sad part, though, when people slack off in their faith, is that they may come down with a condition that modern medicine cannot fix, at which point they’re in no place to believe God for healing.

In any event, the fact that people without access to medicine are more motivated to believe God does not mean that God favors them in any way just because they have no medical care. They have to believe just like anyone else. They’re just more motivated.

No Economic Favoritism

God does not give any kind of special healing grace to people who cannot afford health care. Everyone in Christ has the same access to everything. Again, the same verse that tells us that there is no Jew or Gentile in Christ also asserts that there is no slave or free (Galatians 3:28, Colossians 3:11). People on the low end of the economic spectrum have the same access as people on the high end. God does not deny healing to the rich just because they can afford medical care. You never see Jesus telling anyone to go see a doctor instead of receiving from Him just because they had the means to pay a doctor!

No Gender Favoritism

Men and women have the same rights and privileges in Christ. Go back to Galatians 3:28, which asserts that there is no male or female in Christ. It means that men and women have equal rights to receive healing and all other benefits. By the way, in our day we have to point out that God does not say that people can be any gender they want (or “non-binary”) once they become Christians! God still created us male and female, and you can’t change what God made you by taking on a different name, wearing different clothes, taking hormone pills or even getting surgery. However you were born is how God made you, and that is what you always will be. If you have only X chromosomes, you’re female. If you have X and Y chromosomes, you’re male. End of story.

No Chronological Favoritism

Contrary to what most people think, God did not give the “early church” some special grace that we can’t access today. God does not play favorites across time either! Of course, Old Testament people could not have access to what wasn’t available until Jesus’ death and resurrection. But ever since the upper room on the day of Pentecost we have been in the same age. There is nothing in the Bible that separates an Early Church Age from a Late Church Age. There is just the Church Age. Everything the early believers had the right to do, you have the right to do. Nothing has changed, other than people in general getting lukewarm in more comfortable countries. But you don’t have to be lukewarm just because you live comfortably. Anyone today has the same right to lay hands on the sick and do miracles that the early disciples did. You will search in vain for proof that they had some kind of advantage back in the book of Acts that you don’t have. If anything, you have an advantage because you can read a printed New Testament, which was not available to those early believers in Acts – some of the books hadn’t even been written yet! They were LIVING the book of Acts even though it wasn’t yet available for anyone to read!

Massive Healing Crusades: The Will of God!

Throughout Jesus' ministry we see massive healing crusades involving multitudes of people. This continued in the book of Acts in the ministries of Peter, Paul, and Philip. It also appears that some in Corinth were being used in gifts of healings and working of miracles.

Since this is one way in which the Holy Spirit expressed Himself then, we should expect Him to express Himself that way today. The healing of the sick was the single biggest advertisement for the gospel message then, so we should expect that healing will continue to be the #1 method God uses to get the attention of sinners. If we don't see the results that the Church once had, it's because WE have changed, not God.

Such crusades give God an opportunity to demonstrate His unchanging compassion for the sick as well as His glorious power. We should expect today to see notable, documentable, undeniable miracles performed in the very faces of unbelievers.

We should expect God to continue to anoint men today to conduct healing and miracle services. This is evident from 1 Corinthians 12:28-30, where certain ministry offices are listed. The apostle, prophet and teacher are listed first, followed by "miracles" and "gifts of healings." There is no indication anywhere in the New Testament that any of these ministry offices will pass away in this age. In fact, it is clearly stated that they were given "Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the fulness of Christ" (Ephesians 4:13). Because this has not happened yet, and because there will always be new believers who need to be perfected, the ministry offices (apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers – Ephesians 4:11) will not pass away until Jesus returns.

Philip was not an apostle, yet he conducted healing services. He was later called an evangelist. The evangelist and pastor are not mentioned in 1 Corinthians 12:28-30, but miracles, gifts of healings, and governments are listed (among others). Since the only one called an evangelist in the Bible (Phillip) flowed in the so-called power gifts, we should expect evangelists today to do so also. In fact, it is subnormal for any evangelist to NOT flow in the gifts of the Spirit. When God sent people out to preach the New Testament message, it was always with power. Anyone who feels called to evangelistic work should expect "power gifts" (gifts of healings, working of miracles, [special] faith) to manifest in his ministry.

The best way to receive healing is by personal faith without anyone else's help. But there will always be many Christians who need to be at a service where the power of the Lord is present to heal them. Thank God for such opportunities.

Believers always have the right to lay hands on the sick in faith in any setting, but this does not negate the need for large healing meetings. These meetings are often (but not always) evangelistic in nature and draw much attention to the Lord.

Signs and Wonders!

You can expect that there will be signs and wonders in New Testament church services. The most normal signs Jesus talked about in Mark 16:15-18 are speaking in other tongues and laying hands on the sick and having them recover. (Of course, you should expect to see signs and wonders outside of church services, too. Most of the ones in the book of Acts were not in church services as we know them.)

Besides this, unusual things can happen when the anointing of God meets mortal flesh. I am mentioning this simply because you may see some unusual things happen to some people in services, and I don't want you to leave "freaked out." There is New Testament precedent for things that might surprise you.

The Glory of God in Manifestation

The priests at the dedication of Solomon's temple could not even stand up when the glory of the Lord came in the first time: "It came even to pass, as the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the LORD; and when they lifted up their voice with the trumpets and cymbals and instruments of musick, and praised the LORD, saying, For he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever: that then the house was filled with a cloud, even the house of the LORD; So that the priests could not stand to minister by reason of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of God." – 2 Chronicles 5:13-14. "And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, that the cloud filled the house of the LORD, so that the priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of the LORD." – 1 Kings 8:10-11.

If men could not stand up when the glory of the Lord came in under the Old Covenant, we should expect there to be times under our "more glorious" covenant (2 Corinthians 3:7-11) when the same thing happens.

Now look what happened after Solomon's speech under the "less glorious" covenant: "Now when Solomon had made an end of praying, the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices; and the glory of the LORD filled the house. And the priests could not enter into the house of the LORD, because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD's house." – 2 Chronicles 7:1-2.

Under a more glorious covenant, we should expect the glory of God to come into our services, too!

Drunk in the Spirit?!?

The men in Acts 2 were falsely assumed to be drunk (Acts 2:13-16). This could not have been concluded from the fact that they were speaking in other languages. If anything, everyone would have been shocked at their sudden intelligence. After all, these were not learned men. Apparently, the way they were acting gave some the impression that they had been drinking. This may be because weren't standing up while they were speaking those languages. (Peter stood up with the eleven after they had already been speaking in other languages!) If they were acting normally other than speaking languages they had never learned, Peter would have said that Jesus had shed forth that which they heard. But Peter said that Jesus had shed forth that which they had seen and heard, so there was evidently something unusual to see, too!

If this happened when the Holy Spirit first came, we can expect that something similar could happen today, since we are still in the same Holy Spirit dispensation. If David could leap and dance before the Lord (2 Samuel 6:14-16), we may see people dance before the Lord. If Elijah could run in the Spirit and keep up with Ahab's chariot (1 Kings 18:46), the Spirit may prompt men to run today. If those of Israel could be filled with laughter when the Lord turned their captivity, how much more should we, whose captivity has been permanently turned, be able to laugh? See Psalm 126:1-2: "When the LORD turned again the captivity of Zion, we were like them that dream. Then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing: then said they among the heathen, the LORD hath done great things for them."

Struck Dumb by God?!?

This almost seems like a contradiction. After all, didn't Jesus heal the dumb? In this case, we are not talking about sickness, but a person being so overwhelmed by the anointing that he is unable to see or speak. (By the way, dumb in this usage means "unable to speak," not "stupid.")

Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist, was struck dumb for at least nine months when he asked for a sign that the angel Gabriel was not lying. I suppose he would have considered that a sign! This sign had the double benefit of being portentous concerning the child's future fame and forcing Zacharias to shut up so that he wouldn't mess up the plan of God by speaking any more unbelief out of his mouth.

Daniel, on the other hand, was not in unbelief when he "set his face toward the ground, and became dumb" (Daniel 10:15). So, this can happen to the consecrated as well as to the unconsecrated.

I have seen people in services who became unable to speak. They didn't have a physical problem; they were just so struck by the power of God that they couldn't talk. Although the people in question were consecrated Christians, it is also quite possible that a scoffer could be struck dumb in a service and have a lot to think about!

Sickened by the Anointing?!?

“And I Daniel fainted, and was sick certain days; afterward I rose up, and did the king’s business, and was astonished at the vision, but none understood it.” – Daniel 8:27.

How could a vision from God make Daniel sick? It depends what you mean by sick. You can be sure that Daniel did not catch the flu from having a divine vision. Daniel was apparently without strength (he “fainted”) for several days. I have had similar experiences. The anointing was so strong on me that I could barely function normally for a day or more. I was not physically sick; the anointing was just overwhelming. What’s the difference? Sick people tend to get short-tempered, but people under the anointing can’t help but think about God and His awesomeness and goodness. Once, I was physically unable to move for a short while. I was literally paralyzed. It’s the only time in my life I’ve known what it’s like to be a paralyzed person; I tried to tell parts of my body to move and they wouldn’t. However, while I was in that state, God revealed a situation to me that it was urgent that I knew but also hard for me to believe. He certainly had my undivided attention.

If this could happen to Daniel, we may see some in our day who are “wiped out” by the power of God for a while.

Signs and Wonders You Don’t Want to See

The Holy Spirit gave Peter a word of knowledge about Ananias and Sapphira’s plot to look more generous and self-sacrificing than they really were. He spoke, and Ananias fell down dead. Soon thereafter, Peter spoke, and Sapphira fell down dead. (See Acts 5:1-11.) They lied to the Holy Spirit and paid for it with their lives. You can expect that in our day there will be those who try to deceive the sheep and die on the spot. The Holy Spirit does not appreciate having people play games with the things of God. Do so, and we could soon be scheduling your funeral (or “homegoing celebration,” “celebration of your life,” or whatever nice euphemism you want to use for the event commemorating your premature death). Actually, a funeral would be better than Ananias and Sapphira got; the believers just buried the liars and went on with church.

A certain sorcerer tried to interfere with Paul’s preaching of the gospel to a government official who had asked to hear him. God struck him blind, and the official believed after seeing this wonder of judgment take place! You may read the full account in Acts 13:6-12. We should expect that there will be similar judgment miracles today on those who attempt to stop God’s plans from being accomplished.

I am not sure what kind of insurance and legal issues could come up these days when these signs happen, but I’m sure we’ll find out sooner or later.

A “church” leader tried to publicly contradict me when I was in a town park leading some of the deceived people who attended his new-birth-denying “synagogue of Satan” to Christ. Also immediately, he was transferred to the remotest part of the state and that was the end of that problem. He got off light in the scheme of things.

I saw something a little more drastic in Guyana, a former British colony where they still speak English. First, a little background. I had felt led prior to this trip to prepare by reading the entire New Testament in Spanish so that I could really work on my Spanish. So I did, even though it made no sense to do that because they don't speak Spanish in Guyana! When I got there, I was housed with one of the speakers who was from Costa Rica and did not speak any English. I didn't know about him until I got there. He had a translator with him for general purposes and then there was a "professional" preacher/translator just for when he was actually preaching in the conference. I thought it would be fun because I'd understand him before he got translated and could banter with him in Spanish. It turned out that the personal translator they assigned wasn't up for the job, so they replaced him with me on the spot. I got to hear all his wild miracle stories as I translated them for people he talked to. Finally, he spoke in a service and the professional guy handled that. But I started noticing that the translator was not actually translating what the preacher was saying; he was saying what he thought the preacher SHOULD have been saying! For example, when the preacher actually said "Speak in tongues!" the translator said, "Dance now! Dance in the Holy Spirit!" He was in effect preaching the service in place of the real speaker! Anyway, the next morning, that translator showed up gesturing at his throat. He couldn't say a word! God had hit his "mute" button! I was immediately appointed to do the service translating as well (which I still consider the hardest thing I've ever done because he preached really quickly and didn't stop much for his translator), and when he got interviewed for the only nightly TV news broadcast they had in the country (on the government station), I translated the plan of salvation (correctly as the preacher said it) for the entire country to hear at once! At that point, I was glad that I had obeyed God by brushing up on Spanish before going to that English-speaking country, no matter how ridiculous that seemed to my head at the time.

Signs and wonders of this kind are necessary to restore the fear of God to the Church, which has been largely lost in our day. The idea is not to be the object lesson yourself.

Don't Put Gifts of Healings into a Box

It is a mistake to watch someone else flow in gifts of healings and conclude, "THAT is the official way that gifts of healings work. I will expect to have that kind of operation when I minister."

You would be wrong to say, "Kathryn Kuhlman called out conditions from the stage by the Holy Spirit. Therefore, if you want gifts of healings to flow, you must be able to call out conditions from the stage as she did. I will try to do something to get Kathryn Kuhlman's anointing on me."

Well, first, you don't need Kathryn Kuhlman's anointing because you are not Kathryn Kuhlman. You need to flow in YOUR unique anointing that the Lord has given you by grace. Second, you should understand that Kathryn Kuhlman flowed in what is called "the word of knowledge." It was coupled with gifts of healings, but the word of knowledge is a separate manifestation. Therefore, you can flow in gifts of healings without flowing in the word of knowledge. So therefore, you DON'T have to flow like Kathryn Kuhlman to flow in gifts of healings!

You could then watch a preacher on TV who has notable manifestations in his healing lines. People seem to drop like tenpins when he touches them, some get "drunk in the Holy Spirit," and the people seem to be experiencing zillions of watts of power given the way they shake, sometimes before he even touches them. Then you could think, "THAT is the official way to flow in gifts of healings. So I will try to operate like that." And you'd miss it again by trying to be someone else.

I still remember the service overseas where the gifts of healings really started breaking out for me. I had every intention of calling a healing line and laying hands on people. But the Lord impressed me, "DO NOT call a healing line tonight. Just lead worship." So I went over to the piano and played and sang a worship song I'd written. While I was doing that, people around the room got instantly healed. They felt "the power" hit them and one said it was like being hit by a bolt of lightning. I never had to touch anyone. I'd had previous experiences where people were healed while I sang or even just played, but not on that scale.

So did I decide to have a new way to do ministry, and just play and sing from now on instead of calling healing lines? No, I still do healing lines most of the time. But I don't do them if God says to do something else. I would not want you to put gifts of healings in a box and think that people getting "zapped" while you play and/or sing is the "official" way to minister in gifts of healings.

I was a little surprised to find that significant miracles were happening when cloths that I laid hands on were given to sick people. Originally I figured that it was just a way to minister healing to someone in another state, or at least not in the room, because I don't believe in "standing in proxy" in healing lines. I still preached that this was unusual, because God said that He did UNUSUAL ("special") miracles through Paul that way (Acts 19:11-12). Yet it kept happening. (I am not promising to send an anointed cloth in exchange for a donation, lest you think that's where I'm headed! We've NEVER asked for a donation from ANYONE who ever got a cloth.) I kept telling people that this was NOT the normal way to get healed, and yet God kept using us in this non-normal way.

To this day I will NOT preach this as the “official” way to get healed. That just happens to be a way that God uses us in “gifts of healings.” It can work, but I don’t want you to try to copy me. However, be open to the idea of God using you along these lines, especially if there are people who need healing whom you can’t lay hands on in person.

People can even get healed while you’re preaching! I’ve seen this, and it saves time having a healing line later! If you’ll put out the Word, God will confirm it, but leave it up to Him how to do it.

If you don’t limit God with thinking about how “gifts of healings” have to work, I expect that you’ll see more manifestations of these gifts.

Healing and the Last Days

Daniel prophesied that knowledge would be increased in the last days (Daniel 12:4). If there is more knowledge, there should be more knowledge of healing, and the number of healings should increase.

However, there is considerable debate about whether there will be a special “last-days outpouring” just before Jesus returns. This has been the subject of countless prophecies, which often indicate that the outpouring will originate from the geographical location where each prophecy happened to be given.

For starters, we need to realize that the Bible is clear that no “end-time outpouring” will sweep most of the people on the earth into the Kingdom. If that were the case, it would negate Jesus’ words, which of course is impossible. Jesus said that there would be few who find the straight way that leads to life (Matthew 7:13-14) and many who find the wide way that leads to destruction.

Another common thought is that we will take over every aspect of society (sometimes referred to as the “seven mountains of culture”) so that when Jesus returns, the planet will be conquered for Him. But this flies in the face of what Scripture says about people in the world (not the church!) getting worse and worse (2 Timothy 3:13). A “move” that caused most people to get saved would negate that prediction as well. The Bible predicts “perilous times” as opposed to “glorious times” (2 Timothy 3:1).

On the other hand, Jesus is not returning for a defeated church because He said that the gates of hell would not prevail against it (Matthew 16:18). Being overcomers still doesn’t mean that we will take over the earth before Jesus comes back. If we did, the Antichrist could never take power because he’d never be able to get power away from us.

Will There Be a “Latter Rain” Outpouring of Miracles?

The “end-time revival” is often referred to as the “latter rain.” The idea that there will be a strong final outpouring of the Spirit is tied to some verses that include the latter rain. These three are the most commonly cited:

James 5:7:

Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain.

The question above is whether this is simply talking about the Lord being patient like a farmer because He doesn’t want any to perish (2 Peter 3:9) or if the latter rain represents an outpouring of the Spirit similar to Pentecost (though generally taught to be even greater).

Zechariah 10:1:

Ask ye of the LORD rain in the time of the latter rain; so the LORD shall make bright clouds, and give them showers of rain, to every one grass in the field.

This verse is generally used in conjunction with “praying for the latter rain” where the “latter rain” is considered to be the last-days outpouring.

Joel 2:23:

Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the LORD your God: for he hath given you the former rain moderately, and he will cause to come down for you the rain, the former rain, and the latter rain in the first month.

The important questions are whether the verse above and the verses below refer to literal or spiritual rain and whether they apply to the last-day Church. It sounds like a great prophecy of last-day spiritual rain and spiritual harvest – until we get to the latter part of Joel’s prophecy that immediately follows this verse. Then we realize that we have two major problems with the “last-days outpouring” interpretation.

Joel 2:24-29:

And the floors shall be full of wheat, and the fats shall overflow with wine and oil.

And I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten, the cankerworm, and the caterpillar, and the palmerworm, my great army which I sent among you.

And ye shall eat in plenty, and be satisfied, and praise the name of the LORD your God, that hath dealt wondrously with you: and my people shall never be ashamed.

And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the LORD your God, and none else: and my people shall never be ashamed.

And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions:

And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit.

The trouble starts 3 verses up, where it becomes obvious that this prophecy was directed toward Israel. But until the day comes when all Israel will be saved (Romans 11:26), the outpouring of the Spirit will be more evident upon the Gentiles than upon Israel. So this calls things into question. Worse trouble follows in the next verse, when it becomes obvious that Joel’s prophecies will all be fulfilled before the Day of Pentecost in Acts 2 when God poured out His Holy Spirit. He said “it shall come to pass afterward, meaning that the Acts 2 outpouring would come AFTER the fulfillment of Joel 2:23 and the verses that followed it! This makes it impossible for Joel to be talking about a latter rain that would come earlier than the early rain! If it came earlier, IT would be the early rain and the Day of Pentecost would be the latter rain!

There are other references to “latter rain” in the Old Testament, but all of them are quite clearly talking about literal water as opposed to manifestations of the Holy Spirit. Here they are so that you can see this for yourself:

Deuteronomy 11:14:

That I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil.

Job 29:23:

And they waited for me as for the rain; and they opened their mouth wide as for the latter rain.

Proverbs 16:15:

In the light of the king's countenance is life; and his favour is as a cloud of the latter rain.

Jeremiah 3:3:

Therefore the showers have been withholden, and there hath been no latter rain; and thou hadst a whore's forehead, thou refusedst to be ashamed.

But now the problem is that we really don't have a conclusive "latter rain equals Spirit outpouring" verse. And it gets worse the more you think about it, as we'll see.

What Would Be Poured Out?

If the "early rain" was the Holy Spirit outpouring in Acts 2, this leaves us with an issue regarding the "latter rain." The Holy Spirit has been GIVEN already and He has never been retracted. So what exactly is God going to pour out IN ADDITION TO the Holy Spirit that produces more power than the Holy Spirit, who is still here? Jesus said that we would receive power when the Holy Spirit came upon us (Acts 1:8), and the Holy Spirit has come. So we already HAVE power. We don't lack the POWER to do miracles today, so we don't need any additional outpouring to get that power. We need to start USING the power that we already have rather than looking for more of it somewhere and praying for God to send more power than the Holy Spirit within us has!

What exactly would have to be poured out for us to do "end-time" miracles when we have the SAME Holy Spirit who worked miracles at the beginning of the Church Age?

Nothing New Under the Sun

I still remember the first time I preached a message and people fell out "drunk in the Holy Spirit" – and got up healed. I was sure that I was "toast" in that church and that the "old-time Pentecostal" pastor of that church would never want anything to do with me again after that wild service. To my surprise, he started singing songs he had sung decades earlier about getting drunk in the Holy Spirit! He said, "We used to see this happen all the time when I was young, and I've always wondered what ever happened to it."

Consider the following. In the 1950's, there was a great healing revival. It was no more God's will to heal then as it is now or was earlier, but there were more manifestations of spiritual gifts along those lines. But there had been moves of healing off and on for centuries, as church history books can attest. In the 1970's, there was a teaching revival where faith was emphasized and taught more than before. Those faith concepts were true all along, and some "faith" teaching had actually been around since the earlier 1900's. In the 1940's, meetings where people got "drunk in the Spirit" were fairly common. This almost disappeared for a while, only to come back in the 1990's. (It wasn't a new phenomenon when it re-emerged then, though younger Christians probably thought that it was some end-time phenomenon that had never been seen before.) In earlier centuries, people shaking and being "slain in the Spirit" was a common occurrence when evangelists preached to the masses. In fact, a secular historian stated that people in the early 1800's had called this phenomenon by a medical name – "the jerks," noting that often people who came to the meetings to disprove or criticize "the jerks" would be the first people overcome by them! People thought that these manifestations were something new when they came back in our day.

There have been different "moves of God" at different times. But we did not have a "healing dispensation" or a "faith dispensation" in which healing and faith worked when they didn't work before. They were just different things that the Holy Spirit was emphasizing at the time. There are different "flows" of the Spirit within the same church age dispensation.

Some "new" move of God will probably surface that has been seen in prior generations. Unfortunately, kooky moves of the devil and the flesh have also run in generational cycles, with "new revelations" like this-life immortality, apostles taking "apostolic authority" over churches they didn't start, trying to engage high-altitude principalities and powers in "spiritual warfare," teaching that ALL are saved, and Christians constantly trying to cast demons out of each other. Satan just "rebrands" these things with different names and passes them off as "new revelations" when they are nothing more than recycled extremism from previous generations who were duped by them.

Dispensing with Dispensationalism

Spirit-filled Christians often chide denominational people for believing in church-age dispensationalism, that is, that there was an "early church age" in which the power of the Holy Spirit flowed freely, followed by a "later church age" when everything is duller and less powerful. Yet they walk into exactly the same trap with Latter Rain dispensationalism, which teaches that there was an "early church age" in which the power of the Holy Spirit flowed freely, following by a "middle church age" when everything was duller and less powerful, to be followed by a "latter church age" in which the power of the Holy Spirit will flow freely again in an even greater measure than in the "early church age."

Scripture never divides the Church Age. There is only ONE Church Age, and it is the age of the Holy Spirit. There are not 3 church ages – the age of the Holy Spirit, the age of no Holy Spirit, and the age of even more power than the age of the Holy Spirit (however that's supposed to work).

Latter Rain Problems

There was a “Latter Rain” movement in the 1900’s that got very weird and followed some strange doctrines. However, it is possible to believe in a “latter rain” revival without going into those excesses. So you should not assume that someone who believes in a “latter rain” revival has to be kooky like some of those people were. (There is no reason to detail the issues; they wouldn’t be edifying. Suffice it to say that they caused many Spirit-filled Christians to be looked down upon by others who knew better than to get into some of the weird things that the Latter Rain people got into.)

So what could be the harm of expecting a mighty “latter rain” move, and why should I even try to rain on that parade? To me, the biggest harm is the attitude that we need to “wait on God” for an earth-shaking revival or some kind of increase in power. I’m not into praying for revival or waiting for revival; I’m into DOING revival. If we think that we don’t have the resources to do revival NOW, we won’t do it. If we have the mindset that we don’t have to wait, but we can go do the works of Jesus NOW, we’ll go out and do the works of Jesus NOW, which is what I’d rather see everyone do. Then we can see what people will think of as a “move of God” or a “revival.”

“Yes,” you may say, “but there are definitely outpourings where God does things that only God can do.” I agree. But God’s pattern is to work with us and confirm His Word when we GO and preach it. If we will do what we can do, God will do what only God can do. But if we sit around waiting for a move of God, that move will never come. A move of God follows a move of man!

Conclusion

While there have been and may continue to be “outpourings” such as the healing revival, the faith movement, the grace movement as well as other well-publicized local-church outpourings that people travel from afar to attend, I can’t see anything in Scripture that points to a stupendous final move that will sweep people into the kingdom, certainly not enough people to make MANY find the right way and leave only a FEW to find the wrong way. Now we can still get along if you disagree with me on this nonessential issue. But at least I’ve given you what I think is a reasonable take on the matter given the teaching of Scripture as a whole. And I DO believe that because of the increase of knowledge, the number of healings will increase for that reason.

There are a number of other considerations and Scripture passages that led me to these same conclusions; I go into these in more detail in my response to the question, Does Scripture Promise a Mighty Worldwide End-Time Revival?

All About Healing Services

What is a Healing Service?

A healing service is a special meeting centered around ministry to the sick. Some of the ideas in this discussion can apply to other services as well. The Holy Spirit can change the order of a regular service and move this way for a certain time within another service.

Healing services are generally conducted by one or more ministers whom the Holy Spirit has specifically anointed to minister this way. While any believer has a right to lay hands on the sick in the name of Jesus and expect them to recover (Mark 16:17-18, John 14:12), some ministers have a special grace for this. We see in 1 Corinthians 12:8-11 that there are “gifts of healings,” “working of miracles” and “faith” to be in operation in Christian services. (See the question on these gifts for more information about them.) Any believer, including you, could be called upon to operate in these gifts at certain times. These are technically “manifestations” of the Spirit, since you cannot “own” any of them. These manifestations occur “as the Spirit wills” (1 Corinthians 12:11).

This notwithstanding, there are definitely individuals whom the Holy Spirit uses consistently in such manifestations. We see this in 1 Corinthians 12:28-30. This lists ministry offices, not single manifestations in services. The people used in this way often, but not always, stand in the office of “evangelist” (Ephesians 4:11). We know that Philip, who later on in his ministry was called an evangelist, flowed in these so-called “power gifts.” However, there are those in all the ministry offices who flow in these gifts. It is unfair to criticize a minister who flows in the gifts of healings for “not being evangelistic enough.” The minister may stand in another ministry office, such as prophet, and may not focus on reaching the lost in his meetings. It is equally unfair to criticize an evangelist for “not doing enough in-depth teaching” when his primary goal is to present the simple gospel to the unsaved. God uses different men in different ways and there is no cookie-cutter stereotype of a “healing minister.” It is pointless to try to compare different men’s ministries with each other because each person has a unique ministry.

These meetings are frequently advertised in advance with exhortations to “Bring the sick! Bring someone who needs a miracle!” The more genuine needs there are in the service, the more the gifts of the Spirit will be in operation. If an evangelist holds such a meeting and no one brings any sinners or sick people to it, there may be no manifestations of the Spirit at all.

Who Are Healing Services for?

Healing services are for anyone who needs healing, but they are particularly for the unsaved, young Christians, and people with very difficult conditions. Mature believers are expected to believe the Word of God and receive their healing for themselves without a special healing service. Thank God for healing services, but simple faith in God is a better way to receive your healing. Still, if you need healing, it's not a sin to attend a healing service, even if you've been a Christian since you were a kid!

This service is indirectly for the co-workers, relatives and friends of the people there. Many of these may take a sudden interest in the gospel when someone they know is healed. They may be there the next night, and they may get healed and tell even more people, and so on. That is the gospel pattern. It did not take long for entire cities to find out about Jesus in the Gospels and Acts. Healings were an important form of advertising for the gospel.

You will probably see some very unlikely people being healed. That old boozier downtown may suddenly be healed of liver problems, while Sally the Saint who has faithfully taught Sunday school for 25 years may walk in with eye trouble and leave with eye trouble. Critical Chris, who has not had a kind word to say about the pastor in eight years, is suddenly healed of terrible back pain and runs around the room rejoicing, while Deacon Dave still has arthritis when the service ends.

This can lead to jealousy and criticism from the older Christians, who fancy themselves as being more deserving of healing. Perhaps this is the problem in many cases. The sinner and the backslider know that they need the mercy of God while the older Christian can forget that healing has always been based on his righteousness in Christ, not his own righteousness. No one "deserves" healing on his own merit. Every Christian "deserves" healing based on his right standing with God through Jesus Christ. Rather than being jealous, older Christians should rejoice with those who rejoice (Romans 12:15) when the less mature people are healed.

The fact that some people are healed miraculously while others are not has led to some very bad doctrine based on experience instead of the Bible. People assume that it was God's will to heal some and not others. That is not true. It was God's will to heal some in a dramatic way on this particular occasion. But it was, and is, God's will, to heal everyone.

Different Methods of Ministry

Many healing crusades feature lengthy “healing lines” where hands are laid on the sick. In this way, the healing anointing is transmitted to those who need it. However, beware of putting God in a box. Some ministers rarely lay hands on anyone and instead “call out” certain conditions that God is currently healing in the congregation. This is a manifestation of “the word of knowledge.” In some cases, people are healed spontaneously while worshipping God, or for no readily apparent reason, and the minister may not even be aware of it! (God does not always tell the minister everything!) A person may teeter all over and fall down “drunk in the Spirit” and get up healed. The minister may simply wave at a section of the congregation, and the power of God may suddenly fall on a large number of people at once. There is no “right” or “wrong” way for God to minister healing to people. The way he is moving in that service is the right way if the Holy Spirit is leading him, and any other way is the wrong way – at least for that service.

The manifestation of the Spirit differs from service to service. I have seen services where a large number of people flopped all over the place laughing in the Spirit. Sometimes, the next evening, God was trying to move primarily through the preaching of the Word, and some people (bless their hearts) started whooping it up in the flesh trying to make the same thing happen that happened the night before. Beware of this. Always purpose in your heart to “hook up” with however God is moving in that particular service. Let God direct you rather than trying to direct Him. If you start working yourself up into a tee-hee fit in the wrong service, you will be completely out of order and you will disrupt the anointing. (If the ushers are wise, they will usher you out.) On the other hand, you are equally out of order to resist the Holy Spirit if He is moving in laughter and you just decide that you don’t like it and won’t participate in it. You will end up being one of the jealous ones, moaning that those people who “made total fools of themselves” walk out with their healings and a whole bunch of joy, while you, you dignified thing, never flinched – and never got anything from God, either.

Sadly, some Christians viciously criticize genuine moves of God. (“They’re just working it up. They’re in the flesh. That can’t be God. They’re acting like fools. This is an embarrassment to the Body of Christ. It’s all emotional. Those people are insane.”) Sometimes these are the very Christians who said that they wanted a move of God in the first place! (They wanted a “dignified” move, but you don’t have the right to restrict God to doing what you think is dignified.)

As mentioned in the discussion, Strange Ways to Get Healed, the minister could ask you to do something unusual, such as run around the room, put your hand on the part of your body that hurts, or try to do something you couldn’t do before. You would be wise to do it, even if you don’t feel the anointing (tangible power) on you at the time. As you move out in obedience, your healing will manifest. (I am assuming that the minister heard from God, of course.)

I am not saying that everything that happens in every service is genuinely of God. Ministers are people; they can miss God just as you do sometimes. (Shhhhh...we won’t tell anyone.) Some people in the congregation can overdo things and get into the flesh. But that doesn’t mean that God wasn’t moving.

Also, you must realize that different ministers have different personalities. Although a minister is to speak for God, the message will always be “colored” by the vessel it flows through. Nothing is wrong with that. In fact, one of the worst things a minister (or any believer, for that matter) can do is to try to act like someone else. Much unwarranted criticism is aimed at ministers because of the way they minister. Joe Hollywood might try to make the service a “healing extravaganza,” and people will complain, “He’s too showy – that can’t be God.” Another minister can be so low-key that people complain, “He’s no fun to listen to. Joe Hollywood’s services are much more exciting.” The apostle Paul had a wonderful healing ministry, yet people complained, “His bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible” (2 Corinthians 10:10). You see, these types of pot shots at ministers are not a new thing, though they are never a good thing.

If you’re not careful, you can start regarding the minister “in the flesh.” In other words, you can get so caught up with what he wears, how he acts, or what kind of music he likes before he preaches, that you get your eyes on him instead of on the Lord. This mistake can prevent you from receiving your healing. The gifts of healings are from God, not from the man. You are there to receive from the anointing that is on that man’s ministry, not on the man’s clothes or jewelry. If you stew over his expensive watch (that someone probably gave him anyway), you may miss your healing completely because you’re in a critical mood rather than a mood to receive from God.

I am not saying that everything that every minister does is right. I am saying that you need to look past the man’s possible imperfections or personality quirks and consider the anointing upon him. I have had the power of God get all over me in more than one service I attended where I was not fond of the minister’s methods or delivery. I’m glad that God is full of grace. He is bigger than all our shortcomings.

Don’t Be Like Naaman the Syrian

Naaman the Syrian got healed, but first he had to repent of an improper attitude. He wanted Elisha to lay hands on him, and Elisha told him to bathe in the Jordan River seven times. Naaman got very upset because he thought the rivers back in Damascus were better than the Jordan, and the request seemed ridiculous. He was healed when he obeyed Elisha’s instructions. You can read about this in 2 Kings 5:1-14.

It is possible to be like Naaman the Syrian today. The minister instructs those around you to lay hands on you instead of laying hands on you himself, or he tells you to lay hands on yourself and receive from the anointing in the room. Then you get mad because you wanted a regular healing line! Or someone other than the man you like was anointed that night to minister in the healing line, and you’re mad because you wanted your favorite preacher to lay hands on you. Well, you can either stay sick or you can go with the flow. Rather than getting upset over methods, cooperate with the way that the individual service is going.

Jump in!

I don't know that you'd want to make theology out of the Pool of Bethesda, but there does seem to be a parallel in practice. When the minister says that the Holy Spirit wants to minister to certain people, and you're one of those people, get down there as fast as you can without walking out of love (or running and shoving out of love). Just as only the first person in the pool got healed when the angel troubled the water, often the people who respond right away are ministered to by the anointing, while those who sit there debating whether they really feel like going down there lose out. Allegorically speaking, when the angel troubles the pool, jump in and receive!

This is very important to the "flow" of the service. If the minister has to wait for people to obey God, it can disrupt the flow of things and the anointing may wane.

I've watched with some annoyance when "late-to-the-party" people decide after 15 minutes that they want to get into the healing line after all. If that's all the conviction they have, they're not likely to receive anything. The only exception would be people who are physically so weak that they simply can't stand in line for a long time, so they wait for later to go up, which is understandable.

How Do You Know It's Really God?

There are indeed fake healing ministers out there, and still others who have a genuine anointing but mix a lot of flesh with it. How will you be able to tell if God is really behind what is happening?

First, if you are a Christian, your born-again spirit will be comfortable in a service where a man of God is ministering. If the man is a fake, something just won't seem right to you on the inside and you'll be uneasy the whole time. Now it is possible to be in a godly service where your flesh cringes at some things that are going on, but you still know in your heart that they're done under the anointing. If the Holy Spirit bears witness with your spirit concerning your salvation (Romans 8:16), you can expect that He will bear witness with your spirit about other matters, also. The anointing that is within you will teach you without any man having to say anything to you about it (1 John 2:27). Part of growing as a Christian is having your senses exercised by reason of use to discern good and evil (Hebrews 5:14).

Second, the message preached will be Biblical. This does not mean that every word will be a Scripture verse. It means that the point of the message will be found in the Bible. Some ministers are fond of telling long stories to illustrate points. Some evangelists may seem to say nothing about God or His Word until they get to the conclusion of their message and they "throw out the net." Some prophets may spend a good deal of time speaking specific things about specific situations under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. But when all is said and done, you should be able to point to one or more verses in the Bible that summarize the message brought forth by the minister. If you can't, you have reason to suspect that something is wrong.

Third, the message will be liberating. Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty (2 Corinthians 3:17). If you leave feeling like you were just beaten up, either you misinterpreted the message or the message was not from God. Note that your flesh may not enjoy a good message on repentance, but that is still a liberating message because repentance does bring liberty. Some preachers wrongly divide the Word of God and use it to try to bring people into bondage instead of liberty. They preach the Word, but in the wrong spirit! The Pharisees were prime examples of this. Jesus said to beware of their doctrines (Matthew 16:12)!

Fourth, your pastor may know more than you do about the particular ministry and he may have either recommended that people go if they can or warned people to stay away. Your pastor can't control your life, but God gives pastors for the protection of the sheep. Beware of going to a meeting that your pastor does not support. Many sheep come back embarrassed or hurt after disregarding warnings about a certain ministry. For a time, they think that the pastor is just an old coot who is not into the brand new sensational thing that God is doing today. They are sure that they know more than the pastor does, and besides, he just might be jealous that God is not using him in this wonderful new way. Then they find out that the sensational preacher wasn't genuine (or was off his rocker) and that the pastor was right all along. The pastor may have known some bad things about the minister but for love's sake and for the sake of respecting the ministry in general, he did not share the specifics publicly.

I'm not saying that your pastor couldn't be wrong, because he could be. Some local pastors have gotten quite upset at genuine moves of God and they've tried to warn people away from really anointed services. I'm just telling you that a warning light should go on if he does not approve of the meetings.

Fifth, in most cases, if the man does not have the support of any local church for his ministry, you should avoid him. Beware of "Lone Ranger" ministers who don't think they need support from pastors! Ideally, he will have the support of one or more churches in the immediate area where the meeting is being held. There is no excuse not to have that in MANY places today, because God has raised up a lot of good churches. Having said that, there still ARE places where if God wants to do anything, He'll have to go around all the established churches in the area because they're all closed to teaching faith properly and letting the Holy Spirit move freely. However, a problem with such an "unsponsored meeting" is that the people who get saved at the services will need a church to attend. If there are no churches ready to receive the new converts, they may just go back into the world again. If they do go to church, the pastor might undo all the good you did teaching them faith. The meeting will bear no lasting fruit. As a preacher I know said, "The harvest isn't the harvest until it's gathered into the barn!" So if the preacher is not working through any local churches, and there is no good church within a reasonable drive, he must be prepared to plant a church in that location. (Such a man would typically stand in the office of apostle, as apostles plant churches.) Otherwise it would be like doctors delivering babies at the hospital and then throwing them outside the front door to fend for themselves.

Sixth, if the minister himself does not have a home church, stay away. God will not give authority to those who do not operate under authority themselves. Avoid any man who claims, “The Body of Christ is my church” (as I heard one idiot “minister” declare). Also, a minister should have a good report from his home church, not just be someone who attends and never serves and it turns out that the pastor doesn’t even know the guy personally even though it’s a good church.

Seventh, if the meetings are of God, Jesus will be glorified. The gifts of the Spirit will exalt Jesus. The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy (Revelation 19:10). So if man, rather than Jesus, is exalted, the meeting is being done in the wrong spirit. Some of the worst cases of this are when the minister has some grandiose word that the recipient of the word will be the greatest revival leader ever on the earth or that his ministry will be the epicenter of the entire end-time move of God. Watch out for words like that! There are “prophets” who make a living saying that everywhere they go is “ground zero” for a final outpouring on the earth. People like to receive words like that; at least their flesh does.

Eighth, the minister will point you to Jesus and to the Word of God, not to his anointing, his ministry, or even the gifts of the Spirit. He will present Jesus and God’s promises as the answer to every need. Ministries based on the gifts of the Spirit are top-heavy. Ministries based on the Word are on solid ground. You cannot always get a need met through the gifts of the Spirit, but you can always get every need met through God’s Word. (However, there is such a thing as false humility; see YOU Can Do Miracles for an example.)

Ninth, the man’s personal lifestyle (as far as is publicly known) should be consistent with New Testament teaching. If it is common knowledge that the man is involved in any practice that is against Biblical standards, avoid him. (However, you shouldn’t hold someone accountable for the things he did before he got saved, or things he did after he got saved but repented of.) Note that I am not saying that you should go around gossiping and trying to dig up dirt like some tabloid. However, some people with genuine anointings are really messed up! The reason to avoid their ministry is not because they aren’t anointed, but because you don’t want to pick up their attitudes! Some very anointed people are the most humble, wonderful people you would ever want to meet. Other very anointed people are ones you wouldn’t even want to have a meal with – because you did have a meal with them and you found out how rude and self-centered they really were. God’s gifts are based on grace; they are not rewards for being the best Christian around. Some people seem to think that the fact that God continues to use them means that God is OK with the way they conduct themselves when it’s really His mercy in action. Sooner or later, if their love walk or their integrity is askew, it will catch up with them.

Tenth, the man will have a godly approach to the offering. Impostors usually give themselves away when it comes to money, since that's why they're there. Some men have tried to prophesy money out of people, which is never right. (In some cases, the man may have a supernatural knowledge about money or possessions someone has, and try to tell the person that God says to give it away. Watch out! Not all supernatural knowledge comes from God. Demons know some things, too – see Acts 16:16.) Assume that the man is not of God if he spends a disproportionate amount of time on the offering, or tries to put undue pressure on people to give. And give what you can give cheerfully, not reluctantly or under compulsion (2 Corinthians 9:7). Don't give just because he had a "word" that there were businessmen in the congregation who were supposed to give $1,000 each. (I don't know what it is about businessmen and $1,000, but I have heard this a disproportionate number of times over the years. Thus far, "God" has not even indexed that number for inflation yet, but if inflation gets bad enough, I'm sure the number will increase.) I'm not saying that God would never have someone say such a thing, but make sure that your giving is based on your convictions, not pressure from the minister, because there are some manipulators out there, some of whom really do have anointings despite their ungodly high-pressure offering tactics. Especially beware of anyone who claims to have a special "debt-breaking" anointing whereby if you give a lot right now, you will be assured of getting out of debt almost overnight. The only one who might get out of debt overnight as a result is the minister himself. The warning also applies to any "if you don't give right now, the deal's off" tactics. God's Word concerning finances always works when you follow it; there is no "one night only" time limit on it.

Eleventh, if the man has a "word" for you, it will be something helpful, not just showing off that the minister has supernatural knowledge. A friend went to one of these prophesy-to-everyone-who-lines-up-for-a-prophecy meetings, which are unbiblical because 2 Peter 1:21 says, "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.") My friend commented that some things the minister said were accurate, but not helpful. He felt as if he were getting his fortune told. Because "prophecy on demand" is unbiblical, some of those who claim to be able to prophesy to anyone at any time and line up people to get "words" can start listening to "familiar spirits" that are not of God instead of the Holy Spirit, even if they don't do it deliberately.

I saw a minister do a series of nightly meetings and some nights he gave people words with head-spinning detail and accuracy. People were helped and set free. But other nights he would try to give out words and he just plain missed God and looked silly. Word had gotten out that he had a gift for "reading people's mail" and I think he felt obligated to give the many new people who were coming what they were expecting. But, as 2 Peter 1:21 cited above says, you can't just prophesy because "you" want to do it. Ministry is not a show where you give people what they want! You can get in big trouble trying the "open your mouth and God will fill it" routine. You have to follow the Holy Spirit, and if He's not moving a certain way, you don't move that way either no matter what the people want. ("Yeah," some would say, "but Smith Wigglesworth said that if the Spirit wasn't moving, he moved the Spirit." I can assure you that presumptuously trying to step out in something God hasn't moved you to do is not what Brother Wigglesworth meant by that.)

What If the Minister Tries to Push You Down?

I've been pushed by some famous people over the years, so I know that some preachers, even though they are legitimately very anointed, just like to try to push people down. Some do it rather subtly, but it's not so subtle when you're the one being pushed – and exhorted, "Yield to the Holy Spirit!"

However, there are times when it's the Holy Spirit and not the minister pushing you hard. In decades of ministry, I have never as of this writing ever pushed anyone down or even attempted to do so. In fact, I used to try to prop people up until the Holy Spirit told me to stop doing that. Yet I have been accused of shoving people hard when the people around could testify that I never even touched them! God picked up one lady and threw her about 10 feet before I could touch her! At least anyone could tell I wouldn't have been strong enough to do that myself. She was motionless for over half an hour and the devil started lying to me that I had killed her and no one would ever want me or my "killer anointing" again because she really was "SLAIN in the Spirit." Much to my relief, she suddenly got up completely healed.

There was one man that I couldn't have shoved over because he had a build like an American football player and I'm short. But the Holy Spirit told me to hit him! So I gave him a respectful little whack. Nothing happened. I whacked slightly harder and nothing happened. The Holy Spirit said, "I told you to HIT him, not pat him!" So I unloaded on him. The power of God hit that man and God healed him. Now don't do that unless God tells you to do it! I remember reading that the Lord told Kenneth Hagin to hit someone, and I said at the time, "Lord, please don't ever tell me to do that!" I've also been on the receiving end of that and gone through the air myself by the power of the Holy Spirit, and God did some necessary things in me that night. I wasn't hurt in the least though at least one person was worried that the minister's punch had injured me!

The Holy Spirit does not hurt people. The main reason we need "catchers" today is that some people expect to fall whether it's God or not and we don't want them to get hurt. I remember a meeting in New Hampshire when I was a young believer. I had just gotten baptized that afternoon in a lake. Someone laid hands on me and I felt myself start to go down. The only problem was that there were no catchers and there was nothing behind me but a hard concrete floor! Ka-boom, I went down when I couldn't keep myself up anymore, straight backward onto that floor. I didn't feel a thing! And that's not because I was knocked unconscious; that floor might as well have been made of feathers for all I felt. The Holy Spirit can certainly do some interesting things. I watched a pastor's wife whirl, twirl and dance with her eyes closed in a room where people were all over the floor all across the room. Her feet landed inside people's elbows, knees, whatever – she never touched anyone, so no one was hurt. It was the Holy Spirit demonstrating Himself in a "wonder."

If the minister is pushy, it is not necessarily your job to demonstrate his pushiness to the world. The main thing is to come expecting to receive your healing when hands are laid on you. The following experiences I had may help or at least amuse you. A famous healing minister came to the church I was part of many years ago. I had an ailment so I went up for prayer. The minister proceeded to push me hard! I did not appreciate being pushed hard and thought it smacked of fakery, so I locked my legs and would not even give this minister a “courtesy drop” (as it is sometimes called in ministry circles). The minister literally pushed me halfway across the whole stage, and I would still not go down. I left the service that night quite upset – and still with the ailment I had when I walked in!

Some months later, I had a serious issue where one of the staff ministers at church saw me and urged me to go to the emergency room. I told him, “No, I’m going to go to the (name of minister) service tonight and receive my healing!” It was the same anointed but pushy healing minister who was at another church in another city. I went up to have hands laid on me, and because this was a fairly serious issue, I had already made up my mind that the minister could push me as hard as possible and I’d just fall and not care because I really needed to be healed! Sure enough, I got a good shove, and I dropped to the floor rather than fighting with the minister again. I was decked out there with the REAL power of God on me for almost an hour lying next to the feet of the host pastor and his wife who were sitting in the front row. And when I got up, I knew that I had my healing. I felt a lot better, and that condition was gone within a day or two! I never did have to go to the hospital.

What Should My Attitude Be when I Go?

You should be prepared to receive from God. This is critical. What you receive in such a service is more up to you than it is up to God or the minister. To some degree, what the congregation as a whole expects determines how much happens, as I am about to prove.

Do not go with the attitude that you want to “see what kind of anointing the preacher has.” You will miss it. The preacher could be the most anointed preacher who ever lived, but if the people are cynical and not open to receive from him, or just sit judging him, little will happen.

I can prove this from the Bible, where the most anointed preacher who ever lived (Jesus), attempted to minister in Nazareth, where He was met with hostility and skepticism. Read these passages:

Matthew 13:54-58

Mark 6:1-6

The servant is not above his Master. If Jesus could do no mighty work at Nazareth, where people would not receive His ministry but got preoccupied with His human side, no minister today can fare any better under similar circumstances. This was the same Jesus who healed multitudes everywhere else. The difference was solely in the congregation! Note that Jesus could do no mighty work. He wasn't unwilling, He simply couldn't. This may surprise people who assume that as the Son of God, Jesus could do anything. But Jesus limited Himself to what was available to man, emptying Himself of His divine privileges (Philippians 2:5-8, Hebrews 2:17). No minister can force healings and miracles to take place where people are not open to receive them. Jesus told His disciples to heal in the cities that received them, not in the cities that did not receive them. (This is expounded upon in an Objection reply elsewhere.)

Recall the Scriptures where Jesus told the sick that it was their faith, not His, that healed them. (See the discussion, According to YOUR FAITH Be It Done unto You! for these passages.) It is still the same today. God's power is limited only by what you can believe! See Mark 9:17-29.

Do not yawn your way through praise and worship or the preaching of the Word, thinking to yourself, "Come on, get on with it! I want to see the good stuff – healings and miracles!" If you don't want to praise or worship God, you probably have your eyes in the wrong place to begin with. He is the one whose power works the healings through the minister. Why not praise Him in advance for what He is going to do! Spending time honoring God, conscious of His presence, certainly will not hurt you. People have been known to get healed in this part of the service without even having hands laid on them! Pay attention to the preaching of the Word. While an unwise or inept minister might just spend time fiddle-diddling waiting for the anointing to fall, a minister with any sense will be teaching you what the Bible says about healing, faith, or other topics, to help you receive from God.

Some People Get Healed without Exercising Much Faith at All!

How can this be? Like the man in John 5:2-19, some people who seem to be in unbelief get healed at healing services. However, God doesn't promise anyone anything in a healing service without the exercise of faith. Recall that the other people at the Pool of Bethesda were sick when Jesus got there and sick when Jesus left! But didn't Jesus heal all who were oppressed of the devil? He healed all who came to Him. There is no record that anyone else at the Pool of Bethesda approached Him for healing. And in the man's case, Jesus did not say that his faith had healed him. This man was healed by a manifestation of the Holy Spirit.

We have no reason to suspect that the soldier whose ear Peter hacked off had any faith. Yet Jesus healed his ear. The man came to help arrest Jesus and Jesus healed him anyway! Jesus did not tell this man that his faith had made him whole!

So why does God pick certain individuals at certain times and heal them in spite of their lack of faith? We don't know. The manifestations of the Spirit are given as He wills. He surely has a reason behind it, but He is not obligated to share the reason with us.

One thing is for sure: The fact that God in His mercy may heal a person who has no faith at all does not mean that He does not want to heal others. God is fair. He has made provision for the healing of the whole world through the Christ's atonement. Anyone could be healed at that meeting (or anywhere else for that matter) by believing that he was healed by Jesus' stripes (1 Peter 2:24). Anyone who is properly instructed can be healed if he acts on the Word.

Beware lest you get the prodigal son's brother's attitude. The backslider comes back and gets the red carpet treatment. God heals him and shows him great mercy and favor. Meanwhile, there you sit, mad because you think God didn't do anything for you when you never backslid like that. However, all that God has, including healing, was yours all along. (See Healing and the Prodigal Son.)

When You're in a Healing Line

If you choose to go up during the part of the service where hands are being laid on the sick, here are some practical suggestions.

First, determine that you will receive your healing when hands are laid on you. Do not just assume that the anointing will do all the work. Remember the woman with the issue of blood! Her faith made a demand on the anointing that was on Jesus. If you go up with the idea that you doubt anything will happen anyway, you are wasting the minister's time as well as yours, and you should not get in line in the first place. Don't go up with the attitude that you "dare" God to heal you through that minister or that you "dare" the minister to prove that he really has anything.

I'm not saying that to be harsh. When a multiple people believe they will receive something, a real "flow" gets going. If the minister is forced to deal with groups of people who don't expect anything to happen, it will be harder for the gifts of the Spirit to manifest and for there to be a "flow" in the service.

As much as possible, keep your mind on the Lord and His Word. Unless you are specifically told to sing or do something else, I would suggest being quiet and staying in the mood to receive. There is no point in trying to get "hyper" and unleash a barrage of tongues as some people do. In fact, the more you do mentally or physically to try to hook up with God's power, the harder it will be for you to do so. That is because you receive healing from God with your spirit, not your mind. Thus, it is generally better to have your mind quiet so that it won't get in the way. Sometimes a minister has to stay with a person for a little while because the person is so wrought up that he is no condition to receive anything from God! It is not time to pray for Jerusalem or the armed forces or the lady with lots of tattoos and piercings who lives next door. It is time for you to receive what you need.

It is tempting to get nervous when the minister gets near you, especially if people are falling all over the place. Keep in mind that it is the Lord who is doing the healing. The anointing of the Holy Spirit is being transmitted through the minister's hands. Don't worry what the people around you will think of you. They are probably too busy thinking about what other people will think of them to be thinking of you, anyway.

Don't worry about falling and/or getting up. This idea is to get healed, and whether you fall over or not is irrelevant. Jesus said that hands would be laid on the sick and they would recover. He did not promise that they would fall over like tenpins.

There is no need to contort yourself (mentally or physically) in an attempt to "suck" the anointing out of the minister. Just stand there and receive it. Let it go into you. If you're sick, the healing anointing is there for your benefit, and God knows that. You don't have to enter some kind of mega-worship, either. RELAX and let God minister to you!

Don't get in the healing line unless you need a physical or emotional healing or healing of a mental illness. See the discussion, Beware: Wrong Motives for Getting into Healing Lines for some exhortations and warnings about this. Healing lines are serious business. Don't play games with the anointing. If the healing line is for a specific condition only, don't get in that line unless you have that condition. Otherwise you will grieve the Holy Spirit and make it harder for everyone else to receive.

What You Can Do to Enhance the Service

Contrary to popular opinion, the results are up to the congregation as well as the minister. We have discussed expectations earlier. Go expecting God to move supernaturally. It is easier for everyone to receive in an atmosphere of mass faith.

Never act in a way that would distract others from the service. Do not pass notes, trade text messages, check your email, tell jokes, make late-night snack plans, or do anything else that shows irreverence for God and His workings. Do not make comments to your neighbors about other people going up for healing. If there are specific instructions from the platform (sing, pray, etc.), follow them. If there are no explicit instructions, worship the Lord quietly, pray for the people in line, or do something else that keeps you hooked up with what is going on.

You do not have to get into some deep kind of prayer for the people being prayed over. The time for that was before the service, and the minister and others involved have surely prayed. It is amusing (for at least the first five seconds or so) to watch people who want to "help" the minister by stretching out their hands toward the sick and making a big commotion. If you really sense the need to pray, do so in a way that calls no attention to yourself.

Preachers sometimes make analogies between sporting events and church. “If you can hoot and holler at the ball game, why do you stand there like statues in church?” However, a Christian service is not a sporting event and it is not entertainment. (At least it is not supposed to be, even though some churches are using an “entertainment” model to draw people.) The type of wild shouting and cheering that might be in order at the ballpark may not be in order. There is a time and a place for cheering and even clapping, but the end of a prophetic word from the minister (or worse, the middle of it) is not the place for such. Be sensitive to the flow of the service and let the minister direct it. If the mood is not one of hooting and hollering, it is out of order for you to hoot and holler. On the other hand, if the ministry team is running the aisles screaming, go ahead and join them if you want.

Do not get up, leave, and come back in unless there is a dire emergency. If you are absolutely going to have an accident if you don’t get to a bathroom, go out and back in as discreetly as possible. Of course, you should arrive at the service in time to take care of such matters beforehand. Do not be like some folks who make “potty runs” just because they’re bored and want a break.

Jesus is the one doing the healing, so you should act as if Jesus were on the platform. Let that be your guide for conduct. Jesus is not a pickle-puss; you can rejoice in His presence. Be free, but don’t be disrespectful.

Aren’t the Gifts of the Spirit Solely up to the Will of God?

It is an error to assume that if God wants to do something through the gifts of the Spirit, He will just do them anyway. God commands us to desire spiritual gifts (1 Corinthians 14:1, 1 Corinthians 14:39) and covet earnestly these gifts (1 Corinthians 12:31). If we have nothing to do with it, these commands are meaningless and a waste of space.

We cannot dictate to God that He move in a certain way or do something spectacular for a certain individual. We can ask God to manifest Himself through the gifts of the Spirit in a general sense, leaving the details to Him.

It is possible to grieve the Holy Spirit so that He stops moving. For example, if the minister is prophesying and people are not paying attention, the Holy Spirit may stop speaking. God won’t waste people’s time if they won’t listen to Him. If people act as if they’re bored and want to go home, He may stop healing people through the gifts of healings. It is possible for the conduct of the crowd to rob people who still need to receive a blessing.

God will overlook the goofiness of a few individuals in the crowd. A few nut cases typically come out of the woodwork for this kind of meeting. Don’t worry about them. But if the majority of the crowd is “tuning out,” you can expect the anointing to stop manifesting.

We cannot make God move in a particular way through the gifts of the Spirit, but we can certainly stop Him!

God can overlook some quirks on the minister's part, too. That minister is not perfect any more than you are. Some things may be a matter of preference where he likes something that you don't like. Perhaps he wants an opera singer to sing to an orchestrated background CD before he speaks when you would rather have heard something by a certain Christian rock group that tries to sound like a Christian version of a certain secular rock group. Whatever helps the speaker is good for the service! Go with the flow! Perhaps the color of his suit screams "Hollywood!" to you but it is just his personal preference. Get over it! Perhaps he has a penchant for rhyming prophecies that you think that you could finish before he does, e.g., "God will do a work in your heart and He will give you a brand new _____. You will go forth in power in this final _____." Some even have prophecies for every new year, though I'm not convinced from Scripture that God does something new every year. If it were true that He did, it could still be a little arrogant to think that He is so America-centric that He always uses the American calendar as opposed to the Jewish calendar or the Chinese calendar. I can tell you confidently that God isn't going to do anything new that you need for your life this year. That's because He's already given you all things, every spiritual blessing (Ephesians 1:3) and everything that pertains to life and godliness (2 Peter 1:3-4), so there's nothing crucial left to "get" in any new year! He isn't holding back anything we need in ANY year waiting for a special "Kairos moment" in some future year (Romans 8:32)! Still, you can bet that there will be some rhyming "new year prophecies" that can be predicted in advance by those of us who have been around a few decades, e.g., "Things will be fun in xxx1. God will do something new in xxx2. We will get free in xxx3. There will be more in xxx4. The church will come alive in xxx5. Our problems He'll fix in xxx6. It will be like heaven in xxx7. Things will be great in xxx8. It will be divine in xxx9." The ministers are usually doing a lot of good otherwise and I can put up with a few predictable prophecies. (Because some churches shrink instead of grow for various reasons in a given year, I wonder to myself if any prophet prone to rhyming "new year prophecies" has ever visited such a church just before the new year and correctly predicted, "The sheep will run in xxx1. Your folks will be few in xxx2. People will flee in xxx3. They'll head for the door in xxx4. Attendance will dive in xxx5. Your vision they'll nix in xxx6. To other churches they're revvin' in xxx7. They'll run out the gate in xxx8. Your staff will resign in xxx9." I've never heard of such a case and I wouldn't hold my breath waiting for such a prophecy.)

The message is inevitably colored by the vessel. One minister might say, "Thus saith the Lord: I love thee" while another might say, "The Lord says He loves y'all!" while another might say, "These are the words of the Lord above, All of you I deeply _____." (You can finish it.) Look past the delivery to the message. You probably have a few quirks of your own, after all. You've probably figured out already that I do!

The minister may like a certain song and instruct the band to play that same song non-stop for an hour until you're tired of it. (I've been asked to do that when I've been on the piano.) If that helps him, it's fine, whether you like the song or not. God isn't nit-picky about such things. One well-known faith preacher wanted his singers and band to do Southern Gospel songs. One of the band members told me privately that he would personally prefer music that sounded more like Led Zeppelin, but he understood that his job as a helps minister was to help that preacher flow, and so Southern Gospel it was, every night! If you're a smart musician, you'll play what the preacher wants too, regardless of your personal preferences.

What if You Don't Feel Anything, or Aren't Instantly Healed?

Remember that it was a healing line, not a feeling line.

In some cases, you will feel something like an electric current going into you when hands are laid on you. It is possible that you will feel nothing at all. On the other hand, you may end up on the floor wondering what just happened to you. There's no way to tell in advance.

One of the biggest mistakes people make in healing lines is to assume that because they do not get an instant manifestation of healing or a massive "power shower," they must have missed it, or perhaps the minister just wasn't anointed this time. Like the ten lepers, you may be one of those who was "healed as they went" (Luke 17:12-19). The proper attitude is to believe that the anointing went into you (which you may or may not have felt) and to believe that God's power is continuing to work in your body.

I can picture some people saying, "Oh, come on, that's just a cop-out to get the healing minister off the hook. That way, when there's nothing there, you can pretend that something is there, as in that story about the Emperor's new clothes." Object if you wish, but I have been healed marvelously in cases where I noticed no change when I was prayed over! In a couple of cases, I got worse physically before I got an instant manifestation of healing later. But I still got it, and it was still God. If you go around affirming that you didn't get anything, you have dug up the seed that you have planted for your healing.

It is always proper to "believe that you received when you prayed" despite adverse circumstances after you pray. God says that we receive the promises through faith and patience (Hebrews 6:12) and that we have need of patience after we have done the will of God (Hebrews 10:35-36). If all healings were instantaneous, you would only need faith. There would be no need for patience.

Why should you believe that anything will change when you didn't notice any change when hands were laid on you? Because you should believe your Lord! He said that believers would lay hands on the sick and they would recover (Mark 16:18). If hands were laid on you, you should expect to recover because that is what Jesus Himself said you can expect! Jesus did not promise that each person would recover immediately. He said they would recover.

There will always be people who are unwilling to learn about faith from the Bible. Such people will live sad lives, going from healing service to healing service without getting healed. After they see no change when hands are laid on them, they will say, "See, it didn't work!" They expect the minister to do it all for them, and he can't. (He would if he could!)

It is the minister's responsibility to come to the meeting ready to flow in the Spirit, and to preach and teach accurately to help the people. It is his responsibility to be willing to make the anointing available to the sick through the laying on of hands.

It is your responsibility to believe for your healing when hands are laid on you. It is your responsibility to exercise faith and patience and receive God's promise. That is not the minister's responsibility! If only more people could see that!

Healing Flows in Regular Services

Sometimes the gifts of healings can start operating in a service at your church that was not designated as a healing service. When this happens, the comments made about healing services in this discussion apply to the part of the service that has become a "healing service." The service will sometimes go into a healing "flow" and then go into something else. It is important to respond right away if you need healing. This will help the service keep flowing. I have yet to figure out why so many people wait for someone else to go up first, knowing fully well that they need healing. Be bold, go down there and receive!

I have found in practical experience that communion services are a good time for people to receive healing, since people are commemorating the fact that Jesus' body was broken in their place so that their bodies do not have to endure the Law-stipulated physical punishment for sin.

The Best Way to be Healed

Thank God for healing services, but the best way to be healed is on your own with no help from anyone else. You don't have to wait for a healing service to receive your healing any more than a sinner needs to wait for an evangelistic crusade to get saved. Thank God for both kinds of services. But the best thing you can do is to build your faith for healing before you get sick! In case you haven't noticed, it's harder to study and pray when you have a temperature of 103° and you ache all over. It's also harder to get healed when you're already sick as a dog than it is to get healed when you sense the first symptom coming on you.

Healing is available to you anywhere, at any time, whenever you need it. God's ultimate best is for you to stay healthy so that you don't need to go to a healing service.

Don't Drag People to the Altar

Too often I've seen well-meaning people drag someone they care about to the altar. If they don't do it physically, they'll exhort the person, "Go up! Go up!" so that the person is embarrassed if he doesn't go up. Or else they'll call out in front of everybody, "Jimmy needs to go up!" It could be a call for salvation or a call for healing.

Although they are doing it from a genuine desire to see the person get saved or healed, pushing someone like that really does more harm than good. If someone responds out of embarrassment, he may not be in any mood to receive anything, as his actual main sentiment is anger against the pushy person, though he may not want to express that publicly at the moment.

There is a real danger that a person could repeat a sinner's prayer not from the heart but just out of a desire to please others, or from the motive, "If I just do this, this person will stop nagging me." I know this from personal experience. I repeated a "sinner's prayer" word for word because I knew that was what someone wanted. However, I was not saved by doing that! How could I have been unsaved when I had just confessed Jesus as Lord? Simple – it came from my head, not my heart. I knew in my heart that I didn't really mean it. Romans 10:9 says you have to believe with your heart, not just confess with your mouth. I confessed with my mouth but I didn't mean the words in my heart. Nothing happened. I was still just as much a sinner when I was done as when I started. (I did say similar things and actually mean them from the heart later, by the way!)

This has made me quite aware that there is the potential for false conversions when people are pressured into going forward. We don't want to see anyone go to hell or stay sick, but if a person is not ready to make a decision, it is better to wait until he is.

Likewise, if someone is not really ready to believe that he receives his healing when hands are laid on him, it is better for him to wait until he knows he will be in faith after he hears and reflects on the Word more. We sometimes get in a rush to "close the sale" by getting people to the altar for healing. But if they are properly instructed from the Word first, they will have a much better chance to get healed and stay healed. It will be harder to get someone to receive healing eventually if he just had the experience of going up and not getting anything because he didn't really know how divine healing is supposed to work.

Many of the successful old-time healing evangelists did exactly the opposite of rushing people to the altar. They would pass out "healing cards" to people who came to hear the Word for one or more services before they came up. You weren't even allowed in the healing line if you hadn't already been to such services to hear the Word preached about divine healing. The evangelists rightly did not want people to get in line with the attitude, "Oh, well, what have I got to lose; let's try this and just see if anything happens" because they knew such people were not going to receive anything – they weren't in faith. They wanted people's faith to be built from hearing the Word before they came forward.

I don't see anywhere in the gospels where Jesus begged and cajoled people to follow Him. If anything, He gave them opportunities to NOT follow Him. He would tell of the hardship that could be waiting if you followed Him. Consider His approach, which is the opposite of trying to beg people to come:

Matthew 8:19-20:

And a certain scribe came, and said unto him, Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest. And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

John 6:66-67:

From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him. Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away?

Jesus' response to the scribe was very different from saying, "Yes, follow me, and life will be super-easy for you from this moment forward." Jesus' response when many disciples left was very different from saying, "No, wait, come back! I promise I'll avoid that hard topic of eating my flesh and drinking my blood from now on. Sorry I offended you. You twelve who are left, please don't leave too."

If He didn't beg or push people, we should not do so either if we are walking in His steps.

Don't Play Doctor

Unless you are trained to practice natural medicine, don't do it! If you know some things about nutrition and medicine, it can be tempting as a preacher to try to help people along natural lines if you think you can. However, you could get sued or prosecuted for practicing medicine without a license, and the courts will side against you! If you stick to preaching the Word and laying hands on the sick in the name of Jesus, that is free exercise of religion and not practicing medicine without a license – at least based on court decisions at this writing in the United States.

Jesus never gave anyone instructions to cut their carbs, trans fats, cholesterol or anything else. That is not your business. Lay hands on people in faith and stay out of their personal affairs.

If you feel that you have a great personal regimen, it is still best not to preach to others that they should do whatever you do. Personally, I don't drink coffee, tea or caffeinated sodas because I want to be Holy Spirit-powered, not caffeine-powered. But if you want to drink caffeine, I'm not going to try to talk you out of it. I eat things like lobster that some diet experts claim you should never eat, and they may have good reasons for their advice. I'm sure that we all do something that someone out there thinks isn't healthy. I don't get caught up with the latest trends that tell us that eggs are good, no wait, they're bad, no wait, they're good again, and so on.

You may see someone in front of you and be tempted to say, "Lady, if you'd lose about 100 pounds, you probably wouldn't have the three problems you just cited," but I doubt that such advice would be appreciated. Jesus never gave out that kind of advice. He is our model. Such comments could get you into legal trouble for prescribing a non-spiritual cure. Besides, that person might have been 200 pounds overweight a year ago and be doing her best to lose more weight with God's help. Beware of condemning others! You can only look at the outside, but God sees the heart.

I think it's best to abstain from any remarks about a person's body. I learned this the hard way a long time ago when I congratulated a woman in the church I attended on her pregnancy. The problem was, she had just gained a large amount of weight in a short time and she wasn't pregnant. Oops! Now I always wait for people to tell ME of their pregnancies.

Remember that Jesus never said that we have to diagnose the sick. If you're not a doctor, don't play doctor. Don't tell a person with certain symptoms that they look like diabetic issues. Don't give natural advice that someone should try iodine pills, cod liver oil, or "nutraceutical" supplements. You don't have to know what's wrong with someone and you don't need to offer medical advice. Believe the Word and lay your hands on the person in faith in the name of Jesus. This will keep you from having a new prison ministry (from the inside).

To me, it is even worse to have a minister sell nutraceuticals on the side at his book table to supplement his income so that he can afford to eat after the umpteenth church in a row gave him a chintzy offering. I don't see Jesus or His disciples doing that, but I do see where Jesus went on a table-turning rampage because people were making God's house a house of merchandise. I think it would send the wrong message for me to preach divine healing and then offer Mark Ituyu's Power Powder to boost people's immune systems while boosting my income (and the incomes of those in my "upline" in my multi-level marketing organization). My rule as a pastor was that no one could try to sell multi-level marketing products to people at church. The sheep are not potential customers or "downline" fillers. I've seen too much potential for abuse as ministers use their influence to try to get others to enrich them by getting "under" them in a multilevel scheme. I'm not saying that anyone involved in such things is evil; someone I respect does it and he makes quite a bit of money that way. But I've seen a lot of abuse over the years where there was an unwritten expectation that people would support the pastor by being in his sales organization, and he ended up with most or all of the church "under" him. That's not for me, because I always hated the implicit pressure when someone in the church, which has included a pastor and associate pastor over the years, tried to get me into his multi-level "downline." I try to NOT do to others what I want them to NOT do to me.

I knew a minister personally who sold various nutraceuticals on the side. I suppose his idea was, "If one is good, more is better." So he took a whole bunch of them one night and he almost died. He told me that he honestly didn't think he'd be around to see the sun rise the next morning. He was facing some physical issues, but he should have been the first to believe God and receive healing rather than trying to play doctor on himself. If you decide that you need medical help through natural means, you should go see a real doctor.

I find it hard to believe that God, who made man and everything else "very good" (Genesis 1:31), designed us so that we can never be in optimum health unless we take some kind of new pill that costs a fortune with ingredients that were only discovered in the last decade or two. While I don't like all those "Ask your doctor if Zyzzyxa is right for you" ads, it would make sense to ask your doctor about a certain supplement that is pitched to you before you blindly accept the claims about it, especially when the pill bottle says that the product has not been evaluated by the Food and Drug Administration and is not intended to diagnose, treat, cure or prevent any disease. (I always ask myself, "If it doesn't diagnose, treat, cure or prevent any disease, what good is it?")

Finally, if you were to ever tell someone that he doesn't need his medicine anymore because he's healed (which you should NEVER do anyway), that IS practicing medicine without a license, which is ILLEGAL. Leave any decisions related to medicine to REAL doctors and preach the gospel!

The Defeated One

“Satan has been really working me over lately. He has overcome me with panic attacks. He has stolen my money and my health. You all better remember me in your prayers!”

It would be useful to refer to Satan as The Defeated One or The One from Whose Kingdom I Have Been Delivered before giving some testimonies. It would change how they sound.

“The Defeated One has been really working me over lately. The Defeated One has overcome me with panic attacks. The One from Whose Kingdom I Have Been Delivered has stolen my money and my health. You all better remember me in your prayers!”

I think the nature of their prayers would change to, “Lord, please let this dear person get a grip on what Christ has already done about the devil!”

This kind of substitution would ruin a lot of different prayers. “Let’s get on our knees and do spiritual warfare to defeat The Defeated One. Let’s pray to roll back the powers of The One from Whose Kingdom I Have Been Delivered. What I’m doing is really making The Defeated One mad, so I need more “prayer covering” so that the One from Whose Kingdom I Have Been Delivered does not overpower me and eat my lunch. Please pray that the Defeated One will be unable to defeat me.”

Now that I’ve gotten you started, I’m sure that you can come up with your own equally ridiculous examples.

It is amazing how many Christians exercise more faith in the devil and his power than in God and His power. Let me give you an illustration to see whether you fall into this category.

Suppose you are sick. Of how much use do you think it would be if you said the following out of your mouth? “Lord, I present my body to you as a living sacrifice. Have Your way in my body! Strengthen it with your life-giving power. I affirm that I am healed by the stripes of Jesus. I confess that I will LIVE!” If you’re like most Christians, you would think, “Well, that might help, but I’m not totally sure that it would change anything.”

Now suppose you are well. Of how much detriment do you think it would be if you said the following out of your mouth? “Satan, I present my body to you as a living sacrifice. Have your way in my body! Kill it with your death-giving power. I deny that I am healed by the stripes of Jesus. I confess that I will DIE!” If you are like most Christians, you would think, “Horrors! Satan would surely take advantage of that and I’d die a quick untimely death for sure!”

Which gets to my point – if you are like most Christians, you have more faith in Satan and his ability to work his will in you than you do in God and His ability to work His will in you. Something is very, very wrong with that! Why can you put more trust in a renegade liar than in God who cannot lie? If you can trust The Defeated One to work his will (sickness) in your body, surely you should be able to trust God – the very One who defeated Satan – to work His will (divine health) in your body!

How to Deal with the Devil

See Him for What He Is

The devil never was and never will be an evil counterpart of God. Satan is a created being just like the angels Michael and Gabriel. He has power, but he is way below God in the scheme of things. God is omnipotent, omniscient, and omnipresent. The devil is none of these. If you are a Christian, he has no right whatsoever to exercise any of his power against you unless you open your mouth and give him the opportunity to do it by speaking things about yourself that contradict God's Word.

Satan is not omnipotent. If he were, he would have overthrown God and taken over heaven a long time ago. His ability in your life is limited to what you allow Him to do. He will be tormented day and night forever in the lake of fire (Revelation 20:10). He if were omnipotent, he would be able to get out.

Satan is not omniscient. He cannot read your mind. He only knows what you're thinking when you're foolish enough to sit there listening to his thoughts, or when you speak your thoughts. If he had any idea what he was doing, he would never have incited the mob to demand Jesus' crucifixion. Look where that got him! Satan is a fallen angel, and angels do not know when Jesus is coming back (Matthew 24:36). 1 Peter 1:12 says that angels long to look into the gospel, so you have a better understanding of it than they do. So you have more insight into the Word than the devil does, even if he might be able to quote more of it. Ephesians 3:10 says that the church will make the manifold wisdom of God known to the principalities and powers. That means that they don't know all of the manifold wisdom of God yet. So obviously, there is plenty that Satan doesn't know. Even his cohorts the psychics can only know what he tells them, and then many of these future events will only happen if you submit yourself to him by believing his psychics. Satan does not know everything about the future. He has the advantage of being in the spirit realm and being able to see some things coming. But your choices determine your future for you, at least to a large extent, and Satan can't control your choices. He can only pressure you to make wrong choices.

Satan is not omnipresent. He walks to and fro on the earth (Job 1:7, Job 2:2). He cannot be in more than one place at one time any more than Michael or Gabriel can be at more than one place at one time. He will never "fill all things" as Jesus does (Ephesians 4:9-10). For all eternity Satan will be physically confined to the lake of fire and will not be anywhere else.

When we "resist the devil," we are actually resisting his wicked spirits because Satan himself will most likely not have time to pay you a personal visit. He's sort of like the mythical Santa Claus. He can't be at all the shopping malls at the same time. So when a kid asks how this can be, his parents often explain, "Santa has a lot of helpers." That is how it is with Satan and his helpers. He isn't everywhere, but he has helpers who do his bidding on the earth. (I am not recommending that you lie to your children about Santa Claus, by the way. If you do, they may wonder how old they have to be before you tell them that there is no Jesus either.)

Deal with Him as a Defeated Enemy

Jesus defeated Satan for you. He stripped him and his principalities of their power, triumphing over them openly (Colossians 2:15). All angels and powers are subject to Christ (1 Peter 3:22). Jesus has all authority in heaven and earth (Matthew 28:18). Do the math. If Jesus has all authority, how much is left over for the devil? You have been delivered from Satan's power (Colossians 1:12-14). Jesus, not the devil, holds the keys of death and hell (Revelation 1:18). His atoning death has judged Satan already (John 12:31). The Greater One lives in you, so you have already overcome the antichrist spirits that are in the world (1 John 4:1-4). You have overcome the devil (1 John 2:13-14).

Ephesians 1:15-23

You sit with Christ in heavenly places (Ephesians 2:6), far above all principality, power, might, dominion, and every name that is named. God has put all things under His feet. Jesus is the head. Where are His feet? On the earth, of course. Jesus, the head, is in heaven, and His Body (the Church) is on the earth. Feet are part of someone's body, not part of his head. You don't have feet growing out of your head, do you? So guess what? If all things are under His feet, they are under your feet because you are part of Christ's body. Do you see that? Satan and all his principalities are under your feet. They have no right to rule over you or affect you in any way. They cannot "stop revival" because they are powerless to do so when the Church rises up and acts on the Word. They do not have to be defeated in prayer – because they are already defeated!

Don't fight Satan! The fight is over. Jesus fought him and won, and you have the victory with Him. You are called to enforce Jesus' victory over the devil, not to win the victory. Don't fight for a victory that's already yours!

Ephesians 4:27 says not to give the devil an opportunity. That shows that it's up to you to stop him. God promises that if you resist him, he will flee (James 4:7). God commands you to resist the devil, so it is your responsibility, not God's, to do so. Your faith can overcome all the attacks of the wicked one (Ephesians 6:16). Your faith is the victory that overcomes the world (1 John 5:4).

The Name of Jesus

God gave Jesus the name that is above every name. All things everywhere must bow at that name (Philippians 2:9-11). This passage is widely misinterpreted to be talking about some day in the sweet by and by when every knee will bow to Jesus. That isn't at all what this passage says! This passage is talking about the sweet now and now, and it does not say that anything will bow before Jesus anyway! Read it carefully. Paul said that everything must bow at the name of Jesus!

Who uses the name of Jesus? One thing is for sure, Jesus Himself doesn't use His name. Jesus bought your victory for you and sat down at the right hand of God. He is not visiting the earth and using His name. Believers use His name. Jesus said that in His name we would do many things, including casting out demons and laying hands on the sick (Mark 16:17-18). Peter told the lame man at the gate Beautiful to rise and walk in the name of Jesus. Then he said that His name, through faith in His name, had healed him. (See Acts 3:1-16.) See The Power in the Name of Jesus for more about this topic.

How to Resist the Devil

The devil never shows up with a red suit, horns and a tail, eating deviled eggs, deviled ham and devil's food cake and saying, "Hi, I'm the devil. I'm here to steal, kill and destroy." Instead, the devil and his cohorts use lying thoughts to try to get you out of God's will and into sin. The battleground is your mind, and you decide who wins. As far as God's concerned, you have the tools to win right now, but you have to use them. Your mind, not the stratosphere, is the arena where you "wrestle" against wicked spirits.

Do not argue with the devil. Speak the Word to him and command him to leave you alone. Your own thoughts, apart from God's, will be ineffective. The devil's realm is reason. He's been defeated in the spirit realm; that is why he can't take you on there. He has to try to win his victory in the mental realm. That is why you MUST "renew your mind" (Romans 12:2) with God's Word. God's Word is your defensive armor against the devil's mind games.

God's Weapons

Ephesians 6:10-18

Your "weapons" all concern the Word of God – in particular, who you are in Christ. You use the Word to run the devil off just as Jesus did (Luke 4:3-12). Confess who you are in Christ, not what the devil says. Notice especially that Paul did not tell you to "pray against the devil." He told you to "pray for all saints." There is a difference! The silly idea of trying to make ruling spirits leave cities using these weapons (5 out of 6 of which are defensive) is covered under How NOT to Deal with the Devil.

There are many other absurd ideas based on this passage. One is that you must "spiritually dress" yourself every morning with the full armor of God. Well, I suppose you need to if you took it off the night before. Actually, this is not talking about any kind of mystical spiritual force field around you. To put on God's armor is to renew your mind with His Word concerning your salvation. It is not some strange spiritual ritual that you must practice in prayer so that the devil won't get you. You don't have to try to "see" a belt of truth around your waist – you know the truth, and the truth makes you free (John 8:32). You don't have to "see" a breastplate of righteousness on you – you have to know that you are the "righteousness of God in Christ" (2 Corinthians 5:21) when Satan tries to condemn you and make you feel like an unworthy little worm.

The point Paul is making is that instead of natural weapons, you use spiritual weapons against the devil. In modern-day terms, he is saying, “Take the bulletproof vest of righteousness and the automatic assault rifle of the Word of God (and so on).” There is no deep spiritual significance to the placement and meaning of each piece, so don’t get too carried away. In 1 Thessalonians 5:8, you are told to “put on the breastplate of faith and love.” Oops. Guess you hyper-spiritual folks will have to “put on” and wear two breastplates every morning, because the Ephesians 6 model is “righteousness,” and the 1 Thessalonians 5 model is “faith and love.” For the rest of you, realize that Paul is speaking allegorically!

2 Corinthians 10:3-5

Here we see that God’s weapons cast down imaginings and bring thoughts into captivity. That is because thoughts are the devil’s weapons. These thoughts can become strongholds in people’s minds. (That is the kind of stronghold Paul is talking about, not demonic strongholds in the air over cities.) It is the gospel, which is “the power of God unto salvation” (Romans 1:16), that has the power to destroy the mind games of the devil in people’s lives. The things we destroy by sharing the gospel are those thoughts (propagated by devils) that exalt themselves against the knowledge of God.

I am not saying that there are no demonic powers over cities. I am saying that they are already defeated and powerless as far as the Church is concerned. Their strongholds are not in the air over cities but in people’s minds. Because they are defeated, they cannot stop revival or any part of the work of God with brute force. Their only strategy is deception. If they can deceive the minds of men on the earth, they can get those men to cooperate with them to resist the gospel. The Word of God is alive and active and destroys the strongholds in people’s minds that these evil principalities plant. They have no effective counter-weapon to God’s Word when it is preached. God’s Word is unstoppable. Paul said that the Word of God is not bound (2 Timothy 2:9)! It runs very swiftly (Psalm 147:15).

It is not necessary to make these defeated principalities and powers leave an area to have God move there. It is also unnecessary to “defeat” them. Jesus Christ already did that! You can walk in His victory over them. You can go ahead and have revival right under their noses because they are powerless to stop it! If we are honest with ourselves, we must admit that we, not the defeated demonic powers, are the real hindrances to revival! If we sow the Word of God, that Word will produce a harvest!

Turn on the Light!

If you’re in a dark room, you can “come against” this present darkness for a while to try to light things up, or you can turn on a light. Which makes more sense? It’s the same in “dark” areas. You don’t bring light to a dark area by “coming against” darkness; you bring the light, which in this case is the Word. Darkness in and of itself is not a spiritual force or a substance; it’s merely the absence of light. There is no such thing as an unlight from which darkness can unshine (the unbrightness of the unlight being expressed in the unlight’s uncandlepower). Satan’s kingdom thrives on darkness, but the light of the Word undoes Satan’s attempts to keep people in the dark.

Respect Him

What? Respect the enemy of your soul? Yes! I'm not saying to make friends with him, but you must give him respect, since he has a right to be here. Do not use railing accusations against him. There is no point in talking to him anyway, unless you are going to do what Jesus did and speak the Word of God to him when he tempts you. According to Jude 8-9 and 2 Peter 2:10-11, it is wrong to insult and rail at the devil and his principalities.

How NOT to Deal with the Devil

Follow these simple practices to ensure that you will live in constant harassment from the devil. Those already following these procedures can attest to this.

Fight Him!

This is probably the best method of ensuring defeat. Put the devil on notice that you will fight him as hard as you can. He will be pleased to hear this from you rather than hearing that Jesus already defeated him for you and that you have authority over him in Jesus' name. Act like you are in a great battle rather than believing that the fight is over and that Jesus won it for you. Fight the devil instead of fighting the good fight of faith (1 Timothy 6:12). Crank up the "militant praise" music and let the warfare begin!

"Come Against" Him

Simply repeat the prayer, "Devil, I come against you in the name of Jesus." Or substitute any other spirit you want. "We come against you, you spirit of _____ (insert your favorite spirit here) in the name of Jesus." The devil has no idea what "coming against" him is (and neither do you), but as long as you don't actually issue any direct commands to him, he will be content to let you "come against" him as long as you want. Do not follow the examples of Jesus and the apostles, who simply made demons leave because they were too old-fashioned to pray a "we come against you" prayer.

Pray at the Devil in Tongues

Use your prayer language to speak mysteries in the spirit to the devil. After rebuking him in English, unleash a quick barrage of "fear tongues" at him to make sure that he doesn't get back at you for it. The devil enjoys it when you pray to him in any language, since the Bible nowhere tells you to pray to the devil.

Make Principalities Leave Your City!

Waste as much time as possible in prayer against demonic strongholds over your city, thinking that you are doing some great thing that will precipitate revival. Be sure to tell every principality to leave your municipality. Since you assume that they'll go somewhere, maybe you can suggest a nearby city with fewer praying people, so that they won't send them back over to your city. Since you have this wonderful revelation of being able to make wicked spirits leave geographical areas, next command the ruling spirit over your entire state or province to leave. Then command the ruling spirit over your country to leave. Then command the ruling spirit over your continent to leave. Then command the ruling spirit over your hemisphere to leave. Finally, command the biggest ruling spirit of all, Satan, to leave the planet entirely. See if he will give up his legal right to be here (courtesy of Adam) in response to your commands. Maybe his less knowledgeable cohorts will give up their legal rights to be here, too.

This will show that you know more than Jesus or His apostles, since none of them ever commanded a demon to leave an area. (They only cast spirits out of people because they didn't have as much revelation as you have.) It will also give the spirits involved, at least the ones that really exist, a good laugh, which they could use because their final doom is getting closer every day.

Pray fervently and repeatedly for the darkness to leave, rather than bringing in the light (by sharing the gospel), which wipes out darkness automatically.

Be aware that if you don't organize 24/7 prayer, the devil may sneak back into the area at 2 A.M. if no one has covered that non-enviable time slot at the local Talk Around the Clock Prayer Center. This would undo the rest of the day's "we bind you Satan" prayers. At least that's what one preacher tried to assure me. (Seriously.) This is a good way of focusing on our own works instead of Jesus' finished work. A few times, I've visited a certain city where they've had 24/7 prayer and worship going on for many years, and I've been warned not to go into parts of that city after dark if I valued my life. (I've mused what might have changed on the streets there if 24/7 evangelism were going on instead, but that would only be my speculation.)

Pray Him Away from Your Church, Yourself and Others

Don't just bind spirits over your city. Before every service, pray a "we bind you Satan" prayer to make sure that the devil does not attend your church services or even share the same room or area with you. Do this despite the fact that Satan spoke through Peter while he was right there with Jesus, who obviously didn't know you could pray such a prayer to keep Satan out of your immediate vicinity. In fact, Jesus didn't have the modern "revelation" that you can "bind" Satan from entering the room with a prayer, because Satan entered into Judas Iscariot in the same room where Jesus shared a Passover meal with His disciples (John 13:27)! Paul didn't even have a revelation that you needed to bind the devil in that manner, seeing as he never exhorted any of the churches to do it. It would certainly be nice to "bind" the devil from tempting you at all. Too bad Jesus didn't know that trick, as it could have prevented Satan from tempting Him! But since you do have this revelation, spend time binding the devil every day, the idea being that even though Jesus has already delivered you from the power of darkness (Colossians 1:13), you need these constant prayers to keep his kingdom from tormenting you. If you get good enough at binding, maybe you can bind Satan from working through whomever many Christians are sure is the Antichrist this year.

Pray through the Demon Layer

Determine that the demons that stopped Daniel's prayers under the Old Covenant won't stop yours! Pray and pray until you feel like you have broken through all the above-mentioned principalities (the ones you haven't banished to Jupiter yet). Wait for a feeling that tells you that God has finally heard your prayer. Avoid any Bible statements about God living in you or being seated with Christ in the heavenly places, as this might nullify your faith in the demons' ability to stop your prayer from reaching God or His answer from reaching you.

Insult Him

Rail on the devil for being a low-down, no good, rotting, stinking, cheating, hypocritical, filthy, perverted, lying rip-off artist. The more epithets you sling at him, the better he will like it. He will enjoy the fact that you have not read or acted on Jude 8-9 or 2 Peter 2:10-11. Besides, he doesn't think there's any such thing as bad attention as long as you're not wielding the name of Jesus! He'd rather that you concentrate on him than on Jesus.

Ignore Jude, who didn't have your new revelation about this, and act as "macho" as you can with the devil. He will appreciate the fact that the time you spend insulting him is not being used for any productive purpose.

Praise God at the Devil

Rather than using your praise to please and honor God, use it as a tool by “praising God at the devil.” Sing to Satan! You could start with some “militant praise” songs about following God’s command to Joshua to take the land. (Bring your AK-47 because God told Joshua to kill all the inhabitants while taking the land.) “Use your praise” to “open heaven” above you, so that your prayers don’t get stopped by the demon layer (see above). You do want to “minister under an open heaven,” don’t you? (Actually, Jesus opened heaven as far as you’re concerned, but you don’t want to consider that right now.) Whatever you do, make sure that you think more about the devil than you think about God. This is important, because if you focus on being in God’s presence, you might forget about the devil for a while. Instead, focus on being in the devil’s presence, and forget about God for a while.

Better still, leave God completely out of it and sing one of those modern “worship” songs that addresses the devil directly instead of God. Raising your hands and closing your eyes when you do this makes it even nicer (for the devil). I was even required to watch a video once of a large crowd of people raising their hands and closing their eyes while singing to the devil. Since that’s practically “Satan worship” for all intents and purposes, Satan will receive the attention gladly if you follow suit.

Give Whiny Devilmonies in Church

Declare to your brothers and sisters in Christ how big and bad you think the devil is. This will inspire them to have faith in the devil equal to yours. “The devil is making me sick!” “The devil is keeping my money away!” “The devil really has me depressed.” Continually confess what you are allowing the devil to do to you so that others may allow him to do the same things.

Pretend He Isn’t There

Just stick your head in the sand and ignore him, hoping he’ll go away on his own, rather than watching out for him and actively resisting him as you are commanded to do in 1 Peter 5:8-9 and James 4:7.

Pray to God about the Devil

Rather than resisting the devil yourself so that he will flee from you (James 4:7), ask God to make the devil go away! (To play it safe, don’t tithe to your church, just to be sure that Malachi 3:10-11 can’t possibly apply to you.)

Become More Devil-Conscious than God-Conscious

Be sure to pay more attention to “this present darkness” than you do to “this present Jesus,” “this present Holy Spirit,” “this present victory,” “this present anointing” or “these present angels.” Ignore John’s statement that you have already overcome opposing spirits (1 John 4:4). Instead of thinking on things that are “true, noble, just, pure, lovely, of good report, virtuous, praiseworthy” (Philippians 4:8), spend your time thinking about Satan and his demons, who are liars, ignoble, unjust, impure, ugly, of bad report, sinful and criticismworthy.

Blame the Devil for Everything

When you get a flat tire, rebuke that flat tire demon. Then be sure to buy new tires, since experience shows that new tires have a spiritual force field around them that repels flat tire demons. Be sure to blame the devil when you bang your finger with a hammer or get a smaller income tax return than you expected. Constantly acknowledge his presence in your life so that he will feel at home with you. Talk with him frequently; he enjoys conversing with Christians who allow him to do so.

YOU Do Something about It

You have authority over Satan. God always assigns authority and responsibility together. YOU are responsible for using your authority over Satan. If you don't use your authority, nothing will happen and nothing will change. God has already done everything about the devil that needs to be done for you. God is not supposed to do anything about the devil under the New Covenant. YOU have to do something about him based on what God has already done.

Sickness is the oppression of the devil. Because you have authority over the devil, you have authority over his works, which include sickness.

Casting Out the Spirit of Stupidity

Alternate Title: Getting rid of stupid and unbiblical ideas about demons.

In some circles, demons are held responsible for everything from gluttony to bad breath. People in these groups spend a lot of time casting nonexistent demons out of each other. Generally, if these 1171 people gave God half as much glory and attention as they give the devil and his demons, they would be spiritual giants. Beware.

Most of the time they try to “cast out” the flesh, and you can’t do it. If only you could! You have to walk in the Spirit to avoid catering to the lusts of the flesh (Galatians 5:16). It’s not something someone can do for you on a one-shot basis at a “deliverance service.”

Jesus did not “heal” fat people by casting out the spirit of gluttony. There is no such thing. You will not find a spirit of gluttony anywhere in the Bible. You just have to dominate your flesh. There is no quick fix.

There are sometimes spectacular “manifestations” at meetings such as people “throwing up demons.” It pretty much comes down to this: Give the devil a stage, and he’ll perform. Jesus did not hand out “barf bags” to people whom He delivered from evil spirits. If you don’t see something in your Bible, avoid it. Unwitting Christians can open themselves up to real demonic manifestations at such meetings.

Most Christians do not need deliverance – they just need to quit listening to the devil. There’s a difference. The devil tempts everyone, but he does not “demonize” everyone. Some people use “The devil made me do it” as a lame excuse for sin. The devil is defeated. He cannot make you do anything. You can overcome any temptation (1 Corinthians 10:13).

There is a lot of weird teaching about demons out there! You do NOT need to buy material from someone who hangs out with witches so that you know what the witches are up to. If there’s anything you need to know, the Holy Spirit will tell you, but there probably isn’t, given that no witchcraft is effective against a Christian who knows the Word anyway. I know of a church that hosted a 10-day “deliverance seminar” with material that was not in Bible. They actually told people when they went in that what they teach is not in the Bible! That is supposedly why you need their seminar – you can only get this teaching from them. We should thank God that you can’t get it anywhere else; any sensible Christian would run out the door as soon as they revealed that their methods are beyond the Bible. You see, the Bible itself contains everything you need for your Christian walk to equip you for all good works, including deliverance (2 Timothy 3:16-17). You do not need anything beyond the Bible. It is OK to have a seminar to reveal Bible truths, but beware of anything “more advanced” than the Bible – there isn’t anything!

If I could cast a spirit of stupidity out of people who get involved with some of this stuff, I would. But Jesus never cast a spirit of stupidity out of anyone – “dumb” spirits were what we would call “mute” spirits, not spirits of stupidity.

There is this certain foolishness that it takes 4 hours to cast out a demon using a special method you have to learn in a seminar that prevents inter-demon communication, among other things. (I wish I were making this up!) I don't see Jesus taking 4 hours to cast out each demon, do you? I don't see Jesus employing special prayers to prevent demons from talking to each other. Jesus said that you would do the works that He did, so why would you want to do works that He never did?

I am not minimizing the fact that demons can and do talk to Christians to try to influence them to divorce their mates, kill themselves, and all kinds of other things. The solution to this is the Word, which is our armor (see Ephesians 6:10-18 and 2 Corinthians 10:3-5). It is up to you to resist the devil (James 4:7, 1 Peter 5:8-9) and to give him no place in your life (Ephesians 4:27). You have authority over him (Luke 10:17-20). Use it!

Paper Roadblocks to Healing

Imagine driving down the highway and encountering a line of roadblocks that force you to get off at an exit that doesn't go where you're going. Then imagine your irritation when you find out that someone with no authority put those roadblocks up, and they were actually made of paper. They were just painted to look like the real thing. You could have just nudged them out of the way and kept going if you had only known that they were fake. Instead, you got off the road and didn't get to your destination.

The devil has invented a number of paper roadblocks to healing. You can just mow them down and drive on and get your healing, unless you're convinced that they're real. Then you will stop yourself from walking in the light of what's yours.

“Bound Sins”

According to this line of teaching, if someone else has unforgiveness toward you, they are binding a sin to you, and this can hurt you and hinder you from receiving from God. This is supposedly supported by Jesus' statement in John 20:23: “Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained.” If the other person continues to “retain” your sins, you are supposedly penalized, and you'll have trouble receiving from God. Hah!

Was Jesus really saying that you can make someone else pay the penalty for his sins by not forgiving him? This would be contrary to everything else taught in the New Testament. God has washed you clean with the blood of Jesus. Jesus has already taken all the penalties for all your sins. God cannot force you to bear these penalties again just because someone else won't forgive you. The person who is in unforgiveness opens himself up to the devil and paves the way for destruction in his own life, not yours. He is only hurting himself.

If we believe that someone else can get in the way of your healing through his unforgiveness, we have established a new priesthood between you and God. But the only priest you have is Jesus, your High Priest. Under the New Covenant, we are all kings and priests (Revelation 1:6, Revelation 5:10). No one else can stand between you and God.

Your pastor (or rector, or priest, or whatever your group calls him) does not mediate between you and God. Under the New Covenant, Jesus is the only mediator between God and men (1 Timothy 2:5). You still need a pastor. But that pastor is responsible to God to care for, lead and protect the congregation. He does not stand in an Old Testament-style priestly position. The man is on the same level as you as far as his standing in Christ. He is equipped by the Spirit to serve a specific function in the Body of Christ. Even if he doesn't forgive you (he should know better), that can't interfere with your own walk with God.

So, what was Jesus saying? I believe the point was that the disciples were entrusted with the message of eternal salvation. If they would publish it, people would believe and be forgiven. If they would hold back, the sins of those people would not be forgiven. This applies today as well. If no one tells a person about forgiveness of sins, that person will not believe, not be forgiven, and be lost forever. However, this cannot apply to people who are already believers.

Although you can't ruin someone else's life with your unforgiveness, your forgiveness can affect someone else. According to 1 John 5:16, you can hold off trouble from someone who is sinning (to some extent) by asking God to forgive that person. If you are in unforgiveness toward that person, you can hurt him only to the extent that you do not pray for him this way. If the person willfully persists in sin for a long time, eventually Galatians 6:7-8 will come into play and he will reap corruption. This is a spiritual law that no amount of prayer can set aside. We also see that an UNBELIEVER who calls for church elders won't have his sins held against him when elders pray the prayer of faith for his healing (James 5:15). (If he were a believer, that would not apply because all his sins would ALREADY be forgiven, as proved by many other Scriptures.)

Generational Curses

Another fallacy is that a curse on your family (or handed down from your family) could stop you from getting your healing. That is sheer nonsense; Jesus redeemed you from all curses when you were born again. Once you are saved, you are free from any curse from your ancestors' sins and freed from perpetuating their conduct (1 Peter 1:18-19). Your spiritual lineage is now very simple – God is your Father, and He does not have any curse on Him!

I could go on at length, but to keep this particular topic shorter, I have expanded on this in a separate discussion entitled Breaking Generational Curses?

Prior Occult Involvement

I used to be involved in the occult before I was born again. I renounced everything to do with it when I gave my life to Jesus Christ and I have never done anything occult since then. (Why should I when I have something far better now?) Yet some believers tried to tell me that I needed special ministry to break some supposed curse that would linger over my life even as a Christian because of my prior occult involvement. One fellow even took it upon himself to do some special little ritual for me involving making scissor-like motions over my head to supposedly sever my spiritual ties to the occult. I'm glad no one was watching; it was ridiculous. All this proves is that some people have more faith in the devil than in the cleansing blood of Jesus Christ.

When you are born again, sin has no dominion over you (Romans 6:14). You are delivered from the power (authority) of darkness and brought into the kingdom of God's Son (Colossians 1:12-14). Well, are you delivered or aren't you? Yes, you are. You need no special ritual or prayer to get something you already have as a believer – total deliverance from Satan and all his works in your life.

Hexes

If a witch decides to curse you, can that stop you from getting healed? Your answer is correct. I haven't even heard your answer, but it's correct. If you say that it can, it can. If you say that it can't, it can't. Of course, I prefer that you would say what God says – that you are delivered from Satan's power.

Colossians 1:13 says that you were delivered, so it is a colossal mistake to think you need to do something to "get" delivered from Satan's power. God promises that a curse without cause shall not come (Proverbs 26:2). There is no cause for a curse on a righteous man whose standing with God has been secured by the blood of Jesus. This is probably why Satan hates talk about the blood of Jesus. If you know that you're blood-washed and clean before God, you know that no curse has any right to affect you. The evil occultist Naaman, after he was hired to curse Israel, had to admit, "There is no enchantment against Jacob, neither is there any divination against Israel" (Numbers 23:23). In other words, witchcraft doesn't work against God's people!

However, I have met people who have gotten all upset over curses (actual or threatened) by witches. They panic and think "What will I do now?" Laughter over the devil's empty threat would be appropriate. As part of Abraham's covenant of which you are an heir (Galatians 3:14), God will bless those who bless you and curse those who curse you (Genesis 12:3). Whatever the witch says will come back on his own head, not on yours!

I preached for a pastor in a city that was known as a regional center for the occult. Without any knowledge of what had happened, I preached one of the most unusual sermons of my life, entitled, "What to do if (name of head witch) Tries to Put a Curse on You." Basically, the idea was that you could laugh it off and tell her that she could curse away, because the more she cursed, the sooner she would be out of business because the curse would come back on her like a boomerang. I found out after the service that earlier that week, the head witch actually had called the pastor and told him to get out of town, or else she would put a curse on him and his church would close. The pastor heeded my message and stood his ground despite her threat of a curse. The pastor was never affected as far as I know. However, the witch's family was constantly having catastrophes, so much so that one of her former followers left because she noticed how many bad things seemed to follow the witch around! Touching God's anointed is dangerous for the person doing the touching, not for God's anointed! God is merciful, but if you don't repent of some things, you will reap what you sow eventually.

The devil has no authority whatsoever over a Christian unless the Christian hands it to him. The two ways you can do this are deliberate sin (which puts you in Satan's playground) and wrong speaking with your mouth (which authorizes Satan to act). No curse can affect you in any way – unless you agree with your mouth that it can. Then you have authorized the devil to act. He does not have the authority to do anything to you. His game is for you to use your own authority against yourself by agreeing with him!

I am not saying that witches do not have any abilities. Read about what the Egyptian sorcerers in Exodus did (Exodus 7:10-12), and you'll see that there is such a thing as occult power. I know from experience before I became a Christian that occult power is real. I am saying that witches do not have any power over Christians.

All Hell Breaking Loose against You

First, all hell never breaks loose against you. You aren't enough of a threat yourself that all the demons will be called off everyone else to get you. Second, even if all hell did break loose against you, you have authority over all the power of the enemy and nothing shall by any means hurt you (Luke 10:17-20). From the standpoint of authority, you are seated with Christ in heavenly places, far above all demons (Ephesians 2:6, Ephesians 1:15-23). The name of Jesus makes every knee bow (Philippians 2:9-11). Therefore, no amount of attack from the devil excuses defeat. Satan cannot defeat you without your cooperation.

The premise of the "all hell" thing here is that if enough of Satan's forces come against you, they can defeat you. That is totally contrary to the Bible, which states that all of his forces were stripped of their power by Jesus' work on the cross (Colossians 2:15). The devil cannot defeat a Christian. He is the defeated one. You can only defeat yourself with wrong thinking and wrong speaking. If you keep saying how big and bad the devil is and how you think that all hell is breaking loose against you, you are unwittingly authorizing an attack with your mouth.

Sadly, even ministers of the gospel (maybe especially ministers) use this as an excuse for not walking in victory, bellyaching about their "special" trials they encounter because they are ministers. This proves only ignorance because ministers do not get temptations that are any different from the ones laymen encounter. This is proved by 1 Corinthians 10:13, which states clearly that any temptation you encounter is "common to man." Even if there were "special" temptations, that would still be no excuse to be defeated, because there is always a way of escape to avoid falling into any temptation (see 1 Corinthians 10:13 again).

No number of demons can ever stop your faith in the Word of God from working. The number of them "coming against you" is irrelevant.

Principalities in the Heavens

A similar line of thought is that there are demons in the air trying to stop your answer from coming through to you, and that some kind of special prayer must bust through the demon layer for you to get your healing or whatever else you need. People usually use Daniel 10:12-13 to support this, where the angel sent with his answer was apparently detained by demonic opposers.

That may have been true in the Old Testament, where Daniel, on the earth and with no direct authority over the devil, could only wait the 21 days for his answer. It does not apply under the New Testament, where you are seated with Christ far above any demons that happen to be around. If you are seated with Christ in heavenly places, and you need something he provided, how many demons does your answer have to pass through? None! Your body may be on the earth, but you rule and reign over the devil and sit with Christ in heaven.

Also consider this from the earthly perspective. Daniel was not born again. God did not live in him. God lives in you. How many demons must God go through to get the answer from Himself to you when He lives in you? None! Daniel's case does not apply to New Testament believers.

Do you see the silliness of supposing that principalities of the air can stop you from getting your healing, or anything else that you need?

I suppose that people sometimes look for things like this when they get impatient after not seeing the immediate manifestation of their healing. Gee, maybe some demons are holding up the answer and we need special prayer. Wrong. You need patience, not prayer, between the time you believe that you receive and the time that the answer manifests in your body. A farmer who doesn't get a corn harvest in the same hour he plants his corn it doesn't run around praying away demons that are stopping his corn harvest.

Summary

Every one of these paper roadblocks exalts the devil and declares him to have power that he does not really have. He has no power over you. He cannot stop your healing from manifesting when you pray in faith. Only you can stop it, and one way to do so is to get into agreement with the devil that one of these paper roadblocks can really keep your healing away.

God's Blessing on Your Kids

Godly parents should expect to be able to pray for the healing of their children. God's Word promises many blessings to the offspring of the person who serves God. (The word seed is used of offspring frequently in Scripture.)

In Numbers 25:3-13, the children of a priest who was zealous for God were to be honored.

Deuteronomy 28:4 says to those who hearken diligently to God's voice and do His commandments: "Blessed shall be the fruit of thy body."

Deuteronomy 7:12-15 promises a blessing on the "fruit of your womb" if you obey God's commandments. Your righteousness in Christ give you the same status as if you HAD obeyed God's commandments, so this promise belongs to you.

Deuteronomy 11:18-21 contains a promise of long life for your children when you teach them the Word of God consistently.

Deuteronomy 30:19-20 says that you and your seed shall live when you choose life.

You are not under the Law of Moses. Christ has redeemed you from all curses contained in that Law that spoke of the punishments for breaking it. However, Christ has not "redeemed" you from the blessings in the Law. These blessings are yours because they belonged to anyone who kept the Law. Now that you are the righteousness of God in Christ, God can confer the same blessings on you that He could have if you had kept the entire Law of Moses.

Psalm 112:1-2 says that the children of the upright shall be mighty on the earth and blessed.

Your kids even get a financial blessing because you are righteous:

Psalm 37:25:

I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread.

Matthew 15:22-28, Mark 7:25-30 and John 4:46-53 are examples of people who received something on behalf of their children.

A note in case you're wondering: I left out Acts 16:31 on purpose ("And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.") because it doesn't mean what most people think it does, namely that all your family has to get saved if you get saved. If Paul thought that were true, preaching to the jailor alone would have assured "household salvation" once he was saved, but Paul preached to the others as well in the next verse (Acts 16:32: "And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house"). The others in the house needed to receive Christ for themselves as well. Also, we know that Paul did not believe in guaranteed "household salvation" because he wrote the following instructions in 1 Corinthians 7:15-16 about someone who had an unsaved spouse who wanted to leave: "But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases: but God hath called us to peace. For what knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband? or how knowest thou, O man, whether thou shalt save thy wife?" He said this instead of saying, "Husband of the unbeliever, stand on God's promise, and you know, O man, that without question thou shalt save thy wife." Finally, God's command not to marry an unbeliever (2 Corinthians 6:14-16) would be needless if "household salvation" were guaranteed because the unbeliever would be sure to be get saved anyway after becoming part of your household. So be warned that God does not endorse "missionary marriages" where you try to talk your new spouse into getting saved!

You should expect the blessing of God to rest on your children, and this includes the blessing of healing. This is one reason that you can pray and get results for your kids when they don't yet know how to do so for themselves. When they get older, though, they will need to believe for themselves and you will not be able to carry them on your faith. That is why you must teach your children the Word so that they will know how to apply it in their own lives, and the lives of their young children!

Breaking Generational Curses?

There is a simple one-step plan to break all curses off your life – get saved! Once you are saved, any “curse” that you think could have resulted from the actions of your ancestors is broken. All you need to do is believe that and walk in the light of it. You do NOT need any special kind of ministry. He whom the Son sets free is free indeed (John 8:36).

It is ridiculous to think that some kind of “curse” would still be on you as a righteous, blood-washed believer, even if your father was a womanizing drug pusher, your mother taught witchcraft classes, one of your grandfathers was a serial killer who robbed three banks and the other grandfather was a drunken gambler who founded a porn magazine. God will not hold YOU responsible for their actions or curse YOU for what THEY did!

While there are Old Testament Scriptures that state that God will visit iniquities to the third and fourth generations, there are also plenty of Scriptures that prove that even in the Old Testament, under a worse covenant, if you chose righteousness yourself, you would NOT be punished for the sins of your ancestors and partake of that “third and fourth generation” curse. The curses upon descendants must be understood to apply only to successive sinful generations. If you turned from the ways of those ancestors, you would not be under any kind of “generational curse” even under the Old Covenant! This is clear from what Ezekiel said about the sons not being punished for the sins of the fathers:

Ezekiel 18:20:

The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son: the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him.

(Much of Ezekiel 18 consists of other statements in a similar vein.)

First, let’s look at the Scriptures that discuss curses on descendants for sin:

Exodus 34:7:

Keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children’s children, unto the third and to the fourth generation.

Numbers 14:18:

The LORD is longsuffering, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression, and by no means clearing the guilty, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.

Deuteronomy 5:9:

Thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them: for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me,

Even here, consider the next verse that continues the thought:

Deuteronomy 5:10:

And shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments.

If you were one who kept His commandments, He would show you and your children mercy, not curse you – regardless of what your ancestors did.

We must consider the verses above in context with the verses below, which are also under the same covenant as the curses above. Let's consider what happened in the Old Testament to someone who was righteous even if his ancestors were bad apples:

Deuteronomy 24:16:

The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, neither shall the children be put to death for the fathers: every man shall be put to death for his own sin.

A man was still judged based on what HE did, not what his father or children did. This is made extremely plain by the following passage:

Ezekiel 18:19-20:

Yet say ye, Why? doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father? When the son hath done that which is lawful and right, and hath kept all my statutes, and hath done them, he shall surely live.

The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son: the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him.

This makes it quite clear that righteousness delivers you from any curse that was on your father.

Jeremiah 31:29-30:

In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

But every one shall die for his own iniquity: every man that eateth the sour grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

Consider this: God punished the unbelieving Israelites who refused to believe that they could enter the Promised Land. However, their children were allowed to enter it. God did not make them wait three or four generations because the new generation obeyed Him. Aside from the fact that that many generations would have been more than 40 years, we can see from the following verse that only the "perpetrating" generation was cut off from the Promised Land:

Joshua 5:6:

For the children of Israel walked forty years in the wilderness, till all the people that were men of war, which came out of Egypt, were consumed, because they obeyed not the voice of the LORD: unto whom the LORD sware that he would not shew them the land, which the LORD sware unto their fathers that he would give us, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

It was only the people old enough to fight (who were supposed to fight, not wimp out as they did) who were banned from entering the Promised Land.

It makes no sense that you could be righteous under the Old Covenant and be exempt from generational curses though still a fallen man with a sinful nature, but that under the New Covenant, washed in the blood of Jesus with a righteous new nature, you (the righteous) could be forced to live under a “generational curse” because of what your unrighteous ancestors did!

You Are Already Exempt From All Curses

You have been delivered from the power of darkness, and translated into the kingdom of God’s dear Son (Colossians 1:12-14). Because you are righteous, you are redeemed from curses. The “curse of the Law” in Deuteronomy 28:15-68 and elsewhere includes curses on children. Jesus redeemed you from this curse (Galatians 3:10-14). You do not need to “get delivered” from it. You are delivered from it because you are a Christian. Agree with God and say so.

Proverbs 26:2

You do not have to spend years searching your “roots” in endless genealogies. (Actually, 1 Timothy 1:4 counsels you to avoid endless genealogies.) You have one spiritual ancestor – God, who is your Father! God is not under any kind of curse. Therefore, you have not inherited a curse from your Father.

The “old man” died when you received Christ. Now all things are new, and you as a “new man” are not under any kind of bondage to your former life or anything to do with your former life.

You do not need special ministry to get rid of a generational curse. You do not need to buy a special book or audio series to find out what to do. Jesus has already done everything that needed to be done. He has already delivered you.

Redeemed from Illnesses that Run in Your Family

I should point out that in some countries where I’ve preached, the term “generational curse” is used to describe an illness that runs in a family. Since sickness is indeed a curse according to the Law of Moses, that is a pretty good name for it. However, you are legally healed by the stripes of Jesus of everything that got handed down to you in your genes from your parents. You do not have to get in fear because of how your ancestors died, or because some modern genetic test indicates that you are at risk for a certain illness or even have it already. God heals all your diseases (Psalm 103:3), so ones handed down in your family are nothing to get anxious about. God’s promise to you covers whatever it is. Again, you do not need any kind of special ministry to walk in what God says is already yours (healing from your generational problem). You can just take by faith what is already yours in Christ because He paid for it.

Redeemed from Rotten Behavior Patterns

Many things attributed to “generational curses” (divorce, alcoholism, etc.) are actually handed down from one generation to another through bad examples and ungodly training. While it is a curse (in a sense) to have a parent who leads you into wrong thinking, wrong thinking is cured not by special prayer but by renewing your mind with the Word of God.

The Word explicitly states that you have been redeemed (already) from useless traditions passed down in your family:

1 Peter 1:18-19

Generational Blessings

We would make good progress if Christians would stop getting excited about generational curses and start getting excited about generational blessings that belong to their descendants as believers:

1 Corinthians 7:14

Psalm 112:1-2

Deuteronomy 28:4

(See God’s Blessing on Your Kids for more verses about this.)

If you won’t walk with the Lord for your sake, do it for the sake of your kids! It matters.

Strange Ways to Get Healed

If you are at a healing service, do not be taken aback if you see some people healed in unusual ways. You may even be called upon to do something unusual to get your healing. You may not even have hands laid on you. Look at some of these strange ways of getting healed in Scripture:

2 Kings 5:1-14: Naaman the Syrian had leprosy. He got mad when Elisha told him to bathe seven times in the Jordan River. He expected that Elisha would come out and lay hands on him in the name of God. But Naaman would not have been healed if he had waited for that to happen. He had to do what the prophet of God said.

2 Kings 20:1-7: Isaiah told Hezekiah to put a lump of figs on his boil. He did so and he was healed. Because Hezekiah's disease was incurable (he would have died), this was not medicine in practice, but an act of obedience to God. (If figs really have that kind of curative power, all hospitals should be laying figs on people's sores today and saving people a bundle because figs are generally cheaper than prescription drugs.)

Mark 7:32-37: Jesus put His fingers in a deaf man's ears. Then He spat and touched his tongue. The man got healed, and the Board of Health didn't even close down the meeting.

Mark 8:22-25: Jesus spit on a blind man's eyes and then laid hands on him. The man received his sight. No one arrested Jesus for this seemingly rude action, either. (My guess is that if you spit on a blind person and he gets healed, he will not be too upset with you. Other people might get upset, but that would be their problem.)

Mark 10:46-52: Blind Bartimaeus received his sight even though Jesus did not lay hands on him. Jesus simply spoke, Bartimaeus believed, and instantly Blind Bartimaeus became The Person Formerly Known as Blind Bartimaeus.

Luke 5:17-26: A paralyzed man was let down through the ceiling by his friends. (This is one case where it was good to have friends who let you down.) Jesus simply told the man that he was forgiven and then told him to get up, which he did. There is no record that the man ever touched Jesus or vice versa. (There are other accounts of this story in other passages.)

Luke 17:12-19: Ten lepers came to be healed. Jesus simply said to go and show themselves to the priests. They were not healed instantly when He said this, but they were healed as they obeyed Jesus and went.

John 5:2-19: Again, we have a case where Jesus simply spoke to someone instead of laying hands on him. He told the man to get up. The man obeyed Him, and as he did, he was healed. If he had stayed there and kept protesting that he couldn't, he probably would have stayed sick.

John 9:1-7: Jesus spat on the ground, made clay from it and anointed the eyes of a man born blind with the clay. If that weren't enough, He then sent the man to wash in the pool of Sent. The man received his sight after obeying Jesus. There is no record that anyone witnessing this miracle complained about the method that the Holy Spirit used. Would you?

Acts 5:12-16: People were placed where Peter's shadow would pass over them, and they got healed!

Acts 9:32-35: Peter spoke to a crippled man. The man got up and walked. There is no indication that Peter laid hands on him.

Acts 19:11-12: Handkerchiefs and aprons were taken from Paul's body, and the anointing was transferred through them to sick and demonized people, who were healed and delivered.

Note that these cases involve healing by the manifestation of the Holy Spirit. You don't have to do anything unusual to accept your healing by faith. But if you're in a "Holy Ghost service," you may be ministered to in an unusual way. Don't lose out on your healing because something is a little different.

Many healing services involve ministry by the "word of knowledge." The minister calls out certain conditions. In some cases, these people are asked to come forward. (Better go if that's you!) In others, the minister simply announces that God is healing someone of a certain illness, and it just happens without the laying on of hands.

I've seen people healed when the minister just pointed at them. I saw a minister go up to a man in terrible back pain and hit him hard in the back! The man was instantly healed, much to the relief of all of us who saw this. I saw a man healed of chest pains while flopping on the floor completely "drunk" in the Holy Spirit, laughing and laughing. (Ordinarily you would not want to laugh like that if you were having chest pains.) I've seen the Holy Spirit move on a minister to hit someone in the belly, tackle a person, blow on a person, and just stand and laugh at a person – and this was all done under the anointing! Now please don't try these things just because you heard about them. You could get in real trouble if you do things like these and you're not following the anointing! But unusual manifestations do happen in services sometimes. If God is in it, people will be blessed. The funny thing is, if you're ministering and there is an anointing to do something like that, it often seems very natural at the time. It's only later that you start thinking, "What did I just do?"

At other times, the minister may ask someone to do something that he can't do, such as run around the room. As the person obeys, he gets healed and is able to do it.

I have seen spontaneous healings when the people were just worshipping God. No one announced the healings; they just happened and people testified. I have seen people healed while being ministered to in music. Thank God for the anointing and the different ways that He uses people.

The norm is still laying hands on the sick in the name of Jesus. But don't let exceptions to the rule bewilder you. If these kinds of exceptions happened when the Holy Spirit ministered through Jesus, we can expect them to happen when the Holy Spirit ministers through others.

The Light Is Green

I want to share with you something that helped me greatly when I was a younger believer desiring to evangelize, walk in the power of the Holy Spirit and minister healing to others.

I used to pray and ask God for some kind of confirmation that He wanted me to lay hands on a particular person before I did it. I would do the same as far as going out and sharing Jesus in public. God would give me these confirmations, but this was because I was still a novice.

The model I was operating under was basically this: The light is red. I will wait until I get a green light from God, and then I will go. In other words, I will go when I get a direct leading from the Holy Spirit.

But then the explicit “green light” confirmations stopped, and I started wondering, should I just do nothing because God isn’t giving me these confirmations anymore?

What I had to realize from Scripture is this: The light is green! I don’t have to wait for a message that the light is green, because it already is. Jesus already told us to go into all the world and preach the gospel, and that we would lay hands on the sick and they would recover (Mark 16:15-18). Such activity is pre-authorized. I don’t need any form of “confirmation” to do something that Jesus already said I can do. I can just go do it and expect Him to work with me!

Now, you may wonder, aren’t there times when God really DOESN’T want you to get involved with certain people or do things in certain locations? YES, that can happen. But the model we see in Acts is that you keep going with the green light unless God explicitly gives you a red light. The light is green by default, not red, so you go unless God explicitly says otherwise.

You can stay in motion, too – if you keep stopping to wait to see if there is a red light, you’ve basically put yourself back in “red light” mode again. As many have said, it’s easier to steer a car that’s moving than one that’s parked. You have a green light, so go! If God has a reason to avoid some particular thing, expect that He’ll tell you as you stay in motion, not as you sit around praying about green lights and red lights.

We see this in the following passage where Paul and his companions tried to go a couple places to preach and were told not to do so. We can see that Paul did not wait for a green light. He had that already. He went unless there was an explicit red light:

Acts 16:6-10:

Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia, and were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia,

After they were come to Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia: but the Spirit suffered them not.

And they passing by Mysia came down to Troas.

And a vision appeared to Paul in the night; There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us.

And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavoured to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them.

Notice that even when God gave a red light, it wasn't long before He redirected Paul to where He wanted him to go next.

Sometimes a person who is called to preach is asked to come share somewhere and the budding preacher, who has no other preaching engagements lined up, says, "I need to pray about this and see if God wants me to go to that place." That's the wrong question! That's the "red light" concept again. The only question that young preacher should be asking God is, "Is there any reason you DON'T want me to go there? If I don't hear from you explicitly that I'm not to go there, I'm going!" In other words, "I know the light is green, so I will go unless you explicitly give me a red light." Think about this for a minute: If you know you are called to preach and you get an opportunity to preach, why WOULDN'T you want to take it? It might be a small church or a very imperfect church or both, but if you're just starting out, you may not be so perfect yourself, either! (You will probably figure this out only in retrospect much later when you realize that you have become a much better preacher than you were when you started.) You need a place to preach and they can't afford someone who expects $10,000 per night to fly in on his private jet with his entourage to do a service.

In light of what happened to Ananias and Sapphira (Acts 5:1-11), I would NOT recommend telling a pastor who called you, "I will have to look at my schedule to see when I have openings and get back to you" when you know full well that your schedule is completely empty! Trying to sound as if you have a big ministry when you don't is deceptive and would make that pastor wonder about your integrity.

Another practical aspect of ministry is that if you know God has given you a specific green light to do something specific (pastor a certain church, travel with a certain minister, etc.), you should keep doing the last thing He told you to do until He says to do something else. What God DOESN'T say is as important as what He DOES say – if He hasn't told you to move on, don't! Too often people quit the ministry out of frustration or impatience when God never said to do something else because they're just itchy to move on and be "promoted."

God won't promote you until you're ready. You don't get to second grade until you've passed first grade. You can't get around that.

I'll give you a real-life illustration. Someone used to work in the church nursery with me who would show up extremely late every time and complain that he was called to much better things than dealing with those crying babies and their disgusting dirty diapers, especially since the services could go three hours. He felt called to be a singer who would do Christian concerts. Things didn't seem to be happening for him, and eventually he went across the country to get involved in a church that was just starting up. When he got to that church, he told the pastor that he was available to lead worship. The pastor informed him that he already had someone who could do that; his greatest need was someone to run the nursery! As I said, God won't promote you until you're ready to be promoted.

Don't think that God has to speak in a booming audible voice or send an angel or a prophet to SAY something to you. Sometimes – MOST of the time – He speaks by just letting you “know things in your knower.” You'll feel drawn to a certain thing, or you'll feel a constant dissatisfaction with something you've been doing that you used to enjoy. So often, I hear people say, “God never speaks to me!” when He's doing a lot of speaking on the inside – just not in the way that the people expect that God should speak to them. We often beg God to “talk louder” when the issue is that we need to get quieter so that we can hear His still small voice as Elijah did. God wasn't “in” the wind, earthquake or fire – the spectacular stuff – but He spoke to Elijah quietly (1 Kings 19:11-12).

Another hurdle many of us have faced is fear of disappointing God. We hesitate to make any change or move out in a certain way because we're afraid that we will make a mistake and let God down. Guess what? You WILL make mistakes. I have made mistakes. So has everyone else who has done anything significant in the Kingdom. Do you think Peter was perfect? God used him despite his many mistakes. The biggest mistake you can make is to do nothing when God has already said GO in the Bible. God LOVES you! He's FOR you! He will NOT get mad at you if you attempt something great and make a mistake along the way. It beats becoming the world's leading authority on doing nothing. If you mess up, Jesus has already paid the price for your mess. So don't ever hold back because you don't want to miss God. If you never operate in “green light” mode, you'll never accomplish a lot of things that PLEASE God! He knows your heart.

Another related hindrance is a nagging feeling that you're just not ready to step out and do anything. I understand that there is a preparation time for certain ministry assignments, and it's usually a lot longer than we think it should be. But it is ALWAYS right to present the Word to people and lay hands on the sick and command disease to bow its knee at the name of Jesus. There's never a good reason to wait to do that. The only valid reason to wait in Scripture was to be baptized with the Holy Spirit before you go out. But He's been given to the Church already. If you're baptized with the Holy Spirit, there isn't any reason to wait. It's not as if you're going to get MORE power in the future. Where are you going to get more power than the Holy Spirit has?

You should realize that God cannot use the “better version of you” that will be around five years from now TODAY. God can only use the “TODAY” version of you TODAY. So let Him use you as you are now, and keep growing and learning!

If you have more invitations than you can handle, perhaps then you should seek God about which ones to take. But it will probably take some time to get to that point, and until then you should accept any reasonable opportunities you can get! Don't wait for an explicit nudge from God. The light is green, so GO unless you hear otherwise! GO preach. GO lay hands on sick people. GO create opportunities if you don't have one offered to you. GO get busy advancing the kingdom of God. He will work with you, confirming His word with accompanying signs (Mark 16:20).

The Boring Evangelist

I had the privilege of doing a 12-service healing crusade in a certain country. Plenty of people showed up for the first service on Sunday morning at the host church. The Lord led me to just teach the Word about healing. I didn't call a healing line; I just let people soak up the Word.

For the evening service, there was a decent crowd, and the Lord led me to continue to teach the Word about healing. I did not call a healing line because the Lord led me not to do one.

For the next service, there was a much smaller crowd, and the Lord led me to continue to teach the Word about healing. I still did not call a healing line because I still didn't sense that the Lord wanted me to have one that service.

For the next service after that (the fourth service overall), people "stayed away in droves" and attendance was something in the neighborhood of 12 to 14 people! I learned that night that there were many complaints about my services. People had complained to the pastor, "We wanted to see an ANOINTED healing evangelist, but all this guy does is get up and preach Bible verses!" They wanted to see sensational miracles, but they weren't seeing any. All that was happening was that people were getting instructed from the Bible about divine healing.

And it so happened, that in that fourth service, the Lord led me to just continue teaching from the Word about divine healing. This part of the world had seen its share of dramatic, flamboyant preachers who flowed in the gifts of the Spirit, but the people had not gotten the kind of teaching that you can read in this book that forms a basis for believing and receiving your healing by faith and keeping it once you get it. People had mostly depended upon manifestations of the Spirit to be healed.

I thought the services were really good and that I had followed the Lord to the best of my ability, but obviously most of the people did not see things that way.

So I kept teaching away in that fourth service, and something unusual happened. A man out there among the empty seats had the nerve to interrupt my message. "Wait a minute, preacher!" he yelled. "If what you're saying is true, I don't HAVE to wait for you to call a healing line; I can just believe I receive my healing right now!" I said, "Yes you can, and don't let me stop you!" The man shouted, "I believe I receive my healing RIGHT NOW!" WHAM, the power of God hit that man, and he was healed on the spot.

Emboldened by that, another intrepid soul who had come to all the meetings to hear the Word cried out, "I believe that I receive MY healing RIGHT NOW, too!" WHAM, the power of God hit that person and there was another instant healing.

So yet another person cried out, "I believe that I receive MY healing RIGHT NOW!" WHAM, the power of God hit that person too, and there was another instant healing.

Then a fourth person cried out, "I believe that I receive MY healing RIGHT NOW!" and WHAM, that person also was instantly healed.

I never did call a healing line that night. There was no need for one. The people were already healed by believing the Word and acting on it.

Then word got out about some significant healings that had taken place that night, and more people started showing up to "hear and be healed" as the meetings went on. By the time it was over, they were talking about getting me to stay another week (which I couldn't) and renting the largest facility in the country to continue the meetings to be able to fit everybody.

There was a young man in the meeting one night who could not use one of his legs; he just dragged that leg behind him. I thought it would be really encouraging for the people if he would come forward and be healed, but again, I preached the Word. At the end I asked if people wanted to come up, but the young man turned around and walked out, dragging his bad leg behind him. I was disappointed.

The next night, I asked if anyone had a testimony to share. A young man came running down the aisle and wanted to grab the microphone. I usually don't part company with the microphone (if you've done these kinds of meetings, you know why!), but I just sensed it would be OK in this case, though I didn't recognize the young man until he started speaking: "You all know that I've had to drag my leg behind me when I walk..." It was the same young man from the night before, and he had just RUN down the aisle!

He continued along these lines (I can't remember the exact wording): "I was in my bed at 4 o'clock this afternoon thinking about what the preacher here said the night before, and I thought, if that's true, then I can just receive my healing right now. And it must be true, because those words were in my Bible written in red because Jesus said them, and He's the Son of God. He can't lie. So I just said, 'I believe that I receive my healing NOW' and I felt this power hit me and I started jumping up and down on my bed with both feet! I'm healed!"

I was preaching in another country and had felt led to proceed the same way, doing teaching services in the first services. In the third service, a woman came up who had been born without part of an eardrum. She had never heard properly out of that ear. She had heard the Word so much that she was sure that she would receive her healing when she came forward, just as surely as she had received the new birth a long time ago. I had been preaching about the fact that miracles are received exactly the same way as healings (Galatians 3:5-6). She believed the Word. She left that place with perfect hearing in that ear! Also, unlike some "nine out of ten lepers" type people, she came back to all the services and gave her testimony every night. I'm glad we have the easy part (preaching and believing) and God has the hard part (causing the manifestation of something like that in response to faith).

You can always receive from the Word anything that you can receive through a manifestation of the Spirit, but the Word is guaranteed, while there is no guarantee that the Holy Spirit will move a certain way and heal you aside from your faith. It is so important to "hear and be healed!"

"He sent His Word and healed them" (Psalm 107:20).

Impressive Testimonies vs. Helpful Testimonies

We healing preachers all have our favorite dramatic miracle stories. Who doesn't like a good miracle story?

I could tell you a lot of testimonies about unusual and dramatic healings that I have seen over the years, but there is a common issue with most of them. Most if not all of the really impressive "wow-factor" testimonies involved people being healed through various manifestations of the Holy Spirit that I could not reproduce if it all depended solely on my faith. I could risk having you think that I walk in super-hyper-ultra-mega-faith all the time, when the truth was that a manifestation of the "gift of faith" was in operation, not the normal faith by which I, as the just, live.

We have to watch our motives. Do we share the really spectacular testimonies to encourage the people to receive or to make them think that we are really amazing preachers? Are out to bless people or impress people? If we share a testimony, it should always be to bless people, not impress people. If you're going to impress people, impress them with how wonderful Jesus is, not how wonderful you are.

Most of the time I don't share the more "impressive" testimonies unless I want to encourage someone who has the same unusual condition that I've seen healed before, or assure someone that no condition is too hard for God to heal. Instead of impressive testimonies, I try to share helpful testimonies. To me, a helpful testimony is one that can be reproduced anywhere. In other words, if you'll do what the other person did, you can be healed as the other person was. So I major on the "someone believed and received when he prayed" testimonies, because anyone else can do what that person did and get the same result. I have seen plenty of cases where difficult conditions were eradicated because someone took hold by faith of the healing that Jesus had already paid for him to have. I also have some personal testimonies I can share about believing and receiving when I pray. Some helpful testimonies are impressive as well, but not all impressive testimonies are helpful.

For example, this true testimony of what happened to me on an island off the Newfoundland coast is an example of a testimony that I think is both "impressive" and "helpful." I lost my balance walking along a rocky coastal ledge. I tumbled down head-first, shredding my jacket (which had to be thrown out) in the process. BANG went my head on the ledge. My wife tells me that I was unresponsive for several minutes, and she commanded God's life to go through my body. I was bleeding out of my head, chest, and one leg; the blood was really gushing out and my leg was punctured. When I could tell what was going on, I realized that I had no use of my left hand. There was no hospital anywhere around and the ledge situation was so difficult that it is doubtful I could have been airlifted from it.

Thank God for a wife who knows the Word! I finally ended up getting taken back to our friends' house on that island, and they wanted to know if we should call for a medical helicopter or something. I said, "No, just bring me my Bible, I want to read it!" I'm not sure they thought that was smart (I'm pretty sure they didn't think so), but they honored my request. At least I got stabilized although the bleeding kept going a lot longer than I would have thought. The skin on my face was ripped quite badly and I still couldn't use my left hand. But I believed that I received my healing for all of these issues!

I was such a mess my wife made me wear a hat over my head hoping that the border crossing people coming home wouldn't notice what I looked like and think that she had beaten me or something. She had to drive the first day, because it wouldn't be safe for me to drive with one working hand.

But the second day, I began to amend! My hand was really sore but at least I could use it enough to drive again, though in considerable discomfort. My face started looking better, though I had multiple bad scars.

To make what could be a long testimony short: A few days later, I got up to preach at church AFTER having played the piano! I still found it difficult to play but I managed well enough that no one knew anything was different. NO ONE could tell that ANYTHING had happened to me. My face was perfectly normal! There was no visible sign of the ordeal I had been through only a few days earlier. I had believed and received healing for all of it. Now I can still play the piano with both hands just as easily as ever, thank God!

Maybe these Scriptures will help you as they did me. The first Scripture I claimed, of course, was Psalm 118:17: "I shall not die, but live, and declare the works of the LORD." Then, because my skin was a major issue, I claimed Job 33:19-25. It is important to point out that you need to know Scriptures like this (or at least the fact that they exist so that you can look them up) before you need them, as you may not be in very good condition to look them up on the spur of the moment.

There are actually churches where you might have to hold back from sharing some of the more "outlandish" testimonies you have simply because the pastor himself will not believe you, let alone the people! I've had plenty of pastors not know what to make of me over the years. It seemed like they'd like to have believed me but they seemed to think that I must have been inventing or at least embellishing the stories because they had yet to see anything like that in their own ministries. I've gotten a LOT of funny looks in my life and been called an "enigma" because the other preachers couldn't figure me out. The fact that you haven't seen something yourself doesn't mean God can't do it through someone else! And He gets the glory for all of it anyway; without Jesus none of us could do anything. Personally, I think some of the attitude creeps in, "If God were going to move like that, surely He would use me instead!" But God can move whenever He can find a yielded vessel. So the fact that God used you spectacularly doesn't mean that you're hot stuff. Balaam's donkey, which was not a spirit being, could not be spiritual at all, yet God used it! That doesn't mean that Balaam's donkey was the new, hot, up-and-coming prophet that everyone needed to hear.

In fact, if you belong to the wrong church (for a faith person), you may not be able to share ANY good healing testimonies without getting censured by the pastor and/or people. I'm convinced that Jesus told some people NOT to share their testimonies in their towns because He knew that the people in those towns would try to douse the healed person with unbelief, which could lead to the person losing his healing. The solution to this is to go to a church that will believe your testimony rather than try to tell you that the devil must have healed you because they all "know" that the age of miracles is past.

Less mature preachers may feel the need to “one-up” you. If you tell a story about how God healed someone of cancer and a bad ankle at the same time (I have such a story), they will tell you about the time that someone was healed of cancer, a broken bone, anemia and arthritis all at once when they preached. (This “who’s the greatest” mentality did not die with the pre-saved versions of James and John, unfortunately.) If you have a story of a service where everyone got healed (I do), they will tell you of a whole week of their services where everyone got healed. (They might not elaborate by explaining, “Yes, both people who showed up got healed!”) However, it’s good to just rejoice with those who rejoice. If someone told me that he just saw someone healed of cancer when he preached, I would not volunteer that I saw someone with cancer and an ankle problem healed and that I have lost count of the cancer cases I have seen healed; I would rejoice with that person. “That’s great! Isn’t it wonderful to serve Jesus?”

Pros and Cons of Being on TV

I majored in TV and radio broadcasting in college and I have been on TV and radio preaching the Word and singing. Yet we never televised our services when we had a church. TV has its pros and cons to be aware of before you decide that you want to be on TV or live-stream your services on the Internet.

Pro #1: More People Hear the Word

I've ministered to a lot more people remotely than I could ever do live. TV and radio were NOT invented by the devil so that he could wave sin and corruption at you all day. God set the earth up in a way that allows these powerful tools to be used for good or bad, so why not use them for good?

Pro #2: More Exposure

From a strictly "business" standpoint, you get more exposure. You get to have people that you've never met come up to you and tell you that they liked what you did on TV. From a natural perspective, more exposure beats less exposure any day! It can lead to more preaching opportunities.

Pro #3: People Who Would Miss Out on the Service Can Still Catch It

If you miss a service that isn't captured on video, you just plain miss out. If the service is televised, you can go to an archive (in most cases) and see the service anyway.

Pro #4: The Service Can Be Part of an Ongoing Teaching Archive

Even people who weren't saved when you first preached a message can benefit from it if your services are archived online.

Pro #5: Acting instead of Complaining

Anyone can complain that Christian TV tends to be shallow, but not everyone does something about it! Rather than complaining about superficial sermons on TV, why not do something to help SOLVE the problem and put some real meat out there in a realm that has plenty of "feel-good" messages that talk only about the blessings that the Lord has for YOU. While such messages are needed as well as popular, people also need to hear about what the Lord expects FROM them, which tends to be a less popular topic.

Con #1: Time Constraints

Many times your TV production has to fit within a certain exact amount of time. The carrier of your content, for fairly obvious reasons, does not want you to deviate from that time. But what if the Holy Spirit wants to keep moving when your time slot is up? Worse yet, what are you going to do when He is DONE moving before your time is up?

Because of the way that I flow, I'd struggle with an arrangement that locked me into a fixed time frame, though I could still do it. If I were pastoring and I felt that our services HAD to be on local cable, I'd want to edit it down to the required time afterward rather than having to constantly watch a clock, which is very distracting! But editing is a lot of extra work and it precludes live service broadcasts. Some services can be a lot longer than others, and that was even true when I pastored and followed the Holy Spirit in our regular services. My mode of operation was, "I'm done when He's done!" I want to make sure that the Holy Spirit can be in charge with me underneath Him, rather than having someone in a media office really be in charge of how much can happen.

Time constraints can force Spirit-filled services to be just as rigid and predictable (and often as dry) as those services where they hand out a printed order of worship that gets followed no matter what!

Maybe you can handle time constraints better than I can, and if you can have miracles doing that, go for it! I just know what's worked best for me – follow the Holy Spirit and not a clock – and have miracles!

Of course, the flip side is that if you DON'T agree to some kind of time constraint, no one may see you on TV at all and your message will reach far fewer people. Streaming on the Internet where you control the service length gives you more leeway than a fixed broadcast slot.

What if your church has multiple services? You have to watch the clock, don't you, except in the last service? I suppose so, but what can happen is that the second of two services can end up a lot more "Spirit-filled" than the first service because there was more latitude for the Spirit to move in the second service. Even then, if the idea is to keep both services perfectly in sync so that you've said the same things and anyone can come to either service on any given week and pick up where last week left off, your second service will in effect have the same time constraint as the first one. Having two services IS a money-saver vs. having a bigger facility that can fit everyone in one service, but "syncing" services and having a hard time constraint in the first service are drawbacks.

What if you're traveling and the host pastor gives you time constraints? Simple – he has spiritual authority over his services, so you do what he says! ALWAYS. You don't overstep your time and apologize later with the lie that that the Holy Spirit told you to violate the pastor's rules. If I feel that I can work within whatever constraints there are, I'll go ahead. Otherwise I can decline before making any commitment if I'd feel too stifled by a time limit that I felt was too short.

On the other hand, while preparing short messages is harder than preparing long ones, it's good discipline. I actually put together a set of 45-SECOND sermons on healing for the radio. Every fraction of a second counted, and it was good practice to have to be that concise to get a point across.

Con #2: Temptation to “Nicen Up” the Gospel

You will face temptation to back off of certain “disturbing” themes for fear of alienating viewers. You do not want to be a cowardly compromiser who never treads into topics like hell, sin, repentance, judgment, mortifying the flesh, fasting, suffering persecution, abortion, homosexuality, exhortations to avoid specific sins or other things that no one’s flesh wants to hear about but are still in the New Testament. Being unnecessarily confrontational is no good either, but there can be the nagging thought that stepping on a “land mine” doctrine will cost you half your viewers. Look at the lyrics in much Christian music today if you don’t think that people will avoid tough topics in exchange for greater acceptance and sales. Don’t ever let that be you.

Con #3: Extra Effort and Expense

You will need more equipment and helpers to be on TV. The TV scene is not cheap. This can lead to the temptation to get gimmicky in your fundraising – a VERY common problem in today’s Christian broadcasting world. I’ve cut off support to three ministries that I liked (at this writing) just because I couldn’t stand their silly fundraising stunts. In the most recent case, the issue was “urgent” appeals about the SAME situation, presented repeatedly over a period of YEARS as if it just came up yesterday.

I did about 100 segments on a cable series that was syndicated to local cable outlets, but I was giving up my Saturdays to do them. (At least we’d tape several in advance at a time.) It was OK for a season but not for an ongoing lifestyle while also working a “regular” job.

Con #4: Temptation to be Sensational

You can be tempted to “hype” things to attract and keep viewers rather than just presenting the meat of the gospel. I’ve seen more than my fill of “Christian hype.” People could think that you’re “boring” if all you do is feed people the Word. This could lead to the additional temptation of seeking spectacular divine encounters, which is completely unscriptural! An exciting testimony about visiting heaven on the show before yours comes on, or having an angel tell someone what’s ahead for your country in the next ten years on the show after your show comes on would be a much bigger draw. But the day you start pining for such things is the day you’ve set yourself up for deception! No offense to Christian TV as a whole, but I’ve been disgusted by the number of sensational prophecies, often from prominent ministers, that never came to pass. I daresay I’ve heard more of those than ones that actually happened over the years. Everyone got all excited at the time about someone’s extreme spiritual encounter, but what does it say about your ministry when it turns out that what you said would happen never did? A few of us out there actually take notes on the more dramatic recent prophecies and check up on them later, which is quite disheartening (but educational) when it comes to which ministers REALLY hear from God when they claim that they do. (By the way, it’s not the end of the world if someone does miss God, but it shouldn’t be a pattern.)

In particular, the seemingly obligatory “What is this coming year the year of?” prophecies around January 1st can get silly. Let me guess...it will be the year of miracles, the year of the Holy Spirit, the year of revival, the year of breakthrough, the year of spiritual gifts, the year of sudden increase, the year of divine favor, the year of outpourings, the year of unprecedented prosperity, the year of “more,” ...just like the previous many years when a similar prophecy was given and we were all hard-pressed to see how that year’s prophecy was fulfilled in any meaningful way. I’ve always assumed that it’s ALWAYS the year of big blessings because every year in this era is the “acceptable year of the Lord” and all blessings are already mine in Christ. Maybe God uses you differently than He does me, but I’ve never seen a need to redefine my ministry emphasis every time we change calendars on the wall, as if God is going to do something new every year that has never before been seen under the sun. People can get healings and miracles EVERY year if you’ll teach the Word and be open to the Holy Spirit’s leading!

The Lord had some fun with my wife when she tried asking Him about the coming year some years ago. She asked, “What is this the year of?” and He said, “This is the year of creative miracles.” The next year she asked the same question and He said again, “This is the year of creative miracles.” She asked the next year and He said, “This is the year of creative miracles.” She said, “But that’s what You always say!” He said, “That’s right – EVERY year is the year of creative miracles!” She no longer asks what the next year will be “of!” He made His point. You don’t have to wait for a special year for something when we’re always in the acceptable year of the Lord!

It is interesting that Agabus, a true New Testament prophet, only foretold a famine and trouble for Paul – hardly happy-clappy material. Jesus foretold Peter’s crucifixion and Jerusalem’s downfall. He prophesied to the church at Smyrna that the devil was going to throw some of them into prison. When you start thinking about them, many New Testament prophecies are quite dire about what the last days will be like, how perilous the times will be, and what judgment on the earth will be like. New Testament prophecy doesn’t seem to be the kind where we turn to several people in a line and tell them that God will greatly expand their ministries and businesses and bring them money, a house, a spouse, or whatever. I’m not saying that it COULDN’T be the Holy Spirit in some cases, but I’ve seen plenty of such words that didn’t pan out. I suspect that there would be “great fear” of the Lord, as happened in Acts 5:1-11, if a prophecy came forth, “You are now going to drop dead because you and your husband – who just dropped dead, by the way – lied to us publicly about money.”

But doesn’t God tell his prophets before He does a new thing? After all, Amos 3:7 says, “Surely the Lord GOD will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.” That must be true, and that is why God COULD NOT bring Jesus until He had first spoken it by His prophets. The issue is that with the New Testament in place, what “new thing” exactly does God have to do today when He’s already given us EVERYTHING?

Doesn’t Isaiah say that God will do a NEW THING (Isaiah 43:19-20)? Yes, but He specifies in that passage what the new thing IS. It doesn’t mean that God is always doing a new thing every year. In fact, part of why we can believe for healing is that God always does the SAME OLD THING when it comes to His Word – He keeps it! I consider it a possible door to deception when we think that God always has to be doing some “new thing” every year. If it were some essential new thing, the word “prophets” in Amos is plural, so there would certainly not be just one prophet proclaiming some “new thing” that God is up to this year while others who heard it just pick up on it and retransmit the prophecy. There would be multiple prophets hearing from God independently of one another. At this point, I’ve seen so many “what God will do this coming year” prophecies completely fail that it is hard for me to take them seriously anymore. It can be a “drag” to write down everything spoken about this year and then check it all next year to see what really happened. If you try it, it could be a serious eye-opener. What’s also interesting is that some people will seriously not like you if you point out things that their favorite preacher said that didn’t happen – you’re the bad guy and that preacher is still “right” – it really was of God but man must have messed it up so that it didn’t happen. After all, THAT guy just couldn’t have missed it.

So beware of sensational stuff – you’re always safe (though not necessarily super-popular) if you’ll just stick with the Word and not think that you need to have some distinctive revelation (more on this in Con #7 below).

Con #5: TV Makes You Fatter and Drabber and Hotter

You'll probably look about 10 pounds heavier on TV, but you get some compensation for this by the fact that the place where you're taping will look bigger than it actually is. You also look drabber if you don't have TV makeup on. And the brighter stage lights required to make a TV broadcast look good often result in people on the stage getting really hot! You just have to accept some things like that; you can pray "Be it as Thou wilt as I wilt." Just warning you! In some cases, the studio crew may want to change your appearance by putting on false eyelashes or something. You'll just have to decide what you're willing to go along with. Cameras can be brutal on your appearance. No one who works in TV will think you're a hypocrite if you spiff yourself up – it probably beats looking washed out in front of everyone. This issue was actually credited with swinging a U. S. presidential election when the two candidates appeared in a TV debate. One candidate had a lot of makeup on so that he looked good on television. The other one wouldn't do anything. Perhaps he felt that he was more "authentic," but he was also a lot less photogenic on TV and he lost the election!

Con #6: Network Restrictions

If you get bigger, you might be surprised to find that your TV network makes you agree not to say or show certain things. A Christian TV network executive lamented to me that his company's policy forbade any imagery of people falling over in prayer lines or getting "drunk in the Holy Spirit." This can result in the Holy Spirit being grieved when you don't allow Him to do what He wants to do – or your network is too ashamed to show the world what He actually did.

Con #7: Temptation to Have a Weird Distinctive

Your local "media consultant" may urge you to create a "distinctive" – something your broadcast offers than no others do. This gives viewers a reason to listen to YOU instead of all the other preachers on TV. Given that you have unique giftings and a unique ministry, you should identify what your particular strong points are. There's nothing wrong with promoting your God-given strong suit and running with it.

However, the idea that you are in competition with everyone else for viewers and donor money can lead to preaching weird doctrines that are different from what everyone else says because you didn't study out the subject enough before devoting a sensational series to preaching your new revelation before anyone else does. Do what you do well, but NEVER compare yourself to other ministries – it's unwise (2 Corinthians 10:12). From a worldly media perspective, those other broadcasters are your competition, but God help you if you ever buy into that devilish mentality!

You have to be convinced that GOD is the source of your ministry income, not YOUR ABILITY to beat everyone to the punch with new revelations or your ability to do things differently just for the sake of being different. You should avoid hype and sensationalism at all costs, as they will make the more discerning viewers distrust you.

Con #8: Forced Backslapping

A show or network might REQUIRE a positive mention as a condition of being on it, and you'd have to be good with that. "And here's a shout-out to all our friends watching on Yes Amen Worldwide Network! We appreciate the good people at YAWN who gave us this opportunity." "Thank you so much for the honor of being your guest on the Unlimited Hallelujahs Outreach Hour! I think UHOH is truly on the cutting edge of what God is doing today."

The Christian music industry features "forced backslapping" in some festival contracts. You could be one of the performers at this summer's Mammoth Outdoor GospelFest, but a condition of your contract could be that you must do a positive promo for Mammoth Outdoor GospelFest from the stage in EVERY concert you do for the preceding several months and get no compensation at the festival itself other than publicity for performing at Mammoth Outdoor GospelFest and the chance to sell your "merch" at a table there. (I considered something like that when I first put out a music CD until I read a contract with those forced backslapping stipulations and I decided I wasn't going to be their free publicity agent. I wasn't interested in having hats and T-shirts with my name on them to sell at a merch table anyway. I'm not saying that's wrong, but I don't see Jesus or the apostles having to resort to that to get publicity or funding.) And then there are record company contracts that in exchange for publishing your CD make you run around the country wearing yourself out promoting your CD more than you're home with your family. There's a reason why the Bible says that you're bought with a price and you are not to become a slave of man (1 Corinthians 7:23)! It is possible to become a slave to a media contract, so you have to be careful! Ask a burned-out Christian artist who wishes that he'd never signed his contract that kept him on the road most of the time. One touring Christian artist told me that it had just become another job to him. It wasn't "fun" anymore. But of course, he couldn't let on to that in public.

I had considered joining a certain Christian music association, but when I saw that one of its seminar topics was about how to write lyrics to appeal to the all-important female 21-to-49-year-old demographic (or something like that), I decided that it wasn't my cup of tea. I prefer to get my inspirations from the Holy Spirit. I am not interested in merchandising the gospel with words carefully crafted to sell albums to younger female adults!

I said all that to make this point – it is easy to "sell yourself out" in order to get ahead. I'd rather have Jesus promote me – His yoke is easy and His burden is light (Matthew 11:30). I can't picture Paul telling Timothy, "I'll promote you in my letters that every Christian will end up reading, but only if in every service, you speak good things about me and what I'm doing."

The medium should never change your message! If it does, you've missed it.

Con #9: People Who Just Want to Be Seen on TV

I've been in a couple famous ministers' meetings where someone wanted to grab a few seconds of limelight before the audience by showcasing their "gift." Thus, what someone told a "screener" was a "healing testimony" became a drastic prophecy about America and Israel before the microphone was snatched away. Co-opting TV time is not limited to outright kooks. I had a host pastor eat about THREE HOURS of time in a service to showcase his own singing and preaching gifts when a friend and I were the guest speakers. There was a big crowd and the TV crew had shown up because a blind person had been healed in a recent meeting in a nearby city and people were excited. By the time we got up, the anointing and the cameramen had both dissipated! He got his chance to be seen on TV, and I can assure you that the Holy Spirit wasn't the only one grieved that night!

Con #10: Temptation to Have a Persona

You could be tempted to portray a "superstar" version of yourself to the point of where you have a TV persona that differs from who you REALLY are in "real life." You have to avoid any temptation to act like anyone other than yourself. Otherwise you'll be miserable when you realize that you can't always be that idealized, never-misses-it version of yourself that people see on TV. If you check into hospitals under a different name, I'm talking to you!

Conclusion

To me, the bottom line is that you have to resolve to be yourself and minister in the way that you are comfortable doing, even if you get criticized. If you do anything significant, the devil will see to it that you WILL get criticized – often viciously – and you'll have to resolve to walk in love and perseverance. In some places, angry tradition-filled people might get you kicked off the air for preaching divine healing in the atonement in an area where that teaching isn't popular – that happened to me! TV and radio are not "good" or "bad" – they are just media run by people who can be good or bad. Make sure that the dog wags the tail – use media if you want but don't let media "use" you so that you lose control of what God wants you to do. I would sooner choose not to be on TV or radio than to compromise what I preach and do in order to be on the air, or make myself the slave of a difficult contract.

The Presumptuous Pastor

Freshly graduated from Bigger Faith Bible Institute, Manny Hasnowitz was eagerly looking forward to planting a church that would be the Next Big Thing. He was sure that God was leading him to Busted Bow, a small town in the middle of Drywood County located at the intersection of two state highways.

Manny and his wife Trulie were especially excited about a word they had been given at the Apostles' Gathering, a church where the pastor had attended BFBI and had been affiliated with the BFBI ministerial fellowship at one time, though they had parted ways since. The Head Apostle at the Apostles' Gathering declared that Manny was anointed to be the It-Boy of Drywood County. Trulie didn't understand the terminology, so they explained to her that an It-Boy is the person to whom God has given spiritual authority over an entire area. So any Christian activities, special meetings, new church plants, etc., would have to go through him, as he would have apostolic authority over the entire county.

Manny and Trulie rented an apartment in Drywood County and embarked on a search for a meeting place. They found a great deal in a strip mall that was having hard times ever since its "anchor store" went out of business due to Internet competition. He picked out a name, Bigger Faith Worship Center, reasoning that "Worship Centers" were now "in" much like "Family Churches" had been "in" a couple decades earlier. Soon he had a professional designer make his church logo, which cleverly combined a Bible, a dove, a flame, a cross, and a hands-in-the-air rejoicing person. Then he got down to the business of putting up flyers all over town letting people know that there was a new church being planted. This would surely draw at least the crowd that always goes to whatever the New Thing is in town (and then leaves when a Newer Thing gets started).

Before moving there, he did some minor research on the area and found that the biggest churches seemed to be First Denominational Church, Busted Bow Denominational Church, and Drywood Denominational Church. Man, if there was a need for the full gospel to be preached, it was there in Busted Bow. But now that Manny and Trulie were in town, the troops had arrived! Busted Bow would surely be the site of a mighty revival that would be publicized in Christian magazines.

The first week drew a crowd of 30 people, which was a stupendous start in that area. Manny and Trulie attributed part of this to their advertising slogan, "Bigger Faith Worship Center – a Better Church than the One You've Been Attending!" and part of it to Manny's stirring first message, "Barbequing All the Denominational Sacred Cow Doctrines You've Heard in a Single Message."

The first inevitable phone call wasn't long in coming. "Is this Pastor Hasnowitz?" "Yes," said Manny. "Pastor, I'm Max Dresser, and I pastor Drywood Denominational. I'm concerned about the approach you seem to be taking with your church plant." Manny thought to himself, "Yeah, I'm sure you are, pal, because your people will soon be coming to my church for better teaching so they don't have to listen to your dumpy denominational doctrines anymore!" Pastor Max went on, "Pastor, my concern is that your vision seems to be to build your church at the expense of the other congregations in Busted Bow rather than reaching the lost yourself. That's not the way we do things around here." Manny was in no mood to be lectured to by his inferiors, the pastors who had barns full of sacred cows behind their pulpits. "Pastor Max, I'm sorry you don't like it, but God has given me this county and I'm on assignment. I am now the Apostle over Drywood County. You're welcome to come to our services yourself and learn the Word anytime you want." The conversation didn't last much longer.

Soon after that, he got a call from Pastor Les Fuller at First Denominational. "Would you be able to come to a meeting with some of the local clergy?" Manny sensed a setup and quickly declined. He didn't need to take time from his apostolic calling to talk to pastors who didn't know the Word. After all, he and his Bigger Faith friends had a saying, "There are two kinds of ministers in the world – those who attended Bigger Faith Bible Institute and those who SHOULD have."

The phone rang later that week, and on the other end was a man who identified himself as Banshee Windmill, pastor of Busted Bow Christian Assembly, a small church that Manny had never even heard of. How he got his nickname was incomprehensible given his mousy little voice. "Pastor Manny, I want to welcome you to Busted Bow. There is a ministers' fellowship here that meets one a month, and I wanted to invite you." Manny said, "Thanks for the invite, but I still have to work to support myself and I just don't have time for things like that." "Well, please know that you're welcome as a brother in Christ when you can make it," said Banshee.

"Do you think maybe you should take time off and get to know the other pastors so you can work with them?" asked Trulie after the call was over. "No, of course not!" said Manny. "If those other churches had been doing their jobs and teaching the people correctly, God would not have sent US to Drywood County! But when we get bigger and the other churches' people start emptying into Bigger Faith, we will start our OWN ministerial fellowship and WE will run it by the Holy Spirit instead of by the flesh! Of course, the other pastors will be welcome to come see how church should be done."

The next weeks still saw decent attendance, though it tapered off some from the first week. Manny started to learn some things about pastoring that they didn't teach him at Bigger Faith Bible Institute. He had to handle a situation where the drummer was backstabbing him and there were repercussions. He faced a situation where one of the other new people was living in blatant and unrepented sin and trying to "hit on" others in the congregation. Some people complained that the music was too loud while others in the same service complained that they had to turn up their hearing aids to hear the music. Some wanted more traditional hymns, others wanted Southern Gospel, others contemporary music, others Christian Scream Metal and one even wanted to do Amazing Grace in Gangsta Rap style. Some older people complained they were too cold while younger people sitting next to them complained that they were too hot.

Then there was the seemingly endless stream of phone calls from telebeggars, some of whom might have had legitimate needs but who could have been looking for cash to support their crystal meth habits or alcohol addictions. Certainly they couldn't expect Manny to stop working during the day to screen out who was legit. Then there seemed to be a looming power struggle over who would get to be the associate pastor when the time came. Manny wished that the classes had covered THESE kinds of things. The thought even flashed across his mind that maybe those other pastors in town who had many years of pastoral experience could give him some tips, but then he remembered his take on "positioning" – he didn't want to come across as someone lower on the ministerial totem-pole when he knew that he was the county It-Boy. He was there to GIVE advice, not TAKE it. After all, HE had been to Bigger Faith Bible Institute and the others had not.

After some time, Manny announced a special Healing Service. He hoped to get more people from other churches to come see that a much better church was now available. Some actually came out of curiosity because healing wasn't being preached over at the denominational places. Banshee Windmill actually showed up with some of his people. Manny got to see that he was a scrawny little fellow whose body matched his voice. Honestly, he looked like the kind of guy whose idea of fun would be reading trigonometry tables at night, or maybe counting the instances of the letter "e" in today's newspaper. But he actually raised his hands and sang when the time came, to Manny's surprise.

"God doesn't give and take away!" declared Manny as he started his sermon. "Job was wrong! God isn't an Indian giver!" The place got eerily quiet all of a sudden. Suddenly Manny realized that something that he said had irked people. Then he thought that maybe some "politically correct" people objected to the word Indian. Perhaps some in the crowd belonged to the group "White People Who Are Perpetually Offended on Behalf of Other People," which had recently gotten Native American references removed from the Busted Bow High School football team's logo. "Okay, God isn't a NATIVE AMERICAN giver, for you snowflakes in attendance!" said Manny. Suddenly people started filing out the back door without saying another word until only Banshee was left.

"Son," squeaked Banshee, "you ought not to have said that." Manny realized that something was wrong, of course. "You see," Banshee continued, "Busted Bow was named over an incident in this county involving a great Native warrior. The people here are proud of their heritage. At least half of them have some Native blood. They don't take kindly to the idea that white men made treaties that gave them things, but then they took back what they promised, and then they called people who do that Indian givers. More like White Man givers, I'd say. You made a mistake. But God's not done with you. Why don't you come to one of our night services sometime, seeing as you don't have one."

Manny wasn't about to put himself under another ministry even for a night, so he declined the offer, but he suddenly found that no one wanted to come to his church anymore. Not only that, but his boss found an excuse to fire him almost immediately. Now paying his rent was going to be an issue. He needed some money, and fast. He took what little money he had and put it into a new thing he saw on the Internet that let Melvin Merlitz of Lafayette, Indiana turn $300 into $5,630,132 in a year using a retired nuclear physicist's proprietary "naked stock options trading secrets." Manny lost all his money without ever reading the disclaimer that the trades cited were done on paper as hypothetical trades with the benefit of hindsight, and it turned out that the marketer had never placed a real trade in his life. Desperately, he made a loan against his credit card using a "convenience check" (so named because the fee involved was very convenient for the bank) so that he could pay hundreds of dollars for an "initiation fee" to get into a multi-level marketing organization that a fellow minister was part of. It was too late when he realized that the only "product" really being sold was the "initiation fee" for people under him for which he got a cut, and the whole thing was nothing more than a glorified chain letter. Manny owed everyone in town after that – the electric company, the phone company, the cable company (which never even got the chance to jack up his rates astronomically after the initial 12-month teaser period), the landlord, the credit card company, you name it. After he got his eviction notice, he realized that he was done in Drywood County and he would have to leave in disgrace.

On their way out, Manny and Trulie decided to finally stop at a night service to hear Banshee Windmill in action. After all, he'd always been nice and supportive to them. Banshee started out with his mousy little voice but suddenly he started preaching so loudly that the new sound man kept trying desperately to turn him down until he realized that Banshee's microphone wasn't turned on. He started waving his arms wildly and prancing around and putting "ah" after every few syllables – "I'm talking-ah, about-ah, the mighty Holy Ghost-ah!" Manny didn't know what to make of it, but Trulie had seen it before. "This is what they call Old-Time Pentecostal Preaching," she whispered. Manny was almost mortified when he realized that in between the "ah's" Windmill was preaching the same kind of message Manny had been taught at Bigger Faith. Manny had always assumed that NO ONE in all of Drywood County preached "faith" messages that agreed with what Bigger Faith taught, and that was why God had sent him there – to educate all the other poor ignorant preachers who didn't have his training.

At the end, Pastor Windmill started waving his hands over people and they started falling over. More interestingly, some of them were getting up and testifying that they were healed. Now Manny was really perplexed. At school he had learned about the gifts of the Holy Spirit by watching the people on the platform flow in them, but he never got to flow in them himself. Here was a guy who had never attended Bigger Faith Bible Institute having miracles that Bigger Faith Worship Center didn't even see, though Manny had preached about miracles. So there WERE miracles going on in Drywood County, but not at the very church pastored by the county It-Boy!

When it was all over, Banshee Windmill asked Manny to come over for a "talking-to." Manny figured that he'd better listen this time.

“Son, if you decide to pastor again, I’ve got some advice for you. When you go into a new town, try to get to know the ministers who have been laboring there for years. Now you might know some things that they don’t about the Bible, but I can guarantee you that they’ll know some things about ministry and handling people that you don’t know. And they will DEFINITELY know some things about the people in the town and the history of the area that you don’t know. You got yourself into trouble because you didn’t know these people and you didn’t make any effort to learn about them. You didn’t really act like you cared, either. You just wanted your platform to preach and build your own little kingdom where you were the top dog.

“You came in here with an attitude that you couldn’t learn from any of us. Son, you can learn from just about ANYONE because none of us knows it all. We all need each other. You were like a hand saying to a foot, ‘I don’t need you.’ We do know a thing or two about miracles around here. And by the way, I learned faith reading books from Bigger Faith Ministries. The reason you don’t see my name on their church listing is that it’s limited to pastors who actually ATTENDED Bigger Faith Bible Institute.

“I got to see an unfortunate attitude when I went to the National Bigger Faith Conference one year. People kept asking me if there was a Bigger Faith church in Busted Bow. I told them no, but I preach the same things they teach at BFBI. That didn’t matter to them. If it wasn’t a church pastored by a Bigger Faith graduate, it didn’t count, so a Bigger Faith church was needed in our town. I hope that since then the Bigger Faith alumni have come to realize that they don’t have a monopoly on the Holy Ghost.

“I’ve seen Bigger Faith people with the attitude that other pastors should support their meetings, but they never went out and supported other pastors’ meetings unless they were fairly far away and hosted by fellow Bigger Faith grads. That drove people away after a while. The other pastors just gave up on trying to network with them. I’m telling you, blowing into town and just starting up your own thing in isolation from all the other ministers in the Body of Christ is a mistake. You made it once; don’t make it twice.”

Epilogue

When I pastored, I was glad that I did the opposite of what Manny and Trulie Hasnowitz did, especially after knowing another pastor who did what they did and had this kind of horrible outcome. I made it a point to network with the other pastors in the area. I quit my local town group because they let a gay-rights-champion fake minister posing as a Christian in as a member, but I was part of a county-wide group of real believers for years. I made some good friends who were denominational pastors who did not preach the Baptism with the Holy Spirit. I DID learn things from them. We enjoyed fellowshiping around what we could agree on. They even listened to my healing testimonies and were supportive of my decision to follow God into healing ministry even though their churches did not practice divine healing. I was the guest speaker at several events put on by one of those denominational churches, including Christian school chapel services, a Thanksgiving service and a community Easter sunrise service at which I preached Christ and gave an altar call. Folks at that service even said that they felt a “whoosh” when I did it, though I’d call it the anointing.

We all need each other in the Body of Christ. Don't ever forget it. Pride goes before destruction (Proverbs 16:18).

The Insecure Preacher

Once upon a time, there was a good preacher of the gospel who was seeing some good results when he ministered to the sick. But he didn't always enjoy his life. He always had a nagging feeling that he should be doing things better and spending more time praying and studying. It didn't matter how much praying and studying he did, it seemed like he always needed to do "more" if he was to become truly successful. The same words his church's worship leaders used almost every service ("C'mon, you can do better than that!") had defined his life. Surely he could do better and become someone that God could "really" use. If only he had more time to pray and get closer to God like some of the great preachers of old!

You see, he worked a full-time job to support himself while preaching "on the side," so time was a precious commodity. He also had a wife and a small child to care for. So time was very limited. After all, his family wanted to see him! He would do some enjoyable things at home, but in the back of his head was the nagging feeling that he COULD have been spending that time praying for the lost and praying for revival constantly like the people in the book he'd read, "Why You Don't See a Move of God" by James Heavyhand. This book challenged people who had never stayed up all night praying for revival. He liked the idea, but he figured that he had to work the next day, and it wouldn't help him be a great revivalist if he fell asleep at work and lost his job. In fact, it was hard enough to spend his mandatory 60-minute Official Quiet Time with God in the morning before going to work as required by another book he read ("You MUST Pray One Hour" by Lee Gallist). He suspected that God was none too happy when he fell asleep during his designated hour. In fact, he suspected that maybe there would not be a move of God in his area because he just didn't have time to pray a lot and most other people had no idea what revival was and wouldn't be praying for it. So it could be up to him and he was dropping the ball.

He lamented the lack of time he had to "get prayed up" before preaching. Of course, working 40 hours a week did put a dent in his free time, and overtime weeks were worse. He'd go through a mental checklist. Did he spend time interceding for the people who would hear his message? Did he spend enough time in the Word to get a good message? Did he spend enough time just being still before God and listening to see if God had a special direction for the service or any prophetic words? Did he build himself up enough praying in the Holy Spirit? Did he bind Satan enough? Did he pray for revival to break out in that city? Did he pray sufficiently mighty prayers to "pray the power down?" Did he get himself "full enough of the Word" so that his "faith level" would be ready to handle any need before him? Could he – for at least his next engagement – be a real "man of prayer" like the people in Heavyhand's book?

Of course, he could never answer all those questions in the affirmative, so he always felt like he really should be a better preacher than He was. He heard people use the slogan all the time, “It’s all about YOU!” and that had unwittingly become his motto when preaching. It was indeed all about him – HIS prayer time, HIS preparation and study, HIS faith level, and so on. The pressure was no fun, and he would almost moan when he heard the Scripture that said that Jesus’ yoke is easy and His burden is light (Matthew 11:30). There wasn’t much easy or light going on with his preaching ministry. He was SURE that God was looking disapprovingly from heaven, saying, “You should be doing more...if only you had the time to be a real man of prayer and get close to Me! Then I’d reveal my REALLY deep secrets to you and your ministry would be world-shaking. C’mon, you can do better than that!” He lamented the times that someone with a serious need came forward, and he thought, “If only my faith level were higher, I could pray in faith for that person’s healing. But I’ll have to do a LOT more Word reading to advance my faith meter to that point, and it would probably take more time than I actually have.”

Then there was the issue of sin. This preacher had heard that “the purer the vessel, the more God can use it.” So he undertook to find all the sin in his life so that he could get rid of it and then God could really use him. Following his church’s suggestion, he made a list with huge letters at the top that said MY SIN. He then proceeded to list all the sins he was committing that he could think of. What about those sins of omission, like NOT praying for all those in authority? Had he prayed for the president? The vice president? His representative and his senator? The Supreme Court justices? The local mayor and city council? The state governor and lieutenant governor? The Sin List started to get overwhelming, but the preacher didn’t want to miss a thing. So he kept re-reading the famous old revival sermon, “All the Different Ways You’re Sinning” by Hugo S. Trey. This brought up all kinds of different sins the preacher had never even considered.

He lived in fear that when he gave account of his life before Jesus, it would end up being one gigantic apology for always falling short of what He wanted.

His next step was to carefully confess every sin on a regular basis so that he could receive forgiveness for each one, based on what his church taught about 1 John 1:9. He wanted to “keep short accounts with God” by staying “fessed up” (as they put it). After all, how could God use anyone who had unforgiven sins?

When bad things happened or his ministry plans seemed to be advancing too slowly, he would automatically assume that God was punishing him for his poor Christian walk. This surely meant that he would have to redouble his efforts to stay out of sin and press into more spiritual activity during the day so that God would be able to remove the restrictions He was placing to delay his ministry until such time as he had his act more together. He consoled himself by reasoning that someday he would be glad that God had held back his ministry, because he would not have been as ready as he thought he was to advance.

He started his own business, which made his schedule more flexible. Although it had tripled his income, he started feeling guilty about all the money he was getting. Shortly after becoming a Christian, he had read about the (supposed) Christian need to give almost everything away and live on the minimum possible. The book (“Feel Guilty Because Others Starve” by Nicholas Pokkets) had made him question having anything nice for himself or his family. His family, which had not read that book, did not have an issue with having some nice things. He was single when he first read the book, and in his zeal (which at that point exceeded his wisdom) he gave away almost all his life’s savings, leaving himself with a single-digit bank account after he gave the rest to help starving people in Africa. After all, wasn’t that what Jesus expected of the rich young ruler (although this preacher, while young, was by no means rich)? But if he had money now, would not the Lord want him to do the same? And if he didn’t do it, wouldn’t he have some dead African child’s blood on his hands while he feasted on a hot fudge sundae downtown? He even heard a man on the radio boast that he gave the money to buy a lawn mower to the cause of the gospel once he realized that he could ask the neighbors to borrow THEIR lawn mowers – though he wondered exactly what kind of Gospel witness it would be to serve a “cheap” God like that.

The problem was that no matter how much he gave, there would always be one more poor person who might die of starvation. Although no one had appointed him Feeder of the World, he often felt that whatever he did was never enough.

Then there was the issue of fasting. The idea of a long fast didn’t seem too practical when he had to work for a living, but he had heard that many mightily-used preachers of old had gone on long fasts, following the advice of an old book (“The FAST Way to Incredible Spiritual Power” by Les B. Eaton). If only he weren’t bivocational – maybe he’d have a shot at emulating some greats of faith! But maybe he would have to settle for ROUTINE spiritual power for now.

Then there was the issue of reading the Bible through once a year, as so many people recommended. But the preacher felt guilty about not wanting to spend much time in certain Old Testament passages enumerating who begat whom and who did what service in Moses’ tabernacle and how many shekels or hins of whatever and turtledoves or pigeons or sheep were required as sacrifices for certain sins. The extended doom prophecies in the “major and minor prophets” seemed to get old after a while, too, though they were interesting to at least read through. However, the preacher had no personal stake in what had happened in Edom, Philistia, Babylon, Egypt, Moab, and so on, and he felt guilty for not getting “into it” more while reading about the woes to various countries. The preacher always looked forward to the New Testament part of the reading because that was the covenant he was in, but reading the Bible through every year meant spending the majority of his Bible reading time in the Old Testament. In fact, he sometimes got an “Old Testament mentality,” finding himself being judgmental and critical of others, and even more so of himself for failing to measure up to God’s expectations. He feared God’s hot displeasure and did not look forward to the day when he would give account of himself to Jesus, figuring that he would owe the Lord a huge apology for not having done more with his life.

Amazingly, that same preacher today enjoys preaching and enjoys life! What changed? Well, he learned some things.

The Golf Pro's Advice

The preacher had loved golf since childhood, but he was never any good at it. He probably had every bad habit mentioned in golf instruction books – moving his head, not keeping his left arm straight, forcing the shot by lunging with his hands from the top of his backswing, shifting his weight from his forward foot to his backward foot when striking the ball, gripping the club too tightly, and so on. He had done some things to help a local golf pro, and in return the pro gave him some free lessons. The preacher felt embarrassed as he went for his first lesson. The pro was going to see everything he was doing wrong!

But the preacher obviously needed the help. When he had a water hazard in front of him, a perfectly normal shot became grounds for panic. All he could think was, “Whatever you do, DON’T duff the ball into the hazard like you did the last twenty times you played this hole!” He would fight to control his body so that it would stop shaking. It would normally be an easy shot – but not with that water that was messing with his head! There was a time that a man who shouldn’t have been there was way off to the side and he thought, “Whatever you do, DON’T hit that man with the ball by hitting a ‘banana-ball’ slice!” His ensuing shot missed the man by only a few feet. On another occasion, there was a condo well to the left of a hole, and he thought to himself, “Whatever you do, DON’T duck-hook your drive and hit that condo!” He heard a sickening thwack as his ball bounced off the condo.

To his surprise, the first thing the golf instructor said was, “I’m not going to tell you everything you’re doing wrong. If I do that, that’s all you’ll think about during your swing, and that will actually reinforce bad habits. I don’t want you to think about doing WRONG things. Instead, I’m going to tell you what to do RIGHT. If you’ll concentrate on doing the RIGHT things, you automatically won’t do the wrong things.” To the preacher’s amazement, the advice worked! He concentrated on getting certain swing mechanics RIGHT, and amazingly, the WRONG habits stopped.

A famous golfer was asked, “What about the big water hazard in front of the green?” and his reply was something like this: “What water? I’m not looking at that water because that’s not where my shot is going. I’m looking at the green, because THAT’S where my shot is going.” The biggest golf problems that preacher had were between his two ears!

The preacher chopped over 20 strokes off his handicap as he started to shoot under 100 for 18 holes regularly, eventually getting well into the 80’s on good days. Before those lessons, he had broken 100 once in thirty years of golf! Eventually, the hole on which the preacher cleared that water hazard only 2 or 3 times a YEAR became easy, as the vast majority of his shots made it over. In fact, he moved to another location where the local golf course had a pond in front of the green on a certain hole, and it was his best-scoring hole! He kept encouraging himself that he COULD do it right and he concentrated on doing things right instead of wrong.

The day came when he realized that he was making exactly the same mistake he made at golf when it came to SIN! By dwelling on sin all the time, he had developed an acute sin-consciousness. He was constantly afraid that he would “let God down” by sinning. This would surely result in His displeasure, which would surely result in Him holding back how much He could use that preacher. To try to combat sin, he became his own worst critic, roundly criticizing himself for every shortcoming. He tried harder and harder not to sin, but it wasn’t working! Then he discovered Galatians 5:16 and realized that it was the same principle that the golf pro had shared, but in the spiritual realm. Here God had promised that if he concentrated on doing the RIGHT things – walking in the Spirit – he would automatically not do the WRONG things. He made that change and avoiding sin became much easier.

He finally understood what Romans 5:17 says – that righteousness is a GIFT, not a state of self-achieved sinless perfection. So he chose to think about his righteous standing with God that had been his all along because of Jesus’ blood – he just hadn’t recognized it! He had labored under the concept that righteousness was something that you work up that depends on how “good” a life you’re living. He finally realized that he had the same right to approach God as JESUS because that GIFT of righteousness had made him just as righteous as Jesus. Whew, that took a load off his thinking! No longer would he have to work for God’s acceptance when he was already “accepted in the beloved” (Ephesians 1:6). He could come BOLDLY to the throne of grace to get mercy and grace to help when he needed it (Hebrews 4:16)! God could use him ANYTIME because of his blood-bought right standing!

And just as it had worked at golf, when he reflected on his blood-bought right standing with God, it became much easier not to sin – the pressure to perform was off! Just as it was easier not to duff the ball into the hazard when he stopped fearing duffing the ball into the hazard, it was easier not to sin when he stopped fearing that he would sin.

And the biggest relief was the day that He realized that God was not up in heaven counting his sins against him. He wasn’t looking over the bannister of heaven finding every little fault He could nitpick about. Instead, God’s primary thought toward him was LOVE, not CRITICISM. He felt a little silly having labored under the lie for so long that God was constantly focused on his failures and shortcomings – as he was!

How to Get Close to God

If you’re a believer, the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit all live in you (1 John 4:15, John 14:23, Romans 8:9). So if you want to get close to God, the first thing to do is get saved!

Then draw near to Him (James 4:8) and He will draw near to you. That doesn’t take hours of prayer so that you can get “really close.” Just choose to draw near to Him and He will reciprocate immediately. That’s Biblical, as opposed to singing, “Just a closer walk with Thee. Grant it Jesus, is my plea.” If you’ll just choose to draw near to God, no pleading will be necessary for Him to draw close to you.

It got the preacher off the performance treadmill when he realized that his ability to approach God (and thus be “close”) was not based on his track record after all – it was based on Jesus’ perfect track record that had been imputed to him the day he got saved!

God Isn’t an Unreasonable Taskmaster

He found out some good news – God actually knew that he had a job and a family when He called him! Jesus DID tell the truth when He said that His yoke is easy and His burden is light (Matthew 11:30).

Now that doesn’t mean that you’ll never face hatred and trials – God assures you that you will (2 Timothy 3:12, John 16:33) – or that you’ll never have to exert any great effort at any time. But God is NOT an Egyptian taskmaster threatening beatings if you don’t make bricks without straw. He won’t call you to do something knowing that you’ll never have the time to do it. Now, you might not have the time to be all over social media, watch TV and play multiplayer Internet games and still have time to do what He wants, but if you will order your steps correctly, you WILL have time to accomplish everything that He wants you to do. Just be aware that this may involve some sacrifice of what your FLESH would rather do sometimes.

It’s All about JESUS

The devil must be the one who coined the phrase, “It’s all about YOU!” When you get centered on yourself, you set yourself up to fail. Rather than looking to himself as the perfecter of his own faith, the preacher finally learned to look to JESUS, the author and finisher of his faith (Hebrews 12:2). After all, isn’t Jesus the best faith teacher ever? Why not get His help in learning to walk by faith?

Rather than having faith in his faith, or faith in his ability to be prayed up, he learned to trust Jesus. Preaching was a lot more enjoyable without that pressure on himself.

Authority Is Exercised, Not Prayed Up

The preacher finally learned another lesson: You don’t PRAY to get authority over the devil and his works. You get SAVED! From that point forward, you HAVE authority over the devil and his works (Luke 10:19). It is the DEVIL who wants you to think that you have to be “prayed up” enough to do anything. What Jesus gave you in the New Covenant was on a gift basis that has nothing to do with your personal performance.

What about the words of Jesus about the disciples' unbelief through lack of prayer and fasting? I believe in prayer and I believe in fasting, and I do both. But I don't do them out of fear of missing out on spiritual power. I do them because I love God and I want to keep my flesh under. Jesus had already GIVEN His disciples authority over unclean spirits. The issue was NOT that they needed to pray and fast to get that authority – it was that they needed to pray and fast to become more aware of the authority that they already had! And so it is today. I've never been on a long fast, either; I've never gone more than four days in a row at this writing and I have no plans to break that record.

Jesus did not say, "You shall receive power after you prove your consecration by going on a long fast." He said, "You shall receive power after the Holy Spirit has come upon you" (Acts 1:8). So the way to receive spiritual power is to receive the Holy Spirit, not go on a fast. Have you received the Holy Spirit? If so, you HAVE received power, so stop struggling and striving to try to get it!

The Key is USING the Faith You Have, Not GETTING Faith

A question the preacher used to ask himself when a person with a need came up was, "Do I have enough faith?" This was just part of his constant introspection that he needed to get over. A better question is, "What does the Word say?" When you know what the Word says, you just act on it. Acting on the Word does not consist of staring at your navel trying to figure out if you have enough faith to do something. God has already given you the measure of faith (Romans 12:3)! When the disciples asked for more faith (Luke 17:5-6), Jesus did not say, "Sure, here's more faith! I knew you needed more." Instead, He talked about what would happen if you USE your faith – even if your faith were the smallest they could imagine – the size of a mustard seed! Faith for a particular thing comes by hearing the Word of God (Romans 10:17). Once you hear the Word concerning laying hands on the sick (Mark 16:18, John 14:12), you can now point the faith you already have in that direction. Once you know what the Word says, just act on the Word. That is the essence of walking in faith.

The preacher had heard a lot of "faith" messages about "building your faith," and there is something to be said for immersing yourself in the Word so that what IT says becomes more real to you than what your circumstances are telling you. The problem comes when you see yourself as struggling to raise the level of your "faith meter." For example, this preacher had heard that "faith comes by hearing the Word" (see Romans 10:17) so he figured that if he would just read the Bible as much as possible, his faith level would soar. The idea was to just read and read and read – it didn't matter which books of the Bible – and watch his faith level rise! This was based on a misunderstanding of Romans 10:17 in its context, the main thought of which is expressed 3 verses earlier:

Romans 10:14:

How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?

The preacher finally realized that his take on this verse, which was “build my faith sky-high by reading and re-reading a lot of Scripture” was the opposite of what the verse really teaches! The people in question had not heard the gospel because no one had preached it to them. Once they heard it, they could exercise their faith (which every man has – Romans 12:3) for the blessing of the new birth. There is no hint here that you have to hear the gospel a lot of times before you get “enough faith” to get saved. I know that some people extract the phrase “hearing, and hearing” and preach it as meaning that you have to “hear and hear” (a lot) the Word of God to walk in faith. But I see no reason to mess with the comma where the translators put it – connecting two thoughts that faith comes by hearing AND hearing comes by the Word of God. When you have heard what the Word says, you can exercise your faith by ACTING on it. Paul did not even hint that the hearers might have to hear the same message 100 times before people would actually get “a high enough faith level” to act on it. We don’t see the apostles preaching like that. They put the gospel of what Jesus did out there and people believed it without any indication that they needed to hear it more than once before they could act on their faith. Peter certainly didn’t have to preach ten faith messages at Cornelius’s house – he didn’t even get through ONE message and the people had heard enough to get saved. They acted on the gospel before he was even done with what he had planned to say!

I think we’ve done unwittingly done ourselves a disservice in faith circles by tying extensive works on our part to being able to act in faith and walk in God’s blessings. We’ve made things a LOT more complicated than necessary. Once you hear that the Word says, you can point your faith in that direction and act on what God says. You don’t have to be immersed in the Word 24/7 to do that. God knows that you don’t have the time to do that.

Now I’m sure that some people will take issue with these statements and conclude that I am somehow against reading the Bible a lot. I’m not! I sometimes “binge-read” the Bible and not that long ago I read the entire Bible in one month. I love the Word, and you should too! The better you know Scripture, the better you can act in faith in agreement with what it says. However, what I’m warning against is getting a “works mentality” that “it’s all about YOU – YOUR ability to muster up more faith.” This puts the focus on YOU instead of JESUS and His finished work, and it will lead to frustration. How many times did the woman with the issue of blood have to hear of Jesus? How many times did the crowds need to hear about the Man from Nazareth who did works indicating that He was the promised Messiah? Probably not dozens of times! They received when they ACTED on what they heard. If they could hear once (probably) and act in faith back then, why can’t we do it today?

So should you read the Word a lot? Absolutely! But NOT with the idea that if you don’t adhere to a feverish Bible reading schedule, you won’t have heard the Word “enough” to respond in faith to a need that arises in your life. Just ask yourself this question: What would you do if you knew with 100% certainty that every verse in the Bible is true? Well, just go act accordingly. That’s faith!

Fessed Up and Messed Up

Contrary to popular belief, you do not have to confess every sin to God to be “right” with Him – Jesus already took care of the “right with God” issue when He gave you the gift of HIS righteousness (Romans 5:17). But the preacher finally learned what 1 John 1:9 really means and got free from the idea that God couldn’t use him unless HE could figure out all the ways that he was sinning and confess those sins one by one. That was a major relief! No longer did he have to worry that he might get messed up because he wasn’t fessed up.

Binding the Devil?

It finally dawned on the preacher that no one in the New Testament ever said, “Now, remember to bind the devil every day!” as he had heard one of his favorite preachers say, nor was there a record that anyone in Acts “bound the devil” before preaching. Scripture doesn’t say that Satan will be bound until he’s bound for a thousand years! Jesus said WHATSOEVER, not WHOSOEVER, you bind on earth will be bound in heaven.

You Can Trust the WORD to Do the Work in People

It’s not up to you to be a Holy Spirit Salesperson and try to convince everyone of the truth with your persuasive oratory. Let the Holy Spirit do the convincing. He’s the one who teaches believers all things. Put the Word out there and expect that it will work effectively in people who believe (1 Thessalonians 2:13). It was liberating for the formerly insecure preacher to realize that it is GOD’S word he was preaching, so GOD would back it and use it to enlighten the hearers. That took the pressure off himself and made preaching a lot more enjoyable.

Held Back No More

What a relief it was the day that he realized that GOD was not the one trying to hold him back – Satan was. After all, God had already said “Go!” How freeing it was to know that he no longer had to walk in fear because of his unbiblical “Don’t sin or God can’t use you!” mindset. How liberating to realize that setbacks were NOT God’s punishment for his failure to measure up! This gave him the boldness to just GO and trust God’s grace in him to work, rather than feeling like he had to earn enough merit badges from God before God could “really” use him.

Walk Free as He Did!

If you can identify at all with what this preacher went through, I hope that you can learn the lessons he did and walk in freedom rather than living in constant fear of messing up, displeasing God, facing punishment for your shortcomings and having your ministry held back.

Sickness as Chastening and Judgment in the Old Testament

Does God ever bring on sickness as judgment? Yes! The following cases in the Old Testament should demonstrate this more than amply. Remember when you read these accounts that sickness was considered punishment. Since Jesus has taken the punishment for your sins, you do not need to be punished for them. Jesus has made you exempt from the things talked about here. You may click the notes on the various passages for comments about each incident.

In Exodus 8:16-17 and Exodus 9:8-11, God put lice and boils upon the Egyptians as a plague and as a judgment for Pharaoh's refusal to obey God and let Israel go.

In Exodus 32:35, the Lord made people sick because they built a golden idol calf in the desert.

Leviticus 26:14-39 and Deuteronomy 28:15-68 made it clear that God would cause sickness to come on Israel if the people were disobedient. This happened repeatedly throughout Israel's history.

In Numbers 11:33-34, Israelites who lusted were made sick when the Lord smote the people with a great plague.

In Numbers 12:1-15, Miriam was struck with leprosy for seven days as judgment for having a mutinous attitude toward God's appointed leader. (Note that God was merciful and healed her.)

In Numbers 14:36-37, the spies who brought back an unbelieving report were killed by a plague.

In Numbers 16:44-50, Israelites were killed by a plague because the Lord was angry with them for siding with Korah's rebels and the burners of illegitimate incense who were killed by God.

In Numbers 25:3-13, 24,000 Israelites were killed by a plague sent as punishment for idolatry.

In Numbers 31:14-16, and Joshua 22:17, the Israelites were reminded that a plague came on them through idolatry.

In Deuteronomy 29:19-22, God clearly declared plagues and sickness to be a curse for disobedience.

In 1 Samuel 5:1-6:5, the Philistines (who stole the ark of God) were smitten with terrible plagues.

In 1 Samuel 16:14-23, an "evil spirit from God" tormented backslidden Saul, who lost his anointing as king because of his disobedience and presumption in performing a priestly duty. Kings were not priests, so they were not allowed to perform priestly duties. (Click the notes to this passage if you're wondering what the phrase "evil spirit from God" is talking about.)

In 1 Samuel 25:37-38, God smote Nabal for his churlish treatment of David. He died within ten days.

In 2 Samuel 12:13-18, David and Bathsheba's illegitimate child died as judgment for their sin.

In 1 Kings 13:4-6, King Jeroboam's hand was struck useless because he attempted to harm a prophet of God. Jeroboam asked the prophet to pray for healing, and when the prophet prayed for healing, God healed Jeroboam.

In 1 Kings 13:33-14:11, Jeroboam's son was smitten by a fatal illness as judgment for Jeroboam's leading of the nation into sin.

In 2 Kings 1:2-4, Ahaziah died as judgment for seeking advice from Baalzebub, a heathen god.

In 2 Kings 5:27, Naaman's leprosy came on Gehazi as punishment for his deception.

1 Chronicles 21:7-27 has another account of a plague that was judgment for sin.

In 2 Chronicles 21:12-19, a horrible disease, along with other calamities, struck the family of a wicked king of Judah because of his sin.

In 2 Chronicles 26:16-21, King Uzziah was struck with leprosy for attempting to perform a priestly duty.

Psalm 89:20-23 and Jeremiah 50:13 mention plagues on God's enemies.

Micah 6:12-13 talks about God making people because of their sins.

Zechariah 14:12-15 describes an awful killer plague that will come on those who attack Jerusalem.

Zechariah 14:16-19 declares sickness to be a judgment for not keeping the feast of tabernacles.

There is also a case where God's angels caused blindness in a crowd of people in Sodom who were trying to break into Lot's house (Genesis 19:10-11). However, this was more a case of God's protection for Lot and his household than a case of judging sin. Sodom's sexual perversion was judged in a far more drastic manner soon after this incident.

You can tie yourself up in knots debating God's "permitting" of Satan to destroy versus God doing it Himself, but the fact is that God is responsible for the judgments in these verses, even if indirectly. Whether you want to say that He "sent" them or "allowed" them, clearly He was involved. There is such a thing as the wrath of God, although it is not often preached today! As a Christian, YOU are saved from wrath through Jesus Christ (Romans 5:9, 1 Thessalonians 1:10, 1 Thessalonians 5:9 and elsewhere), so none of these things should happen to you. However, there are times even under grace where sickness can be still be chastening or judgment. (See the discussion, Sickness as Chastening and Judgment in the New Testament.)

Sickness is not a nice little pet for you to get cozy with. It is a curse for sin. It does not belong to you. You are the righteousness of God in Christ (2 Corinthians 5:21), so you should not pay the penalty for sin. Jesus already paid it for you. Why should something that is judgment come upon a person who has been legally acquitted? You have a right to walk free from it. Like sin, sickness will try to attach itself to you, but you can overcome it through God's Word.

Sickness as Chastening and Judgment in the New Testament

If you want a hot-potato issue in the church world, this is probably it. You get people mad on both sides when you start digging into the Scriptures to answer questions like these: “Can sickness be the chastening of the Lord in the New Covenant? Can sickness or death be the judgment of God in the New Covenant?”

The answer is clearly yes.

But no ordinary believer qualifies for chastening or judgment. If you are walking with the Lord and staying out of gross sin – particularly sin that harms other Christians, you do not qualify to get sick or die prematurely as judgment. You can do things that will get you out from under God’s protection and open you up to sickness or worse, even under grace, as will be proved below. However, it’s very difficult to put yourself in such a spot, as God’s judgment on believers in this life is limited to rare and extraordinary circumstances specified by Scripture.

There are two prevalent, equally incorrect, views on this subject. One is, “Our God is a good God all the time, so He can’t ever put sickness on anyone because there is no sickness in heaven. So God could never chasten or punish anyone with sickness.” The other is, “Sickness is a tool of God to build character in us. We can learn patience and other valuable lessons through sickness.”

The facts are these: You are redeemed from sickness by Jesus Christ’s atoning sacrifice. As long as you walk in the light, you can walk free from sickness. However, if you willfully choose to sin, even as a Christian, God will permit you to be ill or even actively see to it that you get ill or even die! That’s a strong statement that I will back up with Scripture!

Herod Killed for Trying to Steal God’s Glory

Acts 12:21-23 tells how God killed Herod because he attempted to take God’s glory for himself. An angel of the Lord struck Herod with a fatal illness. This surely makes us squirm if we are used to the idea that God could never harm anyone because He is good all the time. Yes, God is love, but the wrath of God is still a New Testament reality. (Read the book of Revelation if you don’t believe that!) However, if you are not stealing God’s glory, you don’t have to worry about being another Herod. Herod was not a believer.

Bar-Jesus Struck Blind by the Hand of the Lord

It is explicitly stated that the hand of the Lord, not the hand of Satan, struck Bar-Jesus the sorcerer blind in Acts 13:6-12. This was a supernatural blindness, not necessarily any kind of eye disease. No regular eye disease would instantly strike you blind and then let you see again later. This was a sign and a wonder to the people Paul was attempting to minister to. It was also a visible judgment on the sorcerer, who was trying to hinder the spreading of the gospel.

Jesus Kills!

Revelation 2:20-23 contains an even more shocking statement from Jesus Himself, where He says He will kill an adulteress's children and throw her into a bed (implying a sickbed)! Jesus does not even say that He will "permit the devil to kill them." Obviously, Jesus would have a direct role in the death of these children as well as in the adulteress's sickness. Not only that, but Jesus promised to throw those who committed adultery with her into "great tribulation" as well – and it would be at His hand, not the devil's.

This woman (called Jezebel) was messing around with the Lord's Church. Judgment was not immediate. Jesus said that He "gave her space to repent of her fornication; and she repented not." Even in her gross sin, God extended mercy to her for a season. But when she would not repent, Jesus pronounced judgment against her. This was necessary to protect His church at Thyatira. If He allowed this self-appointed prophetess to continue seducing and misleading His people, the church at Thyatira would be in danger. Jesus had to take her out of the way.

It would simplify things for "faith preachers" and "grace preachers" if this passage were not in the Bible, in which case we could correctly claim that Jesus would never kill anyone or make anyone sick. But this passage is here, and we have to deal with it!

Let this be a warning to anyone who would try to lead the people of God into immorality. Jesus will give you space to repent, but eventually judgment will fall, and it will hurt. It's one thing to be immoral yourself, but when you start corrupting the Church, you are in a lot of trouble with God. (See the discussion about 1 Corinthians 3:16-17 below for more on this.)

If you are not seducing or misleading the people of God, this passage does not apply to you. Even if you were to get into gross sin, we see that the mercy of God would give you time to repent. If you didn't, it would be your own fault and you would bear the consequences. Jesus will never do anything like this to a believer who is living a normal Christian life.

Ananias and Sapphira Lie and Die

Acts 5:1-11 shows that lying can lead to dying even under the New Covenant. Ananias and Sapphira fell dead as judgment for lying to Peter about the money that they gave. If you think this is too harsh a punishment, perhaps you do not share the Lord's intense hatred of lying. Lying may be socially acceptable in our day, but it is unacceptable with God. One incident of lying to God's anointed was all it took to end both of their lives. Do not play games with God's servants. Do not lie to your pastor during premarital counseling by saying that you and the one you're engaged to haven't been in bed together if you have. (MANY couples lie under those circumstances, but it's a dangerous practice.)

It has been suggested that Ananias and Sapphira simply died of embarrassment when their sins were publicly exposed and that God did not have a direct hand in it. I find that difficult to accept because Peter knew beforehand that Sapphira was going to die. In the context of verse 9, he seems to link it directly to her sin. He basically said to her, "How could you agree to lie like that? You're history, just like your husband!" Besides, do you know anyone who has actually died of embarrassment?

Note in passing that although some believers sold possessions to help others, that was never required; it was their choice. Proof that a kind of communism was not mandatory is found in Peter's statements that it was their land and their money (verse 4) and they were free to do what they wanted with it – except lie about it!

If you aren't doing what they did, you have nothing to fear. God will not strike you dead arbitrarily.

Many Corinthians Get Sick and Many Die for Failure to "Judge Themselves"

1 Corinthians 11:27-32 says that many Christians at Corinth were made sick and many died because they would not "judge themselves" regarding their sin. In this case, they were eating the Lord's Supper in an unworthy manner, walking out of love toward each other while doing it, and seeing it as an opportunity to pig out rather than reverence God. They failed to appreciate that they were partaking of emblems of Christ's death. They were playing games with the holy things of God, treating them with disrespect.

One side effect of this would be to fail to see that Christ's body was broken for our healing. By regarding the communion bread as mere food, they missed an opportunity to reflect on the fact that healing belonged to them. This is sometimes stated as the reason why the Corinthians died, but it is not the main reason in context. Many Christians do die because they do not recognize that Jesus' broken body provided healing. That is a fact, but this passage is not primarily talking about that.

It is clear from the context that the sickness and death that befell them were not from ignorance of their covenant healing rights symbolized by the bread, but were direct judgment from God for their misconduct. The main point is that they were eating and drinking damnation (judgment) on themselves by treating holy things irreverently. They were “guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.” This kind of mistake cost Nadab, Abihu and Uzzah their lives, cost King Uzziah his health, and cost King Saul his throne in the Old Testament. All these people attempted to perform a priestly function that was not theirs to perform. They took the holy things of God lightly. Playing games with the holy things of God can still cost you.

This passage is widely misunderstood to be a warning not to let an unbeliever take communion because he is “unworthy.” That is not stated. Needless to say, there is no point in an unbeliever taking communion, since communion is an ordinance for believers. However, the warning is not about unworthy people taking communion. It is about believers taking communion in an unworthy manner. The people getting weak and sickly and dying were the Corinthian believers, not unbelievers! Paul said that those judged were “among you.” Paul wasn’t warning unbelievers; he was warning believers!

“For if we should judge ourselves, we should not be judged” makes it clear that the context is believers who will not take the things of God seriously or who willfully persist in sin. It is perfectly clear from this statement that no believer walking in the light will suffer this kind of judgment.

Even this judgment shows the mercy of God. Some of these people could have completely fallen from grace if God had not intervened. Paul went on to say (1 Corinthians 11:32): “But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.” At least the ones who died will not be condemned because they were still Christians when they died. They just left the earth a lot sooner than they had to. That is better than going to hell. As for the ones who were sick, the Lord was chastening them to bring them to their senses. If they had repented, they could have been rid of their sicknesses instead of staying sick and even dying.

Unfortunately, God does have to remove people from His Body who are causing trouble within it. The idea is not to be one of these people. Miracles aside, if you had cancer in your body, that cancer would have to be cut away before it destroyed your whole body, even if it meant losing a body part in the process. It can be like that with Christ’s Body if YOU become a cancer to it.

No believer who makes a normal effort to get sin out of his life has to fear being “chastened of the Lord” the way that some of the Corinthians were. The fact that God does use sickness and premature death to “chasten” and “judge” unruly believers does not mean that all sickness and premature death are God’s judgment! Do not assume that God is judging you just because you get the flu, and do not assume that other people who get sick are being judged for secret sins in their lives. Sickness can be used as judgment, but not all sickness is judgment. The vast majority of sickness is NOT judgment; it’s just part of the corruption that is on the earth because of sin. The case in Corinth was a special exception, not the rule.

Homosexuals Receive a Just Reward in Themselves

Romans 1:26-27 talks about homosexuals receiving the just reward in themselves for their vile, unnatural, shameful error. The Bible will never win you any awards for political correctness, but the fact is the AIDS and other venereal diseases are considered by God to be just punishment for the abomination (Leviticus 18:22, Leviticus 20:13) of homosexuality. (If you received such an illness through a blood transfusion or inherited it from a parent, obviously this does not apply to you.) Some homosexuals do not like to hear this and try to explain away these verses, but the verses will never go away. Some object that it is also an “abomination” under the Law to eat shellfish (true), but there is no shellfish ban in the New Testament (all foods are lawful), while homosexual acts are still condemned in the New Testament. God does not condone sodomy. He declares that no homosexual (or other sexual sinner) shall inherit the kingdom of God. If that’s too strong for you, take it up with God, who wrote 1 Corinthians 6:9-10: “Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God.” The underlined words actually refer in the Greek to two types of homosexuals – active ones and passive ones. God also lists homosexuals in the same list as people who murder their parents and kidnappers, among others. (In 1 Timothy 1:9-10; “them that defile themselves with mankind” in the Greek is a clear reference to homosexuals.) There is no question where God stands on this sinful behavior.

You still walk in love toward homosexuals, just not in their kind of “love” (lust). For purposes of sharing the gospel, the homosexual does not need you to inform him that his HIV-positive condition is judgment for his sin. He needs to know how to get out of his sin. He needs to know that Jesus bled and died for all his sins (not only sodomy) and that he will receive forgiveness for everything if he receives Jesus. He needs to know that the power of God can straighten him out. He needs to know that God loves him so much that He was willing to send Jesus to be tortured and killed in his place. The name of Jesus can drive out AIDS just as it can drive out cancer. I’m a live witness to that fact.

You can’t explain away these verses. You can only avoid doing what they talk about to avoid getting what they talk about. This is why finding a cure for AIDS would not be a permanent solution. Because Romans 1:26-27 will always be true, there would be another horrible disease to take the place of AIDS if a cure for AIDS were found. Partaking of God’s wrath for sexual and other sins is also mentioned in the next section below.

Notice that this passage does not come out and say “God puts sickness on homosexuals.” That is actually not the case; they are receiving the results of a spiritual law in the earth. They are sowing to the flesh and reaping corruption in their flesh. God established this law, but anyone engaging in sodomy is really bringing corruption on himself. God does not need to do anything explicit to put it on him. Although the context of this section is the wrath of God, the use of the phrase “receiving in themselves” (as opposed to “receiving from God”) would indicate that God is not directly responsible for their sickness.

Being Avenged by God

Colossians 3:25 makes it clear that a believer can receive recompense for the wrong he does. In particular, 1 Thessalonians 4:4-6 and Hebrews 13:4 warn believers that God avenges adultery.

If You Defile God's Temple, God Will Destroy You

1 Corinthians 3:16-17 is widely misinterpreted to mean, "If you smoke and drink, you're destroying God's temple, so God will destroy you." That's not at all what this passage is talking about. You is in the plural. God's Church collectively is called the temple of God. God is saying that if any man tries to destroy the Church, God will destroy him. This is a sober warning to anyone who tries to split a local church or tries to break the "unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" in a local body. If you play stupid little churchy political games, setting one person against another to advance yourself, you are a candidate for sickness and destruction. It is too tame to say, "God will allow the devil to destroy you," because this verse says that God will destroy you. God is jealous for His Body. He will personally judge anyone who messes with it. If you can't tolerate your local church, go find one you can tolerate. If there aren't any you can tolerate within driving distance, move so that you are near one that you can tolerate.

Complainers Destroyed

1 Corinthians 10:5-11 warns us of judgment under the New Covenant for some of the same sins that led to judgment under the Old Covenant. In particular, we are warned about lusting after evil things, idolatry, fornication, tempting Christ, and murmuring. If we do these things, we can still incur the same penalties under the New Covenant: dying and being destroyed by the destroyer.

Sin opens you up to the devil's works and gives him the right to move in your life. There is no warning here about calamities for a child of God who stays out of these sins. They only come on you if you choose to sin in these ways. Sin still costs you in the New Testament even though you are forgiven for it.

Even if you would never think of committing adultery, you have purchased the ticket to trouble when you use your tongue to complain about everything the pastor does and to criticize everyone else at church. Touching God's anointed is bad news in either covenant. Even if a leader makes a mistake, you will not secure a blessing for yourself by publicizing it and complaining about it. Lift the leaders up in prayer and get behind them – or get away from them and find somewhere to go where you CAN support the leaders. If you can't find any church that you like anywhere, YOU are the problem and you are already in trouble.

In churches where sexual sins and complaining are rampant, we should expect destruction to also be rampant among those individuals involved. Sin is not a light thing under any covenant. Willful persistence in sin is the door to destruction. If you fail to heed the warning, you will find that the correct statement that God is GOOD at the time does not mean that God is LOVEY-DOVEY all the time. You will encounter a different side of Him.

Judgment Begins at the House of God

When God judged Israel in the book of Ezekiel, He said, “Begin at my sanctuary.” The same principle holds true today. The time has come that judgment must begin at the house of God (1 Peter 4:17). Believers who persist in deliberate sin even when they know better and refuse to repent will be judged. Grace is wonderful, but it does not grant you the right to continue to sin deliberately without consequences.

Handed over to Satan for the Destruction of the Flesh

1 Corinthians 5:1-5 orders a certain man who fornicates with his stepmother to be “handed over to Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.” This was to be formal church discipline. The man was to be kicked out of the church until he repented. The idea was to prevent others in the church from being corrupted in a similar way. If others saw him get away with it, they would be tempted to follow suit.

This is so important that God warns you not even to eat with a so-called brother who is fornicating. The church is to kick such people out and not let them back in until they repent. (The end of 1 Corinthians 5 discusses this; other sins are included in this category along with fornication.) Today we coddle such people and reassure them about God’s wonderful boundless mercy and grace, and some of them just keep sinning and sinning like the man in Corinth before Paul rebuked the Corinthians. If we really obeyed the Bible and kicked the sexually immoral out of the church until they repented, we would not have so many embarrassing incidents among Christians in the Church. These people are a great danger to the flock. They CANNOT be tolerated. It is a lame excuse for the pastor to say (as I actually heard one say), “Well, God forgives him and so do I.” If a church puts a shack-up on the worship team because he can play a mean guitar and make the worship sound really cool, the pastor is an idiot who needs to read his Bible more. And unfortunately, this statement refers to a lot of pastors these days, to say nothing of the ones who wink at sin in the congregation at large because they fear repercussions if they actually obey Hebrews 12:15-16 and look diligently lest there be any fornicator among them. (Like the writer of Hebrews, I am talking about the unrepentant ones who pose as believers and still willfully persist in their sin, not people walking in off the street who need to hear the good news and be saved.)

Jesus forgave the woman caught in adultery – but then He told her to go and sin no more (John 8:10-11). We should do the same. We forgive others for their sins, but we expect them to “Go and sin no more.” If they keep sinning in this kind of way, we should refuse to fellowship with them. If you think this is too harsh, talk to God about it after reading 1 Corinthians 5:11-13 for yourself. Paul also warned, “Evil communications [companions] corrupt good manners” (1 Corinthians 15:33).

Handing the man over to Satan implies that no prayer would be made for his protection and that no one would fellowship with him. He would be out on his own. Without the prayers of the church, the man would soon reap what he sowed and get beaten up by the devil (not God). The idea was that after his flesh started hurting, he would decide to repent and come back. Tough as this seems, this is the mercy of God in action. The goal, of course, is restoration, not judgment, and having the person avoid hell. In the case of this man, the goal was achieved! He repented, he came back, and Paul urged the Corinthians to forgive him (2 Corinthians 2:4-8).

Another case of this is found in 1 Timothy 1:19-20: “Holding faith, and a good conscience; which some having put away concerning faith have made shipwreck: Of whom is Hymenaeus and Alexander; whom I have delivered unto Satan, that they may learn not to blaspheme.” The purpose of handing them over to Satan was not to vengefully curse them and get even with them. It was to cause them to come to their senses and quit sinning – “that they may learn not to blaspheme” as opposed to “that they may get what’s coming to them for blaspheming.”

Woe

Paul said in 1 Corinthians 9:16, “woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!” This does not explicitly include sickness as a woe, but it would not surprise me if it were included. Remember, Paul was a forgiven saint who was the righteousness of God in Christ, as all believers are. But even for him, if he were to deliberately choose to walk in disobedience to what he knew for sure was God’s will, he would be setting himself up for woe to come on him. A believer walking in deliberate disobedience to the known will of God also sets himself up for woes to come upon himself.

Sowing and Reaping

Galatians 6:7-9 discusses a spiritual law in the earth concerning sowing and reaping. According to this law, you reap whatever you sow, and neither God nor the devil is directly involved. You reap your own punishment if you choose to walk in the flesh instead of the Spirit, and you reap your own reward by choosing to sow to the Spirit. In this sense, bodily affliction can be a punishment for walking in the flesh. It is not “sent” to you by either God or the devil, any more than God or the devil makes you fall if you choose to jump off a high building. Spiritual laws are just as binding as physical laws. They can override physical laws. Just as electricity can either electrocute you or let you read healing books on computers, these laws can work either for you or against you, depending on what you do.

Sin

James 5:14-16 says to confess your sins one to another and to pray for one another, that you may be healed. James said that when the elders anoint the sick in the name of the Lord, he will be forgiven of any sins. (This refers to an unbeliever receiving ministry; a believer's sins would already have been forgiven.) The implication seems to be clear from this passage that sin can bring on disease. Jesus definitely believed that. He told the man who had been infirm for 38 years to "Sin no more, lest a worse thing come upon you" (John 5:2-19). Therefore, it is a New Testament teaching that sin can bring on disease. God does not put it on you; you put it on yourself. Your disobedience to God opens the door to the devil.

This doesn't mean that everyone who is sick is in sin. It just means that sin can bring disease on you, and some people are sick because they are in sin.

"Vial" Sores and Pains

Revelation 16:1-2 talks about a vial of the wrath of God being poured out on the earth and horrible sores coming on those who worship the beast. Is the common teaching that "God doesn't have any sickness in heaven to give" really true? God does not steal this vial from the devil; it comes from heaven, and it makes men sick! (Yes, I know that there will be no sickness in our eternal home on the renewed earth, and the sickness in the vials is not in manifestation in heaven.) Food for thought, isn't it? Vengeance is God's (Romans 12:19), not the devil's. Everything the devil does is illegal and contrary to the will of God; he is not God's punisher of sin. We tend to downplay the wrath of God today because no one wants to hear about it and we want everyone to like our nice messages about how good God is. The wrath of God is real today. Sinners will find this out during the Great Tribulation period. Most of the Book of Revelation is about the wrath of God on sinners on the earth! God is good, but that means that He is morally good, not that He will always be nicey-nice to those who reject His Son. God will still be "good all the time" when He sends all those whose names are not written in the Book of Life to hell forever. If they were allowed into heaven, they'd ruin it for the righteous! Being good and being merciful is NOT the same as having a mamby-pamby attitude toward sin. If God let sin go unpunished, He would be unjust and unfit to rule the universe. Thank God for sending Jesus to accept the punishment for our sins, so that those of us who HAVE received Him will be spared the agony that will justly come upon sinners.

Revelation 16:10-11 talks about another vial of the wrath of God that produces pain so bad that men gnaw their tongues. God will send this plague; He will not "permit the devil" to do it.

The Wrath of God

Soon, the wrath of God will bring hail, scorching, poisoning, earthquakes, fire, meteorite impacts, and the destruction of a third of mankind. See the book of Revelation. You can avoid all this by being born again. You see, God reserves wrath for His enemies (Nahum 1:2), not for His children. God has not appointed us to wrath (1 Thessalonians 5:9) but rather delivers us from the wrath to come (1 Thessalonians 1:10). (The King James Version says that He delivered us from the wrath to come, but the Greek word for delivered is actually in the present tense, as is reflected correctly in most translations.)

Preaching about the wrath of God doesn't tickle people's ears. People want to hear how good He is, and how blessed He wants us. Perhaps it would upset many of them if they really studied out the wrath of God in Scripture. Just as God's love carries over from the Old Covenant to the New Covenant, so does His wrath. The book of Revelation is in the New Testament!

You can't blame the devil for the woes in Revelation. In fact, some of the judgments in Revelation are on the devil and his associates. It is too thin to say, "God will permit the devil to pelt the earth with killer comets." It is clearly God's doing. God will kill people. God will torment people. God will make people sick. Does this make you uncomfortable? Perhaps there is a side of God you have not learned about because these verses are not the ones we post on our refrigerators or buy books about. These plagues are the final punishment for unrepented sin on the earth. God is merciful, but He is also just. God provided a way out of this judgment and wrath, but people must receive Jesus before it is too late.

God is not simply "lovey-dovey." We have oversimplified our theology when we say that if anything is bad, it must be the devil. "God is love" is a complete statement as far as a blood-washed saint is concerned. Jesus delivers us from the wrath to come (1 Thessalonians 1:10). This wrath is still real; you are just delivered from it. But the sinners in the earth will discover that there is another side of God, too – His holiness! He cannot tolerate sin. If any man does not accept Christ's substitution for him, that man will personally endure the wrath of God. He will be sent to burn in the lake of fire that is the second death, and be in conscious, everlasting torment.

God created everlasting fire for the devil and his angels (Matthew 25:41), but everyone who is not saved in this life will go there and suffer forever. Talk about pain! At least a saint who unnecessarily dies of cancer endures no more pain from that point on. In the lake of fire, the sinner suffers forever and ever, with no hope of ever escaping his agony. What a horrible punishment! Can you see how foolish it is to say that God is simply a mushy heavenly teddy bear? The lake of fire is a New Covenant concept, too!

The reality of eternal judgment should motivate you to share your faith to spare others a literal eternity of agony. However, it is the goodness of God, not the wrath of God, that draws men to repentance (Romans 2:4). The apostles preached Jesus, the solution to damnation, rather than just preaching damnation. But the wrath of God is real!

"He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him." (John 3:36)

“For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness.” (Romans 1:18)

“But [thou] after thy hardness and impenitent heart treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God” (Romans 2:5)

“For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God. Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience” (Ephesians 5:5-6)

“Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry; for which things’ sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience” (Colossians 3:5-6)

“And out of his [Jesus’] mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God.” (Revelation 19:15)

There are many more verses on this topic, but these should be enough to give you the idea.

If we took this side of God seriously, there would be much more fear of God in the Church, and much less sin.

“Chastening” in Hebrews 12?

I can accept sickness as chastening for the Christian who deliberately engages in gross sin against the church – it is GOD’s chastening in 1 Corinthians 11:27-32 and 1 Corinthians 3:16-17. However, the “chastening” in Hebrews 12 is another matter. It does not fall into this category. This kind of chastening refers to fatherly correction and rebuke. It definitely does not refer to God correcting us with sickness. (For proof, see Objection: Sickness Can Be the Chastening of the Lord.)

Conclusion

Even in the New Testament, God does use sickness as chastening and judgment, even to the point where He actively sends it. This never applies to a believer unless he is deliberately resisting God and clinging to sin, and even then it seems mostly to apply to cases where someone is hurting the other people in Christ’s Body. Sickness as judgment falls only on wayward Christians and unbelievers. If you are neither, there is no reason to believe that God has anything to do with your sickness, and you should exercise your authority in Christ over it and get rid of it.

Healing and Obedience

The blessings in the Law of Moses were promised to those who obeyed God. The curses were promised to those who disobeyed God. It is an insult to God to expect Him to remove curses and bestow blessings in your life if you are knowingly disobeying God. This disobedience could take two forms – refusing to repent of sin that is declared as such by God’s Word, or refusing to cooperate with the Holy Spirit’s personal instructions for your life when you are already sure of what they are.

If you aren’t willing to do what God tells you to do, regardless of “what others might think,” you are in no position for healing. Some people in the Bible were healed only after they obeyed God’s instructions.

In John 9:1-7, Jesus told the blind man to go and wash in the pool of Sent. If you were in his shoes and were sent to Sent, and you didn’t go where you were sent, you would have missed out on your healing. The lepers in Luke 17:12-19 would most likely not have been healed had they not heeded Jesus’ command to go and show themselves to the priests, which indicated that their healing would manifest while they went before they got to the priests. Naaman the Syrian almost missed his blessing when Elisha did not meet him in person and instead sent instructions to wash in the Jordan River seven times. When he obeyed, he got healed. Had he not obeyed, he would not have been healed.

The Bible never promises healing to the willfully disobedient. Make sure that you are willing to obey God no matter what He asks you to do – not just in the things that you wanted to do anyway.

This doesn’t mean that you have to live a perfect life. If you are honestly living for Jesus and not violating your conscience, you have confidence to come get what you need from God (1 John 3:21-22), including healing, even without being perfect.

Paul said that “woe” would come upon him if he did not preach the gospel (1 Corinthians 9:16). He knew what God’s will was, and to deliberately avoid it would have opened himself up to bad things, even though he was a forgiven saint. As forgiven saints, we should heed this warning too.

For more elaboration on this topic, see Mistake: Disobedience.

Healing and Consecration

James 5:14-16 talks about calling for the elders to anoint you with oil in the name of the Lord. Why oil? Oil in Scripture is a symbol of consecration. Men were anointed with it to be set apart for certain tasks. The king was anointed with oil. The priests were anointed with oil. It symbolized holiness – in other words, being set apart for God.

It is a mockery of God to be anointed with oil for healing while deliberately retaining sin in your life and not caring about it. If you want to continue doing something that you know is sin and you don't care about it or want help to escape it, save the elders some time and don't call for them. If you're going to live an unconsecrated life on purpose, the oil that symbolizes consecration doesn't mean much in your case.

The Corinthians were living proof (and sometimes dead proof) that living an unconsecrated life can mean living a short or sick life. Their problem was not lack of faith but lack of consecration. You can know all the right Scriptures and "formulas" and still get sick and die if you're not consecrated. The Corinthians "came behind in no gift," which indicates that the gifts of healings and working of miracles were operating at Corinth. Yet these people did not receive healing or miracles in their own bodies. I wonder how many people got offended and were "turned off" to healing because of them.

I have to assume for the sake of teaching in most of this book that you are a serious Christian whose life is sold out to Jesus Christ and who desires to glorify God on the earth. I can't put little footnotes for you to click after every other sentence that says, "This may not work for you if you are living an unconsecrated life and ignoring God completely." However, you may assume that such footnotes are implicit throughout this book. If you aren't serious about your walk with God, get serious now. Otherwise, if you get healed it's God's mercy in action, but you still need to reform.

I am not saying that everyone who fails to receive healing is unconsecrated. Lack of proper instruction is a far more common cause. Also, all of us have areas in our lives where God is dealing with us about our motives, actions, and attitudes. You don't have to be perfect to get healed, but you need to be serious about your walk with Jesus Christ or you will trouble receiving anything. It's hard to resist God in one area of your life while expecting Him to move in another area. It's hard to tell God "Come!" in regard to healing while simultaneously saying "Go away!" in regard to a sin issue. It's also more of a case of what direction you're moving in as opposed to where you are in your Christian walk right now. A person who was born again yesterday and determined to live for God is in a better place to receive healing than an "old fogey" Christian who has camped out on his blessings, gotten lukewarm and stopped striving to grow in God.

Unfortunately, SOME modern teaching has devolved into a worldly “It’s all about YOU!” mindset. The messages are about what Christ has done for you, but not about what He expects from you. They’re big on receiving what’s yours, but small on consecration and commitment. And so people who are taught like that proceed to live selfish, unconsecrated, uncommitted Christian lives, to their own hurt. Don’t buy into the cafeteria-style thinking, “I only read the Scriptures that I happen to like.” You need ALL of the Word of God to really grow up, not just the verses that promise you things or tell you what blessings you have in Christ.

Healing and Repentance

Is it necessary to repent of your sins before you can get healed?

By the time this discussion is over, I hope that you will have your answer.

First, we need to define what repentance is and isn't. The Greek word used for repent is metanoia, which means to change one's mind.

Here are six things that repentance is NOT:

First, repentance is not remorse or feeling bad about your sin. If feeling remorseful about what you did were repentance, Judas Iscariot would be in heaven today, rather than having his divine epitaph be that it would have been better for that man if he had never been born. Judas was "filled with remorse" after he betrayed Jesus, but he still went to hell. So obviously feeling bad about your sin does not constitute true repentance. Furthermore, there is nothing explicit in the Greek word above that specifies that you have to feel horrible about what you did, though this could certainly be the case if you sin.

Second, repentance is not sorrow that you got caught. Many criminals go out to commit further crimes and their only regret is that they got caught. There is no repentance involved there.

Third, repentance is not simply changing your intellectual view about something or learning something. If this were true, anyone who switched political party affiliations has "repented" and anyone who sits listening to teaching at college (or even a Christian conference) is "repenting" while sitting there listening. That is not the Biblical use of the term; repenting relates to changing your mind about sin, not simply getting your mind changed in the sense of being further educated. That would be better categorized as renewing your mind, not changing it. The modern claim that everyone is "repenting" while listening to someone speak because their minds are changing does violence to the way that the word "repent" is actually used in the Bible.

Fourth, repentance is not penance, where you try to do a good work to make up for a bad one. In other words, you engage in some dead work like saying 10 "Hail Mary's" (an abject waste of time, since Mary cannot help you from heaven where she is now and praising her is basically idolatry anyway) that supposedly makes up for whatever you did wrong. There are people who think that they can sin all they want on Saturday and make up for it all on Sunday by "confessing" their sins and being told what price they must pay to make things right. This is a slap in the face to Jesus, who already paid the price to make things right, and who preached that men should repent. I knew a serial confessor. There was no repentance from a Biblical perspective because he did not change his mind about sin. He kept doing it, figuring that he could erase his transgressions by following instructions given by a voice in a booth. He sinned enough that he actually went every day, not just every week, but those were still "dead works" that didn't help him in the slightest. What a colossal waste of time. Penance is a slap in the face to Jesus, who Himself did all the work needed for your forgiveness from sin.

Fifth, repentance is not confession of what you did. “Going to confession” cannot replace true repentance, nor can simply saying to anyone that you did something wrong. Judas DID confess what he did; he said that he had betrayed innocent blood. But the fact that he confessed what he did does not mean that he repented. He still went to hell after confessing his crime. If confession is repentance, anyone who has ever pled guilty in court has repented of his crime. But it is clear from the number of repeat offenders that simply pleading guilty to doing something wrong is not repentance. There has been no true change of mind.

Sixth, repentance is not punishing yourself because you feel so bad about what you’ve done. That seems rational only to someone who does not understand that righteousness is a GIFT that was conferred on you the moment you received Jesus (Romans 5:17). Punishing yourself, far from being a virtuous act that shows God and everyone else how sorry you are, is actually another slap in the face of God’s grace, which allowed JESUS to be punished for what you did. Because Jesus paid for your sins, YOU should not try to pay for them a second time. Leave the sackcloth-and-ashes routine back in the Old Testament where it belongs. In the New Testament, Jesus’ blood sprinkles you from an evil conscience – He doesn’t GIVE you an evil conscience that keeps bothering you about what you did and repented of.

If you punish YOURSELF for sinning, you’re actually stealing from God! God says that vengeance is His (Romans 12:19). Only God has the right to punish sin. Man’s only involvement is when human authorities punish sins to keep order in society, with God’s blessing (Romans 13:3-4). However, when you punish YOURSELF for sin, you are actually sinning the whole time you’re doing it, because you’re stealing the right to punish sin from God, who alone has the right to do it. You NEVER have the right to punish yourself for your sins!

Now let’s look at what repentance IS:

Real repentance is a change of mind. What you previously held to be OK, you now hold to be not OK. Rather than continuing to do whatever it is, you make a U-turn and run AWAY from it, not TOWARD it. You are no longer interested in whether you can get away with it. You only want to get away from it. Your thinking about that sin has changed. You agree with God and say what He says about it.

Real repentance has evidence, or fruit, involving changed action. As John the Baptist said in Luke 3:8, “Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance, and begin not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, That God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.” Also, Acts 26:20: “But shewed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judaea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance.”

Real repentance is a decision, not an emotion. It has nothing to do with proving how sorry you are by wallowing in misery or depriving yourself of sweets for a week because you feel so unworthy. You may not even FEEL like repenting of something emotionally because the passing pleasures of sin seem too alluring, but you can still DECIDE to turn away from what the Bible says is wrong.

Now let's deal with an important question: "Is repentance still something that God expects from sinners today?" Let the following verses (not a complete list) speak for themselves:

Matthew 3:2 (John the Baptist speaking):

And saying, Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

Matthew 4:17:

From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

Mark 6:12:

And they went out, and preached that men should repent.

Luke 5:32:

I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

Acts 11:18:

When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life.

Luke 24:47:

And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

We see above that preachers were to preach repentance along with forgiveness to sinners. Did they do this? Let's see!

Acts 2:38:

Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

Acts 3:19:

Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord;

Acts 5:31:

Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins.

Acts 17:30:

And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent:

Acts 20:21:

Testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.

Hebrews 6:1 even lists repentance from dead works as one of the six fundamental doctrines of Christ that every new believer should be taught: “Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God,”. Dead works certainly could include outright sins, but dead works would also include fleshly attempts toward self-justification with God (penance, confessing in a booth, or any other action that replaces Christ’s sacrifice with human effort).

2 Peter 3:9:

The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

I listed that many verses on purpose because there are some people who perceive themselves as paragons of grace who will practically run you out of town if you suggest that you should tell sinners to repent. They think that this is old-fashioned law preaching, or at best, a mixture of law and grace. But given the verses above, how can you rationalize preaching a gospel that DOESN’T urge people to repent? We really need to study our own Bibles rather than taking some preacher’s word for things like that.

As far as the Law is concerned, Paul even told Timothy that the Law is FOR the murderers, kidnappers, homosexuals, perjurers and anyone else who does things contrary to sound doctrine (1 Timothy 1:9-10). By the Law comes knowledge of sin, and by the knowledge of sin comes the knowledge of the need to be saved from sin. One reason it’s hard to get many modern people saved is that we haven’t convinced them yet that they’re LOST! The Law does that. It won’t make anyone right (only Jesus can do that) but it shines the light on the need to be made right.

Certainly our message is not, “God is really ticked with you, so you’d better get right!” No, our message is the same of that of the apostles – that the grace of God has provided forgiveness for sins. That is how they preached Christ in the book of Acts. It was always about forgiveness of sins – not having better self-esteem, or even being healed, being prosperous, having greater peace or any other temporal benefit. These benefits come WITH the package but they are NOT the package – JESUS is the package! Jesus came so that we could be forgiven for our sins! But this “good news” will be seen as a useless message by someone who doesn’t think that anything he’s doing is a sin and thinks that what he’s doing has no consequences. The sinner needs to understand that it is NOT OK to just “do your own thing” – you must change your mind about that and submit to Jesus’ lordship.

So I think I have presented an airtight case that God expects sinners to REPENT. As we have seen, that doesn’t mean that they have to wallow in the dust and decry their woefulness (I didn’t) in order to be saved. However, they do have to change their minds from living any old way in any old sin to receiving Jesus as Lord and following Him. Of course, He will always lead you out of sin. I didn’t run out and put on sackcloth and ashes – and I actually didn’t even cry any tears about my sins. I simply changed my mind about not following Jesus and living how I was living. I decided to make Jesus Lord of my life, and I was saved.

So now the next question is: “Does God expect CHRISTIANS to repent?” Obviously, they don’t need to repent of the biggest sin of all, which is refusal to submit to Jesus’ lordship and be born again, because they have already done that. Once you’re born again, you don’t have to keep getting born again any more than you have to keep getting born all the time in the natural.

But if you’re a Christian and you’re doing something wrong, does God expect YOU to repent? Let’s let the Scriptures speak for themselves again, this time with verses all aimed at believers during our current age, the Church Age, with all the quotes spoken by our Lord Jesus Christ Himself:

Revelation 2:5:

Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent.

Revelation 2:16:

Repent; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will fight against them with the sword of my mouth.

Revelation 2:21-22:

And I gave her space to repent of her fornication; and she repented not.

Behold, I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit adultery with her into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds.

Revelation 3:3:

Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast, and repent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.

Revelation 3:19:

As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent.

So we have another airtight case – repentance is for believers, not just for sinners. If you are in sin, you need to change your mind about it and turn away from it. We have absolutely wrecked the modern error that believers don’t have to repent of their sins anymore.

The next area we will cover is what EFFECT repentance has for the believer and WHY we repent.

Does repentance make you “right with God?” No, receiving the Lord Jesus Christ already made you “right with God.” You are justified by His blood, not by your repentance. No one ever got saved by repenting of sin but not calling on Jesus. Jesus is 100% of your righteousness, your ability to stay out of sin and repent of it is 0% of your righteousness. If repenting of sin irrespective of calling on Jesus did not make you any more righteous then, it won’t make you any more righteous today. You may do more righteous deeds and APPEAR more righteous to the world and other Christians, but your perfect righteousness was received as a GIFT from God (Romans 5:17) that has nothing to do with your personal track record, then or now.

Does repentance cause you to be forgiven for your sins? NO! The blood of Jesus causes you to be forgiven for your sins. He does not have to go back to the cross to purchase forgiveness for whatever you did wrong today – His shed blood already paid for whatever you did wrong today. As you can read elsewhere in this book, you already HAVE BEEN forgiven in Christ as a believer. Thus, you cannot earn or obtain forgiveness by any work of your own, including repentance. Actually, if you were not forgiven, you would not be right with God, and vice versa. Are you “justified by His blood” (this basically means that God treats you as if your sin never existed)? The Bible says you are (Romans 5:9)! So it is wasted human effort and “dead works” to try to obtain the forgiveness that Christ already obtained for you. You are still welcome in His presence as if you had never sinned, and you can talk to Him just as freely as if you were Jesus – even if you’ve sinned!

With regard to the believer, there is no Scripture to support the idea that repentance produces forgiveness. Actually, there is no scripture that even teaches that confession of sin gets you forgiveness either! It didn’t for Judas! (If 1 John 1:9 suddenly flashes in your mind as a verse that disproves this statement, you should read What 1 John 1:9 Really Means and see otherwise.)

So if you HAVEN’T repented of a sin, your righteousness is still intact, your forgiveness for the sin is still intact, and your ability to talk to God is still intact. Knowing that, the obvious question that more carnal Christians might ask is, “So why bother repenting at all if sin isn’t going to cost me anything – I can just go down to the Low D Bar and hang out with the drunken floozies and it won’t matter!”

But it WILL matter.

Sin is no less deadly than it ever was. It has really bad consequences that always catch up to you. How would you like to come home some night and have to tell your wife that you are now paying child support to one of the drunken floozies? That would have some horrible consequences; your life as you know it would be ruined. You would be a mess, and it’s harder to receive healing when you’re an emotional mess and your awful circumstances are screaming for your attention. There are signs on the highway, “Speed costs and kills” but maybe we need some that say “Sin costs and kills” because it’s true. Sin leads to death, as James told us (James 1:15). If you sow to the flesh, you reap corruption from the flesh (Galatians 6:7-8). Corruption – think a big slab of 3-month-old meat with maggots crawling all over it. That’s what sin brings you. That’s why you need to get sin out of your life. God loves you enough to not want you to have a pile of corruption in your life – that’s why He corrects you when you get into sin.

A brief aside here – you can get badly confused by some modern teaching that God will never deal with you about sin (contrary to Hebrews 12:5-13 and various verses in Revelation 2 and 3) because (supposedly) only your own conscience will deal with you. The DANGER of that is that when God DOES speak to you about sin in your life, you will assume that it has to be the devil CONDEMNING you (even though God never does it in a condemning way, though He can be stern), and you will start rebuking the voice of God thinking that it is the voice of Satan. That's a quick way to end up as a sorry mess, having no idea who's doing the talking after a while. Even worse is the idea that God doesn't even know if you're sinning because all He sees is Jesus' blood. That's absurd; how could He correct you for sins if He doesn't even see them? Could you have convinced the churches in Asia Minor in Revelation 2 and 3 that Jesus didn't even notice that they were sinning? Fortunately, because of the blood of Jesus, God will deal with you as if you'd never sinned at all when it comes to what you can receive from Him. But when it comes to correction, yes, He will point out your shortcomings so that you can repent and be more like Him, reflecting more of His holiness in your outward actions. (You already have His holiness on the inside when you're saved.)

So how do you get sin out of your life? Through repentance – changing your mind about it. Getting drunk singing bar songs that glorify wasting away again has to lose its appeal. Hanging out with loose losers has to lose its appeal. You must change your mind from thinking that they are “fun” things and realize from God's Word that they are destructive things that God forbids and that you need to get them out of your life. Once you agree that God is right and your flesh is wrong, you are now in a position to overcome those sins. If you're smart, you'll sow to the Spirit by praying, reading the Word, attending church, etc., so that you do not fulfill the lusts of the flesh (Galatians 5:16). When you enjoy peace and joy in the Holy Spirit, the other deceptive sources of “joy” will lose their appeal in a hurry.

Regardless of whether or not you need healing, sin is a killer and you should want to get it out of your life. If you're indulging in it, you need to change your mind about it.

You don't repent to get forgiveness or right standing with God, which you already have. You repent to get sin out of your life!

Now let's really get down to brass tacks. If you are in sin and you have not repented, will that stop you from receiving healing?

Given that EVERYONE is in sin on the earth to some degree, simply having some sin that you haven't repented of yet will not disqualify you from receiving healing. If it did, NO ONE would ever get healed! If you didn't even KNOW that it is a sin NOT to pray for those in authority, your healing will not be denied because you did not pray for whoever leads your nation today. And if you do pray, but today you didn't, God is not going to split hairs and withhold your healing because you didn't pray yet today.

God is not a legalistic nitpicker. Don't you suppose that the crowds who got healed had some unrepented sin in their lives, especially given that they didn't even have new sin-hating spirits because the new birth wasn't available yet? Yet they got healed! In fact, “the worst of the worst” (prostitutes, tax collectors, etc.) were getting Kingdom blessings while the self-righteous Pharisees were on the outside looking in. Why would everyone get better than they deserved? It's called grace!

So if you aren't healed right now, don't go for a witch hunt for some secret sin that you don't know about. You're wasting your time. You have the right to be healed.

The time when lack of repentance will get you into trouble and WILL hinder your healing is when you resist Jesus and WILLFULLY engage in sin, knowing full well that He hates what you're doing. If you are in that position, believe it or not, you are STILL the righteousness of God in Christ as long as you have not actually rejected Jesus. Healing still belongs to you and it is still yours to receive, because you aren't on a works basis with God. But there are now at least two problems.

The first is that your heart will condemn you. Your new man, created after God in righteousness and true holiness, wants nothing to do with sin. But as long as you deliberately engage in it, you will tend to feel embarrassed in God's presence because your conscience will bother you. Furthermore, because Jesus loves you, as soon as you let Him get a word in edgewise, He is going to talk to you about your sin, just as Jesus got "in the faces" of the sinning churches in Asia. That's why your flesh wants to stay out of His presence when you're in sin – it knows full well that Jesus will have some things to say about what you're doing.

The second is that it is hard to receive from the same God whom you are shoving away. If you are simultaneously saying, "Minister to me, Lord!" and "DON'T minister to me, Lord!", you are sending yourself and God mixed messages. It is just plain hard to receive healing or anything else when you are trying to hold onto God with one arm while you're shoving Him away with the other arm.

So what do you do in that situation? You REPENT! You change your mind and agree with God and say the same thing that He says about your sins. You stop siding with sin and start siding with God. God won't condemn you. He's known about your sin the whole time that you were doing it and He didn't disown you over it. You'll find it's much easier to receive from God when you cooperate with Him than when you actively resist Him.

Healing and the Fear of the Lord

Those wondering why they aren't seeing more miracles might want to check out whether they walk in, and encourage others to walk in, the fear of the Lord. This to me is the biggest theological gap in current popular teaching.

The gospel literally means "good news," and in some people's efforts to present it as "good news" they try to make sure that all their messages are positive, uplifting, encouraging, and so on. But in an effort to do so, they cut out parts of the gospel, like the ones that mention hell. Jesus talked about hell more than he talked about heaven, yet He said that the gospel that He preached was good news. It IS good news – the good news about hell is that you don't have to go there! But Jesus warned people repeatedly about the awfulness of hell, while some of His modern followers don't even use the word because they think that their message would not be positive, uplifting, and so on. Some don't even mention sin for the same reason! Or maybe they're just telling people the parts of the gospel they want to hear because these preachers lack the needed fear of the Lord and really fear the PEOPLE who might stop listening if their ears aren't tickled. The modern preacher is happy to encourage his hearers, but Paul also told Timothy and Titus to rebuke and exhort their hearers (2 Timothy 4:2, Titus 2:15). Some pastors are afraid to do those necessary things, and their congregations lack the fear of the Lord as a result.

The problem is that any time you willfully OMIT part of the gospel, you make the rest of the gospel you're preaching a distortion of the real thing. If you have a small engine that requires a mixture of gasoline and oil, what would happen if you stopped adding oil because you decided that gasoline is really the important part because it's what combusts? The resulting fuel would wreck your engine instead of run it, not because of something you added but because of something that you left out that was an essential part of the mix.

Jesus commanded His followers to tell people to observe ALL that He commanded (Matthew 28:20); He did not give His followers the right to cherry-pick which parts of His teaching they liked.

The Fear of the Lord is Basic to a Godly Life

Scripture tells us that the fear of the Lord is wisdom (Job 28:28) and the beginning of wisdom (Psalm 111:10, Proverbs 9:10), the instruction of wisdom (Proverbs 15:33), the beginning of knowledge (Proverbs 1:7), and what lets you find knowledge (Proverbs 2:5). It causes you to depart from evil (Proverbs 16:6) and have riches, honor and life (Proverbs 22:4). If you claim that the Holy Spirit is directing you, the fear of the Lord should be evident in your life because the Holy Spirit is called the Spirit of the fear of the Lord (Isaiah 11:2)! The early church walked in the fear of the Lord (Acts 9:31). We are to perfect holiness in the fear of God (2 Corinthians 7:1) and submit ourselves to one another in the fear of God (Ephesians 5:21) while working out our own salvation in fear and trembling (Philippians 2:12).

The fact that we are forgiven for all our sins in Christ should not make us flippant toward sin, but rather to have all the more love and respect for the God whose mercy caused Him to send Christ to redeem us.

Preachers sometimes distort the meaning of the fear of the Lord by saying that it only means reverential respect. The ACTUAL meaning of “fear” (phobos) of the Lord is FEAR as we would generally use the word! Hence the idea of “fear and trembling” we saw above. That doesn’t negate the fact that we are accepted in the Beloved (Ephesians 1:6), nor does it turn God into a horror movie villain. But presenting God only as a great source of self-esteem-building helpful hints for living a nice life takes away the needed fear of the Lord for TRULY having a good life. He is Holy and awe-inspiring and we should have the attitude that we don’t DARE do anything that He is against. If we do, though, we have an Advocate and we have His forgiveness, but that doesn’t mean that we can have the attitude, “I’ll do this now because I can always claim forgiveness later!” That kind of attitude shows NO fear of the Lord.

When pastors allow shack-ups on their worship teams, fornicators on their greeter crews, and other blatantly immoral people serving in other positions, it only shows that they have no fear of the Lord themselves. They can forget about “revival” – the only thing they should expect their churches to be famous for are meltdowns.

God Isn’t Just Your Fishing Buddy

Jesus is the best friend you’ll ever have, one who sticks closer than a brother. But that doesn’t mean that He and His Father are to be “ol’ buddy ol’ pal” to you. If all you ever know is that God is a “good good Father” but you never know that He is also a “holy holy God” you will have a distorted view of Him. He does not exist just so that you can have more material blessings, though He does take pleasure in your prosperity (Psalm 35:27) and He even promises that fearing Him will bring you riches (Proverbs 22:4). He is awe-inspiring. (That’s the meaning of the word awesome if you see it in your translation; it’s not the modern version of the word where you might say, “I can buy a new toy with the raise I just got, aw, gee whiz, God, you’re awesome!”)

When you walk in the fear of the Lord, you walk in true submission to the Father’s will and do what He wants, just as Jesus did. You realize that He loves you and wants to bless you, but He does not exist for the sole purpose of giving you everything YOU want. Do you think that Paul wanted to be whipped, beaten, stoned, shipwrecked and imprisoned? It’s great to receive what grace has given, but there’s no submission in that. When you truly fear God, you submit to Him and you would NEVER want to be out of His will, even when His will makes your flesh uncomfortable. You can STILL walk in everything that grace has given without getting lopsided about it.

This doesn’t at all take away from the fact that you can curl up in His lap and say, “Daddy, I love you.” If you had a good earthly dad, you could have done that with him, too, but he would not have been happy with you if you had come up and said, “Hey, what’s up, Dad Ol’ Buddy Ol’ Pal?” You still needed to show your father honor and respect even though you could curl up in his lap. It is the same with your Heavenly Father, who deserves all the more honor and respect.

The Results of a Return to the Fear of the Lord

If we fear the Lord as they did in the early church, we should see the early church's results. If we don't fear the Lord as they did, perhaps we've put our finger on a major reason that we aren't seeing more moves of God today. We like to hear wonderful stories of past revivals, but we don't necessarily want to hear about how consecrated the people were back then to the purposes of God. We are kidding ourselves to think that we can have similar moves with lousier consecration. Let's make the early church our model, return to the true fear of the Lord and see if we don't have more Holy Spirit manifestations!

Ianity

Ianity is what you get when you try to practice Christianity but you leave Christ out of it. Modern-day Pharisees everywhere keep a form of Christianity but deny its power. They call it Christianity but it has little to do with following Christ personally. It's a matter of rules and traditions. Did you know that it is easy even for so-called "Full Gospel" or "faith" people to drift into their own pernicious version of Ianity?

It usually starts by learning certain principles of God's Word concerning faith, healing, money, and similar matters. This is exciting! But after a while, everything can become a formula, a dead ritual as bad as anything at a dead traditional church. Three fast songs, two slow songs, an offering, a message, an altar call, and announcements. We could copy an "Order of Worship" and hand the same one out at every service. We remember the teachings and the formulas but forget the fact that Christianity is centered around the person of Jesus Christ and a personal relationship with Him. We ignore the Holy Spirit who ignited the Church in Acts, without whom nothing would have been accomplished. Everything is a boring routine. We no longer look forward with excitement to having a fresh encounter with God, Jesus and the Holy Spirit every time we go to church. We unwittingly become like the very people we thought we were "delivered" from.

You slide into Ianity when you get satisfied and content with what you have. The way church is right now suits you fine. You don't feel a need to see more lost people saved, more sick people healed, or more oppressed people set free. You're comfortable with the current attendance. You think you've arrived, and you have arrived, and if you have any sense, you'll get out of the place where you arrived and return to your first love! If you don't, watch God raise up some small church that you thought wasn't doing anything but caught fire to see the lost saved. Watch them pass you and have more miracles than you do. You'll catch on eventually.

Religious, legalistic thinking is an insidious thing, and any of us can and will fall into it if we do not keep a fresh relationship with the Author and Finisher of our faith. Christianity is about following Christ, not just keeping rules and regulations – or even faith principles!

Healing Is Not a Formula

I am not knocking anyone in particular who teaches three steps to this and seven steps to that. The only caution I have for you is that you can't set hard and fast rules that will apply to everyone in a few steps. People need the whole counsel of Scripture. You can't just break the Bible down into a few little nuggets and have that be enough for everyone.

When it comes to ministering healing to others, it would be nice if there were a little formula that you could follow with everyone so that everyone would get healed. But there is no such formula, and there never will be one, as I am about to prove from Scripture!

I've handed out a lot of different original gospel tracts, and I used to try in vain to come up with the "perfect gospel tract" that would reach everyone better than any other tracts I had written so far. But then I encountered this passage in Jude, and it disillusioned me!

Jude 22-23:

And of some have compassion, making a difference:

And others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh.

According to Jude, you have to take different approaches with different people. Some people need to be loved into the kingdom and some need to be scared into the kingdom! I was in the latter category. I was a hard-core atheist. People would tell me how loving Jesus is and I would say, "That's nice for YOU – you can have your loving Jesus, but I don't want Him." (I didn't believe that He was who the Bible says He is anyway.) It was only when someone told me that I was headed for an eternal hell that I got serious about finding out if Jesus really was who the Bible says He is. The stakes were too high if there was even the tiniest chance that I was wrong!

That is why simplistic evangelism scripts don't work with everyone. You can't take the Holy Spirit out of evangelism and expect the results that you would get if you allow the Holy Spirit to lead you. If you could do it all with a script without the Holy Spirit, Jesus would have changed His instructions to say, "Don't wait for the Holy Spirit before you go into all the world. You don't need Him. Just go, and here's a script you can use that will reach everyone successfully without you having to involve the Holy Spirit."

Worse yet, I've seen a "scalper script" designed to get quickie "decisions for Christ" in 30 to 60 seconds so that you can go on to the next person and win a whole boatload of people in a single afternoon – supposedly. The problem is that you have people making "decisions" who don't know what they're doing and haven't counted the cost. They fall away easily, assuming that the original "decision" wasn't a false conversion to begin with, which is all too easy to see with "assembly line" evangelism efforts.

I believe that the same principle applies to healing. There are so many different places people can come from regarding healing! No one tract about healing will be able to "reach" everyone, and no "formula" for sharing healing will work with everyone, either. I certainly don't have anything even close to a "healing script" and I wouldn't want to encourage that kind of ministry.

As far as receiving healing goes, your flesh would like a little 3-step healing formula that you could work every time and get your healing. The reason your flesh would like this is that then you could “work a principle” independently of God and you wouldn’t have to base any of it on a relationship with Him. You could just go out and sin any way you want and work your little formula receive healing. God has no interest in having you turn Christianity or even part of it into a formula. The Pharisees were adept at turning living Scriptures into lifeless formulas, and Jesus pronounced hideous woes upon them. They lived their lives based on certain selected Scriptural principles, but they had no real love for God or for their fellow men. They failed to walk in the blessings that belonged to them as God’s people.

Besides that, the Sons of Sceva tried operating a formula outside of a relationship with Jesus – and you can read where that got them (Acts 19:13-17)! Just copying what someone else did is not God’s idea of walking with Him. The issue for the disciples when they could not cast a demon out (Mark 9:17-29) was lack of prayer and fasting. The problem wasn’t lack of prayer and fasting about the demon, which was impossible given that the events were a surprise that came up without warning. The issue was that their lack of prayer and fasting made it too hard for them to keep their flesh under, and they were moved by what their flesh saw. If you want to just walk after the flesh all the time, NO formula will get you consistent results.

People got healed in all kinds of different ways in the Bible. Thank God, they weren’t all thinking in terms of formulas. Healing is centered on the work of the Healer Himself. If you’re having trouble receiving your healing, pray and ask the Holy Spirit to help you. What helps you might not be what helps me or someone else. He knows what you need to hear. It’s all the same Word, but He knows how to make it come alive to you and communicate it so that you “get it.” That is part of the Holy Spirit’s job – to take the things of Christ and reveal them to you (John 16:14-15). Let Him do His job! Ask Him! Don’t go it alone. God didn’t give you the Holy Spirit so that you could ignore Him and try to figure out everything yourself.

Some false cults believe in some form of healing, and most of them base the healing “formulas” they use on the Bible! Jesus said that whosoever speaks to a mountain and believes that it will move can move it. He did not restrict this statement to believers. I read a totally satanic book once by an author who specialized in testimonies of people who used Mark 11:23’s “formula” without Christ and got results! However, these folks will still burn in the lake of fire unless they repent of rejecting Jesus. Jesus said that people would even do works in His name without knowing Him (Matthew 7:21-23)! That should highlight the risk of using principles rather than living a life led by the Holy Spirit.

You can indeed “get” some things using principles, but still end up empty. Mormons are not Christians (despite their claims to the contrary – they are actually Latter Day Sinners), but they tithe, and they do well financially as a group, probably for that reason. Other unbelievers have tithed and experienced great increase because of it. They still suffer eternal fire if they die without Christ, even if they successfully work a Biblical formula.

Healing is always God's will, 100% of the time. You do not need to be "led by the Spirit" to discern whether healing rightfully belongs to you as a Christian – it does. I suppose that you could see "believe that you receive when you pray" as a formula. However, if you don't follow the part of Jesus' instructions to forgive others, you haven't really followed His teaching if you just stick to "believing that you receive" and make that your formula.

If you really want to walk in health, keep the Word – not just a formula – before your eyes (Proverbs 4:20-22). The same could be said about prosperity in general. Make no mistake about it – God wants you to be in health and prosper (3 John 2). However, God didn't tell Joshua that he would prosper if he worked a prosperity formula or just meditated on prosperity Scriptures. He would make his own way prosperous by learning and acting on all that God said, not just a few selected verses (Joshua 1:7-8).

Overextended Faith

I have shocked people sometimes by NOT being willing to pray for certain things or command certain things to happen, but people could save themselves some embarrassment by declining to pray in some cases.

If wildfires break out in California and someone asks me to command them to stop and be put out in the name of Jesus, I'm going to turn that down unless the "gift of faith" is in operation, and I'd know it if that were the case. If a hurricane is headed for Florida and someone asks me to command it to turn out to sea, chance are that I'm going to turn that down, too.

The problem is that if you "go in over your head" on some of these things, two things will happen. One is that other people will lose confidence in you when what you speak doesn't happen. The second is that YOU will lose confidence in what you say!

It's better to be honest and just admit that you don't feel that you are in a position to do whatever it is by your faith than to yield to pressure because someone puts you on the spot to pray. Believe me, people WILL do that. But how many wildfires in California and hurricanes in Florida have been stopped because one great man of power for the hour prayed? I don't know of a single case, and I've been around a while. I know plenty of cases where a Christian leader prayed to no effect, though one can anticipate the rationalizations. "So what if it hit as Category 4 storm that just about wiped whole towns off the map? If I hadn't prayed, it could have been a Category 5 storm that wrecked even more towns. So what if the California wildfire killed people and cost billions? If hadn't prayed, it could have killed even more people and cost even more billions." That kind of dancing around will only further undermine your confidence in your prayers and others' confidence in them as well, and make you look silly in front of critics who don't appreciate faith preaching.

How do you know if you should really speak to something like that? If you REALLY are in faith, you are willing to declare in front of everyone PUBLICLY that you are having what you say. You're putting your ministerial reputation on the line and they can all hold you accountable if you're wrong. I ONCE publicly contradicted the National Hurricane Center in Miami, which said that a storm was going to score a direct hit on the island where I was doing a healing crusade. I told everyone that the storm was NOT going to hit and that the meetings would go on as scheduled, despite the urging from the Hurricane Center for everyone to hunker down in their homes for the next day or two. The storm made an abrupt turn and did NOT hit that island at all and the meetings went on as scheduled. But I had to say what I said before there was any indication that the storm was turning. If I can't have that kind of confidence, I'm not going to say or pray anything to give people the idea that I'm stopping some natural disaster.

Worse yet was the idea that a certain large church came up with to pray to stop earthquakes when many were being reported. Jesus said that there would be earthquakes in the last days (Matthew 24:7), so no amount of prayer is going to turn His words into lies!

I think many of us would like to make a private faith declaration in front of friends, and if something happens, we have witnesses who can vouch for what we said, but if nothing changes, at least we didn't get egg on our faces publicly. Real faith doesn't have to "hedge" like that. The temptation is to make some kind of statement out of "overextended faith" when we know in our hearts that we really aren't in tell-everyone-about-it know-so faith, which is the only kind of REAL faith that there is.

I had a woman come up who wanted all new teeth put into her mouth on the spot. I declined that one, because that just wasn't where I was in faith. If it were, I'd have believed to fix some of my own teeth! I'd rather decline to pray than to command it to happen and then have nothing happen. There's no shame in admitting that you aren't the world's biggest Superman of Faith. Some of our biggest miracles happen when the "gift of faith" is in operation, and people sometimes assume that because you did something once (when that gift was operating), you can do the same thing again, anytime, anywhere. But that isn't how it works. I'd rather just be up front with people than to overextend my faith. I'd rather walk in the faith that I'm comfortable walking in, at least knowing that if I DO say something, that IS what is going to happen!

And by the way, I know a man who had someone come up in one of his crusades who wanted some new teeth, and God put new teeth into him on the spot! So I'm not suggesting that we limit an omnipotent God. If you're comfortable believing in such a case, go for it! But I don't think that most of us would be in real faith at that point. We all have room to grow!

The Hardest Lesson I've Learned in the Ministry

The hardest lesson I've learned in the ministry is that you just cannot help some people. We want to be able to help everyone and see everyone get healed and walk in the fullness that Jesus has provided, but it's not going to happen. It's unrealistic to think that it will, and if you do, you'll just set yourself up for disappointment and needlessly kick yourself.

JESUS could not help everyone! He COULD NOT do any mighty miracles at Nazareth because of their unbelief (Mark 6:1-6). Surely He knew that He was going to pay a price so that they could all be healed, and He wanted them all healed. But they weren't. The power of the Lord was present to heal the religious leaders at one house, but only one man who was let down through the roof was healed (Luke 5:17-26). It wasn't a power issue – those religious leaders just weren't going to get with the program.

Jesus told His disciples that there would be some who believe and some who do not believe, and that those who believe will be saved and those who don't will be damned (Mark 16:15-16). You're not going to have universal success with everyone you minister to!

We see this played out in the book of Acts. Some believed and some disbelieved. Even the apostles with their mighty anointings were not able to get everyone saved and set free. Neither will you.

There are some people out there who just won't get out of their own way. You try and try to help them, you feed them, you clothe them, you try to teach them life skills, you pray with them, and yet just as they start to seem to be making progress, they shoot themselves in the foot again and end up back where they were before you started trying to help them. Often the people you try to help the most end up like that; they want YOU to do all the work and all the believing, and they balk when you insist that they start taking some responsibility. It is the experience of many pastors (including my experience when I pastored) that the people you try to help the most end up being the first to stab you in the back when they don't get what they want from you. Still, we keep trying to help other people even when some people aren't "helpable." We don't keep banging our heads against the wall though; there comes a point where enough is enough and people either want to grow up or they don't. Some people just have to be allowed to "be ignorant" (1 Corinthians 14:38). Our time is better spent making disciples – reproducing ourselves among people who are open to growing in the Lord, which not everyone is.

Some people will not receive healing regardless of what you do. Some don't want to lose their disability checks (YES, there are such people) and some don't like their lives much anyway, so they're willing to commit Satan-assisted suicide by not fighting a disease that is killing them. Others just wouldn't have anything to complain about or a way to make sure that other people always had to pay attention to them. Others are so steeped in the traditions of men that they just "know" God put that sickness on them for a reason, though if you press them, they won't be able to tell you what that reason is! Some are just unwilling to put forth any effort to learn Scriptures or attend church services or special meetings where Jesus is healing the sick through His Body.

The fact that some do not receive healing when you try to minister to them does NOT mean that you are a failure! Jesus, Peter, Paul, Philip, Stephen and others were not failures just because they couldn't get everyone into the Kingdom of God.

There were plenty of cases where God sent prophets in the Old Testament, only to have them ignored or ridiculed or killed. They were not failures just because the people did not receive them or their message! They tried to help the people, but certain people just didn't want God's help or counsel.

We can't get callous and stop trying to help people just because some people are lazy or won't let you help them. We just have to make sure that we have realistic expectations and realize when it's time to move on to better spend our time elsewhere. Jesus did not just keep preaching and preaching at Nazareth thinking that He had to get them healed before He could move on to His next assignment. If you try to put a burden on yourself (or have another preacher put it on you) that it is now YOUR responsibility to make sure that certain people are healed ("Don't come back until they're healed!"), you are just setting yourself up for discouragement. Jesus NEVER told His disciples, "Heal the sick in every town, and don't come back until they're all healed!" To the contrary, He gave instructions on what to do when a city did not receive them – shake the dust off their feet and move on (Luke 10:10-11 and elsewhere)! The apostles had to move on in cases where cities started siding against them and wanting to kill them. Not everyone will love you and your good news about the healing Jesus purchased! Get over it. You're not a failure in God's eyes if some people reject the message – you are a success because you OFFERED the words of life even if the people rejected them. If God doesn't consider you a failure, neither should you.

Beware of Pharisees

If you think that Pharisees only existed in the time of Christ's earthly ministry, guess again! As then, there are religionists today who do not want to see you healed. I have heard people who will try to talk you out of your healing after you get it! These people do not believe in healing and the fact that you got healed threatens them. You have something they don't have. They are jealous. I have had my own healings in my body attributed to Satan by some who hate the gospel of healing. They actually claimed that Satan did it to get me to believe and teach bad doctrine. (According to them, God sickens and Satan heals. How's that for a flip-flop of the truth?)

Jesus said that you must beware of the teaching of these people. "Then Jesus said unto them, Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees" (Matthew 16:6). "Then understood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees" (Matthew 16:12).

How can you spot a Pharisee? See what they were like in Scripture. They were Bible experts who knew the letter of the Law but not the spirit of it. They got upset when people got healed. They tried to discourage people from going to Jesus for healing. They complained about healings happening on the Sabbath day. They said that Satan was doing the works. They didn't care about world evangelism and interfered with those who did care. They had no concern for the lost and were upset that Jesus would minister to people who they thought were low-down. They nit-picked everything Jesus and His disciples did and looked for ways to trip them up. They gave men dead religious formalism, not life. Above all, they were threatened and jealous of the success that the real Christians had. And so it is today.

What do you do about them? You avoid them. You don't go to the churches they run, even if Mom and Dad and Grandma and Grandpa always did, and even if your family has "that" kind of religious background. Stay away from party-poopers who mock divine healing and aren't glad you got healed. Don't waste your time and money on a church that has no vision to see lost people born again, either. Don't go to a church that has a form of godliness but no power.

2 Timothy 3:5:

Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away.

You will find that some of the bitterest opponents of healing are people who once believed in it but then stopped when someone they knew failed to receive his healing. Some of these people will stop at nothing to try to talk you out of believing God for your healing. Their bitterness usually shows itself plainly in their words. Don't hang around such people. If you do, not only their unbelief but also their bitterness can get off on you. (Scripture talks about many being defiled from one root of bitterness in Hebrews 12:15-16). Find people who have experienced healing through faith in Christ and hang around them instead!

Go somewhere where the new birth is preached, where Jesus is preached as being the Healer – the same yesterday, today and forever! To continue to go to a lousy church, even while reading good healing literature, will hinder you from getting and staying healed. Beware of the leaven of modern-day Pharisees!

Don't Believe These Alcoholics Anonymous Lies

1. "Once an Alcoholic, Always an Alcoholic. You Are a Recovering Alcoholic."

This is the opposite of what Jesus taught: "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed" (John 8:36). You have been delivered from the power of darkness (Colossians 1:13), which includes the power of addictions, which are part of that kingdom. Jesus does not want you to be a slave of a bottle or anything else, as that makes you something other than "free indeed." The Son of God was manifested to destroy the works of the devil (1 John 3:8) and those works include alcoholism. When Jesus sets you free, you are no longer an alcoholic. You are not even a recovering alcoholic. You are a former alcoholic!

I know a minister who used to drink a 40-ounce bottle of whiskey every day until Jesus set her free. She has been free for a very long time and never gone back to drinking. You'll never convince her (or me) that she is still an alcoholic! It is no longer a struggle for her to stay away from the bottle. When you're free indeed, the struggle is over. You are not trapped in a never-ending "recovery" mode; you are "recovered!"

2. "It's Important to Affirm that You Are an Alcoholic When We Meet as a Group: My Name Is _____ and I'm an Alcoholic."

As is if it isn't bad enough to believe in your heart that you are an alcoholic, you can make things even worse by saying it with your mouth! This has the outward appearance of being open and honest because you're admitting that you need help, but admitting you need help doesn't get you free! A lot of people need help and admit it and are still not free! And once you've managed to get some measure of mastery over the bottle, it is downright harmful to keep confessing that you are still in bondage (an alcoholic). Jesus made it clear that if you say something with your mouth and believe it in your heart, that is what you will have (Mark 11:23). So if you go to a meeting every week and confess with your mouth that you are an alcoholic, you will struggle with alcoholism the rest of your life because you are shooting yourself in the foot with your mouth every week! You will never get truly free from alcoholism as long as you keep confessing that you are an alcoholic. (See Say What and Speaking to Mountains, Trees and Diseases for more about the power in your words.) By the way, you're telling everyone your name, so your "anonymity" is kind of shot, right?

3. “It Doesn’t Matter Who ‘God as You Understand Him’ Is As Long As You Call on a ‘Higher Power’ of Some Kind.”

The generic AA “God as we understood Him” will not set you free. It is not enough to believe in a higher power. The devil believes in God and it doesn’t do him any good. This twisted universalism is one of the most dangerous aspects of AA. It leaves you with the impression that any deity will do as long as you believe in him. The Bible, however, is clear that there is no other name than the name of Jesus that you can call on for salvation (Acts 4:12). Whoever denies the Son does not have the Father either (1 John 2:23). There is no access to the real God’s throne other than by the blood of Jesus (Hebrews 10:19). Anyone who thinks he can have access to what a Higher Power has to offer without Jesus is sadly deluded, but AA promotes this delusion with its statements. If you want to be free indeed from alcoholism, you must call on Jesus, not Buddha, Mohammed, Allah, Krishna, the Flying Spaghetti Monster or any other false god who doesn’t even exist. Think about that for a minute – how can a “Higher Power” who doesn’t even exist or a man who is no longer on the earth help you? He can’t, and you’re wasting your time if you’re not praying in the name of Jesus, no matter what AA tells you.

AA’s stated dependence on “a loving God as He may express Himself in our group conscience” can lead to all kinds of weird ideas about God as long as they are endorsed by the group. It is never right to base beliefs about God on experience – they must be based on the Bible! An AA group is by AA’s own words a “spiritual entity” with a “spiritual aim” and a “spiritual heritage” whose principle of anonymity has “immense spiritual significance” even though it must not express any views on “sectarian religion.” So they think they are “spiritual” but they cannot by their own rules endorse Jesus specifically. That is a deceptive “spiritual” mix. You should beware of any group that won’t confess Jesus but calls itself a spiritual entity! I would be much more comfortable recommending a group of peers helping each other with no spiritual overtones, though an explicitly Christian group would be far better still.

What if you DO pray in the name of Jesus because your “understanding” of the “Higher Power” is that He is the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ? Then you CAN get divine help, but don’t fool yourself into thinking that anyone else can get help with a different “Higher Power.” And you don’t need an AA meeting to get help from Jesus.

What about all the people AA has helped? Does it help people stay sober? A “help group” without Jesus can get some results – look at the various weight-loss groups out there that don’t profess any tie to Christianity but do help people lose weight. Positive peer pressure and accountability can help people stay out of habits. I don’t object to help groups in general. The issue is that AA, unlike many groups, claims to be “spiritual” without Christ, which is a dangerous, devil-approved mixture.

Speaking of evil spirits, they can be an issue with alcoholism, though not everyone who drinks needs to have a demon cast out of him. We saw a man get delivered from the clutches of alcoholism who had tried everything else, including secular psychology, after we cast an evil spirit out of him in the name of Jesus. Do you think the local AA group will cast out evil spirits in the name of Jesus? If not, there is no help there for men in this one’s former condition.

4. "Alcoholism is a Disease."

The Bible commands you not to be drunk with wine (Ephesians 5:18), so if you do so, you do not have a disease problem from which you need to be healed – you have a sin problem and you need to repent. Every time you get drunk, you are sinning against God and you are morally accountable for that sin. Alcoholism doesn't just "happen" to you like a flu bug or another real disease. You can never become an alcoholic if you choose not to drink.

We live in a fallen world where people don't like to take responsibility for anything, preferring to see themselves as victims of circumstances. But if you want to be free, you have to take responsibility for your own actions and realize that alcoholism is a moral failure on your part, not some disease you caught that you can't help. It is your fault that you are an alcoholic. Unfortunately, if you believe the AA lie that alcoholism is a disease, you will never take responsibility because you can write it off as something that "just happened to you" rather than something that you chose to do that is evil in God's sight.

I am not trying to get you to beat yourself up for your sin; doing so is fruitless. I am trying to stop you from trying to use the wrong tool for your situation. Sickness is fixed by healing. Sin is fixed by repentance. Trying to fix sin with healing is like trying to use a screwdriver to pound nails. The good news is that if you are willing to do your part and repent, all heaven will stand behind your decision. You can start acting on God's statement that sin shall have no dominion over you (Romans 6:14). So you can start declaring by faith, "The sin of alcoholism shall have no dominion over me!"

The sin of alcoholism can certainly result in various diseases such as liver problems, skin abnormalities and so on, but they are the results of the sin of alcoholism, not the cause. God is willing to heal diseases that are your own fault, as Psalm 107:17-20 shows us. Just don't confuse diseases caused by alcoholism with the sin of alcoholism itself. Of course, if you keep doing what is making you sick, you will believe in vain for healing; it is like believing to be pain-free while continuing to hit yourself with a hammer. Once the sin problem is fixed, you will stop giving yourself actual diseases.

I am not belittling the fact that your body can become chemically addicted to alcohol, tobacco, opiates and other things. I understand that chemicals can get a strong grip on your life. However, Jesus wants to set your body free of the "chemical addiction" side of alcoholism and He will do so if you call on Him in faith to rid you of this work of the devil in your body. You need to call on Jesus to help you rather than just trying to tough things out with human will power. Trying harder not to sin is not the answer; learning who you are as a born-again Christian (no longer the slave of sin) is much more helpful. Then you can declare, "My name is _____ and I'm NOT an alcoholic anymore! The Son has made me free!"

5. “You Will Always Need Alcoholics Anonymous for the Rest of Your Life if You Want to Stay Sober.”

This goes along with the earlier lie, “Once an alcoholic, always an alcoholic.” If you’re always no better than a “recovering alcoholic,” you will conclude that you need to be at AA every week to avoid “falling off the wagon.” I’ve met people who are sporadic at best in their church attendance, which is commanded by Scripture (Hebrews 10:25), who would not dare miss their weekly AA meeting, which is not commanded by Scripture. This is a sure sign of wrong priorities that will lead to staying in bondage. AA is not a substitute for church and it is not even a Christian organization (see the next lie below).

The minister I referred to above has stayed free without ever attending an AA meeting in her life, so attending AA is definitely NOT a prerequisite for staying sober.

6. “Alcoholics Anonymous is a Christian Organization Based on Christian Principles.”

Many people mistakenly assume that AA is a Christian organization because the local chapter holds meetings in the basement of a church building. After all, its 12 steps are in a frame on the wall next to the same drab-looking painting of Jesus that seems to be a standard fixture in church basements. (By the way, the real Jesus has more joy than anyone else (Hebrews 1:9); He doesn’t look like He’s just been eating raw lemons.)

AA was founded by a spiritualist – someone who tried to talk to dead people, which is forbidden by Scripture (Deuteronomy 18:10-11). It was NOT founded by a real Christian. In fact, he thought spirits helped him with his AA writings. Do you want to rely on literature inspired by one or more evil spirits? While AA was patterned after a Christian group that was getting results, AA stripped out the Christian-specific aspects of it to try to make it accessible to people of different unbeliefs. (The world calls other religions “faiths” but the Bible says there is only one faith (Ephesians 4:5); other religions are unbeliefs – the Buddhist unbelief, the Jewish unbelief, the Muslim unbelief, the Hindu unbelief, and so on.) By doing so – replacing Jesus with a generic Higher Power – AA took out any real power to deliver from alcoholism. Interestingly, the original Christian “Oxford Group” that AA’s founder used as a model correctly taught that you can have complete victory, which under AA you never have because your condition is “incurable” in their minds. The evil spirits helping AA’s founder must have been satisfied with the results of their inspirations, as the devil loves to promote the idea of being “spiritual” without Christ and the idea that you cannot escape his bondage.

I’ve met plenty of Christians who go to AA meetings, but that doesn’t make it a Christian organization. Its principles are decidedly not Christian. Some local chapters may actually dare to present Jesus and get actual results that way. However, if they do so, they are going against the official rules of AA that forbid endorsing any religion.

So why does AA continue to be so popular? I believe it is for the same reason that cultic Eastern religion-based “healing centers” have been popping up like weeds. The Church in general has failed to understand the power and victory that we have in Jesus, so it has not presented the power of the gospel to set people free from disease and sinful habits such as alcoholism. Thus, people naturally turn somewhere else for answers. May this change as the Church develops a deeper understanding of what Jesus really did for us and the power that is available in His name! May it become commonplace for people to be set free Satan’s bondage of alcoholism in church services and even on the streets!

The Prayer of Nothing

The most useless prayer I can think of is one of the most commonly prayed ones when it comes to healing: “Lord, heal me IF IT BE THY WILL” and its counterpart “YOUR WILL BE DONE concerning my healing.” This kind of prayer is THE PRAYER OF NOTHING.

“The prayer of faith” will save sick people, but “the prayer of nothing” is a colossal waste of time. You would be better off watching a TV show where people try to sing better than each other so that they aren’t sent home this week. At least that might have some entertainment value (if you like those shows), but praying IF IT BE THY WILL has NO value whatsoever.

People who pray this way usually tell me that God is sovereign, and they take that to mean that He’ll just do what His will is in their specific case. (He IS sovereign, but He isn’t a favorites player. What He’ll do for one He’ll do for another if the other meets the same conditions, as is clear from Romans 2:11 and multiple other similar verses cited elsewhere in this book.)

The irony is that if you believe that God will just do HIS will (whatever it is) when it comes to healing, why have you just wasted your time praying? If God’s supposedly pre-determined result is what you’re going to get anyway, you spent your prayer time for NOTHING! God was just going to do “His will” anyway without any consideration for your prayer, so why bother moving air around about it?

Why should you have to “consecrate” yourself to accept His will when it’s what you’ll get anyway even if you’re totally unconsecrated?

I doubt that most people who pray these prayers even stop to consider that.

In the back of people’s minds, they are probably wanting to CHANGE God’s will. In other words, they may think, “Lord, please heal me – I really want you to heal me, but if that’s not what You want, I’m OK with it.” But that’s a lie! You’re NOT OK with it! If you were OK with it, you would not have bothered praying your PRAYER OF NOTHING in the first place hoping to change God’s mind! Besides, if you were OK with it, you would not be seeking medical help or taking any medications (which you’re probably doing) to try to get out of what you think may be God’s will! So don’t get “religious” and claim that you’re OK with something when you know full well that you’re not. When your PRAYER OF NOTHING goes unanswered, and be sure that it will (James said that if you don’t pray in faith you must not expect to get anything – James 1:5-8), you know full well that you will feel “let down” and disappointed and generally not too happy with God about that matter, if you’re honest enough to admit it.

It's as illogical as another PRAYER OF NOTHING, "Lord, hear my prayer," which if He wasn't hearing you, He can't answer by hearing you now, and if He was hearing you, you just wasted your time asking Him to hear you because He already heard you. It's no different if you say, "Lord, I want to be healed, but feel free to ignore my prayer if it's Your will." Think about this for a minute. This is far worse than asking without BELIEVING – it isn't even ASKING or BELIEVING! All you have done is express a desire to be healed in prayer, yet you have not actually ASKED for anything. And the Bible is clear that you will HAVE not because you ASK not (James 4:2)!

If you want something definite, you must pray for something definite. When you pray expecting nothing, you will definitely get nothing.

Someone could amend the bad prayer above to say, "Lord, I AM asking you to heal me, but feel free to turn down my request if it's Your will." Then he can say that at least he asked. But that isn't necessarily true either. That prayer can be reworded, "I'm asking for healing, but I hereby withdraw my request if it isn't Your will to heal me, so depending on whatever natural circumstances or feelings I deem to be proof of Your will to heal or not heal me, I may or may not be requesting anything. So maybe I'm asking and maybe I'm not. If it's Your will to heal me, I'm asking, but if it's not Your will, I'm not asking, and because I don't know Your will, I don't know whether I'm asking or not." Surely Jesus never taught anyone to pray such prayers to receive specific things from God! Far from the tenacious praying Jesus taught that seizes the Kingdom by force (Matthew 11:12), this prayer is basically, "I'll ask, but if I don't see any natural results within my timetable, I will assume that You don't want to heal me and I will abandon the request. I will ascertain Your will not from Your eternal Word, but from my changeable circumstances."

What you need to do is change your praying. But FIRST you need to renew your mind to the Word in the matter before you pray! That's why I wrote this book – so that you can see that the Bible plainly teaches about divine healing. You can only pray in faith when you know what God's will is. But once you see from the Bible that it is always God's will for you to be healed, and that He has already provided healing that is yours for the taking in prayer, you won't pray an IF IT BE THY WILL or a THY WILL BE DONE prayer about your healing anymore – you'll believe and receive it when you pray.

Bible Believing Churches that Don't Believe the Bible

Today, Divine Healing Network (DHN) will interview Bill Tonman, pastor of God's Church Denominational Assembly in Nazareth Springs, Arkansas.

DHN: I read in your statement of faith that you believe that the Bible is the Word of God, and is the infallible standard for conduct and doctrine. It's good to see that.

Bill: Yes, our entire denomination believes the Bible. It's in our statement of faith.

DHN: I also understand that your church believes in divine healing.

Bill: Yes, of course we do! Unlike most denominations, we include divine healing in our statement of faith as well.

DHN: Now I've seen some churches say that they believe that divine healing is active today, but they stop short of saying that it belongs to everyone. How exactly does your statement read?

Bill: Our statement says, "Jesus Christ bore our sicknesses as well as our sins, and therefore every believer has the right to divine healing."

DHN: Nice! That certainly makes it clear. I imagine that you must see a lot of miracles!

Bill: Well, actually, I don't know that we've seen anything we'd call a miracle, but some people have recovered after we asked God to heal them.

DHN: What conditions have you seen healed recently?

Bill: Our choir director and our associate pastor both had colds a month ago. We asked God to heal them, and they are perfectly healthy today!

DHN: Now what about sinners who had colds a month ago and don't have them today? I'm not trying to nitpick, but wouldn't colds go away on their own anyway after a month?

Bill: Well, you don't know for sure. But I know for sure that those two were healed of theirs!

DHN: So did the symptoms leave immediately?

Bill: No, they clung on for another week or two, but we kept on asking God to heal them and they're fine now!

DHN: Do you have any cases of something more notable, like cancer, being healed?

Bill: Well, Gladys Sover, our head greeter, came down with cancer, and we had long prayer vigils and asked God to heal her, but God had other plans for her. But you know, she's healed now in heaven, so He really did answer our prayers to heal her when He took her home. Death is the ultimate healing.

DHN: Please pardon me for being a little confused, but if divine healing is the right of every believer, how can you say that God had other plans than to heal her? Didn't you say that the Bible affirms that Jesus bore our sicknesses so that we don't have to? If the Bible is your standard for doctrine, and the Bible says that God heals all our diseases, how could God turn around and decide not to heal Gladys?

Bill: Well, when you're the CEO who writes the rules, if you make 'em, you can break 'em.

DHN: So are you saying that God can make exceptions to what He said in the Bible?

Bill: The Bible teaches that God is sovereign. That means that He can do whatever He wants, and who are we to question His will? He didn't heal Gladys in this life, and that was His choice to make.

DHN: So wait a minute. Are you saying that because God is sovereign, He can act contrary to the Bible?

Bill: God is above everything. He is free to make exceptions at His divine whim. It's His world to run.

DHN: So in effect you are saying that God is not obligated to keep His promises. He can violate His Word any time it suits Him. How can you believe that, when the Bible says that He has exalted His Word above His name and that His Word is forever settled in heaven?

Bill: We DO believe His Word. We all get healed now or in heaven. It's up to God's sovereign will if the time is now or not.

DHN: But when I read your statement of faith, I get the definite impression that healing is the right of every believer in THIS lifetime.

Bill: Well, no, of course not, because by definition God never heals your FINAL illness! He heals every believer in this lifetime WHEN IT'S HIS WILL.

DHN: So do you NOT believe that believers shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover?

Bill: They shall indeed recover – when it's His will!

DHN: What about the Bible, which you say is infallible, saying that God is The Lord Your Healer?

Bill: He heals, too – when it's His will!

DHN: So are you actually denying that the Bible is a revelation of God's will?

Bill: It shows us what His will is in general, of course. But He is free to make exceptions because He's God.

DHN: So if someone answers an altar call, will God only save him if it's His will in that particular case?

Bill: I don't know why you'd ask such a silly question. Jesus' blood was shed for EVERYONE, so anyone can be SAVED!

DHN: No exceptions?

Bill: Of course not! Jesus said that anyone who comes to Him, He will by no means cast out. God would have to break His Word to refuse salvation to anyone.

DHN: So when it comes to being born again, you don't believe that God makes exceptions to His Word on a case-by-case basis?

Bill: No! The Bible is plain that WHOSOEVER calls on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

DHN: This is really getting confusing, Pastor Bill. If God can never break His promises when it comes to the new birth, how can He break His promises regarding healing all your diseases just as He forgives all your sins?

Bill: Well that's different! People who ask to be saved always get saved, but we've had a lot of people ask God to heal them and He didn't, so He must have some reason for not healing them.

DHN: But I thought that the Bible was your final authority. It sounds to me like you're saying that you're basing your divine healing doctrine on people's experience, not on the Word. Does the Word say that God has the right to turn anyone down for healing? If He didn't want everyone healed, why would He lay our sicknesses on Jesus and make Him suffer physically in our place?

Bill: I guess that you'll have to ask God that question. The secret things belong to Him, you know.

DHN: Yes, but that same verse says that the things that are revealed belong to us and our children forever. Doesn't your very statement of faith show that God has revealed that divine healing is the right of every believer based on Jesus' bearing of sickness? Doesn't the Word show us that we should all be in health and prosper?

Bill: I understand your confusion. Our denomination put out a new position paper to clear that up – our new position is that divine healing is the right of every believer – subject to God's will in the matter.

DHN: But that is not what your denomination ever taught before. It was always clear that it was ALWAYS God's will to heal.

Bill: ALL believers get healed! Some in this lifetime. I know that "back in the day" they taught that God could never make an exception, but back then lots of people were getting healed, too, so it was easy to claim that.

DHN: Is the Word different today?

Bill: No, but our understanding of it keeps getting better with every generation.

DHN: So today no one is getting a miracle, but back when your group taught that everyone can receive healing as a right in Christ, a lot of people were getting healed. How is that an improvement?

Bill: We've learned to be less presumptuous when it comes to God's sovereignty. We ask for healing but accept His answer. We have a more balanced view now.

DHN: This confuses me as well. If healing has been PROVIDED already, why would you ASK God for something that He has already granted? Wouldn't you just RECEIVE it when you pray? Isn't that what Jesus taught? And how could God's answer ever be "No" when all His promises are Yes and Amen in Christ by us?

Bill: There are a lot of things that we just won't understand in this life.

DHN: But if something is in the Bible, and the Bible is infallible, how could God ever not stand behind His very own words? I thought your denomination got its doctrine from the Bible. Is God not faithful to keep every promise He made in the Bible?

Bill: I don't have all the answers. I'm only human. I'm just a man.

DHN: Well, thank you for your time, Pastor.

Bill: You're welcome, and may the Lord bless you richly – if it's His will!

I was in an interesting position once after paying to rent a Spirit-filled denominational church's sanctuary to host miracle meetings. When I went to return the key, I ended up in the hallway with a church member and the pastor. This church's statement of faith was a clear as the one above. I probably don't have this word for word, but I can give you the gist of it. The church member said, "Now if I want to be healed, I just have to receive it when I pray, right, as was taught in the meetings?" The pastor interjected, "When it's His will!" The person said, "But I thought that it WAS His will," and turning to me said, "What do YOU say?"

I felt like Jesus being asked if people should pay taxes to Caesar or not. I could not deny God's Word for anyone, no matter who was there. On the other hand, it is horribly bad manners to correct a pastor in front of His people. I sought the Lord for a good quick answer, and He gave me one I'll never forget. "I believe your church's statement of faith that says that healing is provided in the atonement and is the privilege of every believer." Now the pastor would have to admit that he believed contrary to the official statement of faith (grounds for termination) if he said otherwise. He didn't say anything else.

It concerns me that many "Bible-believing" churches really don't believe the Bible. They add the footnote "if it's His will" to seemingly everything. If we REALLY believe the Bible, we should stand on everything it says and believe that God will back His own words. If God can break a single promise He made "in His sovereignty" then He is as bad as the devil and should be impeached! Making a promise and not keeping it means that you LIED when you made it. God is not a man that He should lie (Numbers 23:19). He CANNOT alter the word that has gone forth from His lips.

Psalm 89:34:

My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips.

Nothing is more certain in all creation than the words that God spoke and recorded for us. If we would all teach people that God NEVER breaks His Word, our congregations would rise up and receive in faith, knowing that God could never turn them down when He says that something is already theirs. I hope that you get a revelation of the verse above. If you do, it will change your praying forever! You will approach God in confidence to receive what you need rather than “asking” Him to keep His own Word!

Don't Glorify the Devil

We want to live and preach in a way that lifts up Jesus, not Satan. However, some well-meaning people unwittingly act as Satan's publicists when they should be broadcasting what Jesus is doing.

One trap involves preachers who have visited demonized areas. Demon manifestations are common in some places, and they can be downright shocking. I've been to such places. But when preachers keep "talking up" the bizarre things that demons are doing, they can get people into fear instead of faith. Never major on demonic manifestations, despite the temptation to come across as the cool dude of the things of the Spirit because you can report things that most people don't see or hear about.

Because so many people don't know much about spiritual things, a demonized person might feel the need to make videos of manifestations to prove that he should be taken seriously. I don't enjoy watching the Satan Channel. I refuse to make a big deal about what some demon did. It is likely something I've seen before at this point, and I'm not impressed by demons – I'm impressed by Jesus. There are demonic activity videos on the Internet, but I'd rather watch videos of people getting miracles in the name of Jesus.

Another more minor way in which people glorify the devil is by giving devilmonies. Many of us have heard "testimonies" where 90% of it is all the bad stuff that Satan did by tormenting someone with sickness or something else and the last 10% is about how Jesus fixed the situation. I really don't like to sit through the 90%. You can let people know how bad your condition was without going into almost endless detail about it. You can unintentionally build people's "faith" in how badly the devil can beat you up and possibly leave the impression that Jesus only comes through after Satan has had a heyday in your life for a long time. That is certainly not the case – everyone has the right to be completely healed and free RIGHT NOW.

Because I was involved in the occult and I was dramatically anti-Christian before I was a Christian, I was more likely to get asked to give my testimony in certain meetings because it was a "really good" testimony. But really, I don't have such a great testimony. A great testimony would be that someone was raised a Christian and served Jesus all his life. That might not be as much as a "draw" when advertising a speaker, but such a person lived a better life than I have, because my early years were wasted without Christ, while the other person's early years counted for something and will be part of that person's heavenly reward.

Is God Holding Back Your Dreams of Ministering to the Sick?

Jack and Acie Uker pastored a very small church in Zilch City, Nebraska. Jack dreamed of someday laying hands on thousands of sick people, but it was hard to lay hands on kilopersons when his Prayer Church could only hold 50 people and most of his seats were empty on Sunday morning. No one seemed to pay any attention to him, or even to his town, which was a real-life reflection of a tourism slogan Nebraska used: "There's nothing to do here."

But the time came when Jack was at a ministers' meeting and a prophet spoke. He suddenly singled out Jack and Acie and told all the other ministers there that the LORD said that they should all invite Jack and Acie to their churches and turn them loose to do their thing.

Jack's imagination started going wild. He could see flight disruptions coming when he got on airplanes and all his social media followers recognized him and started yelling "Hi, Jack!" He foresaw the need for his own jet, and then his own airport to accommodate all the air traffic that would be coming to Zilch City as people came from everywhere to get Jack and Acie to lay hands on them. He foresaw their picture on the cover of a Christian magazine with the caption "Jack and Acie Uker – King and Queen of Divine Healing!"

Suddenly a loud noise blared and the walls of the building where the ministers' meeting was being held dissolved into something else – Jack's bedroom! His alarm had gone off.

Jack was suddenly back in reality. He was the unknown pastor of an unknown church in an area whose only significant landmark was a replica of Stonehenge built using old cars. Half of his tiny congregation was the Doucy family, which he had married into. (Acie's dad was obviously one of those people who think it's funny to give your kids names like Justin Case, Robin Banks, Jack Tupp or Barb Dwyer.) And Jack wondered...was God holding back his dreams of laying hands on the sick? Was God keeping him in a small place for some reason?

The devil came along to assure Jack that the reason why he was out just west of nowhere was that he was a ministerial flunkie. The devil explained that the GOOD preachers get to minister in big cities and have big TV and Internet followings, while the CRUMMY preachers are sent to remote towns where they at least won't do much damage. The devil went on to explain that people in big cities were obviously more important to God than people in country towns, because if they were all the same, God would send some people with strong giftings to country towns as well as cities. The devil concluded that Jack was never going to be promoted. He would have to preach to his small crowd every week and God's only word to him would be, "Go back, Jack, do it again."

Thus Jack became the umpteen thousandth preacher to wonder, "Is GOD holding me back?" And you may have wondered the same thing. If you have, read on!

Calling vs. Separation

The first question to consider is whether you have been CALLED but not SEPARATED. There will be a time between the point where you know that God has CALLED you and the time that God actually SEPARATES you to do something. This is evident from the following verse:

Acts 13:2:

As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.

They were already CALLED, but now God was SEPARATING them. If you are called, but you have not yet reached the point where you have been separated to your calling, you would be mistaken to launch out yourself to try to make your calling happen. If it is time for you to be separated to your calling, the Holy Spirit will bear witness of that with other people.

You can lay hands on the sick without being separated or even called to a certain ministry office. You can lay hands on the sick as a believer whether you have any calling to the ministry or not, let alone whether you've been separated to stand in a ministry office. But it doesn't mean that you can quit your job tomorrow and just minister to the sick full time.

If you stay faithful to God to serve where you are, the day will come when God will separate you if He has called you. It would be senseless for God to call you to do something and then NEVER let you do it. However, this "called but not yet separated" phase typically lasts a lot longer than you think it should! During this time, God WOULD hold you back from doing what He has not yet separated you to do. The key is to stay faithful where you are.

Are You into Pride?

Now, if you HAVE been separated already, the next question is whether you have gotten into pride. Pride WILL cause God to actively oppose your ministerial progress.

James 4:6:

But he giveth more grace. Wherefore he saith, God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble.

1 Peter 5:5:

Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.

As you can see from the verses above, God will actively resist you if you are proud. So if you are proud, YES, God is holding back your ministry. But if you're not proud, you should expect God to lift you up and promote you in due season. Due season may not come when YOU think it's due – but it will ALWAYS come if you stay humble and obedient, no matter what it looks like or how long you've been waiting.

Galatians 6:9:

And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.

Ecclesiastes 3:1:

To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven:

A PROUD person is anxious to have the microphone. A PROUD person is always thinking how he could do a better job than the actual speaker. A HUMBLE person is interested in how he can SERVE other people – in whatever capacity is needed at the time. A HUMBLE person can learn from other speakers. A PROUD person is always handing out business cards and behaving more like a fisher of preaching invitations than a fisher of men. A HUMBLE person is willing to let GOD raise up opportunities, and in the meantime, he is out there doing the work of the ministry whether anyone gives him any recognition for it or not.

Jack was sure that he should be “promoted” at any time to pastor a church in the other end of the state in a big city whose name used to be yelled when a certain person was manning a football team. He often found himself sulking that the day had not yet come, and the more he sulked, the more depressed he got. He tried setting up some websites, only to find that there were many other ministry websites out there and he was lost in the shuffle. Jack grew more and more despondent.

Legitimate Callings to Rural Areas

God does not forsake people who live out in the middle of nowhere. Some men are CALLED to serve in such areas, and it doesn't mean that the small church is just a stepping stone to a bigger city where higher pay, bigger churches and greater recognition await. Everyone who obeys God will get the same reward in heaven. No one will be rewarded for the size of his congregation or the size of the city where it was! If that were the case, God would be unfair because the deck would be stacked against small-town preachers.

Rather than working on getting INVITES or working on getting POPULAR, you would be better off working on getting GOOD! The better your ministry is, the more people you will help. There have been cases where some churches in rural areas that were really GOOD ended up with more people attending than the town's population! But that won't happen by sulking or wishing it would happen. You'll need to work on your walk with the Holy Spirit and your knowledge of the Word. You'll need both if you want to make it in the long run.

If God really showed you a ministry to more people, follow His leadings and He will eventually bring it to pass if you're humble and obedient. However, NEVER gauge your success by your crowd size. That's dangerous and foolish. Your success is measured only by whether you are doing what God called you to do. Make that your only yardstick.

Jack had no support system because of what happened when he REALLY went to ministers' conferences. The questions he was asked were guaranteed to be (1) "What's your name?" (2) "Where's your church?" (3) "How many people do you have in your church?" At that point, the person asking would say, "Oh, OK, we'll give you the bottom spot on the Ministerial Totem Pole at this conference because we all have more people in our churches than you have." Well, they didn't actually come out and SAY that, but their words and actions proved it anyway. Jack felt like a total loser. He cringed every time he mentioned his average attendance on Sunday morning. Sadly, he never found out that not every ministerial association acts that way. (The one I'm in doesn't.) He also never found out that most of the other pastors were citing the number of names on their membership rolls, which could include inactive or even deceased people (until someone figured out that they were deceased, which was hard because some of the live people on their membership rolls hadn't been to church for two years), and they counted pregnant women as two people (which was technically true) – things that Jack had too much integrity to do. So Jack stopped going to the meetings because he felt worse when he left than when he arrived.

By the way, truth is sometimes stranger than fiction. First, there really IS a Carhenge. Second, the events in the second paragraph of this story have probably been a private fantasy for more than a few aspiring preachers, but they actually HAPPENED to me and my wife! Never assume that anything is impossible when you're following the Lord! With Him, real life is even more interesting than anything you could make up. And be sure that if God decides it's time for you to have some doors open, they can open faster than you could imagine if it's really God opening the doors. Remember, Jesus did NO MINISTRY for the first 30 years or so of His life! All the miracles He did were in a fairly short period. When GOD wants to blow open doors, He can make things happen very quickly – if you're ready.

If you're ready for something, God has no reason to hold you back. I think the truth is that too often we hold OURSELVES back because we're not really giving ourselves totally to our callings.

1 Timothy 4:15:

Meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them; that thy profiting may appear to all.

The more seriously you pursue your calling, the sooner you will get there. It isn't all up to God or even mostly up to God. We need to "take heed" that we fulfill our ministry!

Colossians 4:17:

And say to Archippus, Take heed to the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfil it.

If you're serious, go after it! But don't think that "going after it" means hounding pastors you've never met to have you in. Most invites will be born out of existing relationships and good personal references from other people who have seen you in action.

Sadly, Jack made the mistake of just sitting around watching worldly TV programs with Acie every night. He never developed his spirit man or learned to control his flesh the way he needed to do to become successful. Instead, he based all his plans for future growth on the premise that a great revival would just fall on his church anyway soon because a prophet had said, "Surely Zilch City will be 'ground zero' for a great revival, and people will come in great planes to the Great Plains to partake of it." So he figured that he could just keep living the way he was, and eventually this mammoth revival would just fall out of the sky as the prophet said that it would. But it never did. If you're going to base your ministry on prophecy, make sure that it's the "more sure word of prophecy" – the Bible (2 Peter 2:19)!

About Opponents of Divine Healing

Plenty of people out there will fight vigorously for their right to stay sick. Who are these people, and why do they do it?

In general, you will find that opponents of healing love God just as much as you do. They are just as consecrated to God as you are. They want the will of God to be done just as much as you do. They are as zealous for truth as you are. They honestly believe that they are doing God a service by attacking the teaching of divine healing. They think that they are saving you from some hideous, harmful doctrine that will hurt you and others, possibly leading you to an early grave. They think that by lowering your expectations concerning healing, they are saving you disappointment and possible apostasy in the future when you (supposedly!) find out that it doesn't really work and then get sour on God.

Those who have lost loved ones and friends to illnesses may have an ego stake in believing that nothing could have been done. Unfortunately, they set the stage for others to die prematurely and perpetuate the cycle by embracing unscriptural ideas about God's sovereignty and will in the matter. They don't mean to do this. If these people really knew the truth about divine healing, they surely would be proclaiming it themselves. Hardly anyone would knowingly be used by the devil to promote his works on the earth.

Unfortunately, some opponents of healing make baseless accusations against those of us who believe in it, accusing us of saying things we have never even heard anyone say. This is the basic "build a straw man and knock it down" approach. The kind of church they describe I would never want to attend either! After describing a nonexistent "church from hell," they go to ranting and raving. The more reputable authors don't do these things, but the more sensational books seem to sell more copies. Here is the sort of thing I mean:

BEWARE OF DISGUSTING WORD OF FAITH CHURCHES

by Lou Zirrh

Pity the poor sick person who attends a "faith church." First he will be told that his sickness is due to some sin in his life. Then he will be told to deny that the sickness or the "symptoms" even exist, and that they are lies of Satan. Then he will be made to feel personally guilty about anyone he knows who has died of an illness. He will be told, "You just didn't have enough faith!" He will be made to feel responsible for his own sickness. He will be told that Jesus took his sicknesses, so therefore there is something wrong with him if he can't believe that and be healed. He will hear dozens of Scriptures quoted out of context without any balance, all based on personal visions and supposedly divine revelations of a Word of Faith Prophet. He will be told to put such a Prophet's words before Scripture itself, which is the basis for all cults.

Now, besides being sick, the man now carries a burden of guilt and self-condemnation for “being in the devil’s unbelief.” If anything, this will make him sicker. He loses the joy of his salvation and subscribes to a gospel of works based on his ability to “believe and receive.” Eventually, he becomes so disappointed that he leaves the church and mostly gives up on his walk with God. He thought he could trust God, but to him God is now unreliable because He did not keep an artificial and man-made promise of universal healing. He ends up on the scrap heap, spiritually bankrupt and shipwrecked – all because of an ear-tickling but unscriptural doctrine.

Can you see, dear reader, why we must oppose this disgusting, Christ-insulting message of “divine healing” for all? It wreaks havoc in the church. It is “another gospel” from the one delivered to the saints. Why do these churches preach it? Because they are big moneymaking operations, and the “faith preachers” would stand to lose big if the truth were known. They don’t care about the sheep; they just want to profit at the expense of the torn lives they leave behind.

Church, we must speak up against this damaging doctrine of devils, this hedonistic heresy, which is being promoted by spiritual con men around the world. These scam artists are destroying the very lives of their victims, twisting Scripture to line their own greedy pockets. Let us boldly contend for the faith as it was once delivered and expose these apostles of apostasy for what they are.

[“Ad hominem” attacks against selected prominent faith preachers follow here.]

If you’ve ever read some of the popular anti-healing books, you will probably agree that this fictitious article is no exaggeration. Mr. Zirrh has probably never set foot in a “faith church,” but he thinks he knows all about their practices. Thus, he misrepresents the real doctrines taught by reputable ministers. His heart may be right toward God, but his approach is unscholarly.

No one in his right mind would want to attend the church that Mr. Zirrh described in his article. If such a church exists, I haven’t been there. Real healing preachers will not tell you to deny your sickness, and they present the message as good news, not a guilt trip. They realize that sickness is a result of sin in the earth, and you are not necessarily morally responsible for your illness. (Of course, some illnesses are a direct result of sin, but we don’t need to belabor that.) Contrary to what Mr. Zirrh says, people can and do get healed as a direct result of hearing the Word concerning healing. Of course, we all hate the idea of Scripture being taken out of context, so this article’s accusations should stir up your righteous indignation against it. It is easy to line up people behind you with such a generality, but notice that this article does not even attempt to refute any arguments for divine healing on a Scriptural basis! As far as taking some man’s word or vision over the Bible, you have to be stupid to do that. Any reputable healing minister preaches healing from the Bible and does not ask you to believe anything because he had some vision or visitation. The gospel of healing is clear enough from Scripture that there is no need to reinforce it with unusual personal experiences!

The author imputes false motives where none exist. Face it, any author would lose financially if his teachings started to be considered false. This is a simple fact and does not prove that the author just wrote it for the money. There may be some pro-healing authors well as anti-healing authors who are in it for the money, but I don't believe that most of them are. How could you prove such an accusation anyway? Given that this is a free book that doesn't even request a donation, you'd have trouble proving that I am in this just for the money!

While it is annoying to see healing ministers' motives ridiculed and their characters assassinated, bear in mind that it is not fair to do the same to those who object to healing. You cannot assume that an anti-healing preacher loves tradition more than God, is not really walking with God, or never listens to the Holy Spirit. You should never speak of an anti-healing preacher in those terms. He may live a more morally pure life before God than you do! Some outspoken opponents of healing have powerful ministries along unrelated lines and are genuinely, obviously anointed by God. They just got into an area other than the one they are called to minister in, and they lack insight in that area. That does not make them bad Christians.

If most anti-healing preachers would take the time to study everything the Bible says about healing and sickness, and not just Job's trial, Timothy's stomach and Trophimus who was left at Miletum sick, I am convinced that many of them would change their minds. Others, being bound by traditions such as "Paul's thorn was sickness," will never see it because they will believe the tradition more than the Word. Please understand that they never consciously decided to believe tradition instead of the Word of God. Do you know anyone who would knowingly choose an unsupported tradition over Scripture? I don't.

Some of these preachers would truly rejoice with you if you got healed. They are in favor of healing in that sense. They would love to see as many people healed as possible. Unfortunately, they stand against the very doctrine that you must believe to be assured of receiving healing, that is, that Jesus Christ bore your sicknesses in your place.

Whether you believe me or not, the Lord really put compassion in me for those who speak and write against divine healing while I was writing this book. I have no personal animosity toward any of them and I sincerely hope that they find out the truth and enjoy more abundant lives as a result. I have no interest in trying to showcase them by name and tear down their ministries. I wish all the opponents of divine healing in the atonement would be as gracious in the other direction.

Finally, if people insist on contending for the right to stay sick, let them stay sick and find someone who is open to divine healing. You can waste a lot of time arguing with people whose minds are already made up. Your time would be better spent actually furthering the gospel on the earth. Arguing about divine healing, as opposed to preaching it, can become just another trap and diversion of the enemy to stop real progress. Let's take a hypothetical conversation between you and Smart Alex, who graduated at the top of his class at a prestigious school – and won't let you forget it:

You: We just saw a woman get healed of stage 4 lung cancer in a service last week! Jesus is continuing to prove that He is alive!

Smart Alex: How do you know that she really had lung cancer to begin with?

You: She said she had been treated for it for the last year.

Smart Alex: Do you know this woman personally?

You: No.

Smart Alex: Then you don't really know that she was treated for lung cancer for the last year, and you have no way of knowing that she was really at stage 4.

You: Well, her hair was gone, and that happens a lot when people take chemo.

Smart Alex: She could have just shaved her head to invent a nice testimony to get gullible people like you to believe her story. You don't really know.

You: She named her doctor who had been treating her – Dr. Jones in Smalltown. That same doctor certified that she is now cancer-free even though she was at stage 4.

Smart Alex: Sometimes cancer just goes into remission, you know. She may still have it but it's just in remission. That even happens to people who aren't Christians sometimes! Being in remission doesn't mean that she is cured!

You: Well, it so happens that there was a story in the newspaper about her healing yesterday, and Dr. Jones is quoted as saying that this was the first time in his life that he's ever seen a miracle. If a lot of people go into remission, he would know that, but obviously something convinced him that this case was a miracle.

Smart Alex: There is so much fake news out there! The reporter may have misquoted the doctor. Were you actually there when the reporter interviewed the doctor?

You: No...

Smart Alex: So you weren't there, so you don't know for sure that he wasn't just misquoted. That happens all the time. Now, can you tell me where Dr. Jones got his medical degree? Maybe he got it at some third-rate med school and he doesn't really know what he's talking about.

You: No, but I suppose I could find out if you really want to know.

Smart Alex: Has he ever been sued for malpractice? Have you checked out his past? Have you checked out what people have to say about this doctor on social media, or are you just taking his word for everything? He might not even be any good. Some doctors are quacks.

You: No, I haven't looked...

Smart Alex: So you don't even know if this doctor is a reliable source of information. Does he have an advanced degree in oncology?

You: In what?

Smart Alex: Oh, I forgot, you don't know a whole lot. Let's put it this way. Is he a certified CANCER specialist?

You: No, he is a general practitioner.

Smart Alex: So his opinion doesn't matter. He isn't qualified to give an opinion.

You: Well, he says that the cancer specialist to whom he referred the woman assured him that the cancer was gone.

Smart Alex: Were you there when that conversation took place? Are you an eyewitness of any of this?

You: No, but why would Dr. Jones risk his reputation by making this up?

Smart Alex: Have you seen the "before and after" X-rays yourself?

You: Hah! YES I HAVE because she brought them to the service and showed everyone! If you had been there, you would have seen them! She was full of cancer and now there is no trace of it!

Smart Alex: Are you professionally trained to evaluate X-rays? Are YOU a certified oncologist?

You: No, but...

Smart Alex: In this case, you're not qualified to evaluate X-rays, so your take on them is meaningless.

You: It's just obvious how different the X-rays were to anyone with a working set of eyes.

Smart Alex: Sometimes doctors switch X-rays by accident, so the one she claims is the "after" X-ray could be someone else's and she could still be as sick as ever. You don't know for sure! That does happen, you know.

You get the idea. You could probably talk to Smart Alex for the next decade and he would keep coming up with more reasons why he won't believe your story. I've been in that position and this is how things go. Perhaps you think that after a few years, her healing will be more convincing:

You: That woman is still alive and has no sign of being sick when you see her. So that proves that it wasn't just remission. She was really healed of stage 4 cancer!

Smart Alex: No, that means that her initial diagnosis was probably incorrect. How do you know that she really had cancer to begin with? Some tests yield false positives, you know.

You: I saw the X-rays that the doctor provided, remember?

Smart Alex: Remember, those X-rays could have been switched inadvertently. So in this case, it wasn't the "cancer-free" X-ray that would have been switched, but rather the one that supposedly showed the cancer in the first place. She might never have had it at all!

You: If the doctor were really making mistakes like that, he would have lost his accreditation a long time ago!

Smart Alex: Who accredited that doctor? What is the track record of other doctors accredited by the same organization? Can you prove that this doctor isn't part of an organization that has other doctors noted for making bad diagnoses who are just a bunch of quacks who endorse each other?

So how do you win an argument with Smart Alex? You don't! Smart Alex is determined not to believe in miracles, no matter what evidence you bring to him. At some point, you just walk away rather than continuing to waste both your time and his time trying to cast your pearls before swine (Matthew 7:6). Some people are just determined not to believe, so they wouldn't believe even if they saw someone raised from the dead (Luke 16:31).

Beware: Wrong Motives for Getting into Healing Lines

Do not play with holy things. People in both Testaments died because they did not show the proper reverence for the holy things of God. A healing line puts a sacred ordinance of the Lord into practice, so it should never be taken lightly.

If you get into a healing line with the wrong motive, you not only risk judgment to yourself, but you will also interrupt the flow of the anointing for the people who are there to get healed. You may rob them of a blessing for which they may have traveled some distance. The anointing will not be as strong if you grieve the Holy Spirit with your actions.

The only reason that you should ever get into a healing line is so that you can be healed of a genuine physical or mental illness. The person conducting the service will usually make this clear. Make sure that you are definitely going to stand in faith for your healing no matter what. If you aren't that serious about it, stay in your seat! The one exception would be if your condition is definitely called out.

Do not attempt to find some insignificant condition (such as a hangnail or a pimple) simply to justify getting into the healing line for any of the reasons listed below. Yes, God is able and willing to heal those things, but you know in your heart what your real motive is. The anointing in a healing line is there to minister to the sick. If you are in line for any other reason, you are out of line!

NEVER get into a healing line for any of the following reasons:

Wanting More Anointing for your Own Ministry

I once heard that a minister who (supposedly) knew a lot about the anointing advised people, "If you can find any excuse to get in a healing line when an anointed man of God is laying hands on people, get in it! Get around that anointing! Lie on the floor in it as long as the ushers will let you! You will get a deposit of it yourself for your own ministry!"

The stupidity of that advice is second only to its peril.

The anointing for ministry is not transmitted by accident. Ministers are set into positions by a deliberate laying on of hands by church leadership (see Acts 13:1-3 and Acts 6:5-6 for examples). Impartations are transmitted through a deliberate laying on of hands (see 1 Timothy 4:14 for an example), not through healing lines. Ultimately, what matters is that you have a definite call on your life from God Himself. Men only acknowledge and confirm publicly what God has already put on the inside of you. You cannot "get" a call to the ministry through the laying on of hands. Preparing for the ministry is a long process, and the anointing for ministry will only rest permanently on those whom God has tested and found faithful over time. You will definitely not launch your ministry by receiving the anointing in the middle of a healing line without the knowledge of the minister.

The Holy Spirit can and does direct services where the anointing is transmitted by the laying on of hands and where it is perfectly proper to lie on the floor for an hour soaking it up. Wait for that kind of service and get in that line if that's what you're after. By respecting the healing anointing in a healing service, you are taking a positive step in God by showing Him that you will not play games with the anointing.

Calling Attention to Yourself

I saw a man get up in a healing line once whose main motive seemed to be to have an experience like that of an evangelist in the early 1900's – being "frozen" in position for three days. This became obvious from his comments to the preacher. After talking with him personally later, it became obvious that he thought much more highly of himself than he ought to and was hoping for a shortcut to publicity in the ministry. See the comments on the first wrong motive for more on ministry "shortcuts."

Nothing is wrong with calling attention to a wonderful healing the Lord has done in your body. Everything is wrong with wanting to receive or experience something so that people's eyes will be on you instead of the Lord. Watch your motive and make sure that you are prepared to give God all the glory for what happens. Be content to let Him get that glory, rather than you getting glory for how well you glorify the Lord!

Hoping for a Personal "Word"

Some preachers give personal words of prophecy frequently, and some of the sick people in the line may be receiving personal prophecies. You may think, "I really came here needing a word from God, so I should get in this line while that anointing is flowing!"

Don't waste your time. God knows where you're sitting, and if He wants to say something to you through prophecy, whether you're called out individually or not, He will do so. You will only grieve the Spirit by getting in the line attempting to "pull" on a prophetic gift when the flow to the people is primarily for healing.

Contrary to what you might think, setting in the second row (when the first was reserved) wearing a red blazer and bright yellow tie to make sure the minister sees you and making eye contact with him as much as possible will NOT increase your chance of getting a genuine word from the Lord.

Also, God gave you the Holy Spirit to lead you. It is not God's intention for you to be led by personal prophecies, though you may at some point get some, and some of them may actually be from God! (I've had more that weren't than those that were, but maybe you'll fare better than I've fared.)

I remember serving in the church nursery and having people say, “I need to be in the sanctuary because there might be a word for me,” and that was their excuse why they couldn’t work in the nursery for that special service. I said, “If God has a word for me, He’s omniscient and knows where to find me.” One service, the ushers came to the nursery and got me because there was a word for me in the main service. Serving faithfully in the “ministry of helps” certainly did not make it hard for God to find me! I think the people who missed it are the ones who didn’t want to serve, especially since the main meaning of “ministry” is serving! I also had a couple different people say, “Thank God for people like you who babysit; as for me, I’m called to the ministry and need to be in the sanctuary getting the Word!” I was as called to the ministry as they were but I didn’t waste my breath saying anything and starting an argument. If you want to have a ministry, start by serving and being willing to do what others don’t want to do and watch God promote you. Or just think you should “get the Word” while others do the work and watch God NOT promote you.

Seeking a Thrill or Experience

Some people get in a healing line hoping that they will have some deep experience, such as having a vision of Jesus or getting “drunk in the Holy Spirit” for hours, or who knows what else. Healing lines are for healing. God grants visions solely as He wills and you cannot (and definitely should not!) “believe” for them. (The devil will be happy to oblige you.) If there is a line for people who want to get drunk in the Spirit, and that’s what you want, fine, but don’t get in the healing line unless you want healing.

Just because you see people fall dramatically, get totally “out in the Spirit,” or shake on the floor for thirty minutes does not mean that you should get in the line to get a similar experience, however appealing such an experience may seem to you. Respect the things of God and seek Him, not unusual experiences. The people on the floor most likely were not seeking any experience when they came up.

Wanting to Feel the Anointing or God’s Love

What on-fire Christian doesn’t like to feel the anointing or the love of God? Of course you do, but don’t get in a healing line for these reasons. We could all use a good “dip” in the anointing, but wait for a service that is geared for that.

Looking for “Healing” for Your Finances or Your Marriage

Don’t tell the minister that you need a healing in your finances or a healing in your marriage. Study the ministry of Jesus and the apostles. Healing lines are for the sick, not those who need “healing” of other varieties. God will “heal” (if you want to call it that) these areas, but the healing line is not the time or place for those kinds of “healings.” If you go up with this type of request, you will distract the minister and interrupt the flow of the anointing. If you want healing for your finances, tithe, give in offerings and believe what God says about money matters, then be led by the Holy Spirit. If you want healing for your marriage, work on your love walk or maybe book some counseling time with your pastor. (If you don’t have a pastor, we’ve found the first problem already.)

Looking for an “Inner Healing”

If the line was called explicitly for emotional healing and you need it, go for it. Part of the anointing on Jesus was – and still is – to heal the brokenhearted. However, if the line is called for physical healing, do not go up for emotional healing. For further discussion about so-called inner healing, see the question, What Is “Inner Healing,” and Do I Need It?

Getting Experience for Your Future Healing Ministry

Forget the idea of getting in line to make observations and get valuable experience being around the healing anointing, seeing how it works from up close, and so on. If you’re up there just to be in on the party, you obviously haven’t learned much about the healing anointing yet. Get some respect for it if you ever want to be used in it yourself.

In most cases, you can find a way to observe what’s going on without being in the line yourself. Don’t get in the line just because you can’t get close enough to observe. Even in a distant seat, you may find that you can still notice when a special healing anointing begins to manifest. You can get some valuable training in your spirit right there in the back of the room. Better yet, if you want to observe closely, get there early and sit as close as you can (without sitting in a reserved seat, of course, unless you qualify for one). In a major meeting, just avoiding getting into strife with other believers trying to save the good seats long before the service starts will be a valuable character-building experience that will also help your ministry! (Note: If they tell you not to save seats between services, don’t do it! It amazes me how many Christians disobey the ushers’ instructions thinking they will experience the anointing better. But being out of order by not following the local rules will not help you know the anointing better at all; it will only hinder you by grieving the Holy Spirit!)

If you are going to get involved in healing ministry, you will probably spend some amount of time in a helping role for those who are already involved in it. This will give you a lot of insight and “hands-on” experience, even if it isn’t your hands being laid on anyone – yet. Some things are difficult to teach, and you probably won’t learn them any other way. As they say, some things are better caught than taught.

I have found myself flowing in the same types of the anointing as those that I served, even though one particular “flow” wasn’t something I even thought I wanted. This is similar to what happened to Joshua as he assisted Moses and Elisha as he assisted Elijah. I believe that God will often deliberately have you associate closely with a minister who is doing what you will be doing as part of your training. However, if it isn’t a “God thing” and you just reason, “I want Brother Powershower’s anointing, so I will try to get a job working for Brother Powershower,” you will probably be disappointed.

Trying to Prove that It Won’t Work

Yes, you can prove that healing lines won’t work for you. Simply get in the healing line with the idea of proving that it won’t work! God will not force anything on you. But if you’re only going up to show someone else that you won’t really get healed, you should stay in your seat. Don’t waste your time or the minister’s time. It is dangerous to play games with God, His anointing, and His servants.

Any Reason Other Than Receiving a Healing in Your Body!

Don’t get in line because all your friends are getting in the line and you want to be with them.

Don’t get in line because you’d like to be noticed by someone (an usher, singer, maybe the preacher himself) with whom you would like to have a romantic relationship.

Don’t get in line because you’re tired and you want to lie on the floor a while.

Healing lines are only for healing. I think you get the message by now!

Be Bold with Your Healing Testimony

A healing testimony is a wonderful way to attract attention to the gospel and draw sinners to Jesus! In the Bible, there were cases where large groups of people were saved because of a single testimony. (See It Might Only Take One.) Perhaps yours will be such a catalyst to others getting saved.

So when you receive your healing, let people know about it! This will help demonstrate to others the goodness of God that leads men to repentance (Romans 2:4).

I'd have to say that if there's been any "bane of my existence" in healing ministry, it's when people selfishly go off with their healing, don't tell others, don't bring others to be healed the way that they were healed, and nothing more becomes of it.

Why wouldn't someone want to be bold about sharing what Jesus did? In a word, fear.

Some people have more faith in the devil than they do in God, so they FEAR that if they share their testimony, Satan might attack them and ruin their healing testimony. Such people need to spend more time in the Word so that their faith is in God's Word, not in Satan's lies. God has a perfect track record of being trustworthy. Satan has a track record of habitual lying.

Some people are like the Jews in the Bible who didn't want to confess Jesus openly, lest they be kicked out of the synagogue. God just called that for what it was – they loved the praises of men more than the praises of God (John 12:42-43)! Some churches don't allow divine healing to be taught and actively oppose it, calling those who teach it evil cultists. If you were to share a healing testimony in such a church, the church would throw you out! (They would actually be doing you a favor.) A woman who received multiple healings through our ministry kept them quiet at her home church because she "couldn't" share them at her church without risking being thrown out. She should have shared what Jesus did anyway! Being kicked out of such a church could have been the best thing that ever happened to her so that she could become a member of a church that preaches the full gospel! If you're more concerned about what your friends think of you than what God thinks of you, you could stand to get some new and better friends who are more concerned about what God thinks!

Some people just aren't very bold, but there's a cure for that – praying for boldness, as they did in Acts 4:29-33! God answered their prayers for boldness, and He will answer yours.

Now there ARE cases where sharing your healing testimony is casting pearls before swine. Jesus warned some people NOT to tell their testimonies in certain towns. The towns were apparently full of unbelief. Sharing a testimony there would only have invited doubters to talk the healed person out of the idea that he was really healed. But not EVERY place is like that, so surely you can find people whom you can tell about how Jesus healed you so that you can glorify Him!

Now if you're on the ministry side of this, don't go into shock if only 10% of the people come back after they're healed and actually do something to advance the kingdom by glorifying God. Ten lepers were cleansed in Luke 17:12-19 and only one of them (10%) came back to even give thanks; the rest just disappeared into a black hole somewhere as far as the kingdom was concerned.

How NOT to Testify about Your Healing

Want to be out of order and decrease the anointing in a service? You can do it by testifying about your healing! The trick is to use the techniques in this article.

Give a Preachimony

Use your big opportunity with a microphone in front of a crowd to “work in” the message that you think the Holy Spirit really wanted preached instead of the message that the minister actually preached. Start out with a real testimony to establish your credibility. Then digress slowly into your new revelation about the identity of the Antichrist or the future of Israel or whatever. In fact, convince yourself that this is the big break you’ve been praying for in your kitchen with both of your friends. Yes, someone will notice that you share with a great anointing, and he will ask you to speak somewhere at a major conference! Things will surely snowball from there, and you’ll be nationally famous in a fraction of the time it took that minister to get known, with an even smaller fraction of the effort. Your anointing that your last eight recent pastors never recognized will finally come to the forefront! You’ve found the shortcut to the ministry; forget work and training and serving others and all that. Just hope that it doesn’t occur to your potential hosts that if you won’t follow the instructions of one man of God, you won’t follow their instructions either.

Give a Blabbimony

Use at least three times as much time you’re supposed to. If you use double, you’ll only be about average. I used to use a digital stopwatch feature on a pocket device a lot because I’m interested in statistics. I have timed testimonies over many years and noted their relationship to the time the person was told that he had. I have found that the average testimony uses about twice the allotted time. Very few testifiers actually stick to the time limit that you give them. I’ve seen testimonies go as much as 44 minutes over their limit because the person running the meeting was too “nice” to cut the motor-mouth off. (It was before I was supposed to be the speaker, too, and the “testimony” was almost all unbelief. Ugh!) Of course, there aren’t too many scientific folks like me who have been known to actually set a countdown stopwatch when they start talking to make sure that they don’t go over, and most people have a distorted view of time. For example, as you go on and on with all your details, it will seem to you that you are using less time than you really are, and it will seem to everyone else that you are using substantially more time than you really are.

An effective blabbimony must be given rapid-fire with no breaks between run-on sentences. Practice talking like an auctioneer. That way, the preacher does not have a polite or convenient time to try to interject something like, “So what did Jesus do for you?” or “How do you know you’re healed?” or “Please get to the point.”

A good blabbimony starts with the phrase, “Before I say this, I just want to say that...” This phrase is usually used when the gift of gab is manifestation.

This sample segment of a blabbimony should inspire you: “I first noticed a lump on my leg about five months ago. I was on my way home from Aunt Freda’s and I was stopped at the end of Exit 13 on the interstate, the one just after Maplewood. Aunt Freda had been talking about how she hurt her right leg getting out of her shelter after a tornado went through town. That was the tornado that destroyed the local trailer park. You know how tornadoes are, there’s just something about them that makes them aim for trailer parks. Or maybe it’s because TV crews just aim for trailer parks so that they can get the most dramatic storm damage videos. Well, when her cousin Billy Bob built the shelter, he didn’t pound the nails in too well, but Billy Bob never was one for details. He forgot to tune his guitar before he sang his version of Freebird at a local talent show. Anyway, Aunt Freda caught her leg on one of the nails. I noticed coming off the exit that my own right leg was hurting a bit. At first, I thought it was just sore from the three-and-a-half-hour ride from Aunt Freda’s, but I felt the spot where it hurt and there was a lump there. It was about half, no wait, a third, no wait, maybe about two-fifths of the way from my ankle to my knee. You know, I’m convinced that GOD had Billy Bob leave that exposed nail there so that Aunt Freda would hurt her leg and talk about it and I would notice that my own leg had a problem in the same spot. Well, I called my doctor, Eubie Heald, at the Middleville Medical Center, the son of Brutus Heald, the All-American football player, whose autograph I got when I was in eighth grade just before the game that ended his career when he ran into the goal post – you know, that was before the days where they put the goal posts at the back of the end zone – but he said that he couldn’t help me anymore because he had just signed up with a different insurance company from the one that I had, so I looked in the phone book under leg doctors, but I couldn’t find any listings for leg doctors, so I called Aunt Freda, because I figured she must have found a good leg doctor in her town and maybe all the good leg doctors know each other....”

In case you thought this example was outlandish, I actually heard one “testimony” in a public campmeeting that included a multi-minute detailed review of a Boston restaurant! The dear person running the meeting was just too “polite” to interrupt the man and his gift of gab.

Give a Devilmony

Make sure that you use Satan's name a lot in your testimony and describe how powerful you perceive him to be, rather than just saying what your physical condition was that Jesus healed. Make Satan look like someone bigger than he really is (a fallen angel who is legally under our feet). Gross everyone out with the lurid details of how horribly Satan afflicted you. Be sure to credit Satan personally for that injury he gave you when you went skiing on the double-diamond expert trail on your first day out, or for the lung cancer he so foully put on your after you smoked five stogies every day for three decades, or for how he was personally responsible for the fact that you sliced your hand with a kitchen knife. (Laugh if you want; I heard someone give that last one in a church service!) It is important to name Satan more frequently than Jesus, as the rule of thumb is that the name you mention more belongs to the one you are really glorifying.

Give a Braggimony

Talk about your faith and how you received and impress us with what a great faith person you are, with no regard for the fact that without Jesus, there would be no basis for faith to begin with, to say nothing of the fact that your faith itself was the gift of God, not of works, lest YOU should boast.

Give a Phonymony

Say that every pain has left your body when really about 40% of it is still there. Surely Jesus will get more glory if you say that He did more than He really did. (Given that exaggeration is simply a form of lying, you might want to read Acts 5:1-11 before doing this.)

Get Spiritual

Rather than just stating the facts, interpret them for the crowd. Instead of saying, "I felt power shoot into my arm and now it's healed," say, "I felt the Shekinah glory of the presence of God permeate my arm after the anointing was transferred into it by the law of contact and transmission."

Other Cool Ideas

Here are some other neat ways that you can make your testimony more interesting for everyone. If you get the microphone, try pointing it directly at the nearest monitor or speaker between sentences. Or speak in a quiet, mousy little voice and hold the microphone a foot away from your mouth, pointing at the ceiling instead of at your mouth, which means that one of today's directional microphones will barely pick you up. If you must hold the microphone the way that a normal person would, give a normal testimony in a soft voice, but at the end scream, "HALLELUJAH!!!!" as loud as you possibly can, directly into the microphone. (This will wake up the people who fell asleep during your testimony.)

Healing and Offerings

One area that has brought a lot of reproach to healing ministry is the handling of offerings. So some thoughts are in order.

In particular, some American preachers have gotten a bad name by insisting on top-tier accommodations when visiting other countries. Perhaps their American friends have no issue with this, but it's another matter when you hear what the people in the country being visited have to say. While it may reduce your comfort level, staying in more modest accommodations or with the people can get you a lot more acceptance with them. They won't that think you come off as being "too good" for them. It also avoids criticism of where offering money is going. Please understand that I don't think preachers should have to stay in the sleaziest hotel in town, either. We just have to be careful about the impression we leave. As in Paul's case, there is a time to be "all things to all men" and live like the locals in order to reach the locals.

I've slept under mosquito nets with no running water or working toilets. I've been in a room so small that the bed took up the ENTIRE room and there wasn't even enough space to walk around the bed. That made dealing with my luggage very interesting. I've had plenty of food I wouldn't care to eat again, too. ("Just don't ask" was a good policy in a place where I knew that monkey brains were considered a delicacy, along with chocolate-covered ants.) I slept many nights in a roach-infested room. I've slept in a room with the host family's kids. I could go on, but seeing the miracles that happened made it worth every last inconvenience. The people were very accepting because I didn't come across as "too good" for them. I wasn't getting the worst place in town to sleep, either, just accommodations that were typical for the area. The only time I've actually refused the offered accommodation is when it turned out that it would be just myself and a woman in an apartment, and in that case I literally slept on the floor somewhere else for a week to avoid reproach. I think those of us from more prosperous countries fail to realize the negative impression we make if we inquire where the nearest luxury hotel is. A fancy hotel would be far more convenient, but it is possible to live without room service and a pool.

If people want to honor you by putting you up somewhere nice, by all means enjoy the place. But if you are running a crusade and you are responsible for the budget, you want to be careful.

I went one place where the people were soured on preachers from my country because the preacher who was there before me insisted on staying at the swankiest hotel in the country in a penthouse suite. The second-to-last night of the crusade, he took AN HOUR AND A HALF in the service to raise money for his huge budget. Suffice it to say that it didn't go over well with the locals.

I've been to too many meetings where the budget was ridiculously exorbitant. By the way, burying church needs in the special meeting budget isn't fair or even honest. High budgets make regular people wonder what's wrong with the people who put on the meetings.

I know this will come across as near heresy to some people, but we've put on meetings where we didn't take any offerings at all. I was happy because we didn't have to interrupt the flow of the Holy Spirit to pass offering containers. Who would ever put on a healing meeting under such circumstances? Well, Jesus, for one! He had partners behind the scenes who helped him, and my no-offering meetings have also been supported behind the scenes.

I also urge you that if you're going to do mailings, at least spare us all the silly-sounding marketing gimmicks. There's a whole "science" behind what color envelopes get the highest response, what wording on the outside gets the most money, what time of the week or month is the best time for people to get your letter, what wording will impel people to give the most, and so on. I don't care to get involved in all that, and I'll certainly never stoop to sending out ghost-written appeal letters as some have done. Sending exactly the same "urgent" appeal with the same picture and only trivial word changes for a few years doesn't help either. I stopped giving to a ministry that was doing a lot of good because they did that, and in so doing, they lost all credibility with me. I had a collection for a while of their identical "urgent" appeal letters sent over a period of several years with the same picture of the same woman with an identical caption. I'll admit that I used the complimentary personalized address stickers, though the extra expense of providing those was not what I wanted to support when I sent checks to that ministry.

You can also spare people the computer-generated suggested giving amounts that are designed to automatically increase little by little compared to previous gifts.

I've stopped supporting a total of three ministries (at this writing) that were doing a lot of good just because their appeal letters were so phony and gimmicky. You can lose good supporters if you use worldly techniques to raise money.

One thing that happens that never should happen is churches taking up an offering "for Brother So-and-So" and then Brother So-and-So doesn't actually get the whole offering, or even the majority of it. How can the Holy Spirit trust a church to house a move of God when underhanded shenanigans go on behind the scenes?

It grieves the Holy Spirit when churches get chintzy with their guest ministers. I lived for years in a place where love offerings were often more "love" than "offerings" and some churches literally didn't give their guests enough money to drive to the next church, let alone do things like eat and pay their cell phone bills. When traveling ministries start avoiding places like that, the people should not blame big, bad principalities in the heavenlies for keeping good ministry gifts away! People sometimes misuse the verse "freely you have received, freely give" to justify the idea that the visiting minister got his gifting for free, so he should minister for free. That is contrary to Scripture, which says that the workman is worthy of his hire (Luke 10:7) and that we should not muzzle the ox as it treads out the grain (2 Corinthians 9:9, 1 Timothy 5:18).

I have noticed what when churches are generous with their guests, the power of God moves better. Our church was always very generous and we had some wonderful moves of God when people with giftings that differed from mine came in and blessed the people.

I never see Jesus doing “change” offerings (“throw in your change!”) or “calculator” offerings (“If ten businessmen would give 10 denarii each and fifty of you would give 2 denarii each and a hundred of you would give 1 denarius each, we can meet this budget tonight!”) – or ANY kind of offerings whatsoever. He was as un-gimmicky as it gets.

And He wasn't the only one who operated like that, because in 3 John, John talks favorably about people who “took nothing from the Gentiles” (3 John 7). In other words, they didn't receive offerings from the people to whom they ministered either.

Whatever you do, don't use the anointing to raise money by taking an offering right after a big miracle, figuring that at that moment people will be in the mood to give a large offering. That's been done, but God won't honor that, and you'll only hurt yourself in the long run by being money-minded.

NEVER link giving to miracles. Jesus bought everyone's miracles already. It is a shady, unbiblical practice to insinuate that an offering “seed” to your particular ministry will result in a healing miracle. (Also, no one in Scripture “guaranteed” a certain multiplication factor if people gave in a specific offering, so anyone who does this is operating outside of the Bible's teaching and practice.)

If people think you're in it for the money, you'll lose their respect and it will be harder for them to receive from you. And you shouldn't be in it for the money, anyway. There are far more lucrative professions that involve far less personal inconvenience if your goal is just to make a lot of money.

Selfish Dying and Satan-Assisted Suicide

Someone can really know about divine healing but CHOOSE not to exercise any faith toward it because he reasons that being with the Lord would be far better anyway. I'm sure that it WOULD be better for that person, but his spouse, children, other relatives and fellow church members would NOT consider it better if he "went home" prematurely as opposed to going home at the end of a long life. Once you're gone, you can't further the kingdom of God on this earth.

I'm not talking about people who live in constant excruciating pain and have to take drugs that send their minds to outer space somewhere. I can understand someone hurting so badly that he just wants relief even if dying is the way to get that relief. It's not God's best, and things don't have to end that way, but I "get" the idea of just wanting the suffering to end.

Nor am I talking about people who just plain don't know about divine healing. People die in ignorance of what Jesus did all the time.

However, some people who know full well that healing is available because Jesus paid for it can reason that their lives aren't very good anyway, so they offer no resistance to the devil taking them out early when a serious illness strikes. That is basically Satan-assisted suicide. All suicide is selfish because it has no regard for the loss that others will incur.

Unless Jesus returns during our lifetimes, we will all die. Even if we've known about divine healing, death is still an enemy that has yet to be defeated. Our goal should be to die being able to say with Paul that we've finished our courses, run our races and fought the good fight. It isn't selfish to die when you've finished your work here.

However, taking "early retirement" by knowingly choosing to just die when you should have many good years ahead of you is selfish. If that's you, please think about others and not just about yourself. If you know about divine healing, you owe it to yourself, others and the Kingdom to finish your course and make the most of your life on earth. Once your life on earth is over, you never get a second shot at it.

And even if you've lived a long life, you don't have to let Satan evict you from your body. Your mortal body won't last forever, but God's provision for healing does not end just because you reach a certain advanced age. So expect to be fit and flourishing (Psalm 92:13-14) until you decide you're ready to go at a ripe old age.

Read This if You Don't Understand Healing

Guess what? God never told you to understand healing. Guess what else? You don't have to understand healing to get healed!

You need to renew your mind with God's promises and statements regarding healing. But you are not commanded to understand everything about healing! Jesus commands you to believe the gospel (Mark 1:15), not understand the gospel mentally.

Do you understand how the Trinity can be three persons and yet be one? That doesn't stop you from believing in the Trinity, does it? Do you understand how Jesus could have borne your sins in His own body on the cross, long before you ever committed them? That doesn't stop you from believing that He did, does it? Do you understand how God can hear and answer prayers from millions of people simultaneously, and all the while treat you as if you were the only one praying, giving you His undivided attention? That doesn't stop you from believing that He does, does it?

Do you understand how God in His fullness can actually live inside you? That doesn't stop you from believing that He does, does it? Do you understand how God can make your old nature cease to exist when you get born again and give you a brand new nature? That doesn't stop you from believing that He does, does it? Do you understand how God always existed before time or the universe that we know, and that no one made God? That doesn't stop you from believing that He has eternally existed, does it?

Oh, but now that we're talking about healing, do you suppose you have to intellectually grasp it all to get it? You believe and walk in the light of these other things without understanding them, right? Why not believe in and walk in the light of your healing without understanding it?

Jesus said that you believe with your heart. Trying to understand healing is trying to believe with your mind. Yes, you should renew your mind, but you don't believe with your head – you believe with your heart! And you can believe in your heart even when your head does not understand it. We have just proved that. Faith rises up in your heart when you hear the Word of God.

If you've received the Holy Spirit, you can pray in other tongues. Unless God gives you the interpretation, you have no idea what you're saying. You can pray very effective prayers out of your spirit without your mind understanding anything. This is clear, because Paul said that he would pray with the spirit and with the understanding, and that his understanding was unfruitful when his spirit prayed in an unknown tongue (1 Corinthians 14:14-15). So your spirit can know things that your mind does not grasp, and you can still get results anyway!

Why should you believe that you are healed by the stripes of Jesus? Because God says so! Why should you believe that God heals all your diseases? Because God says so! Why should you believe that surely Jesus has borne your sicknesses and diseases? Because God says so! Why should you believe that your body as well as your spirit was bought with the price that Christ paid? Because God says so! (See 1 Peter 2:24, Psalm 103:3, Isaiah 53:5 and 1 Corinthians 6:19-20.)

Stop trying to believe the Bible! Trying to believe is a mental struggle that is nowhere encouraged in Scripture. Jesus did not tell you to “try to believe” the gospel! Quit trying and start doing it. You can! God would be unfair to command you to believe if you were actually unable to believe.

Here is something that should help you a lot. Your receiving is based on your actions, not on your understanding. God tells you to “Trust in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding” (Proverbs 3:5). This does not mean that you leave your brains at the altar when you get born again. God did not say to throw out your understanding or even to ignore your understanding. (You’ll need your understanding to drive to work.) God just doesn’t want you to trust in your understanding instead of in Him. If you know what God says and you don’t understand it yet, you are commanded to act on what He says instead of what your understanding says.

The key is to act based on the Word of God instead of based on your understanding when there is a conflict. Your understanding says, “I don’t know why I can’t get healed.” God says, “By Jesus’ stripes, you were healed.” Act on your understanding and you will say, “I guess I’ll have to tough out this cold.” Act on God’s Word and you will say, “I may not feel like it, but God says that I am healed. Sickness does not belong to me; healing does. Thank you, Father, that I am healed and not sick! Thank you, Jesus, for taking my sicknesses away so that I don’t have to bear this one! Thank you that I have healing for my body and the devil can’t keep it away because I already have it!”

You won’t feel like acting on God’s Word most of the time. You might as well settle that now. Your flesh will fight you. The less renewed your mind is, the more your mind will fight you. It is a question of obedience and reverence for God’s Word. Your feelings do not matter. You must act on God’s Word whether you feel like doing so or not, and whether it feels like it is true or not. The fact that God said it is sufficient.

So in summary: Stop trying to believe, and start acting on God’s Word instead of leaning on your own understanding!

Beating Ministerial Jealousy and Insecurity

This discussion is primarily intended for ministers, though I think anyone could benefit from reading it.

All ministers will face temptations in the areas of being jealous and insecure. The devil will see to that. Say that someone comes to your town and has mighty miracles of a kind you haven't seen in your ministry (yet, at least). Will you rejoice that God moved and people were healed? Or will you think to yourself any of these thoughts: "I guess my ministry is nothing compared to his. Why should anyone listen to me?" "If God used anyone here, it should have been ME, not him." "I wish I had that man's anointing instead of mine." Or say that you hear of a mighty move of God breaking out somewhere in the news. Will that encourage you, or will you get down in the dumps, thinking, "Maybe that guy will end up being the Chief Biggie of the Final Move of God before Jesus Returns, and if so, I will be really disappointed because I always wanted to be the Chief Biggie of the Final Move of God before Jesus Returns. Now I will get left in the dust as everyone runs off to follow that other guy and buy up his ministry material instead of mine! No one will pay any attention to me because I am not the Next Big Thing in ministry that Christian magazines and TV networks are promoting. Why is God using him instead of me?" Or will you go on a tailspin into despondency thinking, "The Final Move of God before Jesus Returns is off and running without me. How have I failed God? What am I doing wrong so that I was not involved with this move?"

Say that someone else moves into "your" (!) area and starts a church that teaches what you teach, but it's backed by a ministry in another state with deeper pockets than you have. That happened to me! Was that a bad thing because now I had competition? No, it turned out to be a blessed thing because when my wife and I stopped pastoring to strictly go on the road, there was another church in the area where our members could go and still hear about divine healing! I will admit that this was not the first thought that came to mind when they planted their church, though! Can we just get honest about these things for a little while so that we can get to the root of some issues?

Of course, you would never want to admit that you could have any jealous or competitive thoughts (you sanctified thing, you) but just in case the devil decides to tempt you the same way that he tempts everyone else around the world, here are some things that should be helpful.

The Comparison Trap

2 Corinthians 10:12

It is NEVER wise to compare your ministry with any other ministry. You can conclude that you're better and get into pride, or you can conclude that you're worse and get into jealousy and insecurity. Comparison is a no-win proposition.

I realize that we live in a day where it's popular for people to showcase their talents "against" other people's talents on TV or at regional competitions. Even "Christian" (???) versions of such talent competitions are around. (I refused to participate in one in our area although I had enough musical talent to have a shot at "winning" it.) This fosters an unhealthy "your loss is my gain, my loss is your gain" attitude and gets people into the sinful practice of comparing God-given giftings with each other, as if one God-given gift is more valuable than another one.

Say that some nearby church hosts special meetings in your town, and the speaker flows prodigiously in the Holy Spirit in a way that you wish you did. What should you do? Assuming that you at least check out where he's coming from, or call and find out, and that he is a genuine person of faith who isn't preaching something really harmful, why not go yourself and encourage your church to come with you? You and I both know full well the reasons why most pastors would never do that. "They might decide that they like that other church better than mine and go there!" If you have a real pastor's heart, you'll tell your flock what I told mine— "If there is another church in the area that can meet your needs better than this one – go there with my blessing!"

Don't compare yourself with any other church or ministry – that's a guaranteed way to lose out. Find out from God what He wants YOU to do, and do it.

Comparison Is Not New

The sins of comparison and jealousy did not originate with you or this generation. Even in the gospels, the disciples indulged in it and Jesus rebuked it. At one point, the disciples wanted Jesus to stop someone from casting out demons in His name just because that person didn't run with their particular group:

Mark 9:38-40:

And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbid him, because he followeth not us.

But Jesus said, Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me.

For he that is not against us is on our part.

So don't get upset if someone else whom you don't know starts having miracles in your town. You should be happy whenever any genuine miracles of God are happening, regardless of whether you or your acquaintances have any part in the action!

Then we see that Peter and John wanted to get reserved seating beside Jesus in heaven and be considered the greatest disciples. They even got their mother involved! Any time "-est" words start getting involved, comparison is involved and you need to stop it. Jesus' answer to you would be that you need to learn to serve instead of seeking admiration:

Matthew 20:25-28:

But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them.

But it shall not be so among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister;

And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant:

Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

In God's kingdom, the way up is down. Focus on serving others.

“What about This Other Minister?”

Jesus' answer to this question is “What's it to you?” I can say that confidently because He is the same yesterday, today and forever (Hebrews 13:8). Jesus told Peter how he was going to die and Peter wanted to find out what Jesus wanted John to do, which wasn't his business:

John 21:18-23:

Verily, verily, I [Jesus] say unto thee [Peter], When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest: but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not.

This spake he, signifying by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, Follow me.

Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?

Peter seeing him saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do?

Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me.

Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?

It is none of your business what other people's callings are. Your business is to pursue your calling. Don't be distracted by what other people are doing – it isn't your business.

Stay in Your Lane

If you run a race, you are disqualified if you don't stay in your lane. When “running your race” in the ministry, you have to stay in your lane. Don't try to get into someone else's lane. Also, it can hinder your race if you peek into other lanes to see what everyone else is doing. I read a testimony from a minister who used to literally run races. He lost one by 1/100th of a second because he looked ever so briefly at what someone in another lane was doing.

God Is Not Hosting a Competition

God does not run a reality TV production company where the least popular person gets axed every episode. He did not give multiple people the same gift and then say, "You all go out and do what you do, and whoever does it best, I'll promote him to something even bigger and better." Some people seem to think that God works this way, even to the point of thinking, "Well, I'll just pray in the Holy Spirit and read the Word more than anyone else around, so when the time comes that God is looking for someone to be the Chief Biggie of the Final Move of God before Jesus Comes Back, He will pick me over the other competing candidates who don't read and pray as much." But God called you from your mother's womb, before you had ever had a chance to do anything spiritual. He pre-ordained good works for you to walk in (Ephesians 2:10). The secret of success is find out what those works are and walk in them.

God did not give multiple people callings so that they could compete with one another for attendance, publicity, real estate or anything else. Is your left toe in competition with your right ear? No, your left ear isn't even in competition with your right ear even though they have similar functions. You need them both! No part of the Body of Christ be in competition with any other part. We are all to complement one another as different parts of one Body.

The Need to Be Yourself

"Another church is scooping up my youth because their worship involves light shows and fog machines that produce a fake glory cloud every service. I'd better go invest in some computerized pulse-with-the-music lights and fog machines myself if I want any young people!"

Don't fall into the trap of thinking that you need to find out what the church down the road is going to have sudden growth and then imitate it at your church. Why does your town need two of the same thing? It is better to be yourself and let the other pastor be himself, regardless of what you might think of the methods he employs to bring people in. If the Lord isn't in something, it will be built in vain anyway (Psalm 127:1), but you don't want to find yourself "fighting against God" (Acts 5:39).

You are the best-qualified person in the world to be yourself, but you are completely unqualified to be anyone else. So be yourself. God wants to use YOU, complete with YOUR personality. (Note: Your FLESH is not your real personality!) You might present things in a different way from someone else. This means that you might teach something in a way that someone will "get" who would not "get" it if it were presented by that other person. The opposite could also be the case. We all have certain styles of preaching that we like better than others. If there are those who don't like my approach, thank God that there are others writing completely different books with different approaches that will also point people to healing.

It is so tempting to compare your anointing to another healing minister's anointing, but you need to remember this: You are anointed to do whatever God has called you to do, and you are not anointed to do things He has not called you to do. Another person has the anointing to do what HE is called to do. I'll say it again – comparison is always a dead end. Flow in YOUR anointing and let God prosper what you're doing as you obey Him.

What Was That Minister's Secret?

If I wanted to sell a lot of books quickly, I could give them titles like, "Kathryn Kuhlman's Secret Way for You to Have a Stronger Anointing" or "Your Daily Planner with Insight from Smith Wigglesworth on How You Can Be the Next Smith Wigglesworth." People want to follow a formula to trace the footsteps of some great preacher. But the truth is that whoever your favorite preacher of old is, his main secret was being called by God to do what he did! Trying to mimic what he did will NOT result in mimicking his results. That's another example of getting sidetracked by what someone else did rather than just following Jesus for yourself, letting Him make you what He wants you to be.

That New Church in Your Area

As a pastor, you might be tempted to have panic attacks when some "cool" new church is announced in your community. Rather than rejoicing that there are more laborers for the harvest in town, where both churches can reach people whom the other church would not reach, your first fear is that some of your people will run off to check out the Novel New Thing in Town. This is a distinct possibility, and those who run off just might be the same ones who ran to your church from other churches when you first opened and you were the Novel New Thing in Town.

So you can secretly hope that some kind of dirt under the surface will bring that church down so that you don't have competition anymore (bad), or you can reach out to that new pastor and offer to pray together with him, not against him (good).

If another church in your town gets planted, Satan may try to convince you that God had to send someone else to your town to really "get the job done" because you have obviously not gotten the job done because you are a dud. Ignore the devil. Let GOD tell you where you are supposed to be. If God has not called you elsewhere, He has not "fired" you from your current position for underperformance!

I've known "territorial" pastors who were convinced that their town was, well, "their" town, as if they had an exclusive spiritual title deed to the place. Thus, in their thinking, anyone else who showed up was a rebel to the plan of God. Don't get it backward – your church is a gift to your city. God didn't make your city a gift to your church. Besides, if everyone suddenly got saved, it's doubtful that ALL the churches could take care of them all, and you'd have to pray for MORE laborers!

But getting jealous and territorial won't hurt the other church – it will hurt YOURS because of your rotten un-Christian attitude.

What about That Annoying Preacher in the Area with the Terrible Attitude?

Paul faced situations where other preachers were insincere and were making trouble for him. Yet his attitude was as follows:

Philippians 1:15-18:

Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife; and some also of good will:

The one preach Christ of contention, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my bonds:

But the other of love, knowing that I am set for the defence of the gospel.

What then? notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretence, or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice.

Everyone will get rewarded for his works – good works will get a reward and “wood, hay and stubble” works won't. Everything is fair at the end. On the earth, things are not always fair, but don't let that get to you.

If someone is preaching heresy, you can warn people away from him by name as Paul did. But don't go doing that with brothers in Christ who don't suit your fancy with their conduct. Way too much mudslinging goes on between Christians. If you have a problem with someone's doctrine, that's OK, but keep any objections in the doctrinal realm – don't make them personal and start calling an actual brother in Christ a heretic or a false teacher and try to shame him by name.

And one more thing – keep in mind that someone else might consider YOU to be that annoying preacher with the terrible attitude. How would you like that person to treat YOU and speak about YOU?

Full-Time Jealousy

“Brother, are you in FULL-TIME ministry?” I still don't like that question. You can be full-time devoted to Jesus while being bivocational. There are ministers' lines at some conferences that you can't even get into if you're bivocational. I understand that they're trying to keep the pretenders out, but when they say, “This is only for people whose sole income source is the ministry,” they exclude serious ministers who DO belong in that line even though they work another job.

“Oh, if only I were FULL–TIME in the ministry! THEN I would have all day to hang out with God and study the Word, and I would be so much mightier than I am now.” Ever think that? You might, until you talk to someone who IS in ministry full-time, who is probably saying, “If only I didn’t have to spend all my time TRAVELING between meetings! If only I could just sit and have all day to hang out with God and study the Word rather than always be trying to book additional meetings during flight layovers or during whatever little spare time I get when I’m not hauling luggage in and out of hotel rooms.” The bivocational person may think, “I am tired of having to devote this time to ‘non-spiritual’ activity when I really want to do ministry” while the full-time person may think, “I wish I had a nice side business that could provide a lot of extra money like my bivocational friend has.” The devil would love for you to believe that the grass is greener somewhere else. However, true contentment comes when you are comfortable with yourself and where God has you now. Quit comparing your circumstances to someone else’s. Don’t let what other people say define you – it’s only what GOD says that matters.

A Scene from Heaven

Shock gripped heaven when a woman who was faithful to clean toilets and run the church nursery was rewarded with the same degree of reward that went to the man who was the Chief Biggie of a Great Famous Historical Move of God. You see, God rewards you based on your faithfulness to do what He called you to do. Man rewards you for numbers, influence, prosperity, and so on. Man DOES look at the outward appearance but God looks at the heart:

1 Samuel 16:7:

But the LORD said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart.

Man was still looking at the outward appearance in New Testament times, so Jesus warned:

John 7:24:

Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment.

The Big Lie about Rewards in Heaven

The big lie about rewards in heaven is that they will go to the same ministers who seem to be reaping the big rewards in this life. Yet Jesus said the OPPOSITE will be true in many cases:

Mark 10:31:

But many that are first shall be last; and the last first.

He didn't say that EVERYONE who seemed to succeed down here would be last, as it is possible to be a godly success here. But you can't use apparent success in this life to gauge who is great in heaven. Only God knows the hearts.

It would be UNFAIR for God to reward someone else more because he did more signs, wonders and miracles by the gifts of the Spirit than someone else who was not called to that ministry. Not everyone flows in gifts of healings, working of miracles and special faith. Anyone can use his authority in Christ, but that is not the same as flowing in special manifestations of the Holy Spirit. God can't punish you by rewarding you less just because you didn't flow in gifts in which the Holy Spirit did not decide to use you!

I think many of us have been guilty of assuming that we need to be more prominent here so that we can have a greater heavenly reward, but the only yardstick will be obedience. This is apparent from Jesus' story in Matthew about two people who were given five talents and two talents (a talent being a unit of money, not an ability). We'll leave the one-talent-burier out of the picture as he is irrelevant to the point I want to make:

Matthew 25:20-23:

And so he that had received five talents came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents: behold, I have gained beside them five talents more.

His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

He also that had received two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents beside them.

His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

Note that both were commended in exactly the same way and got exactly the same reward, even though one ended up with 10 units of money on the earth and the other ended up with only 4. So you see that God rewards you based on with what you do with what He gave you, not based on what He gave someone else. People in heaven are not ranked by what they had on the earth. If you've been given more, more is required of you:

Luke 12:48:

But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more.

Security instead of Insecurity

If you want to be secure instead of insecure, learn to quit comparing yourself to others and follow Jesus into whatever He wants YOU to do. Be secure knowing that if you fully follow Jesus, you will get the same reward as anyone else who fully follows Jesus, regardless of what giftings you have, which could only have been received from God anyway.

Love Instead of Jealousy

Jealousy is clearly defined as a work of the FLESH (“envyings” at the beginning of verse 21):

Galatians 5:19-21

In Christ, you are not a debtor to the flesh, to live after the flesh (Romans 8:12). You who are Christ’s have crucified the flesh with its affections and lusts (Galatians 5:24). You have victory over jealousy. Remember that you have the God-kind of love in you, and God’s love is not jealous (1 Corinthians 13:4). You may have to remind yourself of that often, as your flesh may rise up with jealousy when you see someone flowing in a way that you wish you were flowing right now, but you can beat Satan’s jealousy trap by walking in the Spirit so that you do not fulfill the lusts of the flesh such as jealousy (Galatians 5:16).

The Biggest Enemy of Holy Spirit Manifestations

What is the single biggest enemy of Holy Spirit manifestations today?

Is it carnality? Carnality certainly doesn't help, but the church in Corinth "came behind in no gift" while acting extremely carnal! They tolerated gross sin and divided themselves into cliques. So that won't completely stop the Holy Spirit from moving. So the problem can't just be that we're not "good" enough or "holy" enough.

Is it lack of knowledge? Some congregations just aren't taught about the gifts of the Spirit. If people don't know about them, they won't flow in them. Paul made it clear that God does NOT want us to be ignorant of the gifts of the Spirit (1 Corinthians 12:1). So that is a factor, but I don't think it's the biggest one. In denominational circles, this would be a big issue, but it shouldn't be an issue in Spirit-filled churches. After all, a Spirit-filled church that doesn't see the Holy Spirit move isn't really very Spirit-filled, is it?

Is it principalities and powers in the heavenlies throwing a wet blanket on everything? No, they're all defeated. Not a single one of them can stop the gifts from moving where they're welcomed.

Is it opposition from those who claim that modern-day manifestations of the Spirit are "of the devil"? My wife and I were told that we were "of the devil" when we pastored because we saw miracles. Supposedly the devil is now good because he will heal you, but God is no longer good all the time and He won't heal you. No, opposition should be a non-issue to anyone with any courage at all. We wouldn't back down one iota just because some people thought we were hell-bound heretics. That certainly didn't stop the Holy Spirit from moving!

Is it fear of men? Often it is. The whole basis for the Ashamed of the Holy Spirit Movement (also known as the Seeker-Friendly Movement) is that some newcomers won't like seeing the Holy Spirit move, so they'll bolt out the door and we'll never assimilate them into our church. It should be obvious that the Holy Spirit is not the author of the Ashamed of the Holy Spirit Movement! He won't move in pathetic churches where the leaders care more about what PEOPLE think than what the HOLY SPIRIT thinks.

Something that is probably a bigger problem, though, is lack of evangelism. If unbelievers are not present, why should the Holy Spirit move through tongues, which are a sign for the unbeliever (1 Corinthians 14:22)? How can signs and wonders follow people who aren't GOING anywhere to proclaim the good news to anyone?

But something in our day and age exerts more power over our services than any of these other things! This thing, in my opinion and observation, stops more Holy Spirit manifestations than carnality, lack of knowledge, fear of man or even lack of evangelism. It prevents services from being lively even though it isn't even alive itself!

It's called a clock.

We think that we have to rush through our carefully pre-planned services because:

1. There are multiple services on Sunday morning, so we have to end all but the last one at a preset time.
2. We have a TV contract stating that the service MUST BE exactly a certain length every week.
3. People don't like long services. We have an "unwritten contract" with them that we will always get them out the door at the same time every week.
4. We have paid security and our contract with them mandates being out of the building at a certain time.
5. The midweek service must be especially brief because kids have school the next day.
6. In general, people like predictability. Having "unpredictable" services scares them.
7. The Children's Ministry has a set routine that needs to be coordinated with the adult service, so everything is timed out to match the foreknown closing time of the adult service.
8. The "media people" who have to control the images in back of the platform will be very unhappy if we deviate at all from our "order of worship" to say nothing of the order of the Scriptures they are supposed to display during the message.
9. The worship leaders will be quite upset if we make substitutions, additions or deletions from their carefully-planned "set lists" that match the abilities and vocal ranges of the particular people who are scheduled to be up there during a particular service. The songs are set to a certain exact time, which is inevitable because they must be done exactly the same way every time to avoid annoying the above-mentioned media people who have to display the lyrics.
10. The message is carefully prepared so that everyone in multiple services hears the same message with no deviations.

So what happens? The Almighty Clock dictates that we leave the Holy Spirit completely out of the schedule! No room is allowed for Him to move in our clock-bound services even if He wants to move – and rest assured that He DOES want to move!

In MANY modern-day "faith churches," services are every bit as predictable as they were back at the denominational churches that many people came from where they handed out a printed Order of Worship at the door and they had the "Ten Commandments Stones"-style wall displays down front with the order of the hymns by hymn number along with the attendance and offering last week and last year and maybe other such "vital" statistics.

Here's a test. Could YOUR CHURCH hand out a printed "Order of Worship" (complete with starting and stopping times of different service segments) with every assurance that it would be adhered to? If so, what is the plan to allow the Holy Spirit to move? If we'd be honest, we'd admit, "There isn't one." And that's a BIG problem!

Having identified the "enemy" (the problem), what can we do to fix it, given that we still may have multiple services, TV contracts, paid security on a schedule, and so on? If we don't fix this, my other observation will continue to be true that you can see the Holy Spirit move more in small churches that lack the "megachurch" trappings and constraints.

Let's start with an easy one – the worship set. Today, you need people who are Sky-High Tenors to sing certain songs that vocally untrained mortals in the congregations have a 0% chance of being able to sing along with. If the Sky-High Tenors aren't scheduled today, you'll have to do other songs. Why not sing songs in lower keys that the average man in the congregation can sing comfortably? Then it wouldn't matter WHO was up there; the song could be done any time that the Holy Spirit wanted it done. (The songs may be arranged around the vocal range of the worship leader(s), but what good is it if the worship leader can hit notes that no one else can belt out? This isn't a TV show where we try to see how much we can showcase a singer's huge vocal range.) This would add to the number of songs that could be done spontaneously.

While we're on that subject, why not leave room for spiritual songs to come forth at the moment? The Holy Spirit may have some things to be sung that aren't on the set list. If you always rush from one song to the next, you won't have such manifestations of prophecy in song – and they can be real blessings. I can still sing to this day songs by the Spirit that I only heard anyone sing once (even when if I wasn't the singer) – back in the 1980's! Such songs can be a tremendous encouragement to the people.

One hindrance to spiritual songs is having “sheet-music-only” musicians. If they can only play what they've rehearsed, it will be tough or impossible to have accompanied “songs by the Spirit.” If you get some musicians who can “play by ear” it will allow more room for people who come up with a song that doesn't match the rhythm and chord progression of the song that you just finished. If at least one lead instrumentalist has perfect pitch, that's even better. Such a musician can just start playing in any key because he knows what key something is in without having to fumble around on his instrument to find the right key. I am an ear-playing musician with perfect pitch and I used to be part of a worship team that could almost instantly “pick up” just about anything someone started singing. Our team was noted for flowing in “spiritual songs.” Sometimes we'd just agree on a chord progression at the end of the song set and we found that people who came up with songs could fit in with that progression fairly easily. But you don't HAVE to do things that way to make things work. Someone COULD have a song by the Spirit and just sing it unaccompanied because no musicians can latch onto it quickly enough, and it would STILL be a blessing. Plenty of people sing national anthems unaccompanied and no one complains about that.

When we pastored, we had something we called Worship Night once a month on the first Sunday night. The way it worked was that everyone showed up just to minister to the Lord. It wasn't time to take prayer requests, preach, exhort each other, or even sing existing songs unless we felt explicitly led to do so. The general model was that the whole evening would be nothing but spontaneous songs by the Holy Spirit that ministered to the Lord as well as non-musical praise, thanksgiving and worship while music was played in the background. We'd come out of some of those nights with over a dozen new songs – many of which were good enough to use during congregational worship in the regular services that followed. Songs also came forth that were really prophecy to the church set to music as the Holy Spirit gave us utterance. While Worship Night was never well attended, those nights are some of my most cherished memories of our pastoring days. People talk today about “giving back” – so why not set aside some time just to “give back” to the Lord after all He's done for us? Most people won't get involved in such services because they are “too busy,” though it's interesting what they are “too busy” doing, for example, watching Sunday Night Football.

Because there was no set schedule, the Holy Spirit would move in those services in unusual ways. People would see or hear angels. People would be healed in their seats. Sometimes it felt like you could cut the atmosphere with a knife because God's manifested presence was so strong. We weren't there looking for such manifestations, but when we ministered to the Lord, He would move in powerful and tangible ways. It was reminiscent of Acts 13:1-3 where they ministered to the Lord FIRST and THEN the Holy Spirit spoke. We had no set ending time. We just waited until we felt that we had done what we needed to do, which varied from month to month. We took the clock out of the equation. What a difference it made!

We saw a LOT of miracles at our church. I think that the MAIN reason for that was that we just stayed open to the Holy Spirit throughout the services. Sometimes we'd be doing the first song and we suddenly sensed the need to flow in the gifts of healings. So we'd postpone or scrap the rest of the set list and just start laying hands on the sick immediately. The sensation of the Holy Spirit's power at such times was unforgettable. Please understand that we would have every right to lay hands on the sick BY FAITH at the end of the service. But it would have only been by faith and not by the gifts, which only flowed because we allowed the Holy Spirit to have His way immediately. Many of the more notable miracles we saw were the direct result of allowing the Holy Spirit to interrupt our pre-planned schedule.

But what about the armed security people and the multi-service schedule and other “clock” constraints? You can still have the Holy Spirit move. He does understand if the insurance company said that you need paid armed security because you're a certain size and they left you no choice. If the Holy Spirit interrupts your song set, you just don't finish your song set!

Then again, we had services where ALL we felt led to do was worship or even just “bask” in God’s presence the entire time. That was NOT the norm. The sheep needed to be fed the Word and God knew that. But when we allowed the Holy Spirit to have His way even when that meant that we were all quiet before the Lord for half an hour, people heard from God during that time! In many cases, I’m sure it was things He had been trying to say to them for a while, but they were so “busy” that they just didn’t hear what the Holy Spirit was trying to tell them. They’d leave with a supernatural assurance that things were going to be OK despite their trials. Sometimes that manifested presence of God would stay on me for the whole next day! I loved it. There’s no substitute for those “almost be able to cut the presence of God with a knife” services, but I don’t see how it’s possible to have them if you adhere to a strict schedule. Sometimes I’d know in advance that a service was going to be different and I’d go in there with no prepared message (none was needed), but still not knowing exactly what was going to happen even when the service underway. I just had to trust the Holy Spirit. At other times, I was fully ready to preach a prepared message, but either I’d suddenly feel led to talk about something completely different or feel led not to preach at all but do other things as the Holy Spirit directed.

One hint for aspiring preachers – if you get so full of the Word that you could preach on many topics at the drop of a hat, it will help you in cases like that. If all you can preach is what you have in your notes for that single service, it will be harder to flow. In my early preaching years, I literally did what many preachers of old did – I wrote out my messages word for word in advance. But then the Holy Spirit would sometimes lead me to deviate from my notes and I had to be sensitive to that. Today I often preach with no notes whatsoever – I just let the Word that I’ve stored up in my heart all these years come out, even when I know in general the direction in which the teaching is supposed to go. I don’t know if things ever go 100% according to plan, but the success of my message is determined by how people’s lives are changed, not in how well I execute a prepared plan.

What if the Holy Spirit moves a certain way during Service 1 on a Sunday morning? He’ll probably move the same way in Service 2, though that isn’t a certainty. Part of it depends on how receptive the people are. If the people in the first service are the “get in and out of church and get it over with” crowd and the people in the second service are the “I’m hungry” crowd, you’ll see more Holy Spirit manifestations in the second service. You’ll just have to follow His leading in EVERY service. Those leadings may not be the same in both services because different people will be in those services. You’ll just have to trust Him for wisdom to know what to do. He won’t make a mess of His Church!

You CAN allow the Holy Spirit to have His way in your services even if you have fixed-length services where you really can’t go beyond a certain time. However, you’ll need “buy-in” for this goal from your support team. You don’t want the tech support staff or the worship team to have a conniption because you changed the planned order of a service. I’m convinced that when your helps team sees the huge improvement it makes when the Holy Spirit has His way, it won’t be a problem for them to continue to buy into the idea.

Here is a sobering thought: Some churches look down at “seeker-friendly” churches when their services are no different. There is no functional difference between a “We don’t want the Holy Spirit” church and a “We want the Holy Spirit but we’re too schedule-bound to let Him move” church. You don’t see any Holy Spirit manifestations in either place!

I don’t claim to have an answer for everything, but I want to impress upon you as much as I can the need for the people running services to DESIRE and EXPECT a move of the Holy Spirit – and to make room for Him. You can’t MAKE the Holy Spirit do anything, but you can certainly STOP Him from doing anything by being clock-bound and schedule-bound!

Verses Incorrectly Cited as Healing Scriptures

The verses below have been quoted by certain other people as healing Scriptures, but none of them actually is a “healing Scripture” as claimed. I am all for backing up the preaching of divine healing with Scripture, but we should check out our verses in the original language and context before making bold claims based on them.

2 Timothy 1:7:

For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.

The error here has to do with the “sound mind” at the end.

Misapplication: “If you are having any mental illness issues, you can claim 2 Timothy 1:7, which promises you a sound mind!”

The Truth: “Sound mind” is better translated “self-control” and has nothing to do with mental illnesses. However, there are plenty of other Scriptures you can believe that indicate your right to walk free from mental illnesses. For example, there is mental illness in the curse for breaking the Law, and Christ has redeemed you from that curse.

Also, this verse is used to “prove” that fear is a spirit, but the Greek word used there for fear really means timidity, not fright.

1 Corinthians 2:16:

For who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he may instruct him? But we have the mind of Christ.

Misapplication: “I am healed from brain issues because I have the mind of Christ.”

The Truth: Having “the mind of Christ” does not mean having “the brain of Christ.” If this word meant brain, you would get some very interesting doctrine from other places where this same Greek word (nous) is used: Revelation 13:18: “...Let him who has a brain count the number of the beast...” (Everyone has a brain, though that fact is more in manifestation with some people than with others.) 1 Corinthians 14:15: “...I will pray with the brain...” and 1 Corinthians 14:19: “...I had rather speak five words with my brain...” might even be used to back the horrible idea of “unspoken prayer requests” while 1 Corinthians 1:10’s exhortation that we all be joined together in the same brain would sound like we would be part of the Borg collective on Star Trek. Really, the word is talking more about attitude and understanding than an actual physical organ. But there are plenty of other Scriptures you can use to prove that you are redeemed from mental illnesses.

Proverbs 10:7:

The memory of the just is blessed: but the name of the wicked shall rot.

Misapplication: “If you are suffering from Alzheimer’s or any other form of senility, claim your healing with this verse – your memory is blessed!”

The Truth: As is clear from the context, “memory” here means how you are remembered by others and does not refer to your physical brain’s capacity to remember things. However, you ARE redeemed from memory problems; this simply isn’t the Scripture to use to prove that.

Proverbs 11:1:

A false balance is abomination to the LORD: but a just weight is his delight.

Misapplication: “If you have weight issues, God wants you to have the proper balance in your diet so that your weight will be the correct weight for your physique.”

The Truth: This has to do with the weights used with merchant scales, not the weights of the merchants or anyone else! Some cheaters used weights that weighed less than they were marked so that they could get away with selling less than the supposed amount of whatever was being sold and make more money. Such fake weights are an abomination, but true weights are the Lord’s delight.

Amos 4:6:

And I also have given you cleanness of teeth in all your cities, and want of bread in all your places: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.

Misapplication: “God has promised you supernaturally clean teeth.”

The Truth: The real reason their teeth were “clean” is that they were unable to eat because there was no food available (“want of bread”). This verse has absolutely nothing to do with dental hygiene, and for all our sakes, please use a toothbrush rather than declining to use one because you’re claiming supernatural cleanness of teeth.

What 1 John 1:9 Really Means

I consider 1 John 1:9 to be the most misunderstood and misapplied verse in the Bible. Everyone seems to think he understands what it means, and I think almost everyone is wrong. However, failure to understand this verse has led to teaching that undermines people's faith for divine healing. They get the idea that they cannot be healed until they get "right with God" by confessing their sins before receiving healing. In fact, some healing teachers have actually come out and said that if you have unconfessed sin in your life, it will stop you from getting healed. One wonders how the multitudes got healed in Jesus' ministry – was there really no one in those crowds who had unconfessed sin? The whole idea that healing won't be yours until you get your unconfessed sins "under the blood" is not true, but we will have to do a complete proof of what 1 John 1:9 really means to do away with this common conjecture. Once you see what John is saying – and NOT saying – you will realize that ALL your sins (past, present and future) are "under the blood" now that you're a Christian, and you need not add any work of your own to improve on that already-perfect situation.

Here's the verse:

1 John 1:9:

If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

The nearly universal understanding of this verse is, "When we sin, we are no longer right with God, but if we own up to these sins before God, he will forgive us and make us righteous again." Supposedly, at that point, you would be in a position receive healing and other blessing from Him again. The trouble is, this contradicts so many other verses that it can't be what it really means. This misunderstanding also opens up quite a few theological cans of worms when you really start to think about it.

For the sake of completeness, we need to examine the immediate context of the verse, so let's look at the last 5 verses of 1 John 1 together before commenting on verse 9:

1 John 1:6-10:

If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth:

But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.

If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.

The first thing we should get out of the way is whom John is addressing here. Was this passage written to believers or to unbelievers? In the context of 1 John as a whole, it was definitely written to believers. 1 John addresses “fathers,” “young men,” and “little children,” all of whom are clearly believers. The difficulties in trying to interpret 1 John 1:9 correctly have led to one “workaround” where the first chapter was supposedly written to members of the Gnostic cult (who like modern so-called Christian Scientists, did not believe in the reality of sin) while the rest was addressed to believers. We should dismiss that theory without hesitation. Did you ever write a love note to your romantic interest where you spent the first 10 phrases addressing the Christian Scientist cultists in the town where your romantic interest lives while the rest of your letter was written to the one you love? No, of course not, and John didn’t do that either. No one would write a single letter like that. Paul didn’t spend the first chapter of Galatians addressing the problems at Corinth. If you had two audiences, you would write two letters. That’s just common sense. So this entire letter, including chapter 1, was written to believers. Chapter 1 was written to make the BELIEVERS aware that the Gnostic cultists were phonies who did not have the truth in them.

The fact that 1 John does not start with a typical self-identifying greeting is sometimes used to argue that this is a unique book that has more than one audience. However, Hebrews also dives right into doctrine and its author never identifies himself in the entire book! That doesn’t mean that the book had multiple audiences.

Though John wrote to believers, John was not hinting that BELIEVERS would say that they had no sin. John would not refer to believers as not having the truth in them. Not having the truth in you places you in the same position as the devil, which John also recorded when he listened to Jesus: “Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it.” (John 8:44)

Now let’s examine some of the difficulties involved with interpreting this verse, especially interpreting it the way that almost everyone does. Hold on, it’s going to be a wild ride!

Does Sin Make You “Not Right with God?”

The idea that Christians who sin are not “right with God” and are blockaded from receiving from Him until they repent is sometimes preached based on an Old Testament scripture:

Isaiah 59:2:

But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear.

Here’s another that might be used sometimes:

Psalms 66:18:

If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me:

The trouble with this is that sins separating you from God so that you could not even be in His presence is only an Old Testament concept. A thick veil had to be in the temple to separate sinful people from the presence of God so that they would not die. When Uzzah touch the ark of the covenant, his sinful nature encountered the presence of God and he fell dead instantly. However, when Jesus died, the veil in the temple was supernaturally torn from top to bottom (Mark 15:38). This indicated that man did not need to be separated anymore from God's presence, which would no longer dwell in a building or a tent but within believers. As a believer, you are the righteousness of God in Christ (2 Corinthians 5:21). You are right with God. Romans 3:26 says that God is the justifier of a person who believes in Jesus. If you are justified, you are no longer found guilty in God's sight, so He does not have to hide His face from you, the New Testament believer. His ears are always open to the cry of the righteous, and in Christ, you are ALWAYS the righteous.

What you are doing may not be right, but it does not stop you from being right with God. As a Christian, you have received the gift of righteousness (Romans 5:17). When something is a gift, it is granted irrespective of your merits or works. Otherwise, it would be a paycheck, not a gift. What you received on a gift basis does not get taken away from you on a works basis. That's the beauty of grace.

Does Sin Break Your Fellowship with God?

An old "explanation of the difference between relationship and fellowship" goes like this: "When you did something wrong as a child, your father sent you to your room. You did not lose your relationship with him because he was still your father. But you lost your right to fellowship with him because you were in your room and he wasn't."

However, that is still the Old Testament concept from Isaiah 59:2 cited above. According to this "reasoning," God cuts you off from being able to talk to Him if you mess up.

This would mean that at a time when you MOST need to talk with God because you're struggling with sin, God says, "Fend for yourself and get your act together on your own, and then we can be on speaking terms again!" This puts your access to His throne on a works basis, which is a law-based concept, not a grace-based concept. "For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ" (John 1:17). The Bible teaches that your access to God is based on the blood of Jesus (Hebrews 10:19), not based on your good behavior. The blood of Jesus does not get un-shed just because you sin! In fact, your sin is the very reason that Jesus shed His blood for you in the first place – so that you could be redeemed from it and its punishments and have access to God in spite of it!

God promises the believer the right to come boldly to His throne of grace to obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need (Hebrews 4:16). If you're struggling with sin, you are in a time of need. Thank God, you can go to Him and get help. Even as an earthly parent, say that your child were shockingly honest and came to you and said, "I've been having a lot of impure thoughts about Sally Ann at school, you know, the one who always tests the limits of the school clothing policy, shows all that she can get away with, and wears outfits designed to call attention to certain body parts. Now Sally Ann is making moves on me, and I'm having all kinds of impure fantasies about her, and I daydream about trying some of the things suggested by the porn sites I've been visiting." Would you tell your child, "Go away – don't even talk to me until you've completely stopped going to those websites and stopped having impure fantasies about Sally Ann; I'm not available to help you until you clean up your act?" I hope not. What makes you think that God, who is a far better parent than any earthly parent, would treat one of His children that way if that child came to Him with the same plea for help?

The New Testament talks of our fellowship with God and with His Son Jesus Christ (1 John 1:3) and with the Holy Spirit (2 Corinthians 13:14). These statements are not prefaced with conditions that you have to walk in a certain way to qualify for that fellowship. So if you sin, you haven't violated the qualifications for fellowship with all three persons of Trinity. The only qualification for that fellowship is being saved. If you're saved, you haven't lost that fellowship.

1 John 1:6 says, "If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth:". So does it mean that the moment we sin, we're lying if we say that we have fellowship with God, because now we don't? No, the idea is the same as in verse 8 and verse 10 (which we'll look at later), where the person denying that he has sinned is not really saved. The person habitually walking in darkness elsewhere in the book of 1 John refers to a sinner, not a saint. There are other verses along these lines such as 1 John 3:10: "In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother." The theme is similar to what Jesus said about knowing people by their fruits. The unsaved person who lives in darkness does not know Jesus, and that is why he would be lying if he said he had fellowship with God.

The very next verse, in fact, shows that fellowship is not dependent upon sinlessness. 1 John 1:7 says that if we walk in the light, we have fellowship one with another. John then says that the blood of Jesus cleanses us from all sin. So the people he is talking about are sinning, but because they're washed in the blood of Jesus, they still have fellowship. (If they weren't sinning, there would be no sin to have the blood of Jesus cleanse them from in that verse!)

I suppose that many believers interpret “walking in the light” to mean “not sinning,” but that explanation leads to a contradiction. It would cause verse 7 to mean, “If we don’t sin, we have fellowship with one another, and the blood of Jesus cleanses us from all sin.” What sin? If you aren’t sinning, there’s no sin for the blood of Jesus to cleanse! So “walking in the light” cannot mean “not sinning.” Because of the way walking in the light appears to mean being saved and walking in darkness appears to mean not being saved in the rest of 1 John, I would take it to mean knowing Jesus. That would make more sense – if you know Him, His blood cleanses you from all sin. That would be consistent with the rest of the New Testament. You may realize, though, that this directly contradicts the traditional understanding of 1 John 1:9, which is that if you sin, you aren’t cleansed from that sin until you confess it to God, at which point you get cleansed.

I can give you another irrefutable proof that God does not stop fellowshiping with you when you sin. Hebrews 12:5-11 tells us that God corrects His children when they sin. If God isn’t on speaking terms with you when you sin, how can He talk to you about your sin so that He can correct you? That would be impossible if you have no fellowship with Him.

In passing, every now and then someone comes up with a message or a song that says that when God sees you, all He sees in the blood, not your sins. The logical conclusion, whether they’ve thought this through or not, is that God doesn’t even know about it when you sin. Hebrews 12:5-11 refutes that idea also, as it would be impossible for God to correct a sin that He doesn’t know about. However, He will deal with you based on the blood as opposed to giving you what your sins deserve.

I’ll prove that Jesus doesn’t go off speaking terms with you when you sin, either. In Revelation chapters 2 and 3, He commands some churches to repent. So He’s still speaking to them while they’re sinning. Also, that proves Jesus knows about it when you sin; otherwise He could not command certain churches in Asia to repent!

I’ll prove both points again yet with Philippians 3:15: “Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you.” So God knows where you’re falling short in your attitude, and He’s still on speaking terms with you because He reveals this shortcoming to you!

Does Confessing Sins Get You Forgiveness for Them?

Now let’s deal with 1 John 1:9 itself again. On the surface and outside of its context, this verse appears to support the idea that you are not forgiven for a specific sin until you confess it to God, at which point He forgives you and cleanses you. However, that concept is in direct contradiction to many other Scriptures, and we know that the Bible cannot contradict itself. So let’s go over numerous reasons that the rest of the Bible does not support the idea of confessing a specific sin to get forgiveness for it.

Confessing Sins Is Not Part of the Plan of Salvation

With all due respect to the printed “sinner’s prayers” that you see in tracts and evangelism training materials, confessing your sins is NOT a requirement for salvation. The only confessing required for salvation is the positive confession that Jesus is now your Lord! I didn’t confess my sins when I gave my life to Jesus! I didn’t even know the half of the sins I was committing. I was doing plenty of things that I didn’t even KNOW were sinful at the time! So you cannot expect an unbeliever to confess his sins, and God doesn’t expect it either. In fact, being SORRY for your sins is not even part of the plan of salvation either! I don’t know that I was sorry doing what I thought was fun; all I knew was that I did not want to go to hell, and if I did not turn my life over to Jesus, that is where I would have ended up. So it is unnecessary to make a sinner say, “Dear Jesus, I am sorry for my sins.” I was a lot sorer for my sins AFTER I received Jesus and I realized that much of what I was doing was forbidden by Scripture. But I didn’t know the Bible back then to know what Scripture had to say about much of anything. I had to find out.

The requirements for salvation are in Romans 10:9-10. Believe that Jesus rose from the dead and declare Him to be Lord with your mouth. There’s nothing about confession or sorrow in there. So already we should see that 1 John 1:9 cannot be talking about how to get saved, as you do not confess your sins to God to get saved! In other words, confessing your sins to God does not cause Him to forgive all your sins and cleanse you from all unrighteousness.

Most printed sinner’s prayers also say, “Forgive me for my sins.” However, that is not part of the plan of salvation either! Your sins are forgiven automatically when you make Jesus the Lord of your life. At that point, you are in Christ, and you are now righteous and forgiven. Forgiveness “comes with the package” when you are born again; you don’t have to ask for it specifically. You just walk in the light of it. Besides, forgiveness is not received by asking for it anyway – if it were, a lot of sinners would be forgiven. Sinners sometimes ask God to forgive them, after all. But it is only by the shedding of blood that sin is remitted (Hebrews 9:22).

Judas Iscariot confessed his sin and was sorry for his sin, but that didn’t save him!

Given that confessing your sins was not a requirement for the remission of your sins when you first got saved, it would be logically inconsistent to now insist that confessing your sins is required for their remission now that you already ARE saved. If you didn’t have to enumerate your sins one by one to obtain forgiveness the day you got saved, what sense does it make that you have to enumerate sins one by one to get forgiven NOW? Obviously the traditional understanding of 1 John 1:9 has some serious problems, and we’re just getting started!

Someone else will probably argue that the Lord’s Prayer includes a petition for forgiveness for sins. That prayer was before the cross and before people could be washed clean of their sins once and for all by the blood of Jesus. (There are other things in the Lord’s Prayer that one would not pray in the Church Age; that topic is covered elsewhere in this book.)

Someone else will probably argue that no one prays, “Lord, forgive all my sins I’m going to commit today or tomorrow.” But such a prayer would be unnecessary anyway, as the next topic section proves.

You Are Already Forgiven!

Are you forgiven for all your sins when you receive Christ, or later when you confess them one by one? If you are not forgiven until you bring them before God individually, the following Scriptures cannot be true, because they state that your sins ARE forgiven – Christ HAS forgiven you. You HAVE (right now) forgiveness for you sins because you HAVE redemption through His blood. This is not something you’re going to get or are qualified to get if you pray and ask God to give it to you – it is something you already have. Click on and read the verses below:

Ephesians 1:7

Ephesians 4:32

Colossians 1:14

Colossians 2:13

Colossians 3:13

1 John 2:12

So is your forgiveness in the future tense or in the past tense? As a Christian, it is definitely in the PAST tense. You ARE forgiven right now. You have PAST tense forgiveness for all sins, past, present and future. (How can this apply to future sins? Well, all sins were future sins relative to the cross, after all, so that’s not an issue for God.) Colossians 2:13 does not say, “Having forgiven you all PAST trespasses.” The trespasses that were forgiven are not qualified by any time element, so I think we are on safe ground to assume that ALL trespasses really means ALL trespasses, not just past ones.

What about the original Greek? Is forgiveness a one-time finished act or an ongoing one? In the three verses above where it says that Christ forgave you, it's the Aorist form of the verb. The Aorist and the Imperfect could both indicate ongoing action, but only the Aorist would ever indicate a completed one-time action. However, the Aorist CAN refer to ongoing action too (it really tells you just about nothing about the timing of anything), so its usage doesn't "prove" that an action was one-time, but if the Imperfect were used, it would disprove that it was one-time action. Greek grammar has a lot of nuances that we won't get into, but the Imperfect tense would have been more appropriate if Paul meant that Christ "has been forgiving you" or "continues to forgive you." In particular, the Aorist indicative usually, but not always, indicates momentary past action, and that is what we find in Ephesians 4:32 where Christ has forgiven you, Colossians 3:13 where Christ forgave you, and Colossians 2:13 where Christ did things "having forgiven you". Thus, the likely, though not definite, meaning of these verses is that forgiveness for the Christian is, to use the grammatical term, punctiliar. It all happened at once – as soon as you received Jesus, you received forgiveness. It is not an ongoing thing. It is not like mortgage payments that pay a debt off a little at a time. God's forgiveness for your sins appears to be a momentary past action. That would mean that it's DONE!

However, even in English, we can sometimes use a "momentary" word instead of an ongoing one to describe ongoing action. For example, "I attended Deafening Music Worship Center for ten years." The sense is that "I was attending Deafening Music Worship Center for ten years," but most people would use the simple past tense in this case. This can happen in Greek, too.

So is there any way to be sure that the three verses above refer to one-time forgiveness for all sins? Actually, there is! Where 1 John 2:12 says that our sins are forgiven, the Perfect form of the Greek verb is used. This does indicate completed action, not ongoing action or future action. We know that the Bible can't contradict itself, so we see that the forgiveness of our sins was a completed action, not something that is ongoing for the Christian. The only sense in which forgiveness is ongoing is that you have ongoing forgiveness for your sins the same way that you have ongoing eternal life – because of a completed past action that settled the matter forever. Nothing remains to be done. You do not have to do anything to stay forgiven any more than you have to do anything to stay born again.

To sum this up, there were three places where the Greek tense COULD be taken as one-time or ongoing, but there is one place where it was definitely one-time. The only logical conclusion is that the forgiveness of sins MUST be a one-time event.

People sometimes put out the challenge, "Show me one place in the New Testament where it says that future sins are forgiven!" As far as I'm concerned, I just gave you six verses above that prove it. If your sins WERE forgiven, they ARE forgiven and WILL STAY forgiven in the future. Forgiveness is granted, not earned. But I like challenges enough to give you even more verses!

The following verses show that your forgiveness is tied to a one-time finished work that Christ wrought for you and NOT to anything NEW that either you or He has to do in the future if you commit a sin today.

Our sins are ALREADY purged; they don't get purged when you confess them:

Hebrews 1:3:

Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high;

The redemption Christ wrought was eternal, not needing any further action to make it effective today for a believer's sins:

Hebrews 9:12:

Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.

There is no more need for periodic sacrifices now that Christ offered the final sacrifice ONCE:

Hebrews 9:25-28:

Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others;

For then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment:

So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.

As far as your right standing with God goes, you have it forever if you are in Christ (and stay in Christ) because His sacrifice for sins was done ONCE for everyone forever:

Hebrews 10:10-14:

By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.

And every priest standeth daily ministering and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins:

But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God;

From henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool.

For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified.

If you are perfected forever, you don't need to confess individual sins to get perfected today. No more action or offering is required for the forgiveness of sins:

Hebrews 10:17-18:

And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more.

Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin.

So the claim that 1 John 1:9 means that you are NOT forgiven yet until you "fess up" contradicts all these other Bible verses.

I am aware that some people (even famous ones) preach that forgiveness is like healing – it’s legally yours but it doesn’t become real to you until you receive it. Is that how they preached Jesus in Acts? NO! They preached forgiveness of sins by getting saved! The moment you are brought out of darkness into light is the moment that you are forgiven!

Acts 26:18:

To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me.

When you get saved, do you have to pray to be brought out of darkness into light? No, you already are. Do you have to pray later that God will deliver you from Satan’s power and into God’s power? No, that has already happened. What about receiving your inheritance – when is it yours, when you pray to receive it? No, it is already yours once you’re saved. When are you “sanctified by faith” (made righteous)? Do you have to pray to RECEIVE righteousness after you’re saved, and only then it becomes yours? No, you become perfectly righteous the instant you receive Jesus. This is all part of your “salvation package” – right along with forgiveness of sins. When you confessed Jesus as Lord, did you have to pray a separate prayer to be born again after that? No, it was automatic. When Jesus becomes your Lord, your spirit is born again immediately – without your having to ask to receive that radical transformation.

You might not walk in the LIGHT of any of these things – but that doesn’t mean that you don’t have them. Even our denominational Christian friends who think that they are dirty, rotten sinners have the same perfect righteousness as Jesus! They are not actually dirty, rotten sinners; it’s just the devil’s bad theology that makes them think that they are. It’s not a matter of them praying to receive righteousness, but rather acting on the righteousness that they already have!

Forgiveness and Righteousness

You can’t possibly be righteous if you’re not forgiven for all your sins! Nor can you be declared forgiven for ALL your sins unless you have perfect righteousness. Forgiveness and righteousness go together.

You Are the Righteousness of God in Christ

You already have perfect righteousness. We saw that already in 2 Corinthians 5:21, which is so bold as to say that you ARE righteousness! You now are what righteousness looks like. You can grow in faith, you can grow in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, but you cannot grow in righteousness. You will not be any more righteous in heaven than you are right now because you have perfect righteousness as a New Testament blood-washed child of God. You cannot possibly have a righteousness that is more righteous than the righteousness of God, which is what you have and “are” according to the Word.

If you are the righteousness of God in Christ, and then you SIN, what are you then? Correct answer: The righteousness of God in Christ! That didn't change when you sinned. If you're only the righteousness of God in Christ when you're not sinning, what good is grace? You might as well go back under the Law of Moses as the Galatians were trying to do.

Did you become righteous by not sinning? Of course not! You received the gift of righteousness when you received Jesus (Romans 5:17). If it's a gift, it's by grace, and thus totally not based on your own merit. You can't earn New Testament righteousness; you can only receive it. If good works didn't MAKE you righteous, how can they be necessary to KEEP you righteous? That makes no sense. Titus 3:5 makes it clear that we are not saved by works of righteousness that we have done. If you didn't become righteous by NOT sinning, how can you become unrighteous by SINNING?

Yet the popular interpretation of 1 John 1:9 implies that if you sin, you become unrighteous – you supposedly lose your right standing because of your works. That absolutely negates the grace of God and establishes a works gospel similar to what Paul warned the Galatians about. You see, if you believe that if you confess your sins to God, He cleanses you from all unrighteousness, you have just stated in so many words that sinning makes you unrighteous as a believer! Sadly, there are actually churches that teach that you DO lose your righteousness every time you sin and have to get re-saved! And they reach the even more awful conclusion that if you die between the time you sin and the time that you confess that sin, you'll be eternally lost because you are unrighteous again until you are cleansed from that unrighteousness through confession. Yikes!

You ARE righteous as a believer. Therefore you cannot be “cleansed from all unrighteousness” AFTER you are saved, because you don't have any unrighteousness! How righteous is the righteousness of God in Christ? It's perfect, and it's granted to you as a believer. So the idea that 1 John 1:9 means that if you confess your sins to God, God THEN cleanses you from unrighteousness has to be wrong.

You Have an Advocate, and It Isn't YOU

1 John 2:1:

My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous:

So if you sin, the burden is not on YOU to clear your name in the court of heaven by “owning up” to your sins before God so that you can be forgiven. There is one Mediator between God and man, the Man Christ Jesus (1 Timothy 2:5). Even some Spirit-filled believers get this confused and think that they have to be their own mediators in the courts of heaven to clear their names, or that they have to stand between God and man themselves (“Spare thy fierce wrath on our nation, O God,” etc.). That job is taken. IF you sin, which John does not advocate, your Advocate takes care of matters for you in heaven without any need for you to represent yourself. His blood always keeps you cleansed from all unrighteousness.

A Tougher Standard?

If you met the worst criminal in town, would you tell him that he could be forgiven for all his sins if he would receive Christ? I hope so, because it's true. I've preached this in a couple prisons (as a visitor, not as an inmate). We seem to have no trouble believing that if a criminal receives Christ, all his sins will all be washed away. We don't expect the criminal to confess all his sins before he can be forgiven for them, do we? You could be there all day and he would surely miss some sins that he's done that he doesn't even know are sins yet.

What gives us a right to impose a tougher standard on Christians than on sinners so that it is easier for a sinner to be forgiven for his sins than for a saint? Are we saying that all the sinner has to do is receive Jesus to be forgiven for everything, but then once he's saved, he has to confess sins one at a time to be forgiven for them? That just doesn't make any sense.

Only Innocent Blood Remits Sins

If you teach that confessing your sins to God is how to get them forgiven, you have established a new doctrine contrary to the Bible's teaching that only the shedding of blood grants remission of sins (Hebrews 9:22). No one in either covenant ever got his sins forgiven by confessing them to God.

If an unbeliever goes into a booth and confesses his sins to another human being, does that grant him forgiveness? If the traditional interpretation of 1 John 1:9 is right, we could all line up outside the confessional waiting for our turn to confess our sins and receive forgiveness, since we have established this doctrine – after all, 1 John 1:9 does not even mention receiving Christ as the basis for forgiveness.

"No," some would say, "don't go building a straw man and then knocking it down with that confessional argument. 1 John 1:9 says that you have to confess your sins to God, not to a priest."

The Confession Is Before Men

But 1 John 1:9 never says that you confess your sins to God – the words "to God" are not in that verse, even though it is almost universally interpreted that way. And if we look at the context in the verses before and after verse 9, we see that John is talking about your confession before men, not before God:

1 John 1:8-10:

If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.

If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.

This passage clearly speaks of people who are saying to other people that they have not sinned (verse 8 and verse 10 – the 2 verses directly around verse 9). Do these verses make it sound like they're telling God that they haven't sinned? I don't think so. In this context, verse 9 should be understood to be talking about a person who admits to other people that he has sinned. He acknowledges the reality of his sin, unlike the cultists in verse 8 and verse 10. He professes (acknowledges) that he has sinned.

I think of verses 8 through 10 as an Oreo cookie. You have one "light" verse with two "darkness" verses on each side. Someone may point out that the word "say" both in the Greek and in English, in verses 8 and 10, is not the same word as "confess" in verse 9. That does not stop the verses from fitting together. The things some people say in verses 8 and 10 are lies that do not agree with God. Thus, homologeō (to "speak the same thing" or "confess" in verse 9) fits because you are agreeing with God, who says that all have sinned. What is said in verses 8 and 10 is NOT the same thing that God says, it's the opposite. People who claim sinlessness are NOT "speaking the same thing" as God.

If a man kills someone and then yells for the city to hear, "I have just killed a man!", do you think that man is forgiven because he confessed his sin? Of course not! Was he cleansed of all unrighteousness and forgiven for his sin because God was faithful and just to do it? No! The idea of being forgiven just by admitting wrongdoing is unknown in Scripture. Righteousness comes only by being in Christ. Only bloodshed remits sin, not confession. A person who admits that he has sinned and receives Christ is forgiven, whereas people who claim they have never sinned believe they don't need a savior. Such people are in error and are still unrighteous.

Someone suggested that James 5:16 proves that we must confess our sins, but you should note that James did not say that you should confess your sins to God, either! Instead, he talked about confessing sins to each other, which is not the same as (supposedly) confessing your sins to God, as some people interpret 1 John 1:9 as saying. So that doesn't help the argument that 1 John 1:9 talks about confessing sins to God! There's another problem, too! The word "confess" is a single word in English, but the Greek word for confess in James 5:16 DOES imply an admission of guilt – the "last 2 minutes of the TV crime drama" kind of confession while the Greek word for confess in 1 John 1:9 NEVER means that kind of confession anywhere it is used in the Bible – it is a confession that "says the same thing" or "agrees" with something. (See the section Two Kinds of Confession below for more on this.)

Someone also suggested that our need to confess sins is also proved by Acts 19:18 ("And many that believed came, and confessed, and shewed their deeds.") But no one made them do this, and they weren't forgiven because they did it. They were already forgiven believers. Furthermore, that undermines once more the idea that we must confess our sins to God to be forgiven, because the people in Acts did not confess their sins to God; they confessed them to the others who were present who got to see them burn their occult books (which is still a good idea – don't sell them on the Internet to ensnare someone else in the devil's works). We'll also see shortly that the Greek word translated confess in James 5:16 and Acts 19:18 isn't even the same word used for confess in 1 John 1:9, which really weakens any argument based on those two verses.

God knew that there would be un-Christian, unscientific “Christian Science” cult people who would claim that you really haven’t sinned. So God put these verses in the Bible to warn us that these people are deceived who claim that sin is not real and that they haven’t sinned. That is the point John is making here. He is certainly not establishing a new doctrine of forgiveness by confession and contradicting the rest of the Bible.

It Didn’t Work for Judas

Judas confessed that he had sinned by betraying innocent blood. He even threw back the monetary reward he got for betraying Jesus. Did that save him or grant him forgiveness? NO! He still went to hell. He was a thief all along; his greedy action before Jesus’ arrest was not a momentary lapse one day like Peter’s three denials.

A New Gospel?

If confessing your sin can remit it, we have established a new gospel that does not require receiving Jesus or the new birth, as those are not mentioned as prerequisites to having your sin cleansed in this verse. Surely John is not introducing an alternate plan of salvation that works by mere confession and does not involve confessing Jesus as Lord.

Two Kinds of Confession

There is actually a textual difficulty with trying to use Acts 19:18 and James 5:16 (see above) to make an argument about 1 John 1:9. Two different Greek words are both translated confess in English. The word exomologeō is translated confessed and confess in Acts 19:18 and James 5:16. But the word used in 1 John 1:9 for confess is the different word homologeō (literally, to say the same thing, i.e., to affirm) as opposed to confess or “own up” to something as a criminal would – that would be a case of exomologeō, one meaning of which is “acknowledge openly.” Even exomologeō is used in ways that don’t refer to a criminal version of “confession” but we do see it used that way below:

And were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins. – Matthew 3:6

And there went out unto him all the land of Judaea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins. – Mark 1:5

But interestingly, the word homologeo in 1 John 1:9 (as opposed to exomologeo) is never used to indicate criminal-style confession – which is what most people think “confess” means when they read 1 John 1:9! Better equivalents for homologeo (sometimes used in Scripture) would be profess or acknowledge. Greek study aids will tell you that the primary meaning is to “say the same thing as another” – after all, homo means same and logeō means word or speech. Just so that you know I’m not making this stuff up, below are the 25 other places in the Bible where homologeo, the word translated confess in 1 John 1:9 is used. See if you can find a single one of them that means “admit to” or “own up to” or “fess up to” the way people think it does in 1 John 1:9. I’ll warn you in advance, you won’t find any, because for starters, there isn’t a single case where SIN is mentioned along with CONFESS in any of these other verses! In each case, the translation of homologeo is underlined.

And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity. – Matthew 7:23

Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. – Matthew 10:32

Whereupon he promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask. – Matthew 14:7

Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall [homologeo appears here again but it is not directly translated into an English word] the Son of man also confess before the angels of God: – Luke 12:8

And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ. – John 1:20

These words spake his parents, because they feared the Jews: for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue. – John 9:22

Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did [homologeo appears here but it is not directly translated into an English word] not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue: – John 12:42

For the Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit: but the Pharisees confess both. – Acts 23:8

But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets: – Acts 24:14

That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. – Romans 10:9-10

Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses. – 1 Timothy 6:12

They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable, and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate. – Titus 1:16

These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. – Hebrews 11:13

By him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips giving thanks to his name. – Hebrews 13:15

[Now these next verses should carry some extra weight because they show how John used homologeo himself in his same letter!]

Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: (but) he that acknowledgeth the Son hath the Father also. – 1 John 2:23

Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God: And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world. – 1 John 4:2-3

Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God. – 1 John 4:15

[Here's John again in another letter:]

For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist. – 2 John 7

I hope I've made my point. When we follow the sound advice to let Scripture interpret itself, we have to conclude that confess in 1 John 1:9 means to profess or acknowledge, as opposed to doing what the bad guys always end up doing in the last few minutes of whodunit shows on TV. I look at it this way, we are acknowledging the fact that we sin, as opposed to dredging up and "outing" individual sins.

I think the context in verse 8 and verse 10 strengthens the idea that John speaks of acknowledging that you have sins as opposed to confessing something in particular that you did wrong. In the context, verse 8 and verse 10 do not speak of specific sins, so there is no reason to conclude that verse 9 does either. John is contrasting those who profess to others that there is no sin in their lives to those who profess to others that they do have sin in their lives. Only those who profess that they have sinned can be saved, as those in error who believe that they have not sinned have nothing to be saved from and would not think that they need Jesus' payment for their sins.

John Didn't Contradict Himself

John, the writer of 1 John 1:9, could not have believed that your sins are not yet forgiven, because only 13 verses later he himself said they were in 1 John 2:12 cited above. If your sins ARE forgiven, you don't need to confess them to get forgiveness and cleansing from unrighteousness.

In verse 7 (see above) John said that if we walk in the light, the blood of Jesus Christ God's Son cleanses us from all sin. Again, it is BLOOD, not CONFESSION, that cleanses sin. Now if the blood of Jesus Christ already cleanses us from all sin, why would we need another cleansing from sin that supposedly comes from confessing our sins to God, a cleansing that is unrelated to the blood that Jesus shed? That doesn't make sense either. Was Jesus' one-time blood sacrifice sufficient to buy us forgiveness or wasn't it?

"Walking in the light means not sinning," someone might conjecture. "You're only still cleansed if you're walking in the light. Otherwise you need to be cleansed." But that can't be true because John said that if you walk in the light, Jesus' blood cleanses you from all sin. If you're not sinning, Jesus' blood has nothing to cleanse you from, and then the verse doesn't make any sense! No, as a believer, you are in a continuous righteous state because of Jesus' shed blood – even if you sin.

You'd Never Be Totally Forgiven

If 1 John 1:9 really means that no sin is forgiven until you confess it, you will live in a state of constant unforgiveness, unable to receive anything from God. Why? Because as we grow in Christ, we are constantly learning that things we are doing are sinful when we never realized before that we were sinning. Since we would not confess sins that we don't know are sins yet (and there are sure to be some), we would ALWAYS have some degree of unrighteousness, so we would be walking around with unconfessed sin. No Christian would really be walking in total forgiveness and cleansing if this were the case! No one could be righteous if that were the standard for cleansing!

Short Accounts and Staying Fessed Up

Ever hear people say, "You need to keep short accounts with God" or "You need to stay fessed up?" What they mean is that they think you will still be in an unrighteous state if you don't confess every sin, so you'd better do it quickly! But I hope that you've seen enough Scripture here to know that your righteousness has nothing to do with whether you're sinning or not, so these law-based concepts do not apply to the believer today, even if your church teaches them.

Receiving Forgiveness for Individual Sins?

Another attempt to resolve the difficulty of 1 John 1:9 is to state that forgiveness is yours just as healing is yours, but you must receive forgiveness on a sin-by-sin basis as you would receive healing on a sickness-by-sickness basis. In light of Acts 26:18, that seems dubious. Let's look at what that verse says you have as a believer. When you get saved, are you turned from darkness to light? Yes. Are you turned from the power of Satan to the power of God? Yes. When do you receive your inheritance? When you get saved. So when do you receive forgiveness of sins? When you get saved. If you have received forgiveness of sins, why do you need to do it again? (The many verses quoted earlier in the "You Are Already Forgiven" section would also seem to settle the issue of whether or not you are already forgiven, but this verse in Acts is further confirmation.) If you have to receive forgiveness on a sin-by-sin basis, the implication is that you're walking around unforgiven for anything you haven't confessed, and then how could you receive anything from God? Also, there's no way you will come up with a total list of things you did wrong as a sinner to confess on a sin-by-sin basis, so you'd always have some unforgiven sins if that's how things work. Under our better covenant, why would we have to confess sins on a sin-by-sin basis after we get saved when we didn't have to do it with the sins we committed before we got saved? As previously discussed, that makes it harder for a saint's sins to be forgiven than for a sinner's sins to be forgiven!

Repent and Receive Forgiveness?

Worse yet, some conclude that you receive forgiveness for a sin when you repent of it. Aside from the problem above (your sins are already forgiven), this conclusion is even farther off the mark because the word "repent" does not even appear in 1 John 1:9! So repenting to receive forgiveness is based on something that is not even in the verse at all. So there is no reason whatsoever for such a conclusion other than having a predisposition to that conclusion.

License for Licentiousness?

If you don't have to confess your sins, and you're already forgiven for them, does this grant you a license to sin? The Bible is rather clear on this matter in Romans 6:1-2: "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?" So no church should be treating sin casually by teaching that it doesn't matter if you sin anymore because you're forgiven anyway. Ask any "fallen" minister if sin still matters. Romans 6:15 repeats the point: "What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid." Anyone teaching the REAL grace of God will preach this also rather than promoting a "who cares, so what?" attitude toward sin.

If You're Pre-Forgiven, Why Repent of Sin Anymore?

You don't repent of sin to get forgiveness – you get forgiveness by receiving Christ. You repent of sin to get sin out of your life! Sin still has a price tag in this life. You want to get as far away from it as you can so that you don't pay that price. Repentance is still a New Testament concept – Jesus commanded church people in most of the churches in Asia to repent in Revelation chapters 2 and 3. He said before He ascended to heaven that repentance and remission of sin should be preached everywhere starting at Jerusalem (Luke 24:47). So repentance is still a valuable New Testament concept. By the way, repentance is turning from sin, not beating yourself up or wearing sackcloth and ashes to prove how sorry you are. Despite the fact that many “Sinner's Prayers” say something like, “I am sorry for my sins,” the New Testament never teaches that being sorry for your sins is a condition for salvation!

Also, repentance is not the same thing as remorse. Judas committed suicide because he was remorseful, but he did not repent. He still ended up in a state where it would have been better for him if he had never been born (Mark 14:21).

Familial Forgiveness?

Because 1 John 1:9 is so perplexing at first, some theologians have attempted to explain it by establishing two kinds of forgiveness – a legal kind and then a “familial” kind, claiming that you have “legal” forgiveness but have to get “familial” forgiveness by confessing individual sins. I understand that this is a difficult verse, but trying to establish two kinds of forgiveness is even more confusing. I don't see any distinction taught anywhere else in the Bible between “kinds” of forgiveness or “kinds” of cleansing, or that receiving Christ grants you partial or conditional forgiveness of one kind but not another. I don't see anywhere where you can mess up your forgiveness so that you need more.

Soulsh vs. Spiritual Righteousness?

Others have tried to solve the difficulty by claiming that there are two kinds of unrighteousness, spiritual and soulsh, and that getting saved takes care of spiritual unrighteousness, while confessing sins gets rid of soulsh unrighteousness. Again, this attempt to resolve the verse leads to even more trouble (in my opinion) when it comes to other verses, because one would have to “parse” the rest of Scripture to see which verses refer to spiritual righteousness and which refer to soulsh righteousness. I cannot find the concept of a separate soulsh righteousness anywhere else in the Bible, so it is too much of a stretch to think that 1 John 1:9 refers to an important hidden truth about soulsh righteousness that is nowhere to be found outside of that one verse.

Soul Forgiveness and/or Bodily Forgiveness

Another “try” to skirt the difficulties of 1 John 1:9 is the idea that you already have forgiveness in your spirit (at least this much is obvious from the earlier barrage of “you’re already forgiven” verses cited earlier in this discussion), but when you confess individual sins, you receive forgiveness in your soul and/or your body.

Let’s start with the soul part. One could hypothesize that maybe “saying the same thing” (homologeo) as God about your sin will cleanse you from a guilty conscience and make you “feel” forgiven. However, you would be intruding into the realm that is already taken care of by Jesus’ blood – we are to be sprinkled from an evil conscience (Hebrews 10:22). We do not “confess” away an evil conscience to get relief from it. Go back and read the section You Are Already Forgiven and notice how forgiveness is tied to bloodshed, not confession.

Even less tenable is the idea of receiving forgiveness, which is something spiritual, in your body, which is unspiritual and unable to grasp anything spiritual. You could receive healing in your body from the consequences of sin (the curse for breaking the Law), but I really can’t see what else would happen if your body “got forgiven.”

We also run into the same problem in the previous section. We would now have to parse the Bible to determine which verses refer to spiritual forgiveness, soulish forgiveness and bodily forgiveness, which seems to me to be a fruitless endeavor. God commands you to forgive others, but He doesn’t break that down and say that He wants you to forgive their spirits and their souls and their bodies. Would anyone seriously say to an offender, “I forgive your spirit, but now something else will have to happen for me to extend that forgiveness to your soul and to your body?”

Flesh Cleansing?

Because 1 John 1:9 is such a tricky verse, another “device” I’ve read to explain it is that your spirit is pure and clean when you are in Christ, but John just means that God is cleansing you from unrighteousness that has crept into your flesh. But I can’t accept that explanation for two reasons. First, the verse still says that God forgives you as well as cleanses you if you confess your sins, so if you still hold that confessing (meaning admitting to, supposedly) a sin is what gets your flesh cleansed, you are still stuck concluding that the same action gets you forgiveness (which is actually yours already as a Christian), and the interpretation problem isn’t solved at all. Second, your flesh will ALWAYS be unrighteous anyway! It is not confession, but the return of Jesus, that will fix that situation! Your flesh is not, and never will be, born again, and it will never be righteous! The whole nature of your flesh is that it cannot be “cleansed” and made righteous. You have a natural body that will never be “the righteousness of God in Christ” in this life. Oh, if only it could! That would mean the end of sin in your life forever, as even an unrenewed mind wouldn’t have to choose between following your unrighteous flesh and your righteous spirit!

But wait, you might think, what about 2 Corinthians 7:1? “Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.” If you take this verse at its apparent face value, even then it only strengthens the argument that 1 John 1:9 does not teach that God cleanses your flesh, because one principle you learn in Scripture is that God will not do for you what He told you do yourself. For example, if I suggested that 1 John 1:9 said that if you confess your sins, God will resist the devil for you, you would know that my teaching was bogus because God tells YOU to resist the devil – so He isn’t going to do it for you. Likewise, if He told YOU to cleanse yourself of filthiness of the flesh, He isn’t going to do that for you, either.

Now I said that for the benefit of those who insist that this verse must mean that you can be cleansed of unrighteousness in your flesh. But that actually can’t be what the verse means anyway. It doesn’t say that your unrighteous flesh can be cleansed and made righteous! It only says that you can cleanse yourself from the filthiness of your flesh. If go outside and roll around in the mud, you can cleanse yourself from the filthiness of your flesh – but your flesh is still unregenerate and unrighteous and you can’t change that even if you take a long bath. It will probably want to go roll around in the mud again!

It also can’t mean what it appears to mean at face value because your righteous new spirit has NO filthiness anyway. So something must be different from what it appears to be at first, because Scripture, to say nothing of Paul’s writing in particular, can’t contradict itself.

The whole idea that you are to perfect holiness gives us another key insight into this verse. This is talking about an earthly holiness – walking in the light in front of other people. It can’t be talking about your intrinsic holiness, because your spirit was created in God’s image in righteousness and true holiness (Ephesians 4:24)! Your spirit is not filthy and never will be as long as you are in Christ. What I believe Paul is saying here is that deliberately turn from things that your flesh and your previously dead spirit wanted and pursue the things that God wants. At least this would not be the only case where Paul talks like that. Recall his exhortations to put off the old man and put on the new man. This was written to born again people whose old man is GONE – righteous new creations in Christ. Believers do not have an “old man” and a “new man” inside them duking it out for supremacy. The old man is GONE and you are a new man. So Paul COULDN’T be telling you to literally put off someone who is already dead and gone. What he was exhorting was that we as believers put off the DEEDS of the old man and instead follow the DEEDS of the new man. Likewise, he exhorts us to put off the “old man” deeds that our flesh and old dead spirit wanted to do.

My point is strengthened when you read the verse carefully. Not only does it not say that your flesh can be cleansed from unrighteousness, it really doesn’t say that your flesh can be cleansed at all! Paul doesn’t tell you to cleanse your flesh. He tells you to cleanse yourself from the filthiness (this would represent deeds) of the flesh. Put them off. Wouldn’t it be nice if you could cleanse your flesh so that it wouldn’t be unrighteous and it would stop gravitating toward sin and walking by sight? It certainly would, but that just isn’t available in this lifetime.

You may not agree with what I think is my reasonable take on this verse, but if you don't, you'll have to come up with a better explanation of what is admittedly a difficult verse. (If you have difficulties with some of Paul's statements, consider that even Peter said that some of Paul's writings were hard to understand (2 Peter 3:16). If Peter had issues, don't think that you're spiritually weak just because you encounter some statements from Paul that make you scratch your head until you really sit down and analyze them rigorously. Even then, I don't think you'll ever know for sure what baptism for the dead meant at Corinth. If such things were important for us to know, God would have told us.)

Receiving Sin-By-Sin Forgiveness?

The way some people teach forgiveness is that God provided it in Christ, but you must receive it by faith on a sin-by-sin basis. This is not the case. The only way you "receive" the forgiveness that was already provided is to receive Christ. Total forgiveness is part of the package. To me, this teaching would be like saying, "You were made holy, but you won't really be holy until you explicitly receive holiness." No, you got holy the moment you got saved.

Just to clear up any confusion about holiness, there are two kinds of holiness – holiness in status and holiness in conduct. People bound by tradition think that holiness in conduct results in holiness in status, but actually the opposite is true – it is your holiness in status in Christ that leads you to holiness in conduct.

Again, thinking that we need to receive sin-by-sin forgiveness is like saying, "You got the legal right to go to heaven when you received Jesus, but you don't actually get to WALK IN that right until you say, 'I receive the right to go to heaven.'" No, there is no need to receive that right, as it is yours automatically upon receiving Jesus, just as total forgiveness is. However, some people understand God's forgiveness for different sins at different times (see Notes on Acts 26:18 for more about this.)

What Does 1 John 1:7 Mean?

It's easy to overlook the fact that 1 John 1:7 contradicts the traditional interpretation of verse 9. Two verses earlier, John said this:

1 John 1:7:

But if we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

You can debate what “walking in the light” means, but another reason that it clearly refers to a believer is that Acts 26:18 shows us that the unbeliever walks in darkness, and when he receives Christ, he is brought from darkness into light. Once you are a believer, the blood of Jesus Christ cleanses you from all sin! You do not get cleansed when you repent or when you confess your sins – you are already cleansed from all unrighteousness! Paul reminded the Corinthians, “You are washed” (1 Corinthians 6:11). When did they become “washed?” When they repented of the individual sins they were committing? NO! They were washed, sanctified and justified “in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God.” The washing was accomplished by getting saved by calling on name of the Lord Jesus, not by confessing or repenting of individual sins. For us as believers, this cleansing does not depend on our works any more than being saved in the first place depended on our works. We are saved and forgiven by faith, not by works. We don’t earn salvation or forgiveness.

A Verse 9 Contradiction

If verse 9 really means that when we own up to our sins before God, He cleanses us from all unrighteousness, how does that even make sense? I confess SPECIFIC sins to God, and then I am cleansed from ALL unrighteousness? But the traditional interpretation would have to change this verse to say, “I confess my sins to God, and then I am cleansed from the unrighteousness associated with those particular confessed sins. I won’t get cleansed of the other ones until I confess them.” If I’m cleansed from ALL unrighteousness, there’s no reason to confess anything else after that. So the traditional interpretation contradicts what the verse actually says.

What Does Baptism Represent?

Baptism represents the washing away of your sins and your resurrection with Christ. However, a believer only has to be baptized once. There is nothing in Scripture that encourages re-baptism if a believer has sinned. Baptism represents a ONE-TIME cleansing and so it is only done ONE TIME. That is because you are cleansed ONE TIME when you receive Christ – ALL your sins are washed away, including the ones that you haven’t yet committed.

Fessing Up to Restore Relationship?

If you believe that you as a believer must “fess up” to restore a right relationship with God, let me ask you this question – did you have to “fess up” to every individual sin to get a right relationship with God the moment you got saved? No! So if you NOW need to confess individual sins to restore a right relationship with God, you have made it harder for the BELIEVER to have a right relationship with God than for an UNBELIEVER. You’ve also created a horrible works system where your relationship with God is now all about YOU being diligent to ferret out all your sins and get them confessed and “under the blood” right away. That leads you to a law-based treadmill, not freedom!

Who is We?

The traditional rendering of 1 John 1:9 assumes that it was written to believers, so “we” means believers. I agree with that for the reason cited early in this discussion – John’s letter was written to us as believers, not to heathen cultists. He warns believers against heathen cultists who deny the reality of sin.

However, verse 8 and verse 10 also use “we.” These verses define cultists who are not believers by the fact that they deny the reality of sin. Does this mean that some believers denied that they had ever sinned? No, the opposite is true – those who deny the reality of sin are not believers to begin with, and that is John’s point. The “we” is thus understood as a literary device as opposed to an obviously wrong statement that “we” as believers could say that we have no sin. The letter was still written to Christians, but John warns Christians about cultists who may live among them. He refers to such people elsewhere in his letter as those who started out with “us” but did not continue with “us” – they exposed themselves as phonies. John warns that those who get into a sin-denying philosophy of men are going outside of Christ, echoing a similar warning he gives elsewhere (2 John 9).

James and Forgiveness for the Sick Person

The most common passage put forth to “disprove” that our sins are already forgiven is James 5:14-16. “If he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him” seems at first like a slam-dunk refutation of the idea of forgiveness of future sins. After all, how could a believer’s sins be forgiven when the elders minister if his sins were already forgiven when he received Christ? That doesn’t make sense, does it? Furthermore, it would make sense that the healed person MUST be a believer because James says “IF” he has committed sins, he shall be forgiven – if the person were an unbeliever, it would be a foregone conclusion that he had committed sins!

Yet we know that the Bible can’t contradict itself, so with a decent number of verses that say that our sins ARE forgiven, we have to question whether we have misunderstood those verses or the one in question.

I hold that the command for “any among you” is for believers and unbelievers based on the context of the entire book of James. At first it seems that James must only be addressing believers, because he uses the phrase “my beloved brethren” three times, and that phrase is used exclusively to refer to believers, as one author who promotes healing in the atonement points out. But how many times do Bible writers refer to believers as adulterers, even if allegorically (James 4:4)? In fact, Scripture is clear that practicing adulterers CANNOT be believers (1 Corinthians 6:9-11). James twice addresses those who murder (James 4:2 and James 5:6). Scripture is clear that practicing murderers CANNOT be believers (1 John 3:15). How about addressing saints by calling them sinners (James 4:8)? The boasting businessmen later in James 4 seem self-willed and it would be dubious at best to assert that they were believers either. The letter addressed “my beloved brethren” but James deals with a “mixed bag” of people in his letter which would seem to include those among the “twelve tribes” he wrote to who were not Christian brethren. The letter starts by addressing the twelve tribes, though James immediately greets “brethren” in the next verse. Does this have to mean Christians, or does he refer to brethren in the sense of fellow members of the twelve tribes? I believe the latter, though I know that’s not a traditional take on James. But do you believe that the people killing each other were really James’s beloved brethren in Christ? I don’t! I believe that they were brethren as far as their Jewishness was concerned, but that they certainly weren’t all brethren in Christ.

Could James really call unbelieving Jews brethren? He wouldn’t have been the first to do it! Peter did it in Acts 2:29 and Acts 3:17. It appears that Stephen did it in Acts 7:2. Paul did it in Acts 13:26, Acts 13:38, probably Acts 22:1, Acts 22:5, Acts 23:1, Acts 23:5 and Acts 23:6!

If that isn’t clear enough, consider James 5 itself – the very chapter under consideration! The first 6 verses (James 5:1-6) refer to rich, selfish oppressors who hold back wages fraudulently. Can anyone seriously think that James is addressing believers in those verses? It is plain that James did not think so, because he said that they condemned and killed the just (verse 6), not that they were the just! Again, if they killed the just, they’d be practicing murderers who do not have eternal life (1 John 3:15)! Now consider the last 2 verses (James 5:19-20), where he says, “If any of you err from the truth, and one convert him, Let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins.” So this seems to refer to someone among the group to whom the letter was written who had become an unbeliever whose soul was headed for death!

So I believe that James 5:14-16 applies to believers and unbelievers, and that the if covers the case where the person requesting ministry is an unbeliever (the believer’s sins would already be forgiven).

But what about the fact that a favorite Greek scholar cited by faith preachers (one whom I admire too) stated that James’s command is for the church today, not just for the dispersed 12 Jewish tribes, and that to say otherwise proves that you are “utterly ignorant of Greek” (in his words)? A careful reading of his context shows that the issue he was addressing was that James was for the church age, for all groups of people and not ONLY the dispersed Jews, which I affirm myself in another objection reply. However, I believe that James addresses a mixed bag of saints and sinners in his letter and that his letter therefore would be appropriate throughout the church age for saints and sinners to heed.

Notice that he asks if any among you is sick. Among in Greek is the general-purpose word en that can mean in, with, by, among, and other things. It's a general-purpose preposition that occurs roughly 2,800 times in the Bible. It's never translated of. If James were only speaking about believers calling for the elders, he should have said, "Is any of you sick?" rather than "Is any among you sick?" A person could be among Christians without being one himself. No one would ever get saved during a church altar call if it were impossible for Christians to have someone unsaved among them!

But what about the previously-mentioned argument that "IF" proves that the subject was a saint? That argument does not hold water, unless you believe that there are saints today walking in sinless perfection. I'm not, are you? So the IF would apply equally to anyone! Unbelievers sin. Believers sin. There is no real possibility that the subject, saved or otherwise, has not sinned! I believe that the point is that if the sin led to the sickness, and the person is not already a believer, that sin will be forgiven so that the unbeliever can be healed. This would not apply to the believer who is already forgiven as the many Scriptures cited above prove, hence the need for the "if" clause.

So James's command would certainly apply to believers in the midst who are sick, but it would also apply to "any" among the twelve tribes being addressed, including rich oppressors, boasters, murderers, adulterers and so on. In other words, ANYONE can be healed by calling for the elders of the church, even an unbeliever. But an unbeliever would not be forgiven yet, and healing is for forgiven people, so how could that work? Because if the person has sinned, he will be forgiven when he comes to the elders, at least for purposes of receiving healing. I believe that this clears up the "IF" conundrum in James's command. Calling for the elders is for believers and unbelievers alike, but receiving forgiveness when the elders come is strictly for unbelievers.

This is NOT establishing a new doctrine that you can be born again by having an appointment for the elders to anoint you. James doesn't say that the person will be born again and go to heaven because someone prayed over him. Now, you ask, how could such a person be forgiven without becoming a Christian? Ask the people in the New Testament whom Jesus forgave who were not born again. ALL the people that Jesus pronounced forgiven during His earthly ministry were still sinners who weren't born again!

Moreover, Jesus' authority to forgive sin to allow healing has been delegated to His church! He said, "Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained" (John 20:23). That has to be one of the more difficult Scriptures in the whole Bible to make sense of, but I think it fits this context. Now again, that doesn't mean that you can grant access to heaven by forgiving sins because as Jesus also said, you must be born again to see the kingdom of God. You cannot do anything to force someone else be born again; the individual must make his own surrender to the lordship of Christ as a matter of his own free will. But you can minister the way Jesus did so that people who need healing are forgiven so that they can be healed. In fact, it would seem to be necessary to do that to minister as Jesus did, because He said Himself that healing was a sign that someone was forgiven (Luke 5:17-26).

I realize that the idea of ANY kind of forgiveness being offered by a Christian rather than being received by an individual through Christ may seem foreign, but it wasn't foreign to one Bible writer – John, who wrote in 1 John 5:16, "If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it."

There is little context around John 20:23, but what little there is seems to fit my point perfectly. Jesus had just breathed on His followers and told them to receive the Holy Spirit in John 20:22: "And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost:". You can never make an ironclad point through punctuation, which was added by the translators, but it's interesting that the translators put a colon there and not a period, which makes verse 22 flow directly into verse 23. So it seems that the translators indicated that receiving the Holy Spirit would allow forgiveness to be ministered the way Jesus did it when He ministered by the Holy Spirit.

So it would seem that part of our "priesthood" as believers is to minister forgiveness and healing in Jesus' name to those who need it.

Maybe you don't like my take on John 20:23, but if you don't, I challenge you to tell me what on earth that verse DOES mean! It certainly does NOT mean that Peter was the first pope (how could he be? – he was married!) and that he had the sole right to forgive sins on the earth, as verse 22 says that Jesus breathed on them, so whatever verse 23 is talking about, it was for ALL the disciples, not just for an individual one.

So I don't see any other rational explanation of the subject's sin being forgiven other than the case where the subject is an unbeliever, who would need forgiveness to receive healing. Sickness is part of the curse for breaking the law, so you would need to be forgiven for a sin to avoid having to remain under the curse, including sickness, which would be the penalty for the sin if it hadn't been forgiven.

Thus, James's "if" refers to an unbeliever, and James 5:14-16 does NOT prove that a believer's sin needs to be (or can be) forgiven subsequent to salvation. This leaves my rendering of 1 John 1:9 intact.

Simple Simon Explanation

Another popular "disproof" that your sins, including future ones, are already forgiven, involves Simon the Sorcerer. The "disproof" is (supposedly) that Simon was truly saved, but Peter then directed an already saved man to pray that God would forgive him! This (allegedly) proves that believers, like Simon, still have to ASK God for forgiveness, and that 1 John 1:9 shows that you still must ASK for forgiveness.

Acts 8:13:

Then Simon himself believed also: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the miracles and signs which were done.

Acts 8:18-24:

And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money,

Saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost.

But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money.

Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God.

Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee.

For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity.

Then answered Simon, and said, Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me.

You will see some lively debate among theologians about Simon. Some have proposed that he was considered saved but he actually lacked true "saving faith," so Peter was right to act as if he were an unbeliever. I cannot accept that for two reasons. First, the clear testimony of Scripture in verse 13 is that Simon believed. If that isn't true and it was just Luke (the author of Acts)'s opinion, then you can't trust anything else in the Bible – it could all just be someone's opinion. Second, he was baptized, and an unbeliever would not want to be baptized, nor would Philip have knowingly baptized an unbeliever. After all, we correctly use Acts 8 to show that the baptism with the Holy Spirit is an act distinct from the new birth, and we cite that believers were baptized in water and LATER baptized with the Holy Spirit. If we call into question the salvation of the people baptized in water in Acts 8, we've just ruined THAT argument. We can't have it both ways!

So Simon WAS saved. So along comes Peter, who tells Simon to repent, and even MORE shockingly, to ask if God MIGHT forgive him! There's a unique statement – wouldn't God forgive anyone who came to Him and asked for it? What reason could there be for him NOT to be forgiven?

I think I can straighten out this mess for you. Whatever Simon's actual status with the Lord might have been in verse 13, Peter didn't think he was saved. Peter could have MISTAKENLY considered Simon's conversion false (the Bible says it was real), or Peter, who taught that a person can lose his salvation, could have concluded that Simon had walked away from Jesus after being truly converted. After all, this is the same Peter who talked about people who once knew the way of righteousness, who turned from the holy commandment and ended up worse than before:

2 Peter 2:20-22:

For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning.

For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them.

But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.

Whether Peter considered Simon to already be apostate or believed that he was never saved to begin with, he seemed to address him as an unbeliever. For starters, he said, “Your money perish with you!” which would not be something you would say to a fellow believer, would you? You probably wouldn’t tell a believer that he was in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity either, but that’s how Peter addressed Simon. You probably wouldn’t say that a believer, who is the righteousness of God in Christ, has a heart that is not right before God, but that’s what Peter told Simon. If Simon was still saved, Peter wasn’t convinced!

Whether or not Simon WAS still saved when Peter addressed him is inconsequential. Peter assumed that he wasn’t when he told him to pray to see if he could be forgiven. So this seals the case that Peter was not telling a believer that he needed to pray for forgiveness. But if he was not telling a believer to pray for forgiveness, the entire Simon argument (that it proves that believers still need to pray to be forgiven in 1 John 1:9) falls apart!

The “if” as far as Simon being ABLE to be forgiven again would have been because Peter was unsure of whether Simon was a reprobate who was beyond redemption or whether he was merely a false convert initially who had never really been in the kingdom. We are sure with the benefit of our Bibles that Simon was initially saved, but Peter did not have that divine perspective in writing at the time. He saw no fruit to indicate that Simon was really saved, and he assumed that he wasn’t. He didn’t tell a believer to ask for forgiveness and see if God could grant it. Besides, the “if” there would cancel the 1 John 1:9 argument itself – 1 John 1:9 makes a definite statement about being forgiven and cleansed from all unrighteousness. There is no “if” about things in 1 John 1:9 other than “if” we admit to having sinned.

What About Luke 6:37?

Luke 6:37 tells us, “Judge not, and ye shall not be judged: condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned: forgive, and ye shall be forgiven.” Does this mean that God forgives us after we forgive others? If so, we’ve established a new doctrine of salvation that makes the blood of Jesus meaningless, one in which there IS remission of sins without atonement. An unbeliever could simply forgive others and then God would forgive him even though he isn’t born again! It is clear from the rest of Scripture that God’s forgiveness is always based on the sacrifice of innocent blood, not on someone just forgiving someone else. So that can’t be what Jesus meant.

Besides, it’s hard to expect someone to forgive others from the heart if he himself is still unsaved – with a sinful nature. We love because God first loved us (1 John 4:19), and part of love is walking in forgiveness. We forgive because He forgave us, not to get Him to forgive us!

The statement in question parallels other things Jesus taught, such as “give and it shall be given,” which is actually the very next thing He said after Luke 6:37. We see a key there that when you give, MEN shall give to you. Jesus is speaking of your interactions with other people, not with God. If you don’t judge others, others won’t judge you. If you don’t condemn others, others won’t condemn you. If you forgive others, others will forgive you. This is simply the law of sowing and reaping. It is clearly not an alternative means of obtaining forgiveness from God. It’s talking about forgiveness from men.

So Luke 6:37 does not mean that you as a believer aren’t forgiven yet. If you think that’s what it means, you must also believe that you obtain forgiveness by your works of forgiving others, and perhaps the “cult watch” sites should do a write-up on YOU for presenting a plan for forgiveness that doesn’t even involve Jesus and His finished work!

What About Mark 11:26 and Matthew 6:14-15?

Mark 11:26 and Matthew 6:14-15 are sometimes cited as a disproof that you are already forgiven for all your sins. The first says, “But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses.” The second says, “For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you: But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.”

I will not dodge the issue as some do by pointing out that Mark 11:26 is not in some manuscripts, and thus not even in some translations for that reason. Even if we could throw out Mark 11:26 (and I wouldn’t), Matthew 6:14-15 IS in the Bible and it says the same thing, as you can see above. So we have to tackle Mark 11:26 head-on rather than explain it away on technical grounds.

People quote these and say that these verses prove that forgiveness is conditional – that you are NOT forgiven just because you are saved, and that in fact if you don’t forgive others, you’ll stay unforgiven yourself. They also say that this proves that forgiveness is received SUBSEQUENT to salvation because based on this verse, there is a possibility that you as a believer will still not receive forgiveness!

This would be an alarming state of affairs for a born-again believer, as it would make your eternal destiny completely insecure. It would be up to YOU to forgive everyone, and if you didn’t, you’d be unforgiven yourself, which would mean that you’d have to go to hell after all! Is your salvation really that fragile?

If so, it makes Jesus’ blood almost meaningless. Forgiveness is only obtained through the shedding of innocent blood; without this bloodshed there is no forgiveness! If Jesus’ blood was not enough to buy your forgiveness, and now you must pile on your own works to be forgiven, how does that exalt Jesus and His sacrifice? Your forgiveness would now be a matter of YOUR WORKS. But the New Testament is all about the GRACE and truth that came by Jesus Christ, not about establishing a new kind of law where salvation depends on your works after you’re saved! If a BELIEVER had to forgive to be forgiven, forgiveness is now something that he EARNED instead of RECEIVED and he’d have something to boast of rather than boasting in the Lord.

You need to remember that Jesus was talking to the Jews, not to born-again believers. Scripture is clear (see the many Scriptures above cited on this) that a believer is ALREADY forgiven for all his sins. If you're already forgiven, God can't refuse to forgive you – that would imply that you are NOT forgiven and that you need to do something to obtain forgiveness.

I know that this practically starts World War 3 when you suggest it – but Jesus was speaking to the Jews before the New Covenant was inaugurated. In fact, quite a bit of what He said fell into that category. I can almost hear the screams now, “You're telling us to throw out the four gospels as irrelevant, but Christ said to teach everyone what He taught. You heretical Hyper-Grace deceiver!” But before you make me the new poster child on your “discernment ministry” website, hear me out and see if you don't have to agree with some of my points after all.

Jesus Himself said that our praying would change after we were born again – we would pray in His name, which He NEVER taught the disciples to do while He walked the earth. Nor did He ever lead His disciples to pray in tongues while He walked the earth. But He said the day would come when we would speak in tongues (Mark 16:17) and the Bible clearly states God's desire for Church Age believers, “I would that you all spoke with tongues” (1 Corinthians 14: 5). So we can't take Jesus' instructions to the Jews as the final word on how prayer should be done in the Church Age. Paul's prayer for the Ephesians to know their inheritance (Ephesians 1:15-23) could not have been prayed before Jesus gave us His inheritance, so Jesus could not have taught His disciples any of the wonderful prayers we see in the epistles, which we can now pray for ourselves and others with great benefit.

Are we throwing out Christ's words in red because we believe in evangelizing Gentiles? Jesus told His disciples to only go to the lost sheep of the house of Israel! But in the church age, the gospel is to the Jew first and also to the Greek (Gentile). A lot changed after Jesus' resurrection. (You can go to the answer to the question Unforgiveness Is Itself a Forgiven Sin, So How Could It Hinder My Healing? for some more thought-provoking statements along these lines.)

Jesus taught that the only cause for divorce was fornication. Paul added other conditions, and he seemed more lenient than Jesus, particularly about remarriage. If we stay with what Jesus taught the Jews before the Church Age, we will contradict Paul's instructions for the Church Age. There was a change. The only CORRECT answer to the debate, “Who was right, Paul or Jesus?” is that they were BOTH right. They both HAD to be right because what both of them said on the matter is in the Bible. However, Jews were trying to nitpick about the Law of Moses and Jesus answered them on those terms. Paul was setting down the rules for the Church Age.

I believe that the link between Matthew 6:14-15 and Mark 11:26 actually helps point to the answer to the issue, as Matthew 6:14-15 immediately follows the “Lord’s Prayer,” which is definitely not a Church Age prayer. Today we would not pray for God to forgive our sins, which He already has done – not even the most ardent 1 John 1:9 traditionalist can demonstrate that there is any petition for forgiveness in 1 John 1:9. We would not pray to be delivered from the evil one because Christ has already delivered from us him and from his kingdom through the cross (Colossians 1:13, Colossians 2:15). We would not pray to have God provide daily bread – we would instead trust in His already-provided riches in glory by Christ Jesus (Philippians 4:19). We would not pray for His kingdom to come, because it already has – Jesus said that some of those PRESENT at the time would not taste death until they saw the kingdom come with power, which it certainly did in Acts 2. The 2 verses that follow the Lord’s Prayer can now logically be taken together with the Lord’s Prayer because the very next word is “for” – meaning, “in light of this, here is more clarification.” In other words, this statement (and the similar Mark 11:26) applied to the Jews but not to believers in the Church Age.

I know it ruffles feathers when you point out that some things Jesus said do not apply to the Church, but if you think that the verses in question DO apply to the church, you REALLY introduce problems because you must teach that you can lose your salvation by failing to forgive someone else, which takes away any certainty you have of reaching heaven. What if you’ve forgotten to forgive one other person? According to the idea that this teaching is for the church age, it means that you, the Christian, will burn in the lake of fire because you never forgave your second grade teacher for saying that you would never amount to anything! Does that sound like grace to you?

I further elaborate on the concept of Some of Jesus’ statements not applying to the Church in my answer to Objection: Jesus Said to Say, “Thy Will Be Done,” Instead of Demanding Healing

Jesus warned the Jews that if they called someone a fool, they were in danger of hell fire. Is a believer today hell-bound because he yelled “Fool!” at someone who cut him off in traffic? No, the believer is justified and saved from hell by faith in Christ, not by his traffic manners. That has changed, too. Should we go around telling fellow believers that they will go to hell because they lost their cool when someone breezed into a parking space despite the believer’s signal to go into it? Obviously not. I’m not justifying yelling “Fool!” at someone. However, you are FORGIVEN for that under the New Covenant, so you are NOT in danger of hell fire because you did it.

You have to remember that Jesus spoke to Jews who were under the Law. The Gentiles were never under the Law. So let me give you something else to think about. Jesus ordered the disciples to go tell others His words. So at first, you would expect the preachers in Acts to pick up on Jesus’ “enhanced” law statements. We’d expect them to warn people that even sneaking a leery peek at a woman or fantasizing about the girls who work down at the local Carnality Cavern Café made them guilty of adultery. But that is not how they preached Christ in Acts. They preached forgiveness. They didn’t make a point of trying to show people who wanted to keep the letter of the Law that they were still violating the spirit of the Law. Most of Paul’s hearers weren’t Jews. They didn’t have the local Pharisees corrupting the Law and teaching doctrines of men instead, trying to justify themselves.

Paul did say that the Law was for lawbreakers – its purpose today is to lead people to Christ by showing them the impossibility of ever being “good enough” to not sin and make it to heaven on their own merits. But you don’t see much “Law” preaching after the resurrection because really, the Law is only for the self-righteous sinners to show them that their righteousness is insufficient. It also makes sense that there wasn’t much preaching of the Law because the Gentiles were never under the Law, though Paul said that even in their case, their consciences would tell them when they were in sin without an explicit law.

Why did Jesus preach the way He did to the Jews? He was using the Law to show them the impossibility of ever being saved by adhering to the Law so that they would know that they needed His salvation. In other words, “You think you can get by with this, but you’re still not righteous enough on your own!” This dealt with the self-righteous teaching attitude that the Pharisees were promoting to the people.

Despite the accusations that tend to fly, I do NOT advocate putting the four gospels in the Old Testament section of Bibles, and I do NOT advocate ignoring everything Jesus said just because it was before His death and resurrection! I believe Jesus when He said that the Law would not pass away until everything was fulfilled. But then He also said that He came to fulfill the Law – and He did it! Paul says that the Law was nailed to the cross (Colossians 2:14). That is the reason that we don’t go out trying to preach nit-picky points out of the Law, which was never given to the Gentiles anyway. The change in covenant necessitated a change in preaching.

What I do maintain is that we have to rightly divide the Word. Some statements in the Law are not for us today. They were written FOR us but not TO us. If you’ve ever eaten lobster, you’ve violated the Law of Moses. But in the New Testament we are told that every creature is OK to eat after we give thanks (1 Timothy 4:4) – there are no more dietary prohibitions. We don’t have to keep the Law with its clean/unclean rules and its Jewish feast days, although we can get some insights from them. The New Covenant changed a lot of things. But the people Jesus addressed weren’t under the New Covenant yet, so He couldn’t teach some of what Paul did about praying in tongues, gifts of the spirit, and so on.

Jesus Himself stated the incompleteness of His teaching to the Jews during His earthly ministry in John 16:12-13! “I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will shew you things to come.” We see this played out in our Bibles – Jesus did not preach Paul’s revelations about the Church. That had to wait for Paul.

So I said all that to say this – the words Jesus spoke to the Jews about the Law were intended for the Jews – we aren't under that Law today. Most of Jesus' sayings were not specific to the Law, so we should not stop reading the gospels because most of what He said DOES apply today. In fact, the rule should be to assume that EVERYTHING He said applies with equal force today unless you can find Church Age scripture that overrides it. In the case of Mark 11:26 and similar verses, the "death threat" for unforgiveness has been overridden by other New Covenant verses. I'm sure I'm not the only believer who got scared reading Mark 11:26 when I was young in the Lord. I thought that my ability to forgive others would determine God's willingness to forgive me, which by definition meant that my salvation was in question every time there was a decision to forgive someone or not. I had to learn some things since then about the "past tense" of my forgiveness and salvation. The "scare verse" in Revelation 3:16 about being puked out of Jesus' mouth was another similar case – I feared that if I was not "hot" enough, Jesus would vomit me into hell, not realizing that what He was actually talking about was closing the church in question, not stripping its believers of their individual salvation.

Because forgiveness is treated differently in the Church Age, we DO have New Testament scripture to override Jesus' statement to the Jews in Mark 11:26. What He said was correct at that time, but our covenant has changed since then.

However, the rules for praying the "prayer of faith" still include forgiving others, so you're operating afoul of the rules Jesus laid down if you try to receive things from God while you refuse to forgive others. As pointed out elsewhere, unforgiveness involves a Law mindset, whereas receiving from God requires a grace mindset. These mindsets don't mix. So unforgiveness can hinder you from receiving from God, whether it be healing, finances or something else. But unforgiveness can't hinder you as a believer from receiving forgiveness, because you ALREADY received it the moment you were born again, as many Scriptures attest.

The apostles preached that forgiveness of sins comes through Jesus Christ and what He did for us. They did NOT preach that you need to get saved and THEN do something else so that you can actually be forgiven. Nothing in Paul's extensive writings tells you to "fess up to be forgiven" or "forgive to be forgiven" or anything remotely similar. There are no instructions in the letters to the church for believers to "get" forgiveness anywhere! Forgiveness was not taught as a blessing that God withholds and issues on a sin-by-sin basis when you get a sin "under the blood" by your own works. The New Testament never talks about "getting a sin under the blood" – that term is a human invention.

When a Christian talks about needing to get something "under the blood," what he may really mean is that he wants to get it "off his conscience." But that isn't the same thing. ALL your sins are washed away by Jesus' blood. If your conscience bothers you, you either need to repent of sin that you are deliberately continuing to do or you need to realize that Jesus' blood sprinkles you from an evil conscience concerning your past sins (Hebrews 10:22).

Are you still not convinced? I saved the best for last. I have two verses for you that directly and plainly DISPROVE that a New Testament believer must forgive to be forgiven in the manner that Jesus taught the Jews in the verses in question. Both Ephesians 4:32 and Colossians 3:13 exhort BELIEVERS to forgive others AS CHRIST FORGAVE THEM! Do you see it now? It's plain as day! These verses DO NOT TEACH that IF these believers would forgive others, THEN Christ would forgive them! They teach that Christ ALREADY forgave them, and that now they need to extend that same forgiveness to other people. The pre-Church Age order for the Jews was (1) Forgive (2) Get forgiven, whereas the Church Age order for us is (1) Get forgiven (2) Forgive. We got forgiven when we got saved, and now we need to extend that same grace that we've already received to others.

I rest my case.

What About Matthew 7:1-2?

Matthew 7:1-2:

Judge not, that ye not be judged.

For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with that measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

This has nothing to do with God forgiving you. Jesus was teaching that if you don't forgive others, others won't forgive you, but if you forgive others, others will forgive you. This has only to do with your relationships with other people, not your relationship with God.

What about Romans 3:25, Which Refers to PAST Sins Being Forgiven?

Romans 3:25 does say that God remitted past sins, but the context within that very verse is that He remitted past sins at the time that He sent Jesus to be the ransom for sin. This certainly does not teach that only past, before-the-cross sins are forgiven! It certainly doesn't teach that God only forgives your "past sins" but somehow holds off on forgiving your current sins until you confess them one by one. If only past sins are forgiven, it would not be a problem anyway if you sin. Just wait one nanosecond and that sin is now in the past, making it a "past sin" anyway. So this verse doesn't have anything to do with your future sins not being included when you were forgiven.

However, the verse raises an essential and easily overlooked point. In order for Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David and others to be able to be in heaven now (which they are), Jesus had to atone for THEIR sins as well as those of people who lived after the cross and during Jesus' crucifixion! So Jesus' blood provided payment for the PAST sins of all Old Testament believers as well as for ALL sins of New Testament believers!

Does God Unforget and Unforgive Forgotten, Forgiven Sins?

This question comes up in the light of the following story:

Matthew 18:21-35:

Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times?

Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times: but, Until seventy times seven.

Therefore is the kingdom of heaven likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants.

And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him ten thousand talents. But forasmuch as he had not to pay, his lord commanded him to be sold, and his wife, and his children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.

The servant therefore fell down, and worshipped him, saying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

Then the lord of that servant was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt.

But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellow servants, which owed him an hundred pence: and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest.

And his fellow servant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

And he would not: but went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the debt.

So when his fellow servants saw what was done, they were very sorry, and came and told unto their lord all that was done.

Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that debt, because thou desiredst me:

Shouldst not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow servant, even as I had pity on thee?

And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the tormentors, till he should pay all that was due unto him.

So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses.

Based on this story, you could initially conclude that if you don't refuse to forgive someone else, you're back on the hook to pay the penalty for your own sins and you've lost your forgiveness, and thus your salvation, so you would be turned over to be tortured forever in hell.

Aside from creating a new Galatian "gospel" where your forgiveness depends upon your works, this ignores an important distinction about how sins were handled before and after the cross. Before the cross, your sins were covered. They were still there, but God covered them up. In a case like the one in Jesus' story, your sin could be uncovered again because it was still there. Today, however, it's a different story. Your sins are WASHED AWAY, not COVERED. They are GONE! God said that He would FORGET your sins (Hebrews 8:12, Hebrews 10:17). As the writer of Hebrews says, there will never have to be another offering for those sins. If your sins could come back to you, there would have to be another offering for them after they come back. But then God would have to unforget your sins. There is nothing in our New Covenant that indicates that God can ever unforget a sin that He's forgotten. So this parable was applicable to the Jews but not to the Church as far as the final outcome goes.

One "try" would be that you can lose your salvation by renouncing Jesus, so wouldn't that mean that you would have to pay for all those forgotten sins? No. Your new sins would still be enough to send you to hell, starting with the sin of renouncing Jesus' lordship! There is still no indication that forgotten sins can ever be unforgotten. How could God go back and remember what He's deliberately forgotten?

Again, if you're choking on the idea that some of what Jesus said does not apply directly to the Church, please see Unforgiveness Is Itself a Forgiven Sin, So How Could It Hinder My Healing?

Aren't you glad that God won't embarrass you in front of the whole universe when you stand at the Judgment Seat of Christ by parading to everyone your sins He's already FORGOTTEN?

If God Forgets Your Sins, How Can He Correct and Rebuke You for Them?

I thought this was a decent question that needs an answer. While all the believer's sins are pre-forgiven, they are obviously not all pre-forgotten because God does rebuke those whom He loves (Revelation 3:19) if they sin. For that matter, if some of your works will be "wood, hay and stubble" that will be burned up, how could God burn up what He doesn't remember? Wow, this gets quite thought-provoking, doesn't it?

While God says that He forgets your sins, He does not say WHEN He does it in those verses (Hebrews 8:12, Hebrews 10:17). But based on other Scriptures, it would seem that He forgets your sins forever AFTER you stand before Him. Otherwise, He could not burn up your worthless works when you stand before Him. But when they're burned up, they're destroyed. They're gone and forgotten forever.

And in NO CASE will you EVER receive condemnation from God for ANY of your sins if you are a believer (Romans 8:1) – not in this life and not in the world to come.

In this current life, God treats you as if your sins were already forgotten unless He has to correct you. You may wonder, how can sins be treated as forgotten but still be remembered? Paul gives us a Biblical example. He talks about forgetting the things that are behind (Philippians 3:13). Yet He still said that he had been a blasphemer, a persecutor and injurious, ignorantly and in unbelief (1 Timothy 1:13, so he had not completely forgotten about it). A human can't necessarily FORGET a past sin the way you'd delete a row out of a spreadsheet. You can, however, be in a place where that past sin has absolutely NO impact on your current life. Some people teach, "forgive and forget," but you can't necessarily forget something that someone did to you – but you can forgive the person.

Given that I've opened up this big can of worms, I might as well address another question you might have. (I like tough questions – the tougher, the better.) If God forgets our sins for all eternity AND God's Word is eternal and unchangeable AND God's Word details David's sins, how can David's sins ever be forgotten? I thought that was a pretty good question; I came up with it myself and I have never seen it answered. But I think David is an easy case. The "old man" David who was NOT born again ceased to exist when Jesus came and led captivity captive. The Old Testament saints were born again at that point and were made perfect. They were no longer accountable for anything that the "old man" had done any more than the real you today is accountable for anything the "old man" who used to have your name and body did. When anyone sees David in heaven, no one will see him as the man who committed adultery and murder, because he literally will not be that man – he will be a new creation in Christ who NEVER did anything like that. So he will not have an eternity of embarrassment any more than you will. The Peter you will meet in heaven is NOT the Peter who denied Christ three times before he was born again, to say nothing of trying to talk Jesus out of dying for us.

But now we can take things up another notch while we're at it! Peter and Barnabas got carried away with hypocrisy, John Mark deserted Paul and Barnabas, and Paul bad-mouthed the High Priest and had to repent. Those things all happened AFTER they became new creations in Christ and THOSE incidents are also part of the eternal Word of God. So what about them? (Aren't you glad I asked?)

Hebrews 12:22-23:

But ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels,
To the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect,

No one's born-again spirit has ever committed sin. If you're born again, your spirit is just and perfect, and it will remain that way throughout all eternity. Any sin in your life is the result of yielding to your flesh, which is not born again. But at the last trumpet, that unregenerate flesh will also be destroyed and you will have a new BODY that has never sinned. So once again, the perfect YOU that is in heaven will not be considered the person who committed sins. The perfect Paul, Peter, Barnabas and John Mark will not be considered the people who committed sins either, even though the Word of God will abide unchanged forever.

So What Does 1 John 1:9 Really Mean?

So my "Young's Extremely NON-Literal Paraphrase" of the GIST of this passage from verse 7 to verse 10 would be as follows:

If we are believers – the people who walk in the light as Jesus does – we have fellowship with each other and the blood of Jesus Christ keeps us cleansed from all sin.

If we say to others that we haven't sinned, we're kidding ourselves and we're lying – we aren't real believers because you can't get saved when you don't think you have to be saved from anything.

If we admit (to others, as in the verse above) that we HAVE sinned, we are the real believers, and we are the ones God forgives and cleanses from all unrighteousness, which is something that occurred when we were saved. This is in contrast to the phony believers in the previous verse and the next verse.

If we say to others we say that we have not sinned, we make God out to be a liar, and we're phony believers.

If you're used to the traditional interpretation of these verses, this rendering of the meaning probably seems so "far out" that it's indefensible. But if this isn't what John means, what does he mean? The idea that you receive forgiveness by confessing sins is far less defensible, as there are many Scriptures cited above that directly contradict that interpretation, while I don't know of any that contradict my reading of it. I believe that the point is that John contrasts us (the true believers) with cultists who have the false teaching that sin does not exist, as misnamed "Christian Science" teaches to this day. God saw this error coming and wrote this response to it a long time ago. Apparently there were some people called "Gnostics" back in John's day who had fallen into the same error – there is nothing new under the sun.

I would say that 1 John 1:9 and 1 Timothy 2:15, both of which are covered in this book, are probably the most difficult verses in the Bible to interpret. If you reach conclusions that are different from my conclusions, I wouldn't want to get into a fight with you over them any more than I'd get into a fight over when Jesus is coming back relative to the tribulation period. I won't label you are heretic and I hope you won't label me one. At the very least, I hope I've given you a lot of things to consider that you might never have thought of before!

And Finally, to the Healing Side of Things

If you are already CLEANSED from all unrighteousness (my point), you can go right into God's throne room and receive the healing that Jesus laid up for you.

On the other hand, if you think that you are still tainted by unrighteousness for those sins you haven't confessed yet, and thus supposedly haven't been forgiven for yet, you're going to have a tough time being bold before God to receive anything. You'll be back in the strength-sapping denominational "unworthy little worm" mentality, thinking "who am I to receive from God when I've got all this unrighteousness still to be cleansed from?"

Don't let the devil get away with the lie that you have to forfeit healing for the time being because you haven't been "good enough to deserve it" lately. In your OWN works, you AREN'T good enough to deserve it, but JESUS has already made you "good enough to deserve it" as far as God is concerned. Even if you've sinned. Even if you've sinned A LOT! If you had to earn healing by being good enough, Jesus' bloodshed would have been a waste of time.

I'm telling you the GOOD NEWS that you ARE forgiven, and thus worthy to stand before God's presence unashamed to receive every blessing that He already laid up for you in Christ!

Ruined Righteousness

Ruined Righteousness

I thank God that there is some really good teaching today on righteousness. Christians are being taught the valuable truth that righteousness is a gift that you receive when you receive Jesus, not something that you work for. They are correctly taught that they are justified, meaning just-as-if-I'd never sinned! They are correctly taught that they are just as righteous as Jesus and that their current righteousness is perfect with no need for improvement, now or ever. They are correctly taught that they are accepted in the Beloved and welcome in God's presence. They are correctly taught that Jesus paid for them to be free from a nagging sense of guilt.

Then the teacher gets into a discussion of 1 John 1:9 and ruins the whole thing!

There are at least three icky variations at this point:

Righteousness Ruiner #1

According to this variation, when you confess a specific sin to God, you are cleansed from all unrighteousness. That is supposed to sound like good news. But that HAS to mean that BEFORE you confessed that sin to God, you were NOT cleansed from all unrighteousness! It would make no sense to be cleansed if you are already completely clean. So the inescapable conclusion is that when you sin, you lose your righteousness and have to get it back by confessing that sin. If you still had even one iota of unrighteousness, it would mean that sin makes you stop being the righteousness of God in Christ. If you need to be cleansed even in the slightest, you are NOT as righteous as Jesus. Your righteousness CAN improve, so it isn't perfect after all. It is NOT just as if you'd never sinned. If you'd never sinned, you would not need to be cleansed from ANY unrighteousness!

This teaching ruins your righteousness. Now rather than being STRICTLY a gift from God, YOU have to do something to maintain and perfect it – stay out of sin and confess your sin if you DO sin.

It is very hard to understand in this scenario how you could BE the righteousness of God in Christ. Either you ARE the righteousness of God or you AREN'T. You can't be stuck somewhere in the middle because you sinned. Righteousness is a binary proposition – you either have Jesus' perfect righteousness or you don't. To sum up Righteousness Ruiner #1, sin destroys your righteousness and you have to do something to get it back.

Righteousness Ruiner #2

Perhaps seeing the obvious problem with Righteousness Ruiner #1, a second variation says that you don't lose your righteousness when you sin. Instead, it says that you keep your right standing but you temporarily lose your fellowship with God. Then confessing your sin gets you back into proper fellowship with God.

This is interesting (though not in a good way) for two reasons. First, the verse in question (1 John 1:9) doesn't say a thing about fellowship! So it's hard to see how you can get a doctrine about fellowship from a verse that never says anything about fellowship from any angle. You'd be adding to the verse, which would have an adverse effect on your interpretation! Second, John just got through telling you that our fellowship is with the Father and with His Son, Jesus Christ (1 John 1:3), so it is really hard to understand how John could suddenly make a U-turn and say that sinning (which we ALL still do) takes away our fellowship. John never said anything in that chapter about our fellowship with the Father and with Jesus being subject to revocation. John wasn't perfect when he wrote his letter, and HE still had fellowship with the Father and the Son anyway. So why shouldn't you?

It makes you wonder – given that you are seated with Christ in heavenly places (Ephesians 2:6) and that Christ sits at the right hand of God (Mark 16:19, Hebrews 10:12) how could God not hear you when you're sitting right next to Him? Nothing in the New Testament teaches that you lose your heavenly seating when you sin, which we all do.

If your righteousness can't keep you in fellowship with God, what good is it?

I address the horribleness of the idea that God gives you the silent treatment when you sin in the discussion What 1 John 1:9 Really Means. For the purpose of this discussion, I want to emphasize that if sin takes away your fellowship with God, things are NOT just as if you'd never sinned. If you'd never sinned, you would certainly not have lost the right to fellowship freely with God! God and Jesus are always on speaking terms, so if you have ANY impediment to your ability to talk with God, you are NOT just as righteous as Jesus and your righteousness has room to improve. You are not as welcome as before in God's presence, certainly not as welcome as JESUS is, and YOU have to do something to fix the situation. Your righteousness has been ruined again according to this teaching. Now it depends on YOU, not just on Jesus' finished work. Bummer.

Righteousness Ruiner #3

Seeing the obvious problems with these other positions, the teacher asserts that you have positional or legal forgiveness, but now you need "familial forgiveness." This is a new kind of forgiveness invented by the teacher (or a preacher whose book the teacher read) that is never mentioned in the Bible. The Bible doesn't mention any different kinds or levels of forgiveness. You're either forgiven or you aren't.

But your righteousness just got ransacked again. It is NOT just as if you'd never sinned. If you'd never sinned, you would not need familial forgiveness, whatever on earth that is. If you are in lack of familial forgiveness because you've sinned and haven't confessed it yet, your standing with God has room for improvement, which means that you do NOT have perfect right standing with God at the moment. It depends on YOUR efforts again, so it is no longer strictly a gift as God told you that it is in Romans 5:17. Rats! It was so much nicer when your righteousness was all based on grace without your efforts to maintain it!

The Common Issue

If sin can change your righteousness, righteousness is no longer a gift. It now depends on your works – how good you are at avoiding and confessing sin. In other words, your righteousness is now LAW-based, not GRACE-based. This negates the whole New Testament message of grace!

Someone might object, “If you sin, even you admit that God will correct you, so He would not be dealing with you “just as if you’d never sinned.” But correction and right standing are separate issues. You do NOT lose your right standing when you sin. If you did, your righteousness would be a matter of your works and not purely God’s grace. God in His love (not His anger) will correct you if you are missing the mark in any area. But you are still welcome in His presence – accepted in the Beloved because of Jesus’ shed blood – even if God is correcting you about something.

Others might object, “Jesus said that they are blessed who hunger and thirst for righteousness. Thus, we should hunger and thirst for it rather than claiming to have obtained it all.” But this is where we have to consider that this was a pre-resurrection statement. Those who hungered and thirsted for righteousness would find it in Christ after His resurrection, and they would be filled with that righteousness. References to righteousness in the church age refer to something that we have obtained as a gift, not something that we can get more of if we’re hungry and thirsty enough.

If some teachers would just get 1 John 1:9 right, they would have some awesome righteousness teaching instead of generally very good righteousness teaching.

The Happy Ending

Revelation 21:4

Revelation 22:2-3

On the new earth that will be the eternal home of every Christian, there will be no sickness. There will be no gifts of healings because no one will need them. No one will need bodily miracles, so there will be no miracle crusades. No one will be raised from the dead by the gift of faith because no one will die.

For the Christian, death is not a real defeat. It is far better to be present with the Lord.

One thing is certain. Regardless of whether or not you believe in divine healing in this life, and regardless of whether or not you ever receive healing from God in this life, there is a happy ending in the Bible: All Christians will get to walk in perfect health forever!

Free Refills

The Bible talks about being baptized with the Holy spirit, but it also talks about being filled with the Holy Spirit. This distinction has confused people, so let's straighten it out.

You only need to be baptized with the Holy Spirit once. The disciples in the upper room were baptized with the Holy Spirit on the Day of Pentecost. However, some of those disciples, as well as others, were "filled" with the Holy Spirit on other occasions.

The first question this provokes is, "Why would you need to be filled with the Holy Spirit AGAIN if you're already filled with the Holy Spirit?" The traditional answer is, "You leak!" But I can't accept that answer. Spirit-filled people were baptized with a PERSON, not a POWER. They received power after the Person of the Holy Spirit came upon them. If they had only received power, I can see picturing them as rechargeable batteries who needed periodic recharges because their power drains out when they minister it to others. But even then, Jesus didn't say that PONDS of living water would flow through us – He said that RIVERS of living water would gush out of our bellies (John 7:37-39). A pond could run out of water, but RIVERS will keep having more water flowing into them from their sources. You don't deplete a river just because you get a bucket of water out of it as the water flows past you.

There is no such thing as going from having the Holy Spirit in you to having only 81.2% of the Holy Spirit in you after you minister to someone else. That makes no more sense than saying that 81.2% of you went to church last Sunday. You can't divide a PERSON! Thus, you do not "leak" the Holy Spirit.

What you can do is be more or less receptive to the Holy Spirit and be more or less aware of His presence. You can allow Him to have His way in you more or less depending on how much value you value Him as opposed to fleshly things. When people in the Bible were "filled with the Spirit," the Spirit had His way in them.

Even people before the New Covenant was established could be "filled" with the Holy Spirit although they could not be "baptized" with the Holy Spirit and speak with other tongues.

John the Baptist was "filled" with the Holy Spirit. We see that he spoke for God and pointed people to Jesus.

Luke 1:15:

For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb.

One hallmark of someone who is filled with the Holy Spirit is supernatural boldness. John was totally unafraid of the religious leaders of the day, some of whom he referred to as the sons of snakes!

Matthew 3:7:

But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?

Then Elizabeth was “filled” with the Holy Spirit. (The next thing she did after that was prophesy.)

Luke 1:41-45:

And it came to pass, that, when Elisabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the babe leaped in her womb; and Elisabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost:

And she spake out with a loud voice, and said, Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.

And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?

For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy.

And blessed is she that believed: for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord.

Zacharias was also filled with the Holy Spirit, and he also prophesied when that happened.

Luke 1:67:

And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying,

(A fairly lengthy prophecy follows this verse.)

In Acts, the believers were baptized with the Holy Spirit and they immediately prophesied to people in languages that they had never learned. This was their initial “filling” of the Holy Spirit.

Acts 2:4:

And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

From that point on, they were baptized with the Holy Spirit. Jesus referred to this baptism as a one-time event, though as we shall see, being filled was not a one-time event.

Acts 1:5:

For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

Peter had this to say after the Gentiles at Cornelius’s house were baptized with the Holy Spirit when they were saved (which usually did not happen at the same time):

Acts 11:16:

Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.

Peter knew that they had received the baptism with the Holy Spirit because they spoke in tongues. (See How to Be Baptized with the Holy Spirit for more the link between the Spirit baptism and tongues.)

A couple chapters after Peter was baptized with the Holy Spirit, he was filled with the Holy Spirit and he challenged the religious leaders boldly:

Acts 4:8-13:

Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel, If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.

Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.

This is an example of something that Jesus talked about. He told His disciples that they would be brought before the authorities, but not to premeditate what to say, but rather to allow the Holy Spirit to give them the words. No wonder they were “filled with the Holy Ghost” when they were in that situation!

Mark 13:9-11:

But take heed to yourselves: for they shall deliver you up to councils; and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten: and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them.

And the gospel must first be published among all nations.

But when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought beforehand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate: but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye: for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost.

In Acts 4:29-33, the believers prayed for BOLDNESS and got it! They were “filled” with the Holy Spirit when they did so.

We see that even biblically, the term “filled with the Holy Spirit” can sometimes refer to being baptized with the Holy Spirit if the person has not yet been baptized with the Holy Spirit:

Acts 9:17

Paul was ALREADY baptized with the Holy Spirit in the verse above, but one day he was “filled” with the Holy Spirit and spoke judgment over a man who was opposing the gospel:

Acts 13:6-12

We see that being full of JOY goes along with being filled with the Holy Spirit:

Acts 13:52:

And the disciples were filled with joy, and with the Holy Ghost.

Romans 14:17:

For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

So what we can learn from all this? Even after you have been baptized with the Holy Spirit, the Holy Spirit can rise up big inside you. This happened in the certain cases above. If the discussion stopped here, you would be left with the impression that it is totally up to God when such a Holy Ghost “refill” happens to you. But that isn’t true.

Ephesians 5:18:

And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit;

Now THAT’s interesting! You are COMMANDED to be filled with the Spirit. That means that you must have a part to play when it comes to determining whether or not you walk full of the Spirit! We can see some things that go along with walking full of the Spirit – singing God-oriented songs, giving thanks, and being submissive to others:

Ephesians 5:19-21

One of the characteristics that qualified someone to be called – even as a DEACON – was being full of the Holy Spirit!

Acts 6:3:

Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

Stephen was one of those chosen. It is never directly revealed what Stephen did to stay full of the Holy Spirit, but his later discourse to the religious rulers gives us a strong indirect hint – that man seemed to be a walking Bible who could quote the whole history of Israel from memory!

The more you feed on the Word, the more you will build up your spirit man and stay “full of the Holy Spirit.”

Before moving from this topic, note that even JESUS needed to be filled with the Holy Spirit (in the Jordan River) before He could go out effectively and minister:

Luke 4:1:

And Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness,

Jude exhorts us to pray in the Holy Spirit (which would definitely involve praying in tongues):

Jude 20:

But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost,

While you could argue that this verse does not DIRECTLY prove that if you pray in the Holy Spirit, it will build you up – it could be talking of 2 separate actions – it would seem that these actions would at least logically flow together. However, you could make a strong case that Jude meant that you DO build yourself up when you pray in the Holy Spirit because another verse explicitly says so:

1 Corinthians 14:4:

He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself; but he that prophesieth edifieth the church.

What can we make of all this?

First, there is only one baptism with the Holy Spirit – once you are Spirit-baptized, you don't need to be Spirit-baptized again.

Second, there may be times when the Holy Spirit “rises up big inside you” and you sense His anointing to do something, such as prophesy.

Third, there is a sense in which we all need to do whatever we have to do to STAY filled with the Holy Spirit rather than walk around in the flesh. Living a life of praise, thanksgiving and humility, building yourself up by praying in other tongues, and feeding on the Word will all help you do that. If you choose to do these things, your joy level should be high. If you neglect spiritual things and live in the flesh, your joy level will be low, and you'll be filled with the mulligrubs instead of being filled with the Spirit.

By His grace, God has given you the ability to STAY full of the Holy Spirit. Refills are all free!

How to Be Saved from Your Sins

There is a prevailing, but incorrect, notion in the world today about how to be saved. This notion is that God will weigh your good deeds against your bad deeds when you die and then decide whether or not you make it to heaven. In other words, He will credit you for being honest about getting too much change at the fast food restaurant, but then He will offset that with the fact that you lied to your fourth grade teacher once about why you didn't do your homework. He will credit you for giving ten dollars to the Salvation Army to help the poor, but then He will offset that with the fact that you skipped church to play golf on your 23rd birthday. He will put everything on two sides of a scale and see which way it tips. Let's see – do you make it?

Fortunately, that is not how it works. You can know for sure that you are going to heaven before you face your final judgment. The fact is that God will not weigh your deeds to determine if you are “good enough” to make it into heaven. You aren't good enough. God's standard is perfection, and you have fallen short, as everyone else has. “For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God” (Romans 3:23).

That is why God sent Jesus. Jesus lived a sinless life. But at the end of His life, He allowed Himself to be tortured and killed as punishment for your sins. God punished Him as if He had committed every sin you have committed and will ever commit. By bearing your punishment, He freed you from having to bear eternal punishment yourself – if you receive Him.

Jesus was raised from the dead and lives today, seated at the right hand of God. He is no mere historical figure, but a living Lord.

Eternal life is yours when you receive Jesus Christ. Receiving Him is not a mental assent to what He did, but a conscious decision to yield control of your life to the One who died for your sins and then rose from the dead. You are yielding your life to a living person, not to a historical figure's set of teachings. That is where Christianity differs from other religions. It is the only religion whose founder was raised from the dead, never to see death again. When you receive Him, you become a child of God, and Jesus comes to live inside you.

There is no other way to be saved. Popular culture likes to think that the world's religions are all different roads that lead to the same destination. That is almost correct. Buddhism, Hinduism, Islam and other religions are different roads that lead to the same place – the lake of fire. Only Christians go to heaven, because only Christians have forgiveness for their sins. Jesus declared plainly, “I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh to the Father, but by me” (John 14:6). Therefore, you cannot come to God through Buddha, Confucius, Mohammed, or anyone else. If you want to live with God eternally, you must receive Jesus. Otherwise, you will not be saved and you will be separated from God forever. As Peter so boldly preached, “Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved” (Acts 4:12). Jesus has the only name by which you must be saved.

You will not be reincarnated and get another chance. It is “appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment” (Hebrews 9:27). The choice you make in this life will last forever, and there is no second chance.

Who is Jesus?

Jesus has always existed with God and has always been God. He did not start existing when He was born of Mary.

“In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made.” – John 1:1-2.

“And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth” – John 1:14.

“Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am.” – John 8:58.

“And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.” – John 17:5.

John the Baptist was born before Jesus (see the first 2 chapters of Luke), yet declared that He who came after him (Jesus) was preferred before him, because He was before him (John 1:15, John 1:30).

Why should you trust your eternal future to the words of Jesus? Because Jesus was the Messiah, the Christ, the Anointed One. He said so Himself.

“The woman saith unto him, I know that Messiah cometh, which is called Christ: when he is come, he will tell us all things. Jesus saith unto her, I that speak unto thee am he.” – John 4:25-26

“And Simon Peter answered and said, “Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.” – Matthew 16:16-17

“Jesus heard that they had cast him out; and when he had found him, he said unto him, Dost thou believe in the Son of God? He answered and said, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him? And Jesus said unto him, Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee. And he said, Lord I believe. And he worshipped him.” – John 9:35-38

“Again the high priest asked him, and said unto him, Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed? And Jesus said, I am: and ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.” – Mark 14:61-62

Jesus Came to Earth to Save Us from Our Sins

“Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.” – John 1:29.

“Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners” – 1 Timothy 1:15

“But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Much more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him.” – Romans 5:8-9.

“But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.” – Isaiah 53:5-6

You Can Know Your Eternal Future Now!

Your eternal future can be determined right now. Fortunately, if you are going to burn in hell fire, you can change your future! But there is no question where you are going. If you believe in Christ, you are going to heaven. If you don't, you are going to hell. These are both temporary stops on the way to different eternal homes. Technically, your eternal home will not be either heaven or hell. It will either be the new earth (Revelation 21:1-3) or the lake of fire into which hell itself will be cast (Revelation 20:14-15). Without describing both in detail, suffice it to say that the renewed earth is the more pleasant of the two choices.

You have probably heard John 3:16, or are at least aware of the passage from bumper stickers and banners at televised sporting events. But you may not have read the next two verses, and you should!

John 3:16-18:

For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.

He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God.

You see, you are already under a death sentence if you are not in Christ. You stand condemned right now. (Or sit condemned, if you're sitting at your computer.) It is no mystery what will happen to you.

By believing in the Son of God, you can have eternal life. This life does not start later, after you die. It starts the instant you receive Jesus Christ and are born again of the Holy Spirit. Once you do this, your eternal destiny changes. You get to be with God forever. You are no longer under the condemnation that awaits those who have not believed in the name of the Son of God. You have literally passed from spiritual death to spiritual life.

“Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life.” – John 5:24

“Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.” – John 8:51

You Must Be Born Again!

To be admitted into heaven, you must be “born again.” This term is used so frequently today that its obvious original meaning is often lost. You must literally be born a second time to enter heaven. This is not speaking of a physical birth, but a spiritual birth. Your spirit must be reborn. Jesus said so Himself.

John 3:3-8:

Jesus answered and said unto him [Nicodemus], Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.

Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother’s womb, and be born?

Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

That which is born of flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.

Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again.

The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is everyone that is born of the Spirit.

Jesus said that you must be born of the Spirit. You need to be a newly-born spirit that was never in existence before you called on Jesus to save you. You will keep the same body and the same mind, but your spirit will be reborn. This work of the Holy Spirit takes place when you receive Jesus.

This is popular, but wrong: “We are all brothers and sisters, and we are all God’s children.” While we are all God’s creations, only born-again Christians – people who have received God’s Son – are God’s children. “But as many as received him [Jesus Christ], to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name: Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God” (John 1:12). Note the word become in this passage. When you receive Jesus Christ, you become a child of God, which you previously were not. If someone says he became a professional athlete, it is obvious that he previously was not a professional athlete, then things changed and he was a professional athlete at some point. You have to believe in Jesus and be born of God. Then you become one of God’s children. If you fail to do this, you remain God’s creation but you are not God’s child. You cannot have a father-child relationship with Him without Jesus.

Eternal Life Is Free, But Only on God's Terms

Eternal life is a gift. You receive it. You do not work for it or earn it. Your sin would earn wages, namely damnation. Nothing you can do can earn eternal life. You are completely helpless in your own strength to save yourself. The only way to receive eternal life is on God's gift basis. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Romans 6:23). "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost" (Titus 3:5). "For by grace are ye saved through faith" (Ephesians 2:8).

Galatians 2:16:

Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.

Knocking on doors does not save you. Being baptized or sprinkled as an infant does not save you. Being a member of a church and giving and serving does not save you. Many people's names are on church membership rolls but not in the Lamb's Book of Life, which is the only place that really counts. There is no work you can do that can save you and make you righteous. Eternal life is free, but it is available solely on a gift basis from God because of what Jesus Christ did for you. If you are trusting anything other than the blood sacrifice of Jesus Christ to save you, you are not saved yet – but you can be!

You Can Be Born Again Right Now!

There is no standard "sinner's prayer" in the Bible. You can use your own words to tell God your decision to receive Jesus Christ. You must believe that Jesus rose from the dead and make Him the Lord of your life.

Romans 10:8-10:

But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach;

That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.

For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

You must believe that God raised Jesus from the dead because you cannot ask a dead man to be your Lord. You could not ask George Washington to be the Lord of your life. Only a living person can be Lord. Jesus rose from the dead. He is seated at God's right hand today. He is very much alive, so He is able to be your Lord if you ask Him to be.

Then you must confess Him with your mouth. That means that you must state that Jesus is your Lord. To call Him Lord, you must turn over your life to Him. You must be willing to tell anyone who asks that Jesus is Lord of your life now. If you want it to be a secret, you are not ready to get saved, because it is with your mouth that confession is made unto salvation. If you're not willing to say it, you don't really mean it or believe it yet.

When you give Jesus lordship over your life, you are born again at that moment. Your old sinful nature is destroyed and replaced with a new nature that wants to serve and please God. Jesus comes to dwell in your heart. You become (literally) God's temple in the earth. God Himself moves in and lives in you! As awesome and impossible as it may sound, the Creator of all things comes and dwells in you.

Then What?

Being part of the Body of Christ is not something you do on your own. You need to find a local fellowship where you can be taught God's Word, be with other believers, and have a place to serve Jesus and take part in His Great Commission to tell the world the gospel. Do not even consider a church that does not explicitly believe that you must be born again, as Jesus taught. I would seek out a church that believes that healing was provided in Christ's atonement as well. Otherwise, it is hard to get healed while being taught that healing is not for everyone today. (Beware: Many churches say they "believe in healing" if you ask it that way. Find out if they really believe that Jesus paid for healing to be made available to everyone or if they just believe that God wants to heal some people some of the time.) Good churches have popped up all over the place and are not nearly as hard to find as they used to be. If your church does not teach that you can be born again, leave it. Do not stay thinking that you will enlighten the others. I have seen people try to do this, and you won't affect them – they will just drag you down. If they are not preaching the gospel, they have no right to expect that you will support them with your finances, even if Great Grandpa went to the same church.

Read your Bible. You probably have one, but if you don't, you can get one almost anywhere, and you can always read it online, too. I've used different versions over the years. The original King James Version is very faithful to the original language, but I doth find that the old-style wording annoyeth and confuseth at times. The New King James Version is similar but uses more modern language. When you're first starting out, I would use one of these so that you can get close to what was originally written in Greek and Hebrew. While there are many "paraphrases" out there, they are more useful as commentaries than they are in telling you exactly what God said through the different authors. I'm not against them, but if you're going to seriously study Scripture, use something that sticks as closely as possible to the original text without trying to tell you the interpretations of the particular author. (If perhaps thou wonderdst, I didst use the original King James because verily, it hath no copyright restrictions; one must needs make no royalty payment as with others if thou exceedeth a legal verse count limit that I verily did exceed in this book.) Perhaps the ultimate in literalness would be Young's Literal Translation, but reading transliterated Hebrew and Greek text using the word order that Hebrew and Greek people would speak it can be tedious and it doesn't "flow" too well if you're trying to read through the Bible. It's useful for referencing the original-language text but it's not so great for bedtime reading.

I would suggest that you start with the gospel of John, although any of the gospels would be fine. I would read the entire New Testament before venturing into the Old Testament. I know a fellow who got saved and figured he would read his Bible, so he started with Genesis. About halfway through Leviticus, he said he thought he got the wrong Bible – a Jewish Bible or something – because of all the Jewish sacrifice laws. He got confused! The Old Testament will make more sense to you after you have read the comments on the Old Testament found in the New Testament itself. Then you won't wonder if you can eat ham and lobster and you won't think that you need to slaughter a sheep on an altar somewhere.

In this electronic age, I must point out that no online forum is a substitute for Christian fellowship in a local body of believers. No TV personality is a substitute for a local pastor who is there when you need him. I am not against Christian TV or online Christian chats, but they are supplements, not substitutes, for involvement in a local church.

Look up things for yourself in the Bible. Never take anyone's word (including mine) for something until you can see it in the Bible. Before you accept it, you must know that God said it in the Bible, not just that some man said it from a pulpit. If you adopt this attitude, it will keep you from believing a lot of junk that circulates in the Body of Christ.

Healing is only one part of your redemption. You won't grow just by reading about healing in this book, although I would encourage you to learn all that you can about it. In the local church, you will learn about walking in love, and you'll surely have opportunities to put it into practice! (The other people there did not become mature Christians overnight any more than you will.) You will learn what belongs to you in Christ. You will have a place to serve and honor God and be with people who will love you and care about your well-being.

Once you are born again, you should now receive the baptism with the Holy Spirit. That is something separate that is covered in the discussion below.

How to Be Baptized with the Holy Spirit

By the time you finish reading this topic, you will recognize the fallacy of the following traditions of men, all of which are propagated by many local churches today:

- “You already received all there is of the Holy Spirit when you were born again.”
- “The Holy Spirit baptism is for some, but not all, believers.”
- “You have to tarry at the altar until God fills you with the Holy Spirit.”
- “God won’t give you the Holy Spirit until you are holy in your conduct.”
- “You should only speak in tongues when the Holy Spirit expressly moves you to do so.”
- “Tongues should only be used for evangelism in unknown languages, not all the time.”
- “Tongues are not for today.”

You won’t believe any of this nonsense once you see that the Bible has to say about this wonderful gift. If you are a born-again believer, Jesus wants to baptize you with the Holy Spirit! This gift is available on the same grace basis as forgiveness from sin.

Hear the Word!

Faith comes by hearing the Word of God. Read for yourself what God says about the baptism with the Holy Spirit:

Matthew 3:11:

[John the Baptist speaking] I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire:

Mark 1:7-8:

[Referring to John the Baptist] And preached, saying, there cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose. I indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost.

Luke 3:16:

John answered, saying unto them all, I indeed baptize you with water; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire:

John 1:33-34:

[John the Baptist speaking] And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.

(By the way, very few things are contained in all four gospels, but being baptized with the Holy Spirit is mentioned in Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, as shown in the 4 passages above.)

Luke 11:9-13:

And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent?

Or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion?

If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?

Luke 24:49:

And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.

Mark 16:17

And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues;

John 7:37-39:

In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink.

He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

(But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)

John 14:16-17:

And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.

John 14:26:

But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.

John 15:26:

But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me:

John 16:7:

Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you.

Acts 1:5-8:

[Jesus speaking] For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?

And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power.

But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

Acts 2:1-39 (excerpted):

And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.

And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

And there were at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

...

And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this?

Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine.

But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.

But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel;

And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams:

And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy:

And I will shew wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke:

The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come:

And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

...

This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses.

Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear.

...

Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus for [literally because] of the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

Acts 8:5-20:

Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them.

And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did.

For unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them: and many taken with palsies, and that were lame, were healed.

And there was great joy in that city.

But there was a certain man, called Simon, which beforetime in the same city used sorcery, and bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one:

To whom they all have heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God.

And to him they had regard, because that of long time he had bewitched them with sorceries.

But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.

Then Simon himself believed also: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the miracles and signs which were done.

Now then the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John:

Who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost:

(For as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.)

Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost.

And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money,

Saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost.

But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money.

Acts 10:44-48:

While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.

And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost.

For they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God. Then answered Peter,

Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?

And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.

Acts 11:15-17:

[Peter relating his experience with Cornelius] And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning.

Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost,

Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ; what was I, that I could withstand God?

Acts 19:1-6:

And it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ephesus: and finding certain disciples,

He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed [literally having believed]? And they said unto him, We have not so much heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.

And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism.

Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.

When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied.

1 Corinthians 14:5:

I would that ye all spake with tongues, but rather that ye prophesied: for greater is he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues, except he interpret, that the church may receive edifying.

1 Corinthians 14:15:

What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also: I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also.

1 Corinthians 14:18:

I thank my God, I speak with tongues more than ye all:

Galatians 3:2:

This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?

(Notes to those ministering along these lines: Galatians 3:14 is sometimes used as an additional “proof text” of receiving the Spirit through faith, but that is out of context. The passage refers to the promise of [made by] the Spirit to Abraham. Those opposed to Pentecostal teaching rightly point out that this is a misapplication of the verse. Also, Ephesians 5:18’s command to be filled with the Spirit is talking about a continuous process, not the initial baptism with the Spirit, so it should not be used for this purpose either. However, the fact that someone might use a verse incorrectly in no way invalidates the Scriptural proof that the baptism with the Holy Spirit is an experience subsequent to salvation, as demonstrated by the many passages above.)

Having the Spirit in You vs. Being Baptized with the Spirit

When you are born again, the Holy Spirit comes to dwell inside you:

Romans 8:9:

But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.

Romans 8:15-16:

For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father.

The Spirit itself [Himself] beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God.

In John 20:22, Jesus breathed on His disciples and said “Receive ye the Holy Ghost.” Yet they were not baptized with the Holy Ghost until Acts 2!

We can see that being baptized with the Spirit is an experience after salvation in the New Testament. The disciples in the upper room, the men of Samaria, the men at Ephesus, and Paul himself were baptized with the Spirit after being saved. (Paul was already called Brother, and Paul had already baptized the men at Ephesus before they received the Holy Spirit through the laying on of hands. Paul would never have baptized them in water if they were not believers before they were baptized with the Holy Spirit.) One exception was that at Cornelius’s house, they were saved and baptized with the Holy Spirit either simultaneously or very close to it.

Who Can Be Baptized with the Spirit?

Simple answer: Any believer! Jesus said that the Father would give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him. Peter preached that the gift of the Holy Spirit was for you, your children, those who are far off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call (that's you, if you're saved). The Gentiles at Cornelius's house did not have to become mega-holy in conduct first; they received the Holy Spirit right away! (They were completely holy as far as their legal standing with God once they were saved.) No New Testament preacher ever said that you must qualify somehow (other than being born again) to be baptized with the Spirit. It is a gift, like salvation, offered to anyone. You may encounter a tongue-talking nitwit out there who doesn't bear much Christian fruit. That person received the Holy Spirit not because he deserved to, but because he asked. That is just as well; if everything were on a merit basis, we'd all be going to the eternal lake of fire, anyway.

It is true that you must be holy before you can receive the Holy Spirit, but not for the reason that most people think. Most people think about holiness in conduct, but you only have to be holy in standing with God – and that happened the instant that you were born again and were recreated in righteousness and true holiness (Ephesians 4:24). If you're saved, you're holy enough to receive the Holy Spirit!

Remember Galatians 3:2 above. You receive the Spirit by faith, not by works.

The fact that as many as the Lord our God shall call may receive the Spirit is proof that this is still for today. The usual "explain-away" verse that traditional people use is 1 Corinthians 13:10, where Paul says, "But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." The objector assumes that "the perfect" means the completion of the New Testament. Turn on the news tonight and you will discover that the perfect has not yet come. Besides, when the perfect comes, we will fully know, just as we are known, and that statement obviously does not apply to anyone today. I don't know everything fully and neither does anyone else.

1 Corinthians 13:12:

For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.

Also, Jesus told His disciples that they would be His witnesses "to the uttermost part of the earth" in the same verse (Acts 1:8) in which He told them that they would receive power after the Holy Spirit came upon them. Did these disciples preach in Tierra Del Fuego? In Nunavut? In Yakutsk? In Tasmania? In Cape Agulhas? No. So it remained to future generations to fulfill Jesus' command to go everywhere and take His good news to the "uttermost part of the earth." Thus, the Holy Spirit was still needed after all the original apostles died, and He is still needed today!

It is important to realize that an unsaved person does NOT qualify to be baptized with the Holy Spirit, so don't lay hands on anyone who isn't saved to try to get him to receive the Holy Spirit! Jesus said that the world cannot receive Him in John 14:17 cited above. He also told a parable about not putting new wine in old containers:

Luke 5:37-38:

And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles, and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish.

But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved.

The new wine of the Holy Spirit only belongs in new containers!

Why You Need to be Baptized with the Spirit

Jesus Himself, who became totally human while remaining totally divine, only did miracles after the Holy Spirit came upon Him. If Jesus needed the Holy Spirit to do these miracles, how much more do we?

By the way, the accounts in the so-called “lost books of the Bible” such as Jesus changing the color of a woman’s dress while a child are a bunch of bunk. The real Bible says that Jesus did not do any miracles until He turned water into wine at Cana (as stated in John 2:11). If you own any of those “lost books” that are inconsistent with the real books of the Bible, I suggest you make them truly consistent with their names and lose them.

We can see several benefits of being baptized with the Spirit in Scripture:

The primary one is power for evangelism. God has always commissioned His preachers to perform signs and wonders to confirm His word. He considers this so important that Jesus told His disciples not to leave Jerusalem until they received the Holy Spirit (Luke 24:49). We are supposed to preach in the power of the Spirit, not with mere logical arguments of men. Anyone can argue, but not everyone can demonstrate the power of God! In our day, contrary to Jesus’ instructions, most ministers go out with no Holy Spirit power to back them up. That’s why they don’t get better results.

The baptism with the Holy Spirit is a door into operating in the manifestations of the Spirit found in 1 Corinthians chapters 12 through 14. It is the will of God for all believers, including you, to be used by the Holy Spirit in these ways. 1 Corinthians 12:7: “But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal.” 1 Corinthians 12:11: “But all these [nine manifestations of the Spirit] worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will.” You can’t quote these verses correctly and leave yourself out!

Along with this comes boldness. Peter denied the Lord three times before Jesus was crucified, but you can read in Acts how he boldly confronted the Jewish leaders who sent Jesus to His death. Peter was a different man after he got baptized with the Holy Spirit!

Another benefit is the ability to pray by the Spirit in languages you don’t know (“tongues”). This is so vital, I don’t know how any Christian gets by without this! (Many don’t seem to get by very well.) When you have no idea how to pray in your own understanding, you can still pray perfect prayers to God about situations. This does not replace knowing the Word and praying in your native language, as 1 Corinthians 14:15 above should make obvious. God wants you to pray both ways!

When you really understand how God has set up this earth, the benefit of praying in tongues becomes even more obvious. God gave the earth to man (Psalm 115:16). He didn't take it back even after Adam's sin that gave Satan get a foothold here. Because God delegated the running of the earth to man, He needs man's permission to move here. That's why prayer is important – it authorizes God to move on the earth because MAN has given Him permission. If the best you can pray is what you can figure out with your head, that is all you can authorize God to do. But if you pray in other tongues by the Holy Spirit, you can authorize God to do things on the earth that are BEYOND your understanding – and they are allowed because a MAN authorized the action!

Jude 20 talks about “building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost.” Praying in tongues does not give you faith, but it builds up your inner man. Given that Paul equates praying in the Spirit to praying in other tongues, we can see that you can build yourself up by praying in other tongues. I am convinced that most Christians live far below their privileges because they do not hook up with the Holy Spirit in this way.

A Command, Not an Option

God wants all believers to walk full of the Spirit. If you do not desire to have the Holy Spirit manifest Himself through you, you are out of the will of God in that area. God commands you to desire spiritual gifts and to walk in love. “Follow after charity, and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy” (1 Corinthians 14:1).

Preachers should not enter the ministry until they are baptized with the Spirit. That was Jesus' standard. I am aware that many ministers do some good works without being baptized in the Spirit, but I am quoting the Bible standard, not experience. They could be even more effective filled with the Spirit with the gifts of the Spirit operating through them. Jesus considered the baptism with the Holy Spirit to be essential to ministry. So should we!

Tarrying for the Holy Spirit?

An old, but unbiblical, practice is to “tarry at the altar” asking God to give you the Holy Spirit. No one ever tarried for the Holy Spirit after the day of Pentecost. The time before the initial outpouring on the day of Pentecost is the one time in the New Testament when believers had to wait to receive the Holy Spirit. Jesus told them to tarry at Jerusalem. If you believe that this command is for today, you will have to go to Jerusalem to do your tarrying.

Jesus said in Luke 11:13 (cited above) that your Father would give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him. God gives good things to His children who ask. He does not tell them to wait for some mysterious reason. He won't hand you a stone or a scorpion. He won't let you get some evil spirit when you ask for the Holy Spirit! God knew that some people would try to incite fear by teaching that if you try to receive the Holy Spirit today, you'll end up with an evil spirit, so He put these verses in there to put us at ease.

Here is the main point for you to get: The Holy Spirit has already been given! John 7:39 (cited above) says that (at that time) the Spirit “was not yet given” because Jesus was not yet glorified. Now Jesus has been glorified, so the Spirit has been given! Jesus promised that He would send Him (John 14:16, John 14:17, John 14:26, John 15:26, John 16:7). As far as God is concerned, He has already sent the Holy Spirit! Note that in Acts 19:1-6 above, Paul asked the Ephesians if they had received the Holy Ghost. He didn’t ask if God had given them the Holy Ghost. God had already given Him, it was up to them to receive Him.

The Holy Spirit Is a Person, Not a Force

Remember, the Holy Spirit is not “power” or “tongues” or a “force.” He is the third member of the Trinity! You are not simply receiving power or tongues, you are being filled with a member of the Godhead himself! He is a person. The preachers in Acts did not talk about receiving “it” – they talked about receiving the Holy Ghost.

By the way, there is no difference between the Holy Ghost and the Holy Spirit. The Holy Ghost is the King James English version of His name and the Holy Spirit is a more modern translation. The King James Version could have improved on Romans 8:16 by saying that the Spirit HIMSELF, not ITSELF, bears witness with our spirits. (Today’s translations get this right; there is no indication from the Greek that “itself” should be used instead of “Himself.”) Perhaps this unfortunate translation decision in the KJV has led some people to think of the Holy Spirit as “It” instead of “Him.”

Baptism vs. Filling

You only need to be baptized with the Spirit once, just as you only need to be born again once. However, the fact that you were once baptized in the Spirit is no guarantee that you will always lead a Spirit-filled life. You are responsible to stay filled with the Spirit. The men in the Bible were never baptized in the Spirit more than once, but they were “filled with the Spirit” on subsequent occasions, and so it should be for us.

Acts 4:7-8:

And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?

Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel...

Acts 4:31:

And when they [the company of believers] had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the Word of God with boldness.

Acts 6:3-5:

Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost...

Acts 7:55:

But he [Stephen], being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up stedfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God.

Ephesians 5:18:

And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit.

You Shall Speak in Other Tongues

The Holy Spirit does not speak in tongues. Believers do. The devil tries to talk people out of speaking in tongues by saying, "That's just you." Yes, it is you, in fact. You have to do the speaking. The Holy Spirit will give you the words when you willingly yield your tongue to Him, but He will not do the speaking for you. He will never "make" you do anything. If you wait for Him to just take you over and "make" you speak in tongues, you'll wait for that in vain for the rest of your life. Paul said that he would pray and sing with the spirit (1 Corinthians 14:15) as well as with his understanding. He made that choice. It was his decision. He didn't say that the Holy Spirit told him when to do it.

Probably the worst thing you can do is get analytical and try to "make up tongue words" in your head. Jesus said that the rivers of living water (speaking of the Spirit) would come out of your belly (i.e., your spirit), not out of your head!

On rare occasions God uses believers to witness to foreigners in other tongues, unknown to the speaker but known to the listener, as happened in Acts 2. We know a man who preached the plan of salvation to a tribe in Africa in their own language even though he did not know any words in their language! I know people who on one occasion spoke perfect Spanish and Farsi who had never learned Spanish or Farsi. A certain Native American man I know used to say that tongues weren't real, until someone next to him suddenly prayed in his tribal language that only a few hundred people on earth still speak. However, such things are the exception to the rule. Acts 2 was the only place where it happened in Scripture. There is no record that any unbelievers understood the languages spoken by other men who were baptized with the Spirit at a later time. Therefore, it is an error to say that tongues are solely for evangelistic purposes. Praying in tongues is up to you, as it was up to Paul. You can do it whenever you want if you are baptized with the Spirit.

Some churches teach that you can only speak in tongues when the Holy Spirit gives you an utterance in a service, but that is utterly awful teaching. It is TRUE that you should not give a public utterance to other people to be interpreted unless the Holy Spirit HAS specifically moved you to do that. However, when God, not other people, is your audience, you are free to make the same choice Paul did to sing and pray in tongues whenever YOU want to do it. It's even OK in a service when you're not giving an utterance for the people to hear; you can still talk to God and worship God in other tongues.

Get Drunk, Stay Drunk, Live Drunk!

Figured that would get your attention. (I preached a sermon with that title once, and it got their attention, too!) God wants you to live full of the Spirit, not full of booze (Ephesians 5:18). If you want to stay drunk on booze, you have to keep drinking. If you want to live full of the Spirit, you have to keep drinking, too! The drinking you do is the kind found in John 7:37-39 above. "Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation" (Isaiah 12:3).

This is the key to overcoming sin. You don't do it by trying harder not to sin, beating yourself up and condemning yourself for sinning, inventing silly little punishments for yourself, and so on. You overcome sin by walking in the Spirit! Galatians 5:16: "This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh." Concentrate on walking in the Spirit and sin will lose its appeal. Galatians 5:25: "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit."

Please understand that I am not saying that you should spend all day rolling on the floor, laughing like a hyena. That kind of "drunkenness" can happen occasionally, but it is not the main way to stay continually "drunk" or "filled" with the Spirit. Ephesians 5:18's context clarifies this in the verses that follow (Ephesians 5:19-21): "Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord; Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ; Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God." True Spirit-filled living is holy, praise-filled, thanksgiving-filled living! Keep drinking of the Spirit!

Some drunk people just don't have a care in the world. When you are "drunk" with the Holy Spirit, you won't carry cares around either (1 Peter 5:7). You can just laugh off whatever life throws at you, casting all your cares on God. However, when you "drink" of the Holy Spirit, you won't get a hangover and feel horrible the next day!

What Will You Feel When You Receive the Holy Spirit?

We don't know if anyone in Scripture who received the Holy Spirit "felt" anything. In Acts 2 they probably did, because they weren't standing up when they were speaking in tongues. In this other places, there is no indication that anyone felt anything. Scripture does say that they began to speak with other tongues. We know that Paul spoke in tongues after he was baptized with the Spirit. That is clear from 1 Corinthians 14:18: "I thank my God, I speak with tongues more than ye all:" The disciples in Acts 2 spoke in tongues after they were filled with the Spirit. The men at Ephesus spoke with tongues when they were filled with the Spirit. The folks at Cornelius's house spoke with tongues when they received the Spirit. We can assume, although it is not explicitly stated, that the believers in Samaria spoke in tongues, since Simon saw that people were receiving the Holy Spirit. There must have been some outward sign to see, then, as well as hear.

I remember when some believers laid hands on me to receive the Holy Spirit. I was hoping that the power of God would just shower me, and I would be caught up in the glory and have a vision or some other great spiritual experience. You know what happened? Nothing! I didn't feel a thing. I simply believed that I received the Holy Spirit. I may have stammered a few words in tongues; I forget. On my way home in the car, I began praying in other tongues, since I knew I could now that I was filled with the Spirit. Although I didn't feel much different, soon I developed a great zeal to lay hands on the sick and have God use me in the gifts of healings. This was not the case before I was baptized in the Spirit. I am not saying that this is exactly what will happen to you. God calls each of us to "major" in different areas. I am experiencing the long-term blessings of being baptized in the Spirit even though I did not see angels or fall on the floor at the time. It was strictly a faith transaction. I believed that I would receive, and I did. Believe that you receive, and don't be thrown off by feelings or lack thereof.

Are You Ready?

Study the Scriptures concerning the Holy Spirit until you are personally convinced that God will baptize you with the Holy Spirit if you ask Him to. Once you see what God has said on the matter, receiving the Holy Spirit is easy! You can either do it right now, or you can wait until one or more Spirit-filled believers are around, which might make it easier for you. Having others lay hands on someone to receive the Holy Spirit was the primary method used in the book of Acts. Agree with the other people that you will be baptized with the Holy Spirit when they lay hands on you.

You can do it right now if you want; you don't HAVE TO wait another minute. You can tell God that you believe that the Holy Spirit has been given and that you believe that His promise is for you. Then ask Him to baptize you with the Holy Spirit, believing that He will do what He promised. Then get ready for a bolder, power-filled life!

Be prepared to speak in other tongues. Don't try to make up tongue words in your head. Let them rise out of your spirit. It is helpful if you make a point of not speaking in your native language at that time. The Spirit will give you utterance; yield your tongue to Him. Relax and let it flow out of you! (One of the biggest hindrances is getting "uptight" about it.) There's no big rush; take your time. Don't let the devil or tradition deter you – if receive the Spirit, you can speak in tongues. Your flesh may fight it at first, but remember the Scriptures in Acts that say that believers who were baptized with the Spirit spoke with other tongues. You are receiving the same Spirit they did, so you can do what they did! Jesus said of those who would believe in Him, "They shall speak with new tongues" (Mark 16:17).

Why Can't I Get Healed?

I call this “the devil’s question” because the question itself is a lie.

You CAN get healed!

This very question is rigged against you. It is like asking, “Answer YES or NO: Have you stopped cheating on your wife?” Either answer could get you into trouble, because the question itself is unfair. You lose if you answer it at all. In this case, it assumes that for some reason you cannot get healed. That is a lie.

You can do things that will interfere with receiving your healing. That doesn’t mean that you can’t get healed. See Mistakes to Avoid for a list of things that can interfere with your ability to receive the healing that God freely offers you.

I asked this horrible question for years. It seemed like everyone else “got it” and I just couldn’t seem to grasp what the Bible said about healing so that it would become a reality in my life. I believed a lie that for some strange unknown reason I just couldn’t get healed. Thank God, I found out that it was a lie and I could get healed. The devil would love you to believe that there is some special reason that you can’t get healed, but there isn’t one.

God’s promises are for whosoever, and whosoever includes you.

If you will hear the Word of God on the subject of healing, take time to reflect on it and act on it, you can get healed. You are not a special exception. God does not engage in personal favoritism or personal animosity toward anyone (Acts 10:34, Romans 2:11, Ephesians 6:9, Colossians 3:25, 1 Peter 1:17).

If you’re having trouble receiving your healing, ask the Holy Spirit to help you see where you’re missing it. God didn’t leave you here to figure everything out by yourself!

What Do I Do if I Don't See Any Improvement After Praying?

Keep believing that you have received your healing. Keep saying that you have received your healing. Keep thanking God for the healing that you have already received. Don't let up until your healing has completely manifested itself in your body. Continue to do whatever natural things you need to do (taking medicine, for example) until your healing is fully manifested.

If the reason you ask this question is that you are afraid that it didn't work, you are probably not in faith to begin with. In that case, continue reading healing Scriptures and good healing literature to build your faith. You will have to back up to the point where you believe that you receive your healing. Actually, if you are really asking this question, the chances are good that you are not in as much faith as you think you are.

The time after you pray and before you see any change is the time when you "Let God be true and every man a liar" (Romans 3:3-4). It is the time when you exercise patience along with your faith. This patience is not a resignation to your condition. It is an active force that undergirds your faith and refuses to back down despite circumstances.

Where some people miss it is if they don't receive the results they want by faith soon enough, they assume that they need to do some more receiving by faith! They try to crank out more faith. That doesn't work. You pray the true prayer of faith once. After that, you thank God that you have already received your answer in your spirit. Thank God for it even though you don't see any improvement yet. Thank God for Jesus' statement that you can believe and receive what you pray for when you pray.

If your condition sudden worsens and seems to require immediate medical attention, I urge you to get it. It is not anti-faith to get medical help. If you are really in faith, your supernatural healing will manifest itself anyway. If you are not in faith, and you avoid medical help because you want to think you're in faith, you could die in the process. If you're in faith, you don't need to be afraid to see doctors. After all, they can verify and document your healing when it comes.

You need to do what Abraham did and "consider not your own body" (Romans 4:19). That doesn't mean that you deny or ignore symptoms. It means that you do not consider your body's current condition to be the final word concerning your healing.

Other topics are devoted to helping you determine if you're really in faith. Read them and see whether you have really believed you have received anything or if you're just "a hopin' and a prayin'." The bottom line is that if you really believe that you have received something, you don't really care that you don't see any improvement yet. You are at rest knowing that it must manifest as long as you stay in faith.

Some other useful thoughts are found in the topic, I Thought I Was Healed. Why Did the Symptoms Just Start to Return?

What Faith Isn't

Should I Keep on Praying until I Get My Breakthrough?

You only keep “praying” in the sense that praise and thanksgiving are forms of prayer. Once you pray the prayer of faith to believe that you receive, you do NOT keep on “praying for your healing!” If you do, you are negating your first prayer by in effect confessing that you never got anything.

I can tell right away when someone doesn’t understand faith because he will say things like, “Now please keep praying for me!” or “Pray some more for my healing!” or “I’m going to call everyone I know and get everyone to pray for my healing.” When you understand faith, you realize that you “believe that you receive” once when you pray. All subsequent prayers about that matter are prayers of praise and thanksgiving for what you have already received, whether you feel better, the same or even worse.

When Jesus said to “keep on asking,” He did not mean to keep on asking about the same thing. That would be using vain repetitions as the heathen do. Jesus warned us to avoid such prayers.

You don’t need to bug God the way that the woman in the story bugged the unjust judge. The judge in the story was unjust and the woman had to bug him. God is just. There may be SOCIAL situations in your country that require ongoing prayer from “God’s elect” so that they can be “avenged speedily,” but that has nothing to do with receiving things that are your covenant right. Believe that you receive the first time that you pray, then THANK God for what you already received!

What Did I Do to Deserve This Sickness?

This is the wrong question to ask if you're sick, but I'll give you a right answer that might shock you.

Pick ANY sin you've committed. If you've committed ANY sin, you deserve to get sick. Deuteronomy 28:61 makes it clear that ALL sicknesses are part of the curse for not keeping ALL the Lord's commandments and statutes. So if you want to link your ability to stay in health to your personal track record, you're up a creek with no paddle.

Fortunately for you, that's not the end of the answer. Because your sin deserves the physical punishment of sickness, Jesus had to be physically punished Himself in order to redeem you. Because He took the punishment for your sins, you don't have to bear that punishment for your sins. He had to be wounded for your transgressions, bruised for your iniquities, smitten and afflicted. It wasn't enough for Him to suffer spiritually; He had to suffer physically because that is what your sins deserve. But because He took the sicknesses and pains on Himself that you deserve for your sins, He legally redeemed you from having to bear those punishments for sin in your own body.

So based on your own track record, you deserve the sickness. But based on what Christ did for you, you don't deserve that sickness anymore because He redeemed you from your sins that deserved it. There is no point in two people being punished for the same crime. Jesus was already punished for your sins, so you get to live in health as if you'd never violated any of God's commandments.

If you think for a while about the question at the top of this section, you'll realize that it comes from a law-based mentality that thinks that if you're doing a pretty good job at not sinning as much as other people, you don't deserve sickness, but if you're doing a crummier job at not sinning, you deserve sickness. You need to throw out your own law-based righteousness and walk in the righteousness that you have received as a gift from God (Romans 5:17).

That is why you never want to ask this question defiantly, as if to challenge God about His justice. It will not help you to try to tell God that He was unfair to "allow" the sickness. From a justice perspective, you deserve to be sick. So you should be glad that you are under grace and not under law.

One New Testament illustration of sin deserving sickness is found in Romans 1:26-27, where sodomites and lesbians reap the due penalty for their error in their bodies. I say this not to condemn them, but to point out that the New Testament indicates that sin still deserves the physical punishment of sickness. Jesus came so that sodomites and lesbians (and everyone else) could be set free from their sins and NOT have to suffer the punishment that those sins deserve. We don't have to preach the BAD news, true as it may be ("You DESERVE what you got in your bodies") when we can preach the GOOD news ("You can receive both forgiveness for your sins and healing for your bodies because Jesus bore the penalty for everything you've done"). You don't want to get into a condemning mentality when after all, there are sins in YOUR life that would make YOU deserve sickness too if you as a Christian had to deal with God on the basis of your own merits.

There are other cases in the discussion Sickness As Chastening and Judgment in the New Testament showing New Testament links between sins and sickness. However, the chances are slim that you fall into any of the extreme categories in that discussion. (You can read it just to be sure.)

You can waste a lot of time going on a “witch hunt” for sins in your life when you come down with something. There may not be any specific sin that relates to that specific illness! People get colds, flus and similar contagious diseases just by living in a fallen world where these diseases exist. You can do more harm than good engaging in endless introspection, trying to figure out what it is you did that “let the devil in.” Adam let the devil in. Our focus should be to run the devil’s work out of our bodies. Rather than focusing on sin and the disease, it would be better to focus on the gift of righteousness you have received (Romans 5:17) and your authority over sickness in Christ.

If you are a believer, you have been washed clean from your sins. You do not “deserve” to be sick anymore! So the question “What did I do to deserve this sickness?” is inappropriate because the real issue is “What did Jesus do for you so that you don’t have to have the sickness that your sins deserve?”

Am I Sick because God is Mad at Me?

Let's find out if God is mad at you or not. If He isn't, then we've already answered the question.

Are you saved?

If so, you are already forgiven for ALL your sins! You can see Forgiven People Can Be Healed for a list of some Scriptures that prove this. If you've been taught (in error) that you need to confess your individual sins before they can be forgiven, you might want to read through What 1 John 1:9 Really Means to learn otherwise. That discussion has even more proofs that all your sins are forgiven.

Your sins certainly DID make God mad. However, He took out His anger for your sins on Jesus when Jesus willingly took your sins on Himself. Those sins are now paid for, so God will not get mad at you over them now that you have believed in the price that Jesus paid for your sins. That would be like demanding that you pay off a credit card debt that a rich benefactor already paid off on your behalf.

Forgiveness and not being mad go together. If you've truly forgiven someone, you don't walk around mad at that person. It doesn't mean that you have to be best buddies with that person or even be around that person socially. But if you're enraged about what someone did, that is a good indication that you have not forgiven that person.

The New Testament shows God's gracious attitude toward man:

2 Corinthians 5:19:

To wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation.

The good news – the news of reconciliation – is that God decided not to hold your sins against you, so He reconciled you (past tense) through Christ. That is the “good news” that we have to share with others. (Pointing fingers at sinners and telling them they are going to hell is not the good news. It's true, but it isn't the good news, which is the ANSWER to that problem!) “Not imputing your trespasses” basically means that God isn't mad at you over your sins anymore! You are reconciled to God!

It certainly is possible to GRIEVE the Holy Spirit (we're warned not to do it in Ephesians 4:30), but while grieving the Holy Spirit could lead to missing out on some ways that the Holy Spirit wants to move, even that does not mean that the Holy Spirit is angry with you. You probably did some things that grieved your parents when you were growing up, but I hope they still loved you and didn't run you out of the house immediately and disown you. God is a far better parent than you ever had.

So you are NOT sick because God is mad at you – because He isn't mad at you.
